College Dramatic Season Opens Next Friday Evening In Chapel With Three-Act Farce, Tovarich

Mann and Bennett Lead In Comedy Adapted By Robert Sherwood

WEST DIRECTS DRAMA

Brink, Warren, Wintermute Have Important Roles In Production

The Maryville college dramatic season will open next Friday night at eight o'clock in Voorhees chapel, when the College players under the direction of Mrs. Nita E. West present Jacques Deval's comedy-farce, "Tovarich", starring Muriel Mann and Gordon Bennett in the leading roles of Tatiana and Mikail Ouratief. Katherine Warren and John Wintermute will take the parts of Fernande and Charles Dupont with Frank Brink as Gorochenko.

Bennett is a capable and experienced actor; and is well remembered for his performance in "Craig's Wife," which won the Theta Alpha Phi cup for 1936-37. He has also had leading roles in "Pride and Prejudice" and "First Lady." Miss Mann, who has studied in the Rice School of Dramatic Art, is well known for her comedy lead in "Pride and Prejudice" and also for her work in "First Lady." This will be Brink's first appearance before a Maryville audience, having been cast in "Night Must Fall," but forced to withdraw because of a broken ankle.

Other members of the cast include Barbara Anderson, as Olga; William Felknor as Brickinski; Bruce Walters, as Chauffourier; Vernon Lloyd as Martelleau and concierge; Mary Frances Spurlock, as Louise; Sara Bolton as Madame Van Hemert; Arda Walker as Madame Chauffourier; and Charles

Was Smash Hit In Europe

Fish as Georges Dupont.

Tovarich was a smash hit in the capitals of Europe, running some eight hundred performances in Paris alone. It was written by Jacques Duval as a farce centered about Russian emigres in Paris. Thinking that the play would be appreciated only by Parisians familiar with the subject, he took little interest in it, putting it into rehearsals before he had even finished the last act. Making its first appearance in Paris in October of 1933, it became an immediate success and has been produced in virtually every city on the continent.

The production, adapted by Robert E. Sherwood, came to London in 1935, where it played for over a year to capacity crowds at Plymouth theatre, winning praise from the Royal family. It met with even greater approval on Broadway. "At last the drouth has been broken!" said the New York Times. "There was jubilation on the sidewalks last night." Having been released only recently for amateur performance, "Tovarich" will probably be seen here for its first time on any other than the professional stage.

"Tovarich" is a delightful comedy concerning Mikail Ouratief, an exiled Russian prince, and his wife, the Grand Duchess Tatiana, who have fled to Paris, where they take positions as servants in the home of M. Charles Dupont, a wealthy Parisian banker. "Universal in its appeal, in its good humored admiration for human virtues latent even in princes, its expert mixing of comic and pathetic, touches. It is sure fire!" said the New York American.

Staged by Fisher

The play is being staged by John Fisher, with Louise Allen as his assistant, and has been in production since early in October. Fisher did the sets for "Pride and Prejudice" and was stage manager for "First Lady."

Business managers for the play are Curtmarie Brown and William Walton. Properties are under the direction of Ellen Losey and William Goin, with Arda Walker and Sara Bolton in charge of costumes. Ed Ciurczak is technical adviser to the cast in the pronunciation of Russian names and phrases. Sets were designed by John Fisher and John Wintermute.

Reserved seat tickets for the play are being sold at the Y store, and in the lobby of Pearsons following the evening meal. They may also be purchased at Rickett's, Chandler-Singleton's and Proffitt's department store in town.

Societies Choose "Idiot's Delight"

Casting of Pulitzer Prize Play In Few Weeks

"Idiot's Delight" by Robert Sherwood has been selected for the Athenian-Bainonian mid-winter, subject to final approval by the faculty, according to an announcement by a joint committee of the two societies. The play is scheduled for the middle of February and Mrs. Nita Eckles West will begin tryouts as soon as those for "Hamlet" have been completed. The committee, composed of William McGill, John Wintermute, George Hunt, Mary Chambers, Ellen Sauer, and Carol Ward, has recommended William Gehres, Eleanor Long, and Ellen Sauer for stage manager, assistant stage manager, and business manager, respectively.

"Idiot's Delight" won the Pulitzer prize in drama in the 1935-36 season and was runner-up for the newly created New York Drama Critics' circle award. Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontaine, who played the leading roles, enjoyed one of their greatest successes in this vehicle.

An expose of the idiocy of war, the play offers a vigorous arraignment of the war madness at present threatening the world, and is aimed particularly at those countries which have already succumbed to Fascist domination and influence. The scene is laid at the Monte Gabriel hotel in the Italian Alps near the Austrian and Swiss frontiers.

Chilhowean Will Take Sophomore Pictures Now

The sophomore section of the Chilhowean will open on Monday, November 14, Otto Pflanze announced today. Sophomore pictures for the Chilhowean can be made during the next three weeks. The editor urges that all sophomores who wish to have their pictures in the annual get them made during the specified period, as that is positively the maximum amount of time that can be given to the sophomore section, since the annual must be completed on schedule.

The junior section closed on Saturday, likewise having been open for three weeks.

Anyone having informal snapshots of students or campus scenes which they would like to have appear in the Chilhowean are asked to give them to some member of the annual staff or to their class presidents.

Louise Proffitt To Direct Work For Barnwarming

Mother Goose Is Theme For YWCA Program In Gym On November 24

The annual barnwarming, under the auspices of the YWCA, will be given in the Alumni gymnasium on Thanksgiving evening, November 24, at 8:00. The theme of the program will be "Mother Goose Rhymes Brought Up to Swing," with Old Mother Goose and Modern Mother Goose carrying out the motif. Each booth will represent a nursery rhyme, while skits will be modern versions of infant nursery rhymes. All music for this event will be modern.

Preparations are now being made under the supervision of Louise Proffitt, athletic director of the YWCA, and chairman of the barnwarming, and Bruce Morgan, business manager. Ruth Abercrombie and Erwin Ritzman are co-chairmen of booths, while Ellen Sauer is costume chairman. John Fisher is in charge of decorations, and will be assisted by Miss Frances Rich and the art department. The program committee consists of Mabel Ennis, Harriet Miller, and Edwin Goddard, and Bill Felknor is acting as assistant business manager.

Nominations for king and queen of this event will be made from the senior class by the senior class nominating committee and will appear in the Highland Echo on November 20. The election will be held in chapel on the Wednesday immediately preceding Thanksgiving, and the entire student body will have the opportunity to vote. The names of the king and queen, to be known this year as the King and Queen of Hearts, will be kept secret until the barnwarming.

Theme Of Chapel Service Is Peace

Armistice Day Service Led By Dr. Lloyd, Pflanze, Baird, Bobo

The chapel service yesterday morning was devoted to the theme of world peace, and conducted by the Peace Forum as a part of its Armistice Day celebration.

The program was built around the Kellogg Treaty for the outlawry of war as a national policy. In reading and discussing the treaty, President Ralph W. Lloyd stated that, although its provisions had been disregarded by many of its important signers, it still remained as a great pacifist ideal, and that the settlement of the recent European crisis indicates that its spirit is not dead.

Those taking part in the program adapted by President Lloyd were Otto Pflanze, chairman of the Peace Forum; Helen Bobo, president of the YWCA; and Weldon Baird, president of the YMCA.

The Peace Forum sponsored Armistice Day programs in three local churches last week. The evening service at the Presbyterian church was devoted to a program planned by the Forum, and the young people's services at the Northern Methodist church and also at the First Baptist church were conducted by Forum members.

Directors' Board To Convene Fall Meeting Tuesday

General Reports Of Past Year Will Be Given At Meeting

The fall meeting of the board of directors of Maryville college will be held in the president's office on Tuesday at 9 o'clock. At this meeting the general reports of the past year will be given and the more extensive plans and business of the college will be discussed. The most important item will be the reading of the report of the president which includes statements from the various officers and departments of the college.

The fall meeting of the directors is held on the third Tuesday of November of each year, and is the second of two; the other being in the spring when degrees are awarded, faculty appointments made, and part I of the president's report is presented.

The board of directors consists of thirty-six members; one third elected each year for a term of three years by the Synod of Tennessee of the Presbyterian church in the U.S.A. as specified in the charter and bylaws of the college.

Three administrative officers of the college are also directors: President Ralph W. Lloyd, Treasurer F. L. Proffitt, and Miss Clemmie J. Henry, director of student help. The chairman of the board of directors since 1932 has been Judge S. O. Houston of Knoxville.

The board has two outstanding committees which conduct business details between the regularly scheduled meetings. One is the committee on Administration, composed of the president of the college and the heads of six other committees. The second is the committee on Finance, composed of the president, ex-officio, Judge A. E. Mitchell of Knoxville, chairman, and three other members. The first of these meets every two months and the last, every month.

Triangulars Form Cheering Section

Club Members Plan Similar Cheering Section At Winter Games

At yesterday's game the new cheering section, sponsored by the Triangle club, made its debut. One hundred and fifty-six Triangulars and friends took part in the triangle-shaped colored-card display while another hundred students interested in some real cheering filled out the center section of the grandstand that was reserved for them.

Color and action abounded during the half-time as the Teacher's lassies went through their intricate maneuvers, forming the school letters. Then while Maryville's band marched and played the alma mater in letter formation, the cheering section formed the letters in red on an orange background.

Although there are no more home football games this fall, plans are being made to conduct similar cheering sections at the winter-sports events.

Arrangements for the cheering section were made by a committee composed of Roland Anderson and George Tibbetts, who were assisted by David Hall and Phyllis Heaton.

Rev. L. K. Anderson Of Africa To Speak At Chapel Wednesday On Behalf Of Fred Hope Drive

Moving Pictures of Mission Work To Be Shown On Tuesday Night

GIFTS TO GO TO ELAT

Dr. Fred Hope, Maryville Alumnus, Director Of African School

The annual Fred Hope drive will be held next week on Tuesday and Wednesday, November 15 and 16. Two services, the meeting at seven o'clock Tuesday evening at which pictures of the missionary work in West Africa will be shown, and the chapel service Wednesday morning, will be devoted to this cause. At that time, opportunity to sign pledge cards will be given.

Fred Hope of Elat, West Africa, is a graduate of Maryville college in the class of 1906, and is in charge of the Frank James Industrial school in Elat. Two years ago he was home on furlough and spoke about his work in that section of Africa. Although there are a hundred and fifty other Maryville people who have gone to the foreign mission field in the last half century, yet for twenty-five years or more it has been the custom at the college to give the students and faculty opportunity to contribute to a special fund which is placed in Dr. Hope's hands each year. Fred Hope has been adopted as a Maryville college missionary, Maryville college helping him carry on his missionary work by means of this Fred Hope Fund. In the mission station in Elat there is a chapel that has been dedicated as the Maryville College Chapel.

This year the speaker for the drive is to be Rev. L. K. Anderson of West Africa who is home on furlough. He is a graduate of McGill university, Montreal, where his work as manager of the football team and as a member of an orchestra gave him experience valuable in later life; and at Princeton Theological seminary, where he continued his interest in an all-around career.

In the eight years he has spent in West Africa, Mr. Anderson has lived in different sections; one far inland on the edge of the sleeping sickness belt; one nearer the coast, and nearer, too, to the district where lives a tribe of pygmies occasionally visited by white people. Mr. Anderson's work consists in oversight of the seventy-one village churches and congregations established throughout the Bafia district. More than a hundred and twenty African evangelists and other workers are on the staff of this station. Recently a beautiful new church, built by African workmen under the supervision of Mr. Anderson and a young American engineer visiting West Africa for a short time, was dedicated at Bafia.

Made possible largely by gifts from America, and decorated with stained glass left over from the cathedral in Washington ,the church has a special interest for Americans as well as for the African Christians who have watched and helped throughout its building.

Dormitories Plan Open House For Wednesday Night

Women To Be Hostesses At Baldwin and Memorial To Four Hundred

Women at Baldwin and Memorial dormitories this week began plans for open house, which will be held on Wednesday, November 16, from 7:45 to 9:15 in the evening. All faculty members and men students will be invited and tentative plans are that both dormitories separately, will serve refreshments to the guests.

Memorial's matrons have appointed one girl from each floor as a general committee to make further plans. Phyllis Heaton from the third floor is in charge of planning the refreshments, with Christine Landfear from the first floor to assist her. Joan Von Nordheim from the second floor is in charge of receiving the guests and she has appointed three shifts of two girls each to welcome guests at the door. This committee consists of Johnnie Childers, Terry Jones, Matthew Wood, Janet Lindsay, Charlotte Colby, and Peggy Carter. The chairman also plans to have two girls from each floor to act as guides in assisting the guests to find the various rooms and to see that the guests are registered at the door and given tickets for refreshments.

Matrons at Baldwin appointed Bernice Smith as general chairman of their open house, and she in turn has appointed three girls to assist her. Mary Russ will register guests at the door; Miriam Nethery is in charge of the reception of guests and plans to station two girls at the door as a welcoming committee, and two shifts of six girls each at various points in the building to act as guides; Barbara Swift will be in charge of refreshments with two freshmen, Irma Criswell and Catherine Ogilvie as assistants on her committee.

It was decided by Baldwin girls that the general appearance of the dormitory at the open house would be greatly improved if there were new drapes at the hall alcoves on the second and third floors of the building. So a committee consisting of Katie Letterman and Savannah Sneed for the second floor and Emma Cassada and Betty Pedley for the third floor will be in charge of purchasing material for the drapes, sewing them at the College Maid Shop, and hanging them.

Dramatic Arts Club Will Hold Second Tea

The Dramatic Arts club will hold its second tea in the Fine Arts studio tonight. Two one-act plays will be presented.

The first is a fantasy, "The Grand Old Man," directed by John Wintermute. Jean Stringham, Curtmarie Brown, Ed Thomas, and Clinton Myers will participate. The other is a comedy "Love Is Like That," directed by Carol Ward. Sara Bolton, Mary Frances Spurlock, and Arda Walker are included in the cast.

Miriam Berst will preside at the punch bowl.

Pearsons Women Hold Informal Tea Monday For Women Transfers

On Monday afternoon, from 3:30 to 5:30, the women of Pearsons will entertain with an informal tea in the YW rooms for the upperclass women who are transfer students to Maryville this year. In the receiving line at the tea will be the fourteen transfer students staying in Pearsons; Mrs. Grace Pope Snyder supervisor of women's residence; and the house officers. Virginia Boys, president; Charlotte Moughton, vice president and social chairman; and Harriet Barber, secretary-treasurer.

The program for the tea will consist of music and is under the direction of Kathleen Cissna. Marguerite Justus is in charge of the refreshments.

This tea for the new girls in Pearsons is the first of several social activities being planned for the house members this year. All Pearsons girls and women faculty members are invited.

Stage Crew—Voorhees' Forgotten Men

By CHARLES D. ORR

It was two o'clock in the morning as three drooping figures made their way toward College Street. Each silent form was the personification of sheer exhaustion. Night after night they had worked until this time: painting, sawing, hammering and hauling. The final dress rehearsal was over; everything was in readiness; and they were completely worn out. One by one they lay down in the middle of the highway, and hoped that a car would come along. Fortunately, it didn't.

The Stage "(S)crew," as they fondly call themselves, was organized by Max Cornelius in 1935. Prior to that time, stage work has been a clumsy and unorganized affair—a bane to every director and a hindrance to every production. With a group of six, Mr. Cornelius began work on the play, "Peter Ibbetson," and a five-o'clock sun rose the day of the performance to find them putting the finishing touches on the last set. They had worked all night, but they had built and painted canvas flats which could be put up and taken down in a minimum of time. Thus was born the Stage Crew; and a new era in the staging of plays had begun.

From that time, the Crew has never wanted for something to do. They design, build and paint the sets for an average of six major productions a year. This does not include any number of smaller productions and one-act plays for which they are responsible.

Very few people realize the amount of work involved in the staging of a play. After the sets have been designed, they must be built, or rebuilt from old sets, covered and painted. Ten to twelve hours are required for six men to rebuild an ordinary set, and a play will usually call for from three to five different sets. "The Beggar on Horseback," produced here last year required thirteen different sets with eighteen changes of scenery! Over seven hundred feet of lumber were used in building them.

There seems to be nothing which the Crew will not at least attempt. Many will remember the rocking of the deck of the boat in "Mary, Queen of Scots"; the well from which Iolanthe rose in the operetta of last spring; and the fountain, in "Graustark," two years ago.

Yet they seem to thrive on their diet of long hours and hard work. For one thing, there are very few dull moments in the whole course of the production of a play. There was the time when Bill Karukus went out "cow

Thank You

Just as we do in other areas of our living, many of us take our entertainment for granted. Too few of us consciously appreciate the planning and hard work connected with the Saturday evening events sponsored by the social committee.

This year's committee has provided some sort of social event for every Saturday evening, except when special activities were scheduled. The committee has used originality to an unusual degree, and the result has been a marked increase in the interest and enthusiasm of those attending the social affairs.

To the members of the social committe we say: "Thank you for the splendid work you are doing. We are hoping for more enjoyable Saturday evening social events." The committee consists of Erwin Ritzman, chairman; Al Rosser, Wilbert Looloian, Ruth Woods, Ruth Abercrombie, Bernice Smith, Zula Vance, Dr. McClelland, Dr. Hunter, Mrs. Snyder, Mr. Dollenmayer and Miss Johnson.

THE WASTEBASKET

By SCOTTIE, THE OFFICE BOY

a whole of a lot of horror and pain. Yes, they deserve all the Armistice Days and beautiful monuments we can possibly give them. Irony of it all is that the last war was purely a waste of brains, brawn, and bullets. We find ourselves in spite of all the songs of heroism that are pulled out of our throat on Armistice Day, forced to observe that was isn't all it's cracked up to be and that what we need is more men like Wednesday's speaker, Colonel Wood, who is one of the few we've had the pleasure of hearing who is not too stubborn to look at things from the other guy's point of view. However, we realize that, this column being the Wastebasket, our opinion is obviously erroneous, and shall therefore not use any more space for blowing-offsteamical purposes.

Discovered This Week!

That both Y stores have really cashed in on the sale of cough drops of late. Knowing souls will tell you it's because throats must receive extra special care now that "Messiah" rehearsals have begun.

"The North wind doth blow, and we shall have snow" —we-hope-we-hope-we-hope. Only please, Mister Weather Man, you know we've always been friends; won't you hold off just long enough for us to write home for a new fur coat which hasn't (we are sorry to say) evolved as yet, a pair of galoshes, some red flannels, some cough drops, and other little variouses and sundries. We're unfortunately not the lucky guy who's Got His Love to Keep Him Warm and who thinks It's June in January and Roses in December are nothing out of the ordinary. We are entirely confident that he is not prevaricating when he says that a coat-sleeves with something it is better than two coat-sleeves without, but we still have icicles on our eyebrows.

And yet, pal, we couldn't bear to wait too long, as we have a bet for the large sum of one nickel with the I-Told-You-So-Type and are simply too poverty stricken to lose it. So if you'll kindly make it snow before Thanksgiving and not before the end of next week, we'll do anything you ask. (Studying, giving up banana splits, calling our student superiors Mr. and Miss, getting to breakfast on time, being quiet at football games, and writing a decent column naturally excepted).

Speaking of cold and other unpleasant things reminds even our uncharitable soul that those doughboys endured

That we and our fellow ex-convicts had better don new disguises and aliases and prepare to skip town; for if we were ever caught here the jig would be up, with such able accusers as Findlay, Junsley, and Brown are proving to be, lurking in these parts. Howsomever, if you'll promise to secure us Kramer, Ballenger, or Young to defend us, we'll stick around at least until breakfast or maybe a little longer and still not fear for the safety of our skin.

Merry-Ville Go Round

By FRED RHODY

You may doubt that it really happened, but Howard Davis, himself, actually dreamed it; and Howard isn't the kind of boy who would dream anything that wasn't true. Here it is:

Howard was notified that some one wanted to speak to him over the telephone in Mr. Black's office. Answering the call, he was asked, "Is this the Maryville college bell-ringer?" "Yes, sir," replied Howard, "this is Howard Davis, the Maryville college bell-ringer." "Well," came over the wires, "this is the United States Observatory at Washington, D. C. Will you please give us the correct time?"

With apologies to Paul Akana and his systematics discourse autobiographical outline:

Introduction: It seems that I am quite an unusual person. (Elaborate on this point.)

I—My Appearance Is
- A—Flawless, for I
  - 1—am handsome beyond all reason, having
    - a—a manly physique. (Stress this.)
    - b—a perfect profile.
  - 2—have that all too rare ability of wearing clothes
    - a—just what to say when.
    - b—that do justice to my Herculean figure.
    - c—that are as up-to-date as tomorrow.
- B—Irresistible, for I
  - 1—am always beseized by admiring girls, who want
    - a—dates. (Illustrate this point.)
    - b—autographs.
    - c—to run their fingers through my hair.
  - 2—am easily the outstanding man in any group, because of my
    - a—irresistible appeal.
    - b—yellow socks.

II—My Personality Is
- A—Charming, for I
  - 1—am a marvelous conversationalist, knowing
    - a—just wha to say when.
    - b—how to keep quiet.
  - 2—am possessed of those lovely little gifts of making people
    - a—feel comfortable with me.
    - b—think I'm wonderful.
- B—Extraordinary, for I
  - 1—am skilled in all such genteel accomplishments as
    - a—playing the zither.
    - b—riding to the dogs.
    - c—getting the last slice of peach on my spoon.
  - 2—am the very acme of such virtues as
    - a—patience.
    - b—generosity.
    - c—courage. (Emphasize and illustrate.)
    - d—nobleness in general.

III—I Would Make Some Fortunate Girl a Model Husband, Because I
- A—Am a Good
  - 1—can opener.
  - 2—dish-washer.
  - 3—over-looker of faults in wives.
- B—Have Brains
  - 1—to burn.
  - 2—that I've never even used yet. (Don't stress this point too much.)

Conclusion: After thinking over what a remarkable young man I really am, I find it difficult to think, offhand, of any girl who could possibly be worthy of my affections.

Speaking of food, may be quote our favorite pome?

"Breathes there a man with soul so dead,
Who never to himself hath said?"—
"Wonder what we'll have for dinner tonight."

Did you ever try watermelon with chicken gravy? Well, we wish to assure you that you musn't leave the South until you have, for it's our own favored and colloquial dish.

Another favorite is college bred. No, it isn't hot biscuits or cornbread. Well, we beg of you, then what is college bred? It's what people call you when you get out. In case you'd like the recipe, college bred is made of the flower of youth and the dough of old age.

Yes, we'll admit we like to eat, but we're venturing to be audacious enough to suggest that even so do you also likewise. So, out of the kindness of our tender hearts, we turned once more to that ancient father who never fails us. Confuse Us supplies us with this helpful advice:

"Verily, verily, I say unto you: 'Lay not up for yourselves choice morsels in your rooms, where dirt and ants corrupt and room-mates break through and steal; but lay up for yourselves treasures in the diningroom, where, if thou concealest carefully in napkin and adoptest most innocent look, even the Most High shall not come near thy hoard to thee.'"

Over Ninety Students Are Employed By Campus Department This Semester

By ALLAN G. MOORE

There is a group of young men attending Maryville college, who in addition to toiling and slaving on their studies, do considerable extra-curricular work. These ninety-some fellows spend part of their out-of-class time performing not only odd jobs, but many major pieces of work on the campus. You've guessed it—they are the campus workers, who work under the supervision of Mr. Ernest C. Brown.

To these workers we owe appreciation for the upkeep of our dormitories and classrooms, for they are the ones who keep the campus buildings clean and repaired.

Already this year the campus workers have undertaken such major projects as the grading of new roads, the grading of the new power house site, the laying of the foundation for the power house, and the laying of the foundation for the new entrance to the college from College Street. These are but a few of the tasks in addition to the everyday chores of keeping the campus clean, and the grass cut, the hedges and trees trimmed, the coal bin at the heating plant full, and other things which seem insignificant, but would be very noticable were they neglected.

Jobs such as these require hard labor at times, but when the workers remember what this work means to them the fact that it involves labor is diminished considerably. For these pieces of work offer the young men an opportunity to earn part of their college expenses. There are some who could not possibly attend college were it not for this branch of the Student-Help department.

Then too, the worker receives much more from the work he performs than merely his salary. Many learn how to perform jobs and do repair work which they have probably never found necessary to attempt before. Thus, we can say that the opportunity of working on the campus affords an education in how to do practical tasks.

The consideration and patience which Mr. Brown, the foreman, shows for those who are less experienced in different types of work is a factor which has made him justly popular with student workers throughout the years he has been at Maryville. "Brownie," as the workers like to call their boss, will assign the jobs, and if there is one which he is in particular hurry to have completed he will even pitch in and help the workers.

The campus workers undoubtedly, appreciate the opportunity the college presents to them in the form of campus work, and likewise the college administration must realize the value of the campus workers to the college.

STAGE CREW

hunting" for milk for their coffee during one of the midnight sessions; and the time the electrician stuck his foot through the chapel ceiling. There was the time when some one dropped a flat on Mrs. West, and also when the electrician missed his cue and turned on the stage lights during the change of a scene, exposing half of the crew to the audience in their shirt sleeves, with properties in their hands. It was a tense moment during the second act of "First Lady" when tests for the public address system, which was to simulate a radio, showed it to be dead. The act proceeded, and by some miracle the system began to work—a few seconds before it was needed!

No one hears much of this unique fraternity, yet everyone is conscious of its presence. When a morning's chapel service finds only an ordinary choir loft and pulpit where the night before was some magnificent medieval court, one will remember that there is a group on the campus who got very little sleep last night.

But in spite of their irregular hours and strenuous work, they rate scholastically with the best. Among the number is a psychology assistant, a library assistant, a music assistant and one who is doing honors work.

Who are they? Occasionally their names appear in some inconspicuous spot on the program. More often they do not. William McGill has taken the place of Max Cornelius as leader of the crew; and he, with John Fisher, John Wintermute, Samuel Cornelius, William S. Gehris and three freshmen apprentices, is responsible for the building, painting, and changing of all sets. Glenn Young and Roland Tapp, with the aid of an apprentice, do all electrical work.

Eating together, rooming together, hiking together and working together, they form one of the most unusual of all college fraternities—"The Stage Screw"!

Pastor To Discuss Solomon

"Solomon's Sense and Non-sense" will be Dr. William P. Stevenson's theme at the college vesper service in Voorhees chapel tomorrow evening at seven o'clock. The choir, under the direction of Mr. Ralph R. Colbert, will sing "Recessional" by Kipling for its anthem.

Senior Play Tryouts Will Begin Next Week

Tryouts for "Hamlet," to be presented next May, will begin the first of the week. Instead of the usual individual tryouts, a new system of group tryouts will be used. By this method a group will take a scene from the play and read it, giving each individual in the group a chance to demonstrate his ability as an actor.

At the last meeting of the group, Miss Gertrude Meiselwitz spoke on the costumes of the period which are to be reproduced in the play.

Eight To Take Medical Aptitude Test On Dec. 2

Eight students have registered to take the medical aptitude test, which will be given December 2, at 3 o'clock. This test is furnished by the Committee of the Association of American Medical colleges, and is one of the important factors considered in accepting students to any medical college. Those who have registered for the test this year are Carl Seybold, Bill Short, Miles Dills, Harold Dysart, Wilbert Looloian, Lynn Curtis, Ivan Elder, and George Felknor.

Will Hold "As You Like It"

The social committee invites the student body to an As You Like It this evening at eight. The swimming pool will be open for both men and women. There will be Chinese checkers and other games in Pearsons lobby, and the gym will be open for those who want to play ping-pong.

The Right System

Baylor university students have a new way of determining what courses they'll take. Each student takes a personality test before making out his class schedule—a test that shows his psychological tendencies. Results of these tests are combined with aptitude, scholastic record and study habits to tell faculty members how to advise their charges.

SCOTTY SIDE SLANTS

By the
Sports Editor

E. T. T. CAN WIN S. M. C.—

For thrills and excitement at a football game, yesterday's couldn't be beat. Two long runs resulting in touchdowns, intercepted passes, long gains, hard smashing line plays, and razzle-dazzle plays in general were plentiful yesterday afternoon. Of course the marching gals at the half weren't so bad either.

Since Maryville is out of the conference picture now, and East Tennessee is definitely in, we asked the Bucaneer coach, Gene McMurray, if he thought they would win the conference. He tried to evade the question just a little, but he finally said that if they could beat the Milligan Buffaloes they would win the conference title. The Milligan game is the only conference game they have left and Coach McMurray was pretty safe in making that statement. He declined to say, however, whether or not he thought they would be able to beat Milligan.

When asked who the outstanding Maryville men yesterday were, he thought Etheredge and Burris gave the Bucs the most trouble. Fleming and Garland played good ball for the Teachers. Coach McMurray complained, however, that Fleming was a little off yesterday. Well, coach, we may be prejudiced, but Fleming was one of the hardest hitting line busters we have had the displeasure to see on the wrong side of the line. He is also one of the most elusive men we have seen this year.

Earlier in the year we printed a statement in the column that East Tennessee Teachers had 22 lettermen back this year. Well, it seems as though we exaggerated that according to Cach McMurray. (He wouldn't tell, but he probably had only 20 back.)

SENIORS 6—SOPHS 0

Last Tuesday, Nov. 8, the Senior class football squad marked up a 6-0 victory over the sophomores, in a game marked by goal-line stands made by the seniors. Edgar Meares scored the lone touchdown on a pass from McCaskie.

Lineups:

JUNIORS 38—FROSH 0

The Juniors ran over a very confused Freshman squad Friday afternoon to a 38-0 win, to continue to lead the intra-mural football "League."

With "T" Etheredge again showing his ability to snag Morrow's passes and Juniors big line holding out would be "taggers" beautifully, the Juniors hit a fast stride and held it monotonously. Marion Birmingham and Wilson put up a dogged battle for the unorganized Frosh.

The Juniors got started in the middle of the first quarter on a beautifully executed forward pass, Morrow to Etheredge, good for 40 yards. When the half ended, Etheredge had scored twice more through the air, and Herrick once. Still another pass, Morrow to Proctor, accounted for an extra point. Score, Juniors 25, Frosh 0. The Juniors scored twice more in the last half. Twice again passes accounted for the points. Morrow tossing to Woodring and Proctor for touchdowns. Morrow caught a pass from Stevenson for the last point of the game. The final score: Juniors 38, Frosh 0.

Harriers Run All Over Tenn. Vols

The Highlander cross-country squad journeyed to the University of Tennessee Wednesday afternoon and there ran all over the Vol's team. Maryville took the first six places in the meet, with Weldon Baird winning the two mile run in 10 minutes and 21 seconds.

The men that ran for Maryville and the order in which they finished are as follows: Baird, Gray, Orr, Mooney, Davies, and Lloyd. This Friday the University has arranged to bring their cross country squad to Maryville, and they will engage in the second meet of the season with the Scotties. This race will probably be the last of the season for the Scots, having no more definite meets scheduled.

Saturday Afternoon Meetings For M Club

The M club has arranged for the use of the Alumni gym from 1 to 3 o'colck every Saturday for those women who are interested in playing basketball, aerial darts, or other games. Ruth Hunley is in charge of these activities. All those girls who want to play these games are welcome to the use of the gym and are urged to come out. It is not necessary to be in point system. All girls are invited.

Scots Journey To Cumberland Fri.

The Scotties will invade Lebanon, Tennessee, next Friday to meet the Cumberland university Bulldogs.

Maryville will be out for its second victory over the Bulldogs, having beaten another bunch of pups from Wesleyan. The boys from Cumberland, however, will be out to avenge their defeat last year, the first in three years. The score last year was 20-6 in favor of the Highlanders. "High School" Hughes accounting for most of the Maryville points. In 1936, Cumberland won 29-6, and were on top again in '37 by a score of 21-0.

The Bulldogs have a fine squad this year, and an impressive record. Last week they eked out a victory over T. P. I., 6-0. T. P.I. has beaten Sewanee this season. The Scots will be ailing with Hughes out of the lineup, but will have the line intact with plenty of backfield strength.

Four Lettermen Bolster Swimming Squad This Year

Swimming practice has gotten into full swing this week under the supervision of Coach Gillingham. The squad numbers about 25, half of which are freshmen.

The schedule is in progress of being made, with no dates definite as yet. The first meet, however, will be after Christmas, and the season continuing until the early part of March.

Coach said that he could make no predictions as to the team, but added that they were working hard. Four lettermen are back: Findlay, Akana, Felknor, and Crane. Among the freshmen, Hudson is looking good. Trials for position will begin the latter part of next week.

The annual Swimming Carnival put on by the swimming team has been set for December third. Plans are in progress to make this year's version the best possible.

20 Cagemen Out For Practice

Basketball is going through the warming up stages on the Hill. No games will be scheduled until the conference heads meet in the first week of December. About twenty men are reporting for workouts each afternoon under the direction of Dale Russell. Several other lettermen will be added after football season. The Bairds, Etheredge, Hughes, Honaker and Morrow are pillars of the Scottie hopes for the coming season.

STANDINGS

The juniors are out front in the intra-mural race and are favorites to win the crown. They have piled up 99 points against 9 for their opponents. These nine points were made by the sophomores, who gave the leaders their ony setback. The sophs are second in the running and it will be possible for them to tie the leaders if the seniors are able to stop them. The last two games will be played next week with the champs meeting the all-stars on Nov. 24. Each team has played five games and the standings to date are:

Frosh	0	4	1

Two Last Half Touchdowns Give Teachers 20-13 Win Over Scotties

East Tennessee Teachers Show Power As They Knock The Highlanders Out of Conference Race

The fighting Maryville College Highlanders fell before the slashing attack of the East Tennessee Teachers here yesterday afternoon by the score of 20-13. The Teachers, led by Fleming, their star quarterback, scored in the second, third and fourth quarters. The Scotties scored both of their touchdowns in the second quarter, with George Morton, sophomore, carrying the ball over the line for both scores.

Maryville scored first early in the second quarter, when Troy Hunt and George Morton drove the ball from Teacher's forty-nine yard line over the goal line in a series of off-tackle and line smashing plays. Morton carried the ball over left-tackle from the two yard line. The extra point, an attempted placekick by Morton was not converted.

Fleming, Bucs quarterback, took Scot Honaker's kickoff on the ten yard line, fumbled the ball momentarily, and then ran along the right sideline thru the entire Maryville team for a 90-yard dash to the goal line and a touchdown. Boyer converted the extra point with a placekick. Maryville scored their second touchdown late in the first half, when Teachers after intercepting a Scottie pass, drove their way to the Maryville fifteen yard line. Fleming attempted another pass, but it was intercepted by Morton who outran three would-be tacklers, and scored his second touchdown after an 85 yard dash. Honaker converted the extra point with a placekick.

The Bucs scored in the third quarter after a series of passes, Fleming to Garland, brought the ball to the five yard line where Garland took the ball over on a reverse over left tackle. Boyer placekicked the extra point. The last Teacher's touchdown came in the last minute of play, after Garland had driven his way through the line on four line smashes bringing the ball to the five yard line, where he went over left tackle for the last touchdown. The extra point was no good, and the game ended 30 seconds later with the ball in Maryville's possession on the Maryville 35-yard line.

PLAY BY PLAY

Maryville won the toss and elected to receive. Webb kicked off for Tenn. Teachers, and Morton received the ball on the 20 yard line and almost got loose for a touchdown, being brought down on the Maryville 43 yard line. Morton hit the line for no gain. Morton again took the ball on a reverse and lost three yards. Honaker then punted out of bounds on the Buc's thirty yard line.

Garland made three around right end. Carpenter hit the line for no gain. Fleming then made 8 yards for a first down over right tackle. Garland ran around left end for three. Fleming hit the line for no gain. Carpenter hit the line for a gain of three yards. Carpenter then punted out on the Maryville 13 yard line.

Honaker took the ball on a fake punt for no gain. Honaker then punted to Fleming on the Teacher's 43 yard line where he was tackled by Etheredge. Garland made no gain through center. Carpenter made 3 on a reverse. Fleming then tossed an incomplete pass intended for Bower. Carpenter then punted over the goal line. Ball brought out to Maryville's twenty.

Teacher's offside, five yard penalty. Ball now on the 25. Burris on a fake punt made one yard. Honaker punted to the Teachers 32 yard line.

Carpenter made four thru tackle. Wilburn making the tackle. Fleming then made four more thru left tackle. Carptener made one, tackled by Wilburn. Webb then punted to Honaker on the Scots 20. Burris made two yards around right end. Honaker punted to Fleming on the Teacher's forty-three, where he was tackled by Bill Baird.

BAIRD BROTHERS—"BABY" BAIRD, BACK—BILL BAIRD, END

Fleming made one over right guard, tackle by S. K. Taylor. Carpenter made one thru line, tackle by Kramer. Fleming ran around left end for one yard, tackle by Wilburn. Fleming fumbled the ball attempting to punt but recovered the ball on the fifty. Teacher's, however, lost the ball on downs, and it's Maryville's ball on the fifty.

Hunt picked up seven through right guard. Hunt hit the line for four more and a first down. Honaker made five yards around left end. Hunt broke thru the line for 15 yards. Hunt hit the line for seven more. Hunt again made seven yards over left tackle. The ball is now on the secven yard line, first and goal to go. Morton picked up four yards over left guard. Morton made two more over left tackle. Morton then drove thru left tackle two yards for a touchdown. The extra point, an attempted placekick by Morton was wide, and the score: Maryville 6; Bucs 0.

Honaker then kicked off to Fleming who ran 90 yards for a touchdown. Boyer converted the extra point with a placekick. Score Maryville 6, Bucs 7. Webb kicked out of bounds on the Maryville 40 yard line. Hunt blasted for four over center. Honaker then tossed a 15 yard pass to Etheredge. Hunt made four around left end. Mor-

Donald Kent Dismissed By Judge Hugh L. Smith Upon Report Of Split Jury

Donald Kent was dismissed by Judge Hugh L. Smith from charges of libel instituted by Edward A. Jussley last Wednesday evening at the fall meeting of the court of Blant county held in Athenian hall at the regular meeting of the Law club.

Complications arose when the defense introduced their surprisce witness of the evening who admitted writing the letter which was blamed upon Kent, and upon which the outcome of the case hinged. Despite this bit of judicial strategy, the prosecution presented such an airtight case that the jury was unable to arrive at any definite decision. The defendant was dismissed by the judge on this ground.

The action taken by his honor, in assuming such unprecedented power in dismissing the defendant upon the report of a split jury is certain to involve further litigation before this widely known case is allowed to slip into obscurity.

Besides the action of the judge which is apt to hold attention for some time, the confession of the surprise witness of the defense will, in all probability, cause quite a bit of dispute as statements made by the witness under oath involved much more serious charges than were instigated in the trial of Kent; and also these statements involved several personages of wide repute and power in this county.

Howard Clark Dizney was the first witness introduced by the prosecution, and following him in order were Betsy Gaultney, Robert Martin, Roger Graham, and Charles Aubrey Sullivan who established the connection between the defendant and the incriminating letter.

The senior defense counsel, Arnold Kramer, showed every bit of his skill at cross examination in dealing with the prosecution witnesses. The defense introduced as its witnesses, in an attempt to prove that anybody might have written the letter, Glen Young and George Tibbetts. Young was junior counsel for the defense. The surprise of the evening came when the defense introduced Anita Rayburn to the stand, who broke down and confessed the whole thing.

The jury selected from the twenty-three names introduced from the panel was unable to reach a verdict.

The prosecuting attorneys; Brown, Jussley, and Findlay, presented an airtight case, and it was only due to their well-constructed case that they were able to gain any consideration from the jury at all.

Kramer, Ballenger, and Young represented the defense, and despite their subtle strategy, would have been unable, in all probability, to obtain an acquital without the introduction of the surprise witness of the evening.

Crane's Swing Band, Tap Dance At Theta

Saturday evening at 6:45 Theta Epsilon will present in Theta hall what is predicted to be one of the most interesting programs of the year. This entertainment consists of a variety program featuring three major personalities: Gene Craine, Maryville's maestro, will lead his popular swing band; Bob Claflin, talented local actor will present a dramatic skit; and Bernard Boyatt, a Maryville graduate known as the "Fred Astaire of Maryville," will give several tap dances.

Varsity Debaters Speak Impromptu

Impromptu speaking was the subject of special study by the varsity debate class which met last Tuesday evening in Thaw hall.

The first article was read by Hugh Smith and discussed pro and con by Paul Brown and Mabel Ennis. Ernest Crawford summarized the entire article. James Montgomery read the second article and Vernon Lloyd, Arthur Peterson, and Bruce Morgan gave speeches on its content.

Articles for the speeches were on the debate subject, but outside this general field the speakers knew nothing of what they were to speak on until the article was read before the class. Four minutes were allowed for preparation of the speech which was limited to three minutes.

Soloists For Messiah Will Be Chosen Tues.

The rehearsals for the Messiah are progressing rapidly toward its production on December 11. The orchestra and chorus of approximately 175 members have been rehearsing for the past two weeks and will hold their first combined reahearsal on November 20.

The student soloists will be decided upon at tryouts with the orchestra on next Tuesday evening.

Regular rehearsal this Sunday afternoon will be held from one o'clock until two-thirty. This will be the last opportunity for new members to join the chorus.

Colbert Selects Six Soloists For Handel's Messiah

Sixth Annual Performance Will Be Presented December 11th

The soloists for the sixth annual performance of Handel's "Messiah" on December 11, were announced today by Mr. Ralph R. Colbert. The tenor solos will be sung by Dick Woodring, a junior from Ardmore, Pennsylvania. Woodring sang leading tenor roles in "The Mikado" and in "Iolanthe." Ralph Reed, junior from Delaware and Edwin Goddard, senior from Maryville will sing the bass solos. Reed has played first trumpet in the college band for three years and in the orchestra for two years. Both Reed and Goddard sang leading parts in the "Mikado" and "Iolanthe," and also sang in last year's production of the "Messiah."

The contralto solos will be sung by Harriet Barber, of Knoxville, Tenn. She has taken leading parts in the operas presented by the college, and was a soloist in the "Messiah" two years ago. Ruth Wood, of Greenback, Tenn., and Bernice Cathcart of Maryville will sing the soprano solos. Ruth Wood had a leading part in the opera "Iolanthe" and a solo part in last year's "Messiah."

Miss Garnet Manges, a graduate of Maryville college, will be the piano accompanist for the third successive year. Orchestral accompaniment will be furnished by the college orchestra, under the direction of Miss Dorothy Horne, concert master.

The performance of the "Messiah" will be cut to one hour and a half this year. It will be composed of the overture and pastoral symphony, eleven choruses, one tenor solo, two bass solos, two contralto solos, two soprano solos, and a contralto and soprano duet.

Mrs. Claude Campbell Awarded History Prize For Tennessee Article

Mrs. Claude A. Campbell is author of the prize-winning article published in the 1938 edition of the East Tennessee Historical Society's Publications. The fifty dollar award won by Mrs. Campbell is offered annually by Mrs. C. M. McClung of Knoxville, Tennessee, to the member of the society who writes the best paper published in each issue of the Publications.

Mrs. Campbell is the first woman selected for this award. The judges of the contest are chosen from among the most prominent historians in the United States. The title of Mrs. Campbell's article is "Tennessee and the Union, 1847-1861."

Directors Of College Hold Board Meeting

The fall meeting of the board of directors was held last Tuesday, Nov. 15, prior to Dr. Lloyd's departure for the West. Officers and committees were re-elected for the coming year. Judge S. O. Houston, of the class of 1898, was elected chairman of the board for the seventh consecutive year. These meetings are held semi-annually and members come from several different states to attend.

Horace L. Ellis Leads YMCA Service Sunday

"Strength in Quietness" will be the subject of the YMCA devotional service Sunday afternoon at 5 p.m. in the Bartlett hall auditorium. Horace L. Ellis, college librarian, will be the leader for the program; and there will be special music by Miss Ruth Katherine Thompson, instructor in music.

On Sunday, November 27, the YMCA and YWCA will have the second combined meeting of the year when Dr. R. B. Hamilton, Knoxville minister, will speak to the associations.

NOTICE

Due to the fact that our September and October NYA payrolls have overdrawn our quota for these two months, it will be necessary that all NYA students limit their earnings for the period from December 8 to January 8, which includes the Christmas holidays, to one third of their regular monthly amount.

Second Artist Series Number Postponed Till Jan. Eleventh

Jussi Bjoerling, operatic tenor who was to appear here December 2 in the second number of the Artists' series will not be heard until January 11. This change of plans was necessitated by a two weeks extension of his present contract with the Metropolitan opera.

Bjoerling, leading tenor of the Stockholm Royal opera, made his American debut with the Metropolitan opera in the early part of November. During his stay of two and a half months in the United States he is making appearances in radio, opera, and in concert in many of the larger cities.

Tickets To Go On Sale For Drama December Sixth

"The King's Dilemma" Will Be Presented By Stock Company

Billed as an historical drama in three acts, "The King's Dilemma" with Martha Miller and Jess Coffer, well-known actors of stage and radio will be presented Tuesday evening, Dec. 6, at eight o'clock in Voorhees chapel. The benefits of this play will be for the social activities arranged by the social committee. Tickets will be placed on sale this week at thirty-five cents.

Henry VIII, that bluff, boisterous king of England with whom the play deals, was the most married man of his time. "The King's Dilemma" tells the story of Henry VIII's marriage to the German princess, Anna von Cleves. Henry was a lover of beautiful women. He married six times. The care with which he selected his wives was no less than a solemn rite. Only once did he permit another person to assist him in his choice of a mate. Cromwell, his prime minister, foisted upon him a German princess, Anna von Cleves, whom he accepted by proxy. Expecting Anna to be a great beauty since a portrait of Holbein painted her as such, he went into a rage when he discovered her to be an ugly duckling. Henry would have nothing of her and demanded a divorce and got it. But it took the army, the Archbishop, a lot of fussing and plenty of alimony, houses, servants, and jewels to be a free man.

Anna, however, looked after herself very nicely and did well to save herself from the block in this game of marriage with Henry. Her strategy in outdoing the king addds many laughs to the play.

Martha Miller plays Anna and proves again that she is one of the best character actresses on the stage today. Jess Coffer as Henry VIII gives an excellent interpretation of "Bluff King Hal."

Over 200 Attend Dormitory Fetes

Baldwin, Memorial Women Hostesses To Men And Faculty Members

Over 200 men of the college and members of the faculty were guests of Baldwin and Memorial dormitories at open house held Wednesday evening from 7:45 to 9:15. After an inspection of rooms, refreshments were served in the lobbies of the two halls.

Bernice Smith was general chairman of Baldwin, assisted by Mary Russ, Miriam Nethery, and Barbara Swift. Katie Letterman, Savannah Sneed, Emma Cassada, and Betty Pedley were responsible for many of the decorations, while Irma Criswell and Katherine Ogilvie helped with the refreshments.

A general committee, composed of Doris Heaton, Christine Landfear and Joan von Nordheim, was in charge of arrangements in Memorial hall. They were assisted by Johnnie Childers, Terry Jones, Matthew Wood, Janet Lindsay, Charlotte Colby, and Peggy Carter.

Barnwarming Royalty Candidates Are Announced By Nominating Committee

Annual YWCA Program On Theme of Mother Goose Will Climax Thanksgiving Day Activities For Students Remaining On Campus

Nominations for the king and queen of the annual Barnwarming were submitted to the Highland Echo last night by the nominating committee from the senior class. Nominees for king include Weldon Baird, George Felknor, Ivan Elder, Albert Rosser, Horace Brown, Fred Rhody, Alva Burris, Harold Dysart, Everett Gray, and Edward Jussely. Nominations for the queen are Alice Prime, Mary Chambers, Helen Ridenhour, Marguerite Justus, Lois Barnwell, Zillah McKenzie, Curtmarie Brown, Virginia Partridge, Etta Culbertson, and Virginia Lee Schaeffer. The election of the royal couple, this year to be called the King and Queen of Hearts, will be held in chapel Wednesday morning, the entire student body participating.

Miss Louise Proffitt, the chairman of the Barnwaming, has announced the following plans for the program and the side-show attractions. Carrying out the theme of "Mother Goose brought up to Swing", Curtmarie Brown and Mabel Ennis, taking the parts of the Modern Mother Goose, and the Mother Goose of the nursery rhymes, respectively, will leaf through the scenes of this adaptation of children's verses to the modern mood.

Among the numbers on the program, a special Barnwarming quartet will sing; Dick Woodring, Ed Goddard and Harriet Barber will handle solo selections; and "The Golden Trumpteers," Ralph Reed, Sam Cornelius, and Vernon Lloyd, will complete the musical theme. Chorus performances of "The Mulberry Bush" and "A Tisket, A Tasket" will be given by Lula Wade Diggs, Louise Darden, Jean Stringham, Frank Cross, Dave McDaniel, and Doug Steakley.

A faculty group, which stole the show last year with their life-like representation of the toy-shop, will hold a featured spot on the program with a surprise skit, while Howard Dizney will present the character role of the modern Simple Simon known to us as Wimpy. There will be a final dress re-

Students Will Go To Carson Newman

Student Council Makes Trip By Bus Possible At Minimum Cost

Through efforts of the student council, Maryville college students will be able to make the two-hundred mile trip to attend the Carson-Newman football game Saturday, Nov. 26, at a minimum cost.

President Bob Martin has been working for several weeks on a plan whereby such a trip may be made. He has been able to obtain buses from Knoxville at the rate of between a dollar and a dollar and a quarter per person, if the bus is filled. With the forty cents admission fee to the game, the total cost of the trip will not exceed a dollar-sixty-five. Students are asked to sign in the dormitories if they are interested in attending the game.

Investigations were made concerning train rates, but a guarantee of two hundred persons at a dollar-forty-five each had to be made. Students have not attended a game en masse for several years. Formerly, they attended the Maryville-U.T. games.

YMCA And YWCA Plan Thanksgiving Sunrise Service For Thursday

The YMCA and the YWCA will again this year sponsor a Thanksgiving morning sunrise service to be held in the Fine Arts studio at 8:15 a.m. The program will be one of song and poetry, and is under the direction of Warren Ashby, Katherine Pond, and Marvin Minear.

The string trio composed of Zula Vance, piano, Erwin Ritzman, cello, and John Gunter, violin, will play. In addition to this, the YWCA choir will sing.

Forum Will Hold Open Discussion

Audience to Be Divided Into Five Groups To Hear Articles Read

"Who will fight in the next war" is the general theme of a Peace Forum discussion to be held Friday evening at 6:45 in Thaw hall auditorium. The program has been patterned after the discussion group idea which proved quite popular in Forum meetings last year. Magazine articles will be read by students versed in international relations in the five groups into which the audience will be divided. These articles will be discussed by the groups, a conclusion drawn, and a report made to the audience as a whole.

This unique type of program has been designed by Forum leaders to give each person attending the meeting a chance to express his opinion. The reports made to the audience in the meetings following the group discussion should also give an excellent survey of student opinion on the subject around which the program is built.

The articles selected will be on the general theme of the alignments which are being made by the nations of the world in preparation for war. The discussion will reveal the trends toward alliances and revanche by means of trade agreements. Particular attention will be paid to the recent trade agreement between the United States and Great Britain, and the visit of British royalty to America next spring as indicating the position of this country in the next war.

The current German persecution of the Jews and the reaction to it indicated in the American press will also come up for discussion. Articles will be selected showing the anti-German attitude of the United States today, and the same attitude which was prevalent in 1916.

Pearsons To Sponsor Dateless Masquerade In Gym For Students

This evening at eight o'clock the Pearsons girls will present a dateless masquerade for the rest of the college. All who attend are requested to come without dates and in costume. There will be prizes for the most original costume including the mask, for the most grotesque, and for the most beautiful.

Joy Pinneo is chairman of the committee from Pearsons in charge of the masquerade.

Good Portrayal Of Roles Seen In Two-Act Comedy

Pat Mann and Bennett Do Outstanding Work In Leading Roles

Approximately 500 people witnessed the highly successful performance of "Tovarich" by the College players last night in Voorhees chapel. Muriel Mann and Gordon Bennett headed a cast that turned in a consistently fine interpretation of the Jacques Deval comedy.

As the Grand Duchess Tatiana Petrovna, Pat Mann played one of the strongest and most mature roles of her experience on the Maryville stage. The vigorous emotional quality of her interpretation characterized by discriminating restraint contributed much to the effectiveness of her part.

Gordon Bennett gave another evidence of his versatility in the part of Prince Mikail Alexandrovitch Ouratieff, a role making great demands in its abrupt changes of mood. Bennett's performance was marked with his usual poise and confident stage presence.

Frank Brink as Commissar Gorotchenko, John Wintermute as Charles Dupont, and Katherine Warren as Fernande Dupont contributed the strongest of the supporting roles. Sara Bolton, although cast in a small part, gave one of the sincerest and best-studied characterizations of the evening.

Bruce Walters as M. Chaffourier-Dubieff, William Felknor as Count Feodor Brekenski, Charles Fish and Carol Ward as Georges and Helene Dupont were convincing. Barbara Anderson, Mary Frances Spurlock, Vernon Lloyd and Arda Walker completed the personnel of this well-cast play.

"Tovarich" is in two acts and four scenes. The action opens in a shabby room in the Hotel du Quercy and continues in the boudoir of the wife of Charles Dupont, a wealthy Parisian banker. Act two opens in the Du-

Alexander To Speak

Rev. Theron Alexander, pastor of the Park City Presbyterian church of Knoxville, will be the speaker at the Wednesday morning chapel service. Rev. Alexander is a graduate of Maryville college in the class of 1906. He is a member of the board of directors of the college and is well known in Maryville and on the hill.

Fred Hope Drive Most Successful In Seven Years

The Rev. Anderson Speaks To Student Body As 367 Pledge

The annual Fred Hope drive, consisting this year of two addresses by Rev. L. K. Anderson, missionary from West Africa, is the most successful that Maryville college has had in the last seven years. The total of pledges this year amounts to $770.30 as compared with the $684.40 pledged last year.

The most encouraging phase of the report, however, is the number of people contributing: 367, or almost twice as many as ever before. This is an interesting commentary on both Rev. Anderson's graphic picture of the need in the mission field and on Dr. Hunter's tactful presentation of the plea for funds. The pledges ranged from 25 cents to $6. A box for those who may still wish to take part in this drive has been placed in the student-help office.

The money thus raised is used in partial support of the Frank James Industrial school in Elat, West Africa, which is under the direction of Dr. Fred Hope, an alumnus of Maryville college. Two years ago Dr. Hope himself, in America on furlough, spoke here on the progress of his work.

Dr. Hope was graduated from Maryville in 1906, having come to the college from Illinois. While a student he was looked upon as one of the outstanding members of the student body, and was a leader in the YWCA. He had numerous offers for positions with large business groups, but chose to enter the mission field as a layman. He was placed in charge of the industrial school at Elat, where he has been for a number of years. A few years ago he was given an honorary degree from Maryville.

Dr. R. W. Lloyd Attends College Meeting In West

President Ralph W. Lloyd left last Tuesday evening for Omaha, Nebraska, where he delivered the opening address of the meeting of Church Related Colleges of the Middle West and Far West on Thursday. This meeting was under the auspices of the National Conference of Church Related Colleges, of which Dr. Lloyd is the president.

President Lloyd expects to go to Philadelphia and Washington, D. C. before his return. These visits will be made in the interest of the college.

Oratory Discussed At Debate Class Meeting

Members of the varsity debate squad met last Tuesday evening in Thaw hall for their regular weekly meeting. The subject of special study for the meeting was oratory, and various types and phases of this line of speech were presented by members of the squad.

Arda Walker read an oration which she gave at the State convention last year. Others on the program were Harriet Miller and Arnold Kramer, who read orations which won first places at the National Pi Kappa Delta speech tournament last year.

Study for the next several weeks will be concentrated on the debate subject in preparation for the tryouts which will be held some time in December.

Juniors In Charge Of Y.W. Meeting Tomorrow

The regular meeting of the YWCA tomorrow at 1:15 will be in charge of the juniors. Margaret Knox, Louise Allen, Barbara McCutcheon, Joy Corrigan, and Harriet Miller will speak on the theme of Henry Van Dyke's poem: "Four things a man must learn to do, if he would make his record true: To think without confusion, clearly, to love his fellow-men sincerely, to act from honest motives purely, to trust in God and heaven securely."

Pat Kennedy will play and Dick Woodring will sing.

No Echo Next Week

Due to Thanksgiving holidays and to the generally changed program of the college next week there will be no Highland Echo on Saturday, November 26.

700 Pounds Of Turkey For Thanksgiving

By GEORGE L. HUNT

To those who patronize the dining hall in Pearsons three times a day, Thanksgiving will be an event. For one thing, breakfast will not start until 7:30, dinner at 1 p.m., and a light supper will be served at 6. For another thing, seven hundred pounds of real turkey have been ordered that those who daily pay their obligations at the shrine of old lady, corn bread, biscuits, and toast might enjoy a real Thanksgiving-day dinner. Along with the turkeys, all prepared to suit the most discriminating diners, will be cranberry sauce, mashed potatoes, creamed peas, rolls, coffee, celery and olives, and plum pudding with hard sauce. It is a new day and a new deal in Pearsons, and though it may last for but a day, let us eat, drink water, and be merry, for tomorrow we return to our former menus—not nearly as bad as we think they are, but what would life be without something to gripe about?

Since the highlight of the campus Thanksgiving day celebration is the noon meal, our attention is centered on Pearsons hall and the machinery that enables it to conform to the strict schedule which it does keep. Almost one hundred persons are actively engaged in the workings of the dining hall. Miss Margaret S. Ware has been supervisor of the dining hall for the past several years and is in direct charge of the entire working force. There are seventy-seven waitresses, four cooks, four men who dish out the food, five men who wash the dishes, and seven women who do other work in the establishment such as watching the food, taking care of the laundry, filling the syrup jars, and so forth. The student pay roll in the dining room is a thousand dollars a month, a sum which at first thought is staggering, and yet which gives a fair idea of the size of the work which is directely supervised by one woman.

Three of the four cooks have been in the kitchen of the college for almost fourteen years. John Henry is in charge, with Agnes Henry and Della Howard assisting. Sam Goldsby has just joined the cooking staff this year.

Most students do not realize the responsibility involved in being an efficient waitress. The dining hall is run on a schedule. For example, the waitresses come in the hall at 6:45 every morning except Sunday. They get the toast at seven minutes before seven and the biscuits at five minutes before seven. Through cooperation of all the workers, by seven o'clock the meal is ready for the students. The other meals are run on a schedule just as strict, and late arrivals at meals upsets the working schedule of the waitress as well

An Honest Appraisal

A chapel speaker recently made the statement that, to him, the most deplorable present-day tendency is the lowering of courtesy standards and practices.

An honest appraisal of ourselves and others with whom we deal must convince us that there is a great deal of truth in this remark.

The brand of courtesy here referred to is not the artificial coating of politeness sometimes used to hide the true nature underneath; by "courtesy" we mean thoughtful consideration for others, inspired by a genuine feeling of brotherhood.

When we call to mind the persons we escpecially respect and admire, we are very likely to think of individuals whose every attitude and action reflect the kind of courtesy just described.

Although it may be true that college life offers many opportunities to be discourteous (in the dormitories, dining hall, classrooms and social activities), it is just as true that these same features of campus life afford chances for the development of sincere habits of courtesy.

Ever New

Although Open House held each year by the dormitories has become a Maryville college custom it is ever new both to participants and to visitors. What has laughingly been called "an insight into how the other half would like to live" adds much to the life of the college in giving the students a chance to get better acquainted and to get an idea of general dormitory life. Too frequently Open House is the only chance students in the same dormitory have to see each other at home and it serves a real function in the dorm itself as well as for the school as a whole.

For the last three years Memorial, Baldwin, and Carnegie have held Open House but unfortunate circumstances prevented Pearsons from entertaining last year. The successful completion of the program on last Wednesday has made students more eager to see the residents of Pearsons and Carnegie "at home" in the very near future, and the announcement of their Open House is eagerly awaited.

A Real Tribute

It is a real tribute to the vividness of Rev. L. K. Anderson's description of the need in West Africa that this year's Fred Hope fund is the largest in recent years and that the number of students contributing is almost double that of last year. Such a large contribution is also a tribute to the generosity and cooperation of the students and faculty; especially fitting as we approach Thanksgiving.

We are prone to forget the condition of people living in a country which is likely to change hands over night and of the consequent suffering, loss of property, and change of laws and customs that accompanies such an event. We lose sight of places where hospitals are run like Ford assembly plants and where there is only one minister for thousands of primitive people spread over many miles of tropical jungle.

It is only when some man with the insight and enthusiasm of Mr. Anderson describes these things that we realize the true seriousness of such situations. It is only then that we feel the duty and opportunity that is ours in helping such a cause as Dr. Hope's school in Elat.

EPOSTLE

You read and write till late at night
That letter you're composing;
But nothing's quite exactly right—
It must look more imposing.
You squirm and stew till black and blue,
Then sit and stare and wonder.
You start anew. It must ring true.
You dare not make a blunder.
You're far from through, and tired too,
And there's the "light's out" warning.
What shall you do? You know that you
Must mail it in the morning.
Your room-mate hence, adds his two cents:
"I'd drop a card," he hollers.
It sounds like sense; so you write thence,
Just, "Send me twenty dollars."

German Club Sponsors Picnic In Woods Tuesday

Approximately 25 students attended the German club picnic Tuesday from 4:30 to 8 o'clock in the college woods. Following a brief business meeting in which plans for a Christmas party were discussed, the group ate around the campfire. Folk games and German songs concluded the program.

The picnic was planned by Clem Hahn, Kitty Bennett, and Etta Culbertson. Doctor and Mrs. Ralph S. Collins and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph M. Hovel were chaperones.

BARNWARMING

hearsal on Wednesday evening for all participants in the program.

Under the direction of the general chairmen of the booths, Erwin Ritzman and Ruth Abercrombie, plans have been outlined for six side-show booths, for which places will appear on the tickets, and a refreshment booth supervised by Russell Stevenson and Ruth Abercrombie. The "Hall of Horrors," or "London Bridge is Falling Down," will be in charge of Bob Martin and Ed Jussely; "The Old Mother Hubbard" booth will be directed by Sara Lee Hellums and Arnold Kramer; "Punch and Judy" by Mary Frances Spurlock and Carol Ward; "Humpty-Dumpty" by Marvin Minear and Catherine Pond; the "Bingo" booth by Warren Ashby and J. N. Badgett; and "Little Tommie Titmouse" by Ruth Crawford, H. F. Lamon, Edith Evans and Tom Taylor.

Sale of tickets for the Barnwarming opened today at noon, and will continue Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the lobby of Thaw hall, and Wednesday noon in the lobby of Pearsons hall.

EIGHT WILL TAKE TEST

The eight Maryville college students who plan to enter medical schools in the fall of 1939 will take the Medical Aptitude test at three o'clock on the afternoon of December 2. This test is required of all pre-medical students. Those who have registered to take the test this year include Carl Seybold, Bill Short, Miles Dills, Harold Dysart, Wilbert Looloian, Lynn Curtis, Ivan Elder, and George Felknor.

Confab Club Meets Tues.

A program centered around different phases of football was presented at the regular meeting of the Confab club last Tuesday evening in the Fine Arts studio. A general social program was held and all old members were invited. The Chilhowean picture was taken at the meeting.

FORMER EDITOR VISITS COLLEGE

An unexpected visitor to the campus this week was former editor of the Echo, J. T. Hunt. Hunt was called to Maryville because of the unexpected death of his grandfather and was on the Hill Friday night.

Quiz-minded college professors and proponents of frequent tests to jolt laggard students were themselves given a jolt recently by Michigan State college's Dr. Victor H. Noll. In reporting the results of his researches on the effectiveness of quizzes, Dr. Noll has revealed that: "There is no evidence to support the common belief among instructors that written tests as commonly used motivate learning or increase total achievement in college classes."

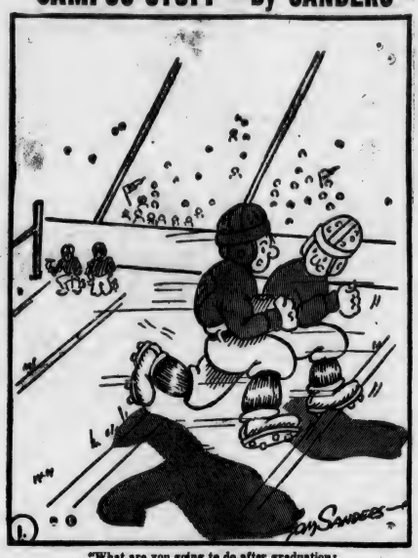
SCOTTY SIDE SLANTS

By the
Sports Editor

RASSLIN'—

Rasslin', under the able supervision of "Coach" Meares, isn't doing so hot. It seems as though Mr. Meares has no material to speak of with which to work on. There are at present only a few out, and since there are plenty of vacancies on the squad this year, there should be, by rights, more men out for practice every Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoon. The wrestling team, which is coached by Mr. Thrower, has already made arrangements with three schools for meets this winter. And the team will make several trips, too. They will go to Nashville to engage in a little bout with Vanderbilt university. Another trip will be taken to Raleigh, North Carolina. In the Tarheel state, Coach Thrower's grapplers have a match with N. C. State.



"SHOELESS WONDER"—

Yes, we have one. In captivity too. Anyway, if you have ever happened to watch those cross country runners practice, and some of them do practice, you might see Don Calhoun, the "Shoeless Wonder" galloping around. Don went sissy on us yesterday though and wore a pair of shoes when he ran against U. T. Don says that running without shoes has actually helped him a great deal, and there might be something in that, who knows. Anyhow, I'll bet that Maryville is the first college to have a cross country runner who runs barefoot.

ALL-CONFERENCE HOPES—

The time has come for peoples to pick these all-conference teams. They do it in the Smoky Mountain Conference, too. Maryville has a couple of players that surely deserve all-conference honors, and will no doubt receive them. One of the least mentioned is Arnold Kramer, big 190 pound lineman for the Scots. Kramer, who is a junior, has played in every quarter of every game this year, until the Teacher's game, when he was removed due to an injury. Arnold is one of the best tackles in the conference, and if he is overlooked someone will be making a sad mistake. Another player deserving honors is Joe Etheredge. Joe, a junior end, is about six feet tall and weights about 165. Joe is the lad that caught the pass that scored against the University of Kentucky this year. J. D. Hughes, although on the injured list right now, is sure to be placed on the SMC all-conference list. Hughes is a backfield man, weighs about 160, and is a bundle of dynamite against any team. There are several others, Hunt, Morton, and Burris who will probably receive recognition on some of the selections.

84 Yard Run Spells 13-0 Defeat For Scots At Hands of Cumberland

Maryville Threatens Only Once As Slippery Ball And Sea of Mud Hampers Highlanders Passing Attack

The Maryville College Highlanders fell before the Cumberland Bulldogs yesterday afternoon by the score of 13-0. The game was played on the Cumberland field which was a sea of mud and water due to an all-day rain.

The Lawyer's started off the fireworks when Miles Christian took Morton's kickoff and ran the ball back to the one yard line where he was finally downed by Hunt. Johnson then drove the ball over on the first play for the touchdown. Johnson also made the extra point through the line.

Cumberland scored their second touchdown in the last quarter when Cumberland punted to the goal line and the referee ruled that the ball had not gone over, the ball was then placed on the one foot line. George Garner then attempted to throw a flat pass from a punt formation, but the wet ball slipped out of his hands and the fumble was recovered by Beasley of Cumberland for the touchdown. They failed to convert their extra point.

Maryville threatened once in the third quarter when Joe Etheredge recovered a Bulldog fumble on the 18 yard line and on two plays they got the ball up to the 12 yard stripe. But the Scots were unable to drive through a stubborn Cumberland defense and they lost the ball on downs.

Morton stood out for Maryville in the backfield, while Joe Etheredge again was the star lineman for the Scots. Hal Henschen, blond sophomore tackle, also played a wonderful game on the line. Five men played the entire game on the line for the Highlanders: Bill Baird, Henschen, Taylor, Kramer, and Etheredge.

Lineups:

CUMBERLAND		MARYVILLE
Beasley	LE	Baird
Mayberry	LT	Henschen
Ingerman	LG	Taylor
Colberson	C	Wilburn
Bobo	RG	Jenkins
Gordon	RT	Kramer
Sumners	RE	Etheredge
Johnson	QB	Burris
Smith	LH	Morris
Christian	RH	Garner
White	FB	Hunt

Cumberland scoring: Touchdowns, Johnson; Beasley. Points after touchdowns, Johnson (line plunge).

Scots Face Tough Assignment Sat. At "Eagles Nest"

Carson-Newman's Eagles will be hosts to the Scotties next Saturday afternoon, at McCown Field, Jefferson City, Tenn.

The wearers of the Orange and Blue boast a strong football squad which, although they have been handed several defeats this season, will no doubt keep the Highlanders on their toes every minute of the game.

Carson-Newman won the Smoky Mountain Conference Football championship last year, and they also won it in '36 and '34. The Eagles did not meet the Highlanders last year, but beat the Maryville squad 26-0 in 1936. The Scotties are anxious to avenge this defeat, and they will enter Jefferson City with every intention of ending their 1938 football season with a victory.

Scots Hand U-T Runners Second Straight Defeat

The Maryville Harriers won their second straight cross-country meet with the University of Tennessee Vols here yesterday. Maryville won the first five places, with a Tennessee man sixth, and another Maryville man seventh.

Everett Gray won the race, running the two mile distance in 10 min. 17 sec. Weldon Baird was second and Eugene Orr placed third. Bill Mooney and Alf Davies placed fourth and fifth respectively. Calloway was the first man to finish for the Vols, he was sixth.

The men who ran, and the order they finished are: Gray M, Baird M, Orr M, Mooney M, Davies M, Calloway T, May T, Calhoun M, Wilscon T, Steakley M, Nevius T, Eble M.

Naberhuis Wins Women's Singles Tennis Tour'mt.

On Wednesday afternoon the finals for the women's singles tennis tournament, sponsored by the YWCA, under the direction of Louise Proffitt, was played between Jane Corry, senior, and Jean Naberhuis, freshman. Miss Naberhuis won the championship by defeating Miss Corry, 6-2, 6-2. A championship cup will be presented to Miss Naberhuis next spring. The single's tournament was won by Reba Nicely last year. Naberhuis defeated Tyndall and Corry defeated Gaultney in the semi-finals.

The women's doubles tournament has been postponed until next spring when the weather will permit the matches to be played off.

Scot Chances For SMC Basketball Crown Are Slim

Basketball practice is well under way under the supervision of Dale Russell. Approximately twenty men, mostly freshmen are reporting for the practices which are held every Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

The Scottie chances for a Smoky Mountain Conference championship in basketball are rather slim this year. Although there will be four letermen back this year, the loss of Junior Odell and Mac Magill will be seriously felt. The lettermen back are Dale Russell, who fills the center position and who is the only man back this year that is over six feet tall; Weldon Baird, a dependable and steady forward; Boydson Baird, one of the best ball handlers in the conference, and a good guard, and Scottie Honaker, a guard, who can hit the hoop with consistency.

The team will be small this year, but they hope to make for their lack of size in speed. There will be plenty of vacancies for the squad, and unless some freshmen come up fast, the reserve men will all be taken from J. D. Hughes, Frank Morrow, and Gastrock.

"Neptune's Wetting" Water Carnival Theme

Neptune's Wetting, this year's edition of the annual water carnival, will be presented on December third in the Bartlet hall pool.

The carnival is completely new; featuring soft lights, rippling music and novel entertainment. There is to be an under-water theme this year—"An Eel's Eye View of a Subaqueous Festival Day." A string ensemble directed by Gene Craine and assisted by a girl's quartet will provide the musical theme and background.

Coach Gillingham is directing the entertainment assisted by John Ballenger. Besides 25 boys of the swimming team, there will be Mary Darden, Louise Darden, Virginia Knighton, Dorothy Quass, and Katherine Bennett, to add the feminine touch to the occasion.

Added to such attractions as exhibtion diving, greased pole walking, and racing for 80 year old sea dogs, there will be a series of surprise events and stunts. Neptune, king of the carnival, will preside over the festivities. His identity will be divulged at 8 o'clock on the evening of the third in the shadows of the underwater kingdom.

The water carnival is presented by the swimming team, and all proceeds will go for their expenses during the swimming season. Admission will be 20 cents. Tickets will go on sale on the 26th of November.

INTERCLASS SPORTS

Throughout the country all-star teams, all-conference teams, and etc., are being picked by different writers and newspapers. So, not wanting to be out of style, and anyway it is a yearly custom, the YMCA athletic department has selected what they term their all-intramural team. The men on this team were selected by the athletic directors of each class under the supervision of Gene Orr.

The team selected this year will represent each class, with the senior, junior, and sophomore classes each having three men apiece and the freshmen two men on the team. Two teams have been selected; one team represents all four classes, and the other team has been elected to play the championship junior eleven on Thanksgiving Day.

The backfield is composed of Morrow, who is one of the best passers and kickers ever to play intramural football; Etheredge, who is the best pass receiver on the field; McCaskie, who can sling a pass with the best of them and who is one of the best defensive men to play this year; Van Blarcum, who is known as a passer and blocking back. The line has Peterson and Rhody at ends. Both are known for their ability to snag passes out of nowhere. The tackles are Puncheon and H. Thompson, two big bruisers, who rush through the line and are continually bothering the opposing backfield men. At guard there are two freshmen, Scapellatti and Kent. Both are fast and tough to handle. The center is Judy, a senior, and Judy is known for his defensive ability to intercept passes.

The freshman gridders defeated the sophomore football team 7-6 in the final game of the intramural tournament of 1938, played yesterday afternoon.

The game was a closely fought one as the score indicates, and both teams were handicapped by a shortage of players.

Phil Evaul scored the touchdown for the sophs, while Scapellati scored the touchdown and the extra point for the frosh.

Butch And Pub Get A Carnegie-Eye View Of Life In Memorial, Baldwin

Nod, nod, nod. Snooze, snooze, snooze. Dream, dream, dream. Being in a deliciously don'tcarish humor that Wednesday morning, I had snored (snared?, snorn?) carefully through what they tell me was an extremely interesting speech before I woke up to the fact (or the punch) that my roommate, Pub (short for Public Enemy No. 1) was punchingly trying to give me a gentle hint without causing too much commotion.

"Arouse thyself, unconscious. It's time to wail a hymn and go out."

Arguing myself awake, I eventually climbed to my fet and managed, by extreme effort, to mumble a few syllables (I know not what) and to gather myself together and start up the aisle. That was the point when the momentous question first presented itself!

It appeared first in the form of a dizzy little blonde job with chewing gum and a "Suthun" accent who writes notes to me in chapel. It fluttered into sight and startled me with its sweet little piping voice.

"Oh, Butchie-wutichie, are you going tonight?"

"Sure, I'm going! A- what-what'd you . . ."

"Oh, that's divine! Don't forget to come up to see me." And it fluttered on by in a whirl of pink scarf and honey-colored frizz.

And I actually caught myself wondering what in the world the dame was talking about. I had just succeeded in persuading my mind onto something less doubtful when up the thing jumped again. Pub's query hit me like a shot!

"So you are going, after all? I thought you slept through the announcement."

"What's this all about? Going where? What announcement?"

Obligingly, "The women of Baldwin and Memorial dormitories cordially invite the faculty and men students of Maryville college to open house on Wednesday evening, November 16, at 8:00 p.m."

Came the dawn. "Oh-h-h-. Oh, sure. Well, are you?"

"Am I what?"

"Going."

"Naturally."

After having to wait in line for the shower, having to hunt on all three floors for our shoes, and having to cope with all the little situations which seem to arise when something is trying to happen on time, seven-thirty found Pub and me in a much bedecked and bewiledered state. Pub bedecked in all his finery, even to the perfectly horrible tie which Dot gave him last week for his birthday and which he just naturally had to wear because he was going to see her. I bewildered because my one and only suit had not yet returned from the cleaner who had not expected me to need it before Saturday night at the earliest.

"Gosh, Butch, you're a whiz in that new shirt." Dear man. He was trying to cheer me up.

"Yeah, 'specially without benefit of coat, vest, and trousers. Don't I look sweet? Think I'll just go on as is."

"Looks like you'll have to—or stay home. Cetera desunt."

"You said a mouthful! Which reminds me—what do they have in the way of food at these shindigs? I could do things to a piece of cake about now."

"Oh, the usual thing. A little of this and a little of that. Better run down and see if there's not a nice little surprise waiting for you."

"Yes, and if there isn't, that cleaner is going to have a nice little surprise all his own when I storm in tomorrow."

Sorry, you guessed wrong. At eight-fifteen I walked proudly down the steps of Carnegie with the added attraction of a suit. The end of the side walk hove in sight and with it a MAJOR problem. Where to first? Dot lives at Baldwin, but my girl hangs her hat in Memorial and I would no more have thought of going to Baldwin first that I would have thought of letting Pub, my man of the world, escape just at the crucial moment where all his sophomorally wisdom would do me the most good. If we had had a coin to flip, I might have won, heads or tails. Both of us, however, were suffering from a slight case of chronic financial embarrassment. We counted out, and mo, as usual, failed to favor me. We went to Baldwin.

You know I'm about as graceful as an elephant, so you can imagine how I looked while being submitted to a formal greeting by two evening gowns a coiffure, and a pair of white gloves. I forgot to notice how good-looking they were until Pub's gulp had followed mine and some other poor suckers were receiving treatment similar to ours. I never seem to take advantage of opporunity until it has grown tired of knocking.

"Register at the desk, please." And so we drew our names with a flourish, little dreaming that this was only the beginning of what was evidently meant to be a course in teaching us our names so we'd forget them nevermore. That I came home with writer's cramp is only slightly surprising, considering the fact that every inmate of both dorimtories seemed strangely desirous of collecting my autograph on her own private register.

A beautiful black dress with red hair and a smile made us go through every single room and finally found Dot's room for us. Pub, that it. I only came along as bodyguard. And was it a honey! Although I loathe pink and blue as a color-scheme, it suited Dot very well. That made it suit Pub very well. That made it unanimous.

I repeat. I only came along as bodyguard.

"Holy cats, Butch. Why are you tearing up those slips of paper I gave you? Don't you know we eat on those?" This after what seemed like hours of sweet conversation with the coy Dotty.

"How should I? You didn't tell me. I gotta have something to amuse myself with, haven't I?"

Strangely enough, it was this tactful statement which brought Pub to his feet to tell Dot what we really had to go and see my girl. I think we slithered out rather gracefully, what with the weight of Dot's picture on our consciences; or rather, in my vest-pocket. After all, there was no sense in Pub's getting caught red-handed with Dot's picture in my pocket, so we hurried over to Memorial.

And there went through the same rigamarole (meaning hordes of rooms). With two differences. I saw MY girl (but not so much as a sign of a picture). Senior guy thinks he's so smart. Must have beat me to it. And we managed to get on the outside of a goodly portion of punch and cookies in less time than I have to tell you.

When ten-fifteen approached I was brilliant enough to leave before receiving a hint in that general direction, so naturally I didn't have time to check up on the figure which the matron kindly gave me. Hundreds of guys and faculties floating about. For the analitically or realistically minded, two hundred, to be exact.

Amid cats and dogs and pitchforks and sheets I heard Pub mumbling between jumps across pubbles something about "nice to get better asquainted," "kinda home-like,' et cetera, et cetera. And found myself thinking, "There'll be some more good announcements like that one to sleep through tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow, I-hope-I-hope-I-hope.

When considered in bulk quantity, the amount of food consumed is amazing. Two hundred loaves of bread every day, which is four thousand slices; eighteen hundred biscuits every morning; three hundred and twenty pounds of butter a week; one hundred and fifty bottles of ketchup a week; two hundred and forty pounds of "old lady" a week; nine gallons of "goo" a day; twenty gallons of coffee every morning; thirty gallons of milk for cereal and coffee in the morning and fifty-four gallons when used for drinking; and sixty-five gallons of soup.

Six hundred and thirty-five students eat in Pearsons dining hall. Tickets On Sale For Coffer-Miller Historical Drama

Humorous Play to Be Given By Professional Troupe On December 6th

Tuesday evening, Dec. 6, the Coffer-Miller players will present an historical drama in three acts, "The King's Dilemma," in Voorhees chapel at eight o'clock. Reserved seat tickets have already been placed on sale.

With the kings and dictatorships in a never ending dilemma today over the constant change in the political setup of nations, the play has unusual interest currently. The authors, aside from showing the main characters for what they are, adroitly use them as mouthpieces to satirize today's economical and political events.

The play depicts one of the lighter events in the reign of Henry VIII—his marriage to the German princess, Anna von Cleves. And it can be said in all truthfulness that this marriage was his "most embarrassing moment."

Recorded history states that after the death of Jane Seymour, his third wife, Henry remained a widower for two years. At last, however, he spurred his advisors to find another wife. All the courts of Europe were combed for a suitable mate. Henry's reputation for having his wife beheaded preceded him. None of the royal ladies approached wished to risk their hearts—or necks—with him. After much delay, Cromwell, the prime minister, selected Anna von Cleves, a German princess. Anna was not beautiful. Nevertheless, Cromwell brought about the union as a bit of political strategy and depended upon good luck, and much deception, to make Henry accept her. To this end, Cromwell commissioned Hans Holbein, a portrait painter, to do a small likeness of Anna. His instructions were to represent her as a beautiful woman. This likeness, so called, of Anna was given Henry for a royal approval. He was delighted and hastened the day to receive his bride. But when he finally looked upon her, he departed in terror. Anna was ugly beyond description!

Martha Miller plays Anna and proves again that she is one of the best character actresses on the stage today. Jess Coffer as Henry VIII gives an excellent interpretation of "bluff King Hal."

"The King's Dilemma" is being sponsored by the social committee. The proceeds from these plays help in the expenses for the social activities on the campus. The student members of the committee will act as ushers.

Christmas Anthems And String Ensemble Featured At Vespers

Christmas Vespers will be held in Voorhees chapel on Sunday, Dec. 4. Dr. Stevenson's talk will be on "The First of all Christmas Congregations." The service will begin at six-forty with the playing of Christmas carols by a string ensemble under the direction of Miss Dorothy Horne. The processional hymn, "Adeste Fidelis," will follow.

The choir under Mr. Ralph R. Colbert's direction will sing three anthems; "Today There is Ringing" by Christiansen, "Gesu Bambino" by Pietro A. Yon with Ed Goddard and Dick Woodring singing the solo parts, and "Cantique de Noel" by Adam with the solo and obligato parts sung by Bernice Cathcart and Elizabeth Ann Huddleston.

The recessional hymn will be "As With Gladness Men of Old."

Change Schedule For Day Before Vacation

The schedule for the last day before the holidays has been announced. The faculty have decided that there will be no chapel service on Thursday, Dec. 15. All four classes will meet beginning at 8:00 and ending at 11:40. Lunch will be served at 11:45.

Students Present Fine Arts Program

Recital And Exhibit Friday Features Pupils' Work In Fine Arts

Students of the Fine Arts department presented a recital and exhibit in the Fine Arts studio yesterday at four o'clock. The program began with a vocal solo, Yon's "Gesu Bambino" by Louise Allen accompanied by Zula Vance. Sara Bolton followed with "Cong Against Children" by Aline Kilmer, the widow of Joyce Kilmer, and the "Mistletoe" by Barry Cornwall, an old English poem about the traditional English greens.

A piano solo, Debussy's "La fille aux cheveux de lin" by Ruth Mack, and a vocal solo, "Beautiful Dreamer" by Foster sung by Gene McCurry accompanied by Ruth Mack were next. Another reading "A Plantation Melody" by Stanton, better known for his "Mighty Lak' a Rose," was given by Sara Bolton; and a violin solo, the Sonata in G minor (Didi Abandurata) by Tartini Adagio played by John Guinter, followed.

Anne Abel interpreted Liszt's "Etude in D flat" at the piano and the program closed with the "Caro Nome" from Rigoletto, by Elizabeth Anne Huddleston accompanied by Zula Vance.

Gay 90's Furnish Theme For Senior "Hicks"

The Alumni gym, decorated to represent a barn, will be the scene of a melodrama party for the seniors Saturday, Dec. 10, at 8:00. Jimmy Rich, serving as master of ceremonies, will encourage the audience to hiss the villain and clap for the hero, who will be selected from the audience. A family album skit, directed by John Magill, will be followed by the gay 90's quartet: Carl Wells, Lloyd Wells, Don McArthur and John Magill. Doughnuts and cider will be served at the end of the program. Everyone is asked to come dressed as a "hick."

Virginia Partridge, vice president of the senior class, Zula Vance, John Magill, and Ed Goddard, committee in charge of the party,(have announced that it is to be open, with admission 15 cents each or two for 25 cents.

Games At German Club

On Tuesday evening the German club will hold its regular meeting in the Alumni gymnasium. Singing games will be played as the feature of the evening. The club will also sing a number of German folk songs.

Jussi Bjoerling Sings Jan. 11 In Voorhees Chapel

Swedish Tenor Comes Here From Leading Roles At Metropolitan

Jussi Bjoerling, brilliant young Swedish tenor of the Metropolitan opera, will appear here on the second number of the Maryville college Artist series on January 11. Although only 27 years old and the youngest singer ever engaged for principal roles at the Metropolitan, he is hailed by critics as "the outstanding tenor of our times."

In spite of his age, Jussi Bjoerling has a long and impressive record of successes behind him. Raised in a family of musicians, he has been singing almost all his life, or as he is quoted in a recent New York interview, he "zang before he spoke." The Bjoerling family occupies a place in Swedish musical circles comparable to the high position the Barrymores have held in the American theatrical world.

The eldest of three brothers, he was born at Stora Tuna in the province of Dalarna, Sweden, in 1910. Upon the death of his mother, Jussi, with his brothers and his father, came to America and for two full years toured the Swedish churches and music halls of this country as the Bjoerling quartet with great success. Disbanded by the death of their father, they returned to Sweden to pursue their musical studies

German Student To Discuss Nazis

First-Hand Information To Be Given December 9 At Peace Forum

"An Understanding of Germany" will be the subject of Ingeborg Jung, German exchange student, in her lecture before the Peace Forum Friday at 6:45 in Thaw hall auditorium. Fraulein Jung, who comes from Dusseldorf am Rhein, will discuss the Germany of today from many angles—political, social, and cultural.

Among other things, Fraulein Jung will tell about the country, its population, and the German ways of life. The German education system and the different methods it uses from those used in America will be brought into the lecture. Of paramount interest to an American audience will be her discussion of Hitler and the theories of national socialism which is the foundation of the Nazi movement. The Nazi attitude toward the Jews, which has received so much publicity in the American press of recent weeks, will be brought up for examination.

The probable alliances of world powers in the event of war was the general theme of a Peace Forum meeting on November 25. Ernesto Casseres, freshman from Costa Rica, spoke on the attitude of South American countries and the conflicting Nazi, Fascist, and American influences there. A speech on the dilemma of Poland in the matter of foreign policy was given by Ed Ciurczak. Ciurczak, who is of Ukranian descent, showed how Poland fears both Germany and Russia and dares not ally with either.

Paul Akana, sophomore from Kobe, Japan, spoke on Japanese and American interests in the Pacific showing how these interests need not conflict there. There need be little danger of war between America and Japan, he declared. The fourth speech of the evening was given by Clifford Proctor, senior from Reading, Vermont, who discussed the attitude of the Balkan countries toward the creation of alliances.

New World Symphony Played At Disc Club, Hunt As Commentator

Anton Dvorak's Fifth Symphony in E Minor formed the program of the Disc club last Thursday. A brief account of the composer's life and of the four movements of this symphony were given by the commentator, George Hunt. The recording was by the Philadelphia orchestra under the direction of Leopold Stokowski.

A special Christmas program of Tchaikowsky's "Nutcracker Suite" with Margaret Cloud as commentator is being planned for Friday, Dec. 9.

Nearly Complete Rehearsals For Annual Oratorio

Almost 200 Participate In Annual Presentation Of "Messiah"

Rehearsals for the presentation of George Fredrick, Handel's immortal oratorio, "The Messiah," to be sung in Voorhees chapel on the afternoon of December 11, are nearly complete. The chorus is composed of nearly 200 voices from the student body, faculty and town.

Recitatives and airs will be interpreted by student soloists and the Maryville College Little Symphony orchestra will furnish the accompaniment. The entire production is under the direction of Mr. Ralph R. Colbert, Maryville college music instructor.

The text of the "Messiah" is taken from the literal words of the old and new testaments, arranged by Charles Jennes. This oratorio, which is generally conceded to be the greatest of all time, ranking even higher than Mendelssohn's "Elijah" or Haydn's "Creation," was written by Handel in a period of 24 days in 1741. The same year he was invited to Ireland as guest of the Lord Lieutenant and it was while he was there that the "Messiah" was first performed in Dublin. Since that date this oratorio has added a great deal to Christmas festivities having been sung hundreds of times.

The oratorio was first presented at Maryville in the fall of 1933 when J. Alvin Keen, Westminster Choir school graduate, directed the chorus in its first rehearsals. When he found it impossible to continue his work here, Miss Frances Henry, instructor in voice, took over his work. The warm reception received by the chorus and its director and the added feeling of Christmas spirit prompted the continuation of the annual productions.

Grades Issued By Personnel Office

Each Student Is Counseled Concerning Grades And Ability To Study

Mid-semester grades, issued to some 287 freshmen during the past week, were "as a whole, somewhat better than those of last year" according to a statement released today by Dr. Frank D. McClelland, director of personnel. "The work of this year's freshman class is well above the average," said Dr. McClelland. "There were fewer low grades among these reports than among those of the preceding year." Freshman grades were sent to the office for compilation on November 14, and were mailed to the students' homes on Friday and Saturday of last week.

Reports were issued to the freshmen in alphabetical order, Monday through Friday of the past week, at which time each was counseled concerning his grades and his ability to do college work. The latter was based on the results of three tests given at the first of the semester; the Purdue English Placement test, the Thurstone Scholastic Aptitude examination, and the Iowa Silent Reading test.

The English placement test was given to determine into which of the three English classes the student should be placed, according to the extent of his former preparation. The Scholastic Aptitude examination determined first, his linguistic ability, or his ability to

Rev. Harrison Anderson, Chicago Pastor, To Lead 1939 February Meetings

Rev. Sidney E. Stringham Of St. Louis To Lead Singing For Seventeenth Year As Sixty-third Series Of Services Begins February 7

Rev. Harrison Ray Anderson, B.S., B.D., D.D., pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church of Chicago, will be the speaker for Maryville's sixty-third series of February meetings, which will begin on Tuesday, February 7, and will last for ten days.

For the seventeenth year, Rev. Sidney E. Stringham, pastor of the Epworth Methodist Episcopal church of St. Louis, will lead the songs. President Ralph Waldo Lloyd well expresses the sentiments of all of those who have come to know Mr. Stringham in past years when he says, "Mr. Stringham has made a large place for himself in the friendship and regard of four college generations of students and of the officers and faculty of the institution. His wholesomeness of character and spirit and his ability as a leader have enabled him to render a service of great value." Mr. Stringham's daughter, Jean, is a member and officer of the freshman class this year.

Dr. Anderson, the preacher and leader of the meetings, has been for the past ten years the pastor of one of the world's greatest Presbyterian churches, located on North Michigan avenue in Chicago. This church has twenty-five hundred members, two ordained associate ministers, a considerable number of full-time staff members, and three regular worship and preaching services each Sunday.

Dr. Anderson is a comparatively young man, being now forty-five years old. He received the bachelor of science degree from the Kansas State Agricultural college, located in Manhatten, Kansas, his native state; the bachelor of divinity degree from McCormick Teological seminary, Chicago; and the honorary degree of doctor of divinity from Emporia college in Kansas. Prior to his call to Chicago, Dr. Anderson was for four years pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Ellsworth, Kansas, and pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Wichita, Kansas, for seven years. At his present church he succeeded Dr. John Timothy Stone. During the World war he was chaplain of the 103rd regiment, in the 26th division. Dr. Anderson is connected with various enterprises in the Presbyterian church, in education, and in his city. He is married and has one daughter and two sons.

In accepting the invitation to the 1939 meetings Dr. Anderson said, "I'll give every effort of which I am capable, and will trust to the leading of God's spirit." He is a spiritual man and a preacher, is attractive and friendly in personality, and has often served as special preacher on college campuses. One of the notable facts about Maryville's February meetings is that ministers, like Dr. Anderson, who occupy exceedingly important and busy places, will give up ten days from the midst of their crowded season to serve us here.

French Club Gives One-Act Dramas

Formal Social Hour Follows "Le Surprise d'Isadore" And "Deux Sourds"

The French club presented two one-act plays under the direction of Miss Catherine Wilkinson, on Thursday evening at eight o'clock in the philosophy class room. The plays were followed by a social hour.

The first play, "La Surprise d'Isadore," concerned a young man who visited his doctor friend and was taken for one of the insane patients by the other members of the household. The cast of characters included: Isadore, John Fisher; Adolphe Picard, the doctor, Phillip Ferris; Madame Duval, Irma Sue Pate; Suzanne, Margaret Peters; Jeanne, Louise Curtis. Sara Taylor assisted Miss Wilkinson with the direction of this play.

The second play, "Les Deux Sourds" concerned a deaf father who betrothed his old maid daughter to a supposedly deaf suitor. The cast of this play was: Monsieur Damoiseau, David Kidder; Eglantine, Etta Culbertson; Placide, Everett Gray; Boniface, Stanley Bird. Miss Wilkinson was assisted in the direction of this play by Ruth Moore.

The general chairmen for the program were Anne Biggs and Margaret Peters. Their committees were as follows: ushers, George Felknor and Jean White; refreshments, Aileen Campbell, Jane Corry, Frances Stuart, Martha Wood, Ruth Moore; incidental music, Virginia Partridge and Katherine Cissna; properties, Katherine Cissna and Bob Puncheon.

Miss Frances E. Hunter presided at the punch bowl.

Kiger To Read Paper Before Faculty Club

The last meeting of the faculty club before the holidays will be held Tuesday evening at 6:30. Mr. J. H. Kiger, associate professor of history, will read a paper entitled "The American War in England." Students of the Home Economics department are planning the dinner under the direction of Miss Gertrude Meiselwitz. Decorations and menu will be appropriate to the holiday season.

Candidates For Oratory Contest Meet Wednesday To Make Initial Plans

Announcement has been made that there will be a meeting next Wednesday morning after the chapel service of those women who may be interested in entering the T. T. Alexander Oratorical contest. This contest is held annually, men and women students participating alternately. The contest, open to men last year, was won by Ralph Reed. This year women of the college who wish to enter the contest may do so. Prizes will be awarded the two best orations. Manuscripts for the contest will be due sometime after the February meetings. This contest is under the supervision of the department of Bible and religious education.

Plans Concerning Class Sections Announced By Chilhowean Staff

Immediately upon the closing of the sophomore section of the Chilhowean today, the freshman section will open and remain open until sometime early in January.

The yearbook is being planned with a medieval style introductory page to each section of the book. Each page of the book will have a garnet border. The senior section will have six pictures to the page, with the names and legends on the opposite page. The juniors will have twenty pictures to the page, following the same style as the senior section. The sophomore and freshmen will have twenty-four to the page, with the names along the border.

A new feature of the yearbook will be a section of twelve outstanding seniors, who will be elected at a later date.

Home Economics Department Holds Open House And Tea December 9

By MISS GERTRUDE MEISELWITZ

The Home Economics department of Maryville college invites everyone to an open-house and Christmas tea on Friday afternoon, December 9, from 2:30 to 5:30.

Included in the exhibits this year will be some items of unusual interest. The department has acquired a new and very beautiful Cromaine Craft loom. Come and find out how cloth is made, and how pattern is woven into cloth.

Do you remember the recent issue of "Life" in which various famous architects published their plans for houses, traditional and modern, for families on various income levels? We have models of these houses in color with complete floor plans.

Of special interest to men will be an exhibit of men's garments suitable for campus wear, sports wear, and social occasions. Do you know your color type and what to wear to make the most of it? There will be exhibits of color combinations suitable for the blonde, the brunette, and the red-haired types. What qualities do you consider when selecting and purchasing your clothes? May we give you some advice as suggested by such authorities as "Esquire," Men's Vogue," and "Men's Wear Daily"?

Book Store Bids Merry Christmas As Holiday Spirit Invades Campus

By EUGENE McCURRY

Student entering the college book store now are reminded that the holiday season is almost here. Lighted wreaths are in the windows, chains of holly and evergreen twine along the railings and arch the doorways. From the central chandelier, a great cone of red and green paper converts the store into an animated greeting card, with a large sign in the background saying "Merry Christmas." These decorations are the result of the efforts of the student workers in the college's unique three-unit business under the management of Dr. Frank D. McClelland.

It is the James R. Hill Loan library where students can rent their books for a fraction of their original cost. Each book has a life of approximately five semesters, and the rent is calculated so that in five semesters the book will be paid for. It is estimated that about 4300 books are rented to the students each semester. These are returned at the close of the semester and re-rented at the beginning of the following semester. This rental plan enables students to secure necessary books at a great saving.

The college book store is also a post office, with Treasurer F. L. Proffitt as post master. It is a branch of the Maryville post office and the mail is delivered twice daily to and from town.

A Better Understanding

During the interclass touch-football season, which just closed, the relations between the class teams and the college athletic department were not always so harmonious and cooperative as they should be.

No quarrels or serious misunderstandings took place; the situation merely was one in which the teams felt that they were not bing granted the use of the college athletic equipment and facilities to a reasonable extent; and the athletic department apparently thought otherwise.

It seems only fair to remind Echo readers that the athletic program of our college should be intended to make participation in wholesome sports available to the largest possible number of students, not simply to those who are members of the varsity teams. Considering the rather large number of men who take part regularly in interclass athletics, it does seem that the college athletic department should be more liberal in granting the use of college eqiupment and facilities.

Perhaps in the future there can be a better and more sympathetic understanding between the class teams and the coaches.

An Opportunity

Earlier in the year the Echo commented on the excellent programs that the Social Committee has provided for the students almost every week end during the year. The performance of "The King's Dilemma" scheduled for next Tuesday evening promises to be another success for the social committee and drama well worth anyone's seeing. Jess Coffer and Martha Miller are noted for their interpretation of character roles and Maryville students who have witnessed the play elsewhere recommend it highly. Next Tuesday's performance is notable also because it is the only time during the year that the students will have a chance to show their appreciation for the efforts of the social committee. Proceeds for the play will be used to meet the expenses of entertainments offered by the committee during the year and a good attendance will assure them of sufficient funds to carry on their program.

THE WASTEBASKET

By SCOTTIE, THE OFFICE BOY

Included among the millions (may be a slight exaggeration, but what's a mere million or two among friends?) of items for which we Thanksgave:

A personnel director who was thoughtful enough to postpone breaking the sad news to the freshmen until the Thanksgiving holiday was over.

Those souls who were charitable enough to stand on the street corners in the most Siberish weather for the explicit and express purpose (we hope) of listening to our glee clubs and our band.

Time to wonder what to do instead of doing it.

A neighbor down the hall who received a package containing a luscious cake in our favorite flavor.

The snow, the snow, the beauteous snow. We hope you didn't receive the impression that we weren't (thankful).

The fact that we didn't go to a certain football game and freeze to death along with the members of aforesaid band.

The members of our appreciative (we trust) public who had the courage to decipher the hash our last column turned out to be.

Those as-a-rule-dependable Scotties who staged a comeback; beat that archest of enemies, Carson-Newman; and saved our pride and our nickel.

The Highland Echo, which wasn't issued last week.

A chance to sleep past seven-thirty a.m.

Olives and plum pudding, our favorite fruits.

All those who so kindly contributed ideas free of charge feeling sorry for our blank upper story.

• • • •

Noticed at Barnwarmin' (Wuh you theh?)

Our favorite mathemagician (new at the Hill this year) acted just like any other college freshman.

Lloyd Calvin Shue, Esq., being (to use his own terminology) "shoved around like a molecule."

A lot of clever decorating that someone must have expended time, talent, temper, and tallow on.

A king and queen, both popular and pulchritudinous.

Dr. Hill Shine shining as the best looking drum major who has ever brandished the old orange and garnet walking cane.

A horde of sophomores, with freshman ideas, trying to be noticed. They were (by this column).

An also horde of freshmen with no ideas at all trying their worst to be just like the above.

"Cutemarie" Brown, our Public Energy No. 1, being a hundred places at once and carrying off glory and the program in fine shape.

Professor Horne going to town on "his" fiddle.

A beautiful night sky outside, n'est-ce pas (verbally translated—Who do those bums think they are, monopolizing that bench all night?)

A strange and singular lack of appetite. Wonder why.

• • • •

Pet Peeves of the Week (May we air them, please?)

The disgusting lack of sportsmanship evidenced by a certain team and its fans because said team was snubbed on the Rose Bowl deal and the Sugar Bowl ditto. After all, you don't see our Scotties howling because their much deserved trip to the Soup Bowl was postponed indefinitely.

The sweet someone on a rival newspaper staff who so kindly included one of our worst specimens in his column and called us "budding" to boot. We resents it.

The thoughtful guys who must increase the suffering and agony, the pain and suspense, by reminding us every hour of every day just how much longer it is until we are released.

And others. They are legion. But we don't wish to seem to complain, so we'll save the rest until next time and not spoil your Christmas. (As if you cared!)

THE CRAMMERS' HOUR
By H. W. Shortboy

Between the dark and the daylight,
When the lights are beginning to lower,
I start the long night's occupations
That is know as the Crammers' Hour.

I hear in the chamber above me,
The patter of little feet—
The sound of some darling kiddie,
Whose head I would like to beat.

From my study I see in the lamplight,
The hand of the clock pointing two;
Since the lights went out I've been boning,
But I haven't learned anything new.

A whisper, then a silence:
Yet I know ('cause it's happened before),
That soon my insomnious neighbors
Will be playing football next door.

• • • •

A sudden drop of my eye-lids,
A sudden droop of my head,
A mumbled intention to study,
An instinctive groping to bed.

And there I will slumber forever,
Yes, forever and a day—
If you want to flunk in comfort,
This is the pleasanest way.

The Echo sports writer and news commentator discuss the coming German examinations:

"Greetings, Goozle. What are the prospects of your hanging up an enviable record for the current exam next season by coming out on the big end of the score in this German test, which will ring down the curtain on a mighty tough schedule?"

"Well, Woozle, all evidence—based upon usually reliable sources, such as the teacher's side remarks and pop quizzes—strong indicate that I have good reason to be genuinely alarmed and deeply concerned regarding the impending crisis. Do you find yourself confronted with a grave situation?"

"Nope, my brain is jammed to capacity with fifty thousand irregular verbs—they're even hanging from the rafters. This test will be a push-over for me. I ran through a light workout on nouns yesterday. Tomorrow I'll take a final short scrimmage on principal parts. I'm in great shape. My highly-touted brain will function like a well-oiled machine. If the weather holds up, and I don't develop any injuries in the final verb scrimmage, I may even pass the test. But I'm not under-rating this test; it's a plenty tough outfit, and no matter how the rest of the class does, these exams always play their best game against me."

Jussi Bjoerling Sings Jan. 11th

individually. All the brothers still sing, but Jussi is by far the greatest.

As he went through his adolescent years the voice of Jussi Bjoerling developed with extraordinary beauty and power so that it aroused the interest of Julia Scedelius, the cultivated and music-loving wife of a well-known Swedish rector. He made his first gramophone recording at the early age of seventeen, singing "The Sunshine of Your Smile" in Swedish. This record, the first of a long series of best-sellers, is interesting mainly for the freshness and clarity of the youthful voice, but it carries little of the richness and control which today contribute so much to his artistry.

In 1929 he was sent to the Royal Opera school in Stockholm. There he came under the tutelage of the famous John Frosell, general director of the Kungholm opera, and a man who is remembered in New York as one of the great Don Giovannis of all time. This septigenarian is a perfectionist and a hard taskmaster, and Jussi profited much from his instruction. After one year of Frosell's strenuous routine, he made a sensationally successful debut in the thankless role of Don Ottavio in Mozart's "Don Giovanni." From that day he has enjoyed triumph after triumph in all the important opera houses of Europe. In 1935-36 he gave performances in Prague, Vienna, Dresden, and Copenhagen, and later he was invited to Paris for a special performance of "La Boheme," which featured the dedication of John D. Rockefeller's gift of an American wing to the Cite Universite, where his voice won him an immediate re-engagement in the Verdi "Requiem."

Mr. Bjoerling first came to America as a mature concert artist in the fall of 1937. His debut was over a coast-to-coast broadcast, followed by an appearance with the Chicago opera. His concert in Town hall, New York, that January was a sell-out. At present he is engaged at the Metropolitan on an extended appearance which necessitated the cancellation of his previously scheduled concert here on December 2.

Physically, Bjoerling is fairly short and stocky, with the wide cheek bones that are characteristic of all great singers, and a barrel chest that makes for excellent breath support. He is strong as an ox and likes to be put to feats of strength; but on the day of an opera performance or a concert, he remains in bed almost the whole day to conserve his energy and prepare himself for his best work. Like Mary Garden or Caruso, he is a nervous as a kitten before any appearance and prefers to be left alone. Twenty minutes before a performance he would be apt to throw a pillow or a pot of grease paint at anyone who intruded in his dressing room; two minutes after the curtain has been rung down he is the most affable and friendly person imaginable.

Mrs. Bjoerling, the former Anna Lisa Ber, is reputed to be one of the most beautiful women in Sweden. In 1934 she was crowned queen of the Santa Lucia festival in Stockholm. Also a singer, she was trained at the Stockholm conservatory. They have one son, Anders, aged two, who stays at home with his grandmother when his parents are off on their musical travels.

The medical aptitude test was taken yesterday afternoon by ten pre-medical students. This test is furnished by a committee of the American Medical association and is one of the factors considered in accepting medical students.

Alumna To Address "Y" Men Tomorrow

Grace G. Proffitt will speak at the Sunday worship service of the YMCA, Dec. 4, at 5 pm., in the Bartlett hall auditorium. Her topic will be "Growth."

Miss Proffitt is a Maryville graduate of the class of 1935. As an undergraduate she was a student representative of Pi Kappa Delta her junior and senior years. At the National convention of the fraternity in 1934 she was semi-finalist in oratory and finalist in extemporaneous speaking.

At the special Christmas program of the YWCA-YMCA in Pearsons hall, Sunday evening, Dec. 11, Dr. Edwin R. Hunter, head of the department of English, will read Christmas poetry.

Triangle Club Plans Holiday Trip To North

On Tuesday evening the Triangle club made plans for chartering buses to Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, and New York city. The buses will leave Knoxville about 1:30 p.m., Dec. 15. All who are interested in the trip and who would like further information are requested to see Glenn Young.

Arrangements were also made to hold a Christmas party in the YWCA rooms on the evening of Dec. 13.

Book Store Brings Cheer

After the mail reaches the college post office it is delivered by students to the various offices in Anderson hall and to each dormitory. Last year, the stamps and envelopes sold from this office amounted to $2,450, and money orders amounting to $1,500 were issued. More than 7700 pieces of mail pass through this post office each month. This mail is handled by carefully selected, sworn Federal student employees, whom we all know as Ernie Enslin, Charlie Baldwin, Mack Davis, Margaret Lodwick, and Nina Husk.

The student supply store does a business of about $10,000 a year, and is operated solely to accommodate students, making only expenses—no profit whatever. The store carries the best quality of merchandise at the most reasonable cost to the student. The supplies consist of notebooks, various kinds of notebook paper, pens, pen points, pencils, ink, writing tablets, in fact everything students need in the way of school supplies.

Drop in at the book store as soon as possible and see the attractive decorations. The policy of this store is to render service to the college and to the students.

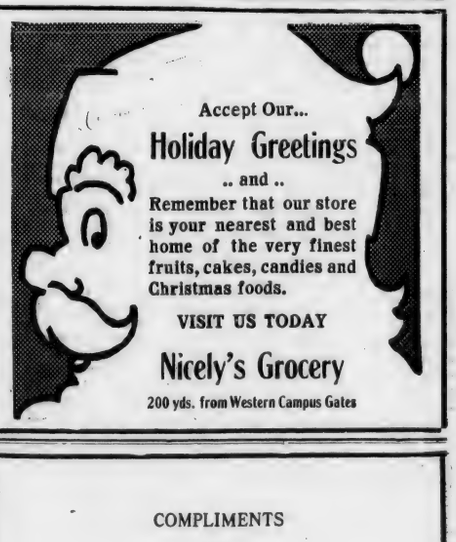
Negro Group Presented At Vols Tomorrow Night

Sunday evening immediately after Vesper service the Student vols will meet in the YWCA rooms. The guests of the evening will be a group of negroes from the negro library in Alcoa, who will have charge of the entire program. The group, numbering about forty, is under the direction of Miss Hendrika Tol and Mr. Donald Wilmoth. It is expected that the program which they plan to present will be largely musical.

Miss Tol is a graduate of Maryville college and it was through her efforts that the Alcoa library was established.



CHIRSTMAS PROGRAM AT YWCA

John Wintermute will read "The Bird's Christmas Carol" at the YWCA meeting Sunday afternoon at 1:15 in the YW rooms. This is one of the traditional Christmas stories and will open the Christmas program for the YW. Special music will be given by Mary Alice Minear and Ruth Andrews.

THE HIGHLAND ECHO DECEMBER 3, 1938

SCOTTY SIDE SLANTS

By the
Sports Editor

THE GOOD OLD DAYS!—

The game Saturday with the Carson-Newman Eagles reminds me of a game the Highlanders played with the Eagles away back in 1915, or somewhere in the past. Anyway, the score was Maryville 99, Carson-Newman 0, and according to Dr. Briggs, who played in that memorable game, the game was stopped in the fourth quarter because of the simple reason that Carson-Newman did not want to have 100 points scored against her. If any of you fans doubt the veracity of this statement, Dr. Briggs has the Echo (good old Echo) to back up his reports.

CAPTAIN AL—

Saturday's game marked the end of Captain Al Burris' football career at Maryville. Burris has played football three years under Coach Honaker, and under his teaching Burris has developed into one of the most respected quarterbacks in the Smoky Mountain Conference. His broken field running has long been the dread of Scotty opponents. Burris also lettered in baseball. Last year, however, he had some tough luck when he broke his leg early in the season.

NO MORE FOOTBALL!—

Now that football is over, thoughts naturally turn to winter sports. Basketball receives our first consideration, and at first glance prospects don't seem to be any too favorable. The squad this year will all be built around small men, with the exception of Dale Russell, who is the only man back from last year over six feet. Weldon Baird, the only senior back this year, and the veteran of the squad, is about five eight. Boydson Baird, that flashy floorman, is right around the same height, and Scot Honaker, another sophomore letterman, is about five foot seven. Regardless of what you say about small fast teams, you still must have height to get the ball. The squad as a whole is green and inexperienced, with only four lettermen back, and three of them being sophomores. Well, what will be, will be.

WRESTLING—

Wrestling, under the coaching of Robert Thrower, will be one of the best sports on the Hill this winter. Although there is a lack of experienced lettermen in this sport, too, there are about 24 men out for the team and from them there should be some material for a grappling squad. In the 118 pound class, Phil Evaul will probably don the tights for varsity. The 125 pound class will be well filled with either Bill Mooney or Herb Turner. At present there are no good prospects in the 135 pound division, as Wood Everett, who wrestled that weight last year, has put on some poundage, and is now trying out for the 145 pound set. In the 145 pound class will be some real competition between Edgard Mears, Wood Everett, and Warren Culver, a freshman. Clem Hahn will probably be in the 165 or 155 pound division, and Obie Jenkins will handle the 175 pound division. The rest of the positions on the varsity are practically void of prospects, much to Mr. Thrower's grief.

COME ONE, COME ALL!—

The Water Carnival tonight is sponsored by the swimming team to defray the expenses of the coming season. The Carnival has always been in the past one of the social features of the Hill, and no one should miss seeing the show put on by the swimmers. Music and colorful decorations will add to the spectacle and tonight's Carnival should be better than any held previous to this year. As John Ballenger would say, "Come one, come all, come and see the copper colored goldfish. It swims, it dives, it dances. The admission is only twenty cents, one fifth of a dollah!"

Carson-Newman Falls Before Maryville 7-0, In Final Game

Sub End, Shelfer, Snags Honaker's 34 yd. Pass For Lone Touchdown, As Highlanders Outclass Traditional Rivals

The Maryville College Highlanders battled, pushed, and drove their way to a 7-0 victory over their ancient and traditional rivals, the Carson-Newman Eagles last Saturday afternoon at Jefferson City.

The Scotties were at their best, with their running attack, featuring Hunt and Hughes, pushing the Eagles all over the grid, and their passing attack, with Scot Honaker on the tossing end, filled the air with aerial bombs that kept the Carson-Newman team back on their heels most of the game. The Highlanders had the game under their control almost all the time, making 13 first downs to the 5 of Carson-Newman's.

Maryville's touchdown came in the second quarter, when the passing ace for the Highlanders, Scot Honaker, came into the game and proceeded to toss a thirty-five yard pass to Fred Shelfer, substitute end, who had only to step over the goal line. It was a beautiful pass, and a beautiful catch. Shelfer caught the ball practically out of the arms of two Carson-Newman defense men. Tom Cragan, another substitute came into the ball game and kicked the extra point.

Maryville started right out after the kickoff driving the ball through the Eagle line for substantial gains. With Hunt carrying the ball, they drove deep into foreign territory several times, but each time lacking the scoring punch. J. D. Hughes, who has been on the shelf for several weeks with a leg injury, came into the game early in the second quarter, and proceeded to make life miserable for the Eagles the rest of the game. Hughes undoubtedly played one of the best games of his career. J. D. smashed the Eagle line to shreds, and made more tackles than any other man on the team. Captain Burris, playing the last game in his stellar career at Maryville, showed once more the form which has made him one of the best broken field runners, and the smartest quarterback in the conference.

Joe Etheredge, Wilburn, Kramer, S. K. Taylor and Morton all played a fine game.

Carson-Newman threatened only once, when late in the fourth quarter they drove down to the Maryville 15 yard stripe, before finally being repulsed.

Lineups:

Swimming Team Makes Debut In "Neptune's Wetting" Pageant

Annual Water Carnival To Be Presented Tonight at 8:00 Music And Decorations Will Make Colorful Show

The 1939 swimming team makes it debut tonight in "Neptune's Wetting," annual water carnival, in Bartlett pool at eight o'clock. A completely new and original theme has been completed and will be produced in this year's carnival. All proceeds from the entertainment go to defray the team's expenses in the year's swimming season.

A festival day in Neptune's underwater realm is the theme which will be carried out in the many new attractions. Some of the events on the carnival program will be a novelty race for octogenarian seadogs, a spectacular battle for the marine football championship of Neptunia, formation swims, and fancy diving. These and other stunts will lead up to the climatic event of the evening, the nature of which will be disclosed during the show. An instrumental and vocal ensemble directed by Gene Craine will provide a musical background for the festivities. In keeping with the theme of "Neptune's Wetting," elaborate decorations will present a cross-section of deep sea color.

The members of the swimming team participating in the water carnival are: Paul Akana, Marion Birmingham, Edward Ciurczak, Gene Craine, Frank Cross, George Felknor, Gordon Findlay, William Gehres, Byron Goley, Gale Hedrick, William Hedrick, Eugene Hudson, Larry Ketchum, James Lee, Palmer Mayo, Thomas Mize, Dudley Moore, Erwin Ritzman, Russel Stevenson, Morris Stewart, Joseph Swift, Roland Tapp, and Robert Wilcox. They will be assisted by Louise Darden, Mary Darden, Virginia Knighton, June Morely, and Dorothy Quass, outstanding swimmers among the girls of the college. The instrumental and vocal ensemble will include: Don Campbell, Vernon Lloyd, Terry Mosely, Carl Walton, Robert Paul, Eldon Seamans, Doris Smith, Rit Anderson, Louise Allen, Ruth Andrews, Charlotte Colby, Margaret Knox, Alice Prime, and Mary Russ.

The water carnival is under the direction of Edward Gillingham. The producing staff assisting him is John Ballenger, business manager, Miss Frances Rich, decorator, and Glenn Young, electrician.

The tickets will be on sale in Pearsons' lobby tonight and at the swimming pool. The doors will be opened at 7:30. Admission is 20 cents.

WON 4—LOST 5—TIED 1

KENTUCKY 46—MARYVILLE 7

There wasn't much to it except that Joe Etheredge caught the 'Cats sleeping and caught a pass from the hands of Scot Honaker and then ran 75 yards for a touchdown. Maryville held the larger team to two touchdowns in the first half, but weakened in the second and gave up five more.

MARYVILLE 28—TUSCULUM 0

J. D. Hughes ran wild that night, scoring 21 points himself. George Garner scored the other touchdown. Maryville outplayed the Pioneers all the way, Tusculum threatened only once, when Maryville fumbled on their six yard line. But Morton intercepted a Pioneer pass to end the threat.

MARYVILLE 15—MILLIGAN 0

Maryville won their second conference game at Milligan, when a Buffalo fumble early in the game was recovered by Burns, and Hughes drove over for the first touchdown. Scot Honaker scored the second touchdown after Hughes placed the ball in scoring position with a series of gains through the Buffalo line. The other two points came when Kramer and Tom Taylor both tackled Burton behind Milligan's goal line. The Buffs were tough, but not tough enough.

MARYVILLE 28—WESLEYAN 7

Hughes, Hunt, and Morton ran wild over the Tennessee Wesleyan Bulldogs, and Joe Etheredge started the scoring spark when he blocked a Wesleyan punt and galloped 60 yards for the first touchdown. Maryville was tied with Wesleyan at the half 7-7, but the Scots scored three times in the last half to put the game on ice.

MARYVILLE 6—UNION 13

Gloom, gloom, gloom—Maryville, handicapped by injuries with Hughes, Etheredge, and Garner on the sidelines, fell before the kicking toe of Farmer, and the driving of Union's star back Stafura.

MARYVILLE 12—LENOIR-RHYNE 12

Lenoir-Rhyne brought with them a series of spinner plays that left the Scots bewildered. Lenoir-Rhyne scored first early in the game after a series of runs by Sigmon their star back. A pass to Etheredge was ruled complete due to interference for the Scots first touchdown. Garner ran around right end for the second touchdown. The Bruins, however, came back in the fourth quarter to tie the score.

MARYVILLE 6—KING 13

The headline read, "Breaks and Shockey Cost Maryville SMC Lead." Maryville scored on the pass, Hughes to Etheredge. King displayed a beautiful running attack, with Clabaugh and Shockey doing most of the damage.

MARYVILLE 13—ETT 20

We scored first, but they scored last and most. Morton scored both touchdonws on line plays. Fleming, Buc quarter, was the real star of the game; returning one kickoff 90 yards for a touchdown, and passing the Teachers into scoring position twice.

MARYVILLE 0—CUMBERLAND 13

Mud, a whole sea of it. The Scots went to Lebanon to play Cumberland, and on the first play a runback of 85 yards placed the ball for the first Bulldog touchdown. A Maryville fumble gave them their second tally.

MARYVILLE 7—CARSON-NEWMAN 0

Look what we did!

Four Lettermen Report For Rasslin'

Since there are only twenty-four men competing for berths on the varsity wrestling squad thus far this year, Coach Robert Thrower makes a call for more men to try out for the team.

There are but four lettermen reporting for duties this year. They are Clem Hahn, Edgar Meares, Woody Everett, and Obie Jenkins.

Matches have already been arranged with Vanderbilt, Tennessee, North Carolina State, Knoxville "Y"; and one match with the University of Chicago is pending. The trip to North Carolina State on January 13 will be the first scheduled match. Other matches will be secured in the near future.

Nineteen Awarded Football Letters By Athletic Board

The Athletic Board of Control met last Wednesday and voted nineteen men letters in football. One manager's letter was also voted to Joe Swift. The men who lettered are: Morton, S. K. Taylor, Honaker, Burris, Smith, Tipton, Hughes, Tom Taylor, Henschen, Shelfer, Kramer, B. Baird, Hunt, Napier, Wilburn, Garner, Jenkins, W. Baird, Etheredge, Swift (mgr.).

Four seniors Burris, Napier, Jenkins, and S. K. Taylor were voted letters.

JUNIOR ALLSTAR GAME

Fighting to a 6-6 deadlock the juniors and the all-stars concluded the intra-mural football season. The game featured sparkling play throughout, both squads showing plenty of offensive power.

Each team sported fine passers: Morrow in the junior backfield, playing at the top of his game, and McCaskie, similarly sparking the all-stars. The lines were evenly matched, each strong on the flanks. Scapellati and Baird, for the all-stars, and Woodring, Schreiber, and Proctor for the juniors showed up in fine style in defensive play.

The juniors drew first blood. In the first quarter Morrow completed a pass to Woodring from the 35 yd. line and Woodring went over from the five, to score. The try for the point failed, and the half ended with the juniors leading by a score of 6-0. The all-stars rallied strong in the third quarter, driving to the thirty. On the fourth down the juniors intercepted a pass behind their own goal line and ran back to the two. They passed out to the 30 yard strip before they were forced to punt. On the punt, however, Scapellati broke through to bat it down and set the stage for the all-star talley. McCaskie passed to Baird on the five, and two plays later McCaskie scored on a short pass over center.

The all-stars failed to convert the extra point.

Once again in the last minutes of the fourth quarter, the juniors threatened with a pass from Morrow to Herrick, falling incomplete in the end zone. The game ended, however, without further scoring. Final score: juniors 6, all-stars 6.

Women will be especially interested in an exhibit of garments with suitable accessories, so that proper assembly of these separate pieces will create a number of distinct costumes for various uses. Some of these garments are examples of work done in the department.

The exhibits in foods include new ideas in food decoration and how to accomplish them, new ways of shaping cookies and cakes quickly and easily, and new equipment designed to simplify cooking procedures.

Sophs Victor In A.A. Exhibit Game

A speed ball game between the junior-senior and the sophomore girls' teams was the feature event of an athletic exhibition given last Saturday night at 8:00 in the college gymnasium. The program was an exhibition of the girls' point system, and was under the direction of Mrs. Evelyn N. Queener, instructor in physical training for women. The sophomores were victors over the junior-seniors by a score of 6 to 4.

The playing of the finals in the aerial dart tournament comprised the second part of the program when Lynn Tyndall, winner of the junior-senior tournament, met Jean Naberhuis, freshman winner over Anne Lee Storey, champion of the sophomore girls.

learn language in general; and second, his quantitative ability or his capacities along mathematical, scientific, and technical lines. The result of this test is known as a student's "college aptitude." The reading test was given to test the rate of speed and also the rate of comprehension with which the student reads. Grades for this test were given in terms of the grade level of the student's reading ability.

Mid-semester grades, according to Dr. McClelland, are not accurate forecasts of the student's final grade, but are given so that the student may see his weak points and make adjustments before too late. "As a result," said Dr. McClelland, "the final grades are, in the majority of cases, much higher than the mid-semester grades would indicate."

Green Material Is Only Prospect For '39 Cage Year

Now that the 1938 football season is over at Maryville, Coach Honaker has turned his attention to his new edition of the Maryville basketball squad. The team will probably be built around the Baird brothers, Dale Russell, and "Scottie" Honaker, lettermen of last year's squad.

The basketeers have been going through their daily workouts for several weeks now, and hope to be in shape for a possible practice game before the Christmas holidays. However, the first scheduled conference game will be on the seventeenth of January with Tusculum college.

The entire schedule for the season has not been worked out as yet, but Coach Honaker has secured two games with each of the following teams: C-Newman, Milligan, Tusculum, and L. M. U. The complete schedule will not be posted until after the Smoky Mountain Basketball Conference meeting which will be held in December 12. It is probable that games will be played with King, East Tennessee Teachers, and Cumberland this year.

Annual Oratorio To Be Presented Sunday At Three

Two Hundred Townspeople, Faculty and Students Will Take Part

MR. COLBERT DIRECTS

Woods, Cathcart, Woodring, Barber, Goddard, Reed Are Soloists

George Frederick Handel's immortal oratorio, "The Messiah," will be presented by a group of two hundred students, faculty, and townspeople in Voorhees chapel tomorrow afternoon at three o'clock. The chorus, comprising in part the combined glee clubs and the choir, will be under the direction of Mr. Ralph R. Colbert, and will be accompanied by the Maryville college orchestra under the direction of Miss Dorothy Horne.

The solo airs and recitatives will be sung by Ruth Woods and Bernice Cathcart, sopranos; Harriet Barber, contralto; Richard Woodring, tenor; and Edwin Goddard and Ralph Reed, bassos. For the third consecutive year Miss Garnet Manges, a graduate of Maryville college, will be the piano accompanist. Ruth Mack will be the assistant pianist.

J. Alvin Keen, a graduate of Westminster choir school, and Mary Frances Henry, former voice instructor here, introduced the "Messiah" at Maryville in 1933, and this year marks the college's sixth successive presentation of what is considered to be one of the greatest choral works of all time. The performance of the "Messiah" has been cut this year to one hour and a half.

This greatest of oratorios was composed by Handel at the age of 56 and in the remarkably short time of 23 days. Contrary to Handel's usual indifference to the words set to his compositions, the text of this oratorio was very carefully chosen from the literal words of the old and new testament; and the musical settings are highly beautiful and in perfect accord with the sentiment of the Scripture.

Handel was invited to visit Ireland by the Duke of Devonshire, lord lieutenant, and was requested to compose music for a festival in aid of the "poor and distressed prisoners for debt" in the Marshalsea of Dublin. In November of 1741, Dr. Handel arrived at Dublin bringing his new oratorio, the "Messiah," composed especially for the coming benefit festival. It was presented for the first time on April 13, 1742, and the great hall in Fishamble Street was densely crowded with an enthusiastic audience. Unlimited was the praise of Women Of Memorial Are Guests of Lloyd's At Open House Tues.

The women of Memorial were guests in the home of President and Mrs. Ralph W. Lloyd on Tuesday evening, December 6, from 7:00 to 7:30. On this occasion the students had an opportunity to become better acquainted with Dr. and Mrs. Lloyd in their home.

Sue Lupton, Mary Chambers, and Lois Barnwell acted as hostesses in taking the women through the house. Cookies and punch were served as refreshments. Mrs. F. D. McClelland presided at the punch bowl.

Mrs. Lloyd stated that this open house was part of a program in which all the women students in the dormitories on the campus would at some time have the opportunity of visiting their home.

One Thousand Dollars Needed In Organ Fund

President Ralph W. Lloyd today announced that the organ fund, started last year, has to date reached $2150. If $1000 more can be raised before commencement, it will be possible to install the organ during the summer.

Gifts from the student body and all others will be greatly appreciated.

Funeral Of Edward Ciurczak Was Held In Elizabeth, New Jersey Yesterday

The funeral of Ed Ciurczak, college sophomore who died in the annual Water Carnival last Saturday evening, was held yesterday in Elizabeth, New Jersey, according to a report received earlier this week from Coach Edward Gillingham and Gordon Findlay, who accompanied Ciurczak's body to his home.

CIURCZAK

Ciurczak died while performing a trick which was included in the Water Carnival at his own suggestion. The exact cause of his untimely death is not known and in the nature of the case probably cannot be ascertained. When he was taken from the water it was clear that he was in a serious condition. First aid was quickly administered. Physicians arrived within a few minutes. Every possible measure was used by them and efforts to revive him continued steadily under directions of physicians and officials of the college for more than four hours, considerably beyond the time that there was any possible hope.

Enrolled in Maryville in September, 1937, Ciurczak has made a good record in his freshman and the first three months of his sophomore year. He was a member of the swimming team last season, assistant to the swimming instructor for the present year, and has twice made the honor roll.

The trick which resulted in his death has been used in a modified form in other years at Maryville. Ciurczak stated that he had done it frequently elsewhere; and so he was allowed to include it on the program last Saturday evening. It had been successfully rehearsed in the college pool a number of times.

Time Capsule Book Placed In Library

Tells Story, Gives Location Of Tube Buried At World's Fair

The Maryville college library was last week the recipient of one of the booklets entitled "The Time Capsule" now being distributed to various libraries and museums throughout the world by the Westinghouse Manufacturing Company. These booklets contain information as to the contents and whereabouts of a tube, filled with data concerning our modern civilization, deposited in the World's Fair grounds in New York. Libraries and museums which have received these booklets have been asked to preserve them in their vaults, in the hope that should our present civilization be destroyed, the finding of one of these books and the consequent unearthing of the tube would keep the achievements of our age from being entirely lost.

The tube is made of an alloy of 99.4 percent copper, .5 percent chromium, and .1 percent silver, and is deemed capable of resisting the effects of time for five thousand years. The capsule is a cylinder, seven and a half feet in length, and eight and a half inches in diameter, tapering to a point at each end. Contents of the tube are sealed within a pyrex envelope from which all air has been removed. Within this envelope are materials and information touching upon all principal categories of our thought activity and accomplishment. Books and pictures describing our houses, the way we live, modern machinery, scientific discoveries and modern methods of medicine have been photographed on microfilm, page by page, so that a great deal of information may be condensed into as small a space as possible. Also included is an instrument for magnifying these films. Besides copies of newspapers and a 140,000-word dictionary of the English language there are enclosed small articles representative of every-day comforts, three of which are a pair of spectacles, a razor, and a woman's hat.

On the outside of the capsule is inscribed a message asking it not be opened until 6939 A. D.

The booklet is now in the office of the library where it may be obtained for inspection upon request. It will later be placed in the library vault.

YWCA And YMCA Hold Annual Orphan Party

Thirty orphans are being given a Christmas party this afternoon in the Y rooms. It is being sponsored by the YW and YMCA under the supervision of Ruth Crawford, Curtmarie Brown, and Clem Hahn.

The program planned by Lily Pineo is to consist of carols, games, a Christmas story, and instrumental music. Each of the children will receive a gift from his big sister. Refreshments are being prepared by Marian Hopkins.

Historical Drama Given In Chapel

Humorous Play Presented By Coffer, Miller On December 9th

"The King's Dilemma," a three act historical drama, was presented in Voorhees chapel on Dec. 6 before a large audience. This play by the Coffer-Miller players of Chicago depicted the phase of the life of Henry VIII concerned with his diplomatic marriage to Anna von Cleves, a German princess.

The part of Anna was played by Martha Miller; the part of Henry, by Jess Coffer. Anna von Cleves proved to be much cleverer than she appeared to be, thereby avoiding the block, to which several of Henry's previous wives had gone. The ways in which Anna obtained what she wanted: a castle, servants, allowance, divorce, contributed much to the humor and subtlety of the play.

"The King's Dilemma" was sponsored by the social committee, whose members ushered, to help defray the expenses of the social activities on the campus.

Freshman Debaters Start Preparations For Team Tryouts

The freshman debate question has not been officially stated as yet but the majority of the schools that take part in the freshman tournament have chosen the question of British alliance. The two debate classes have started working on this question in preparation for tryouts after Christmas.

For the past two years the tournament has been held here but plans are being made to hold it elsewhere, probably at Cumberland university, Lebanon, Tenn. Professor Queener hopes that it will be possible to take the freshman squad.

Combined Glee Clubs Will Give Christmas Program In Voorhees

The combined Glee clubs will give a Christmas program in the chapel on next Wednesday evening. The program will begin with a background of organ music, which will be followed with antiphonal carol singing by the Glee clubs. Solos will include a violin selection, "Cantique de Noel," by John Guinter; a vocal selection, "Gesu Bambino," by Louise Allen; and a piano solo, "Trinity Chimes," by Louise Felknor. John Wintermute will give several Christmas readings to a musical background.

The program will be followed by a carol sing under the Christmas tree in front of Thaw hall. A definite time for these programs will be announced next week in chapel.

Varsity Debate Trials Are Held This Afternoon

Twenty-Seven Candidates Try For Fourteen Squad Positions

Varsity debate tryouts are being held this afternoon from 1:00 in Professor Davis' class room in Anderson hall. All of the 27 students trying out for positions on the squad will debate the question: "Resolved: that the government should cease to use public funds for the stimulation of business." Opponents will be chosen by lot.

Eighteen men and nine women are competing for the fourteen positions on the team, including a large majority of last year's members and several from the freshman squad of last semester.

Those trying out this afternoon are: Warren Ashby, J. N. Badgett, Paul Brown, Pauline Cope, Ernest Crawford, Mabel Ennis, William Felknor, Sara Lee Hellums, Ruth Kort Kamp, Arnold Kramer, Robert Lamont, Vernon Lloyd, Harriet Miller, James Montgomery, Bruce Morgan, Arthur Peterson, Otto Pflanze, Arlene Phelps, Clifford Proctor, Jack Proffitt, Louise Proffitt, Albert Rosser, Hugh Smith, Arda Walker, George Webster, and Tommy Woolf.

Home Economics Open House, Tea Attended By 450

Handicrafts, Clothing, And Foods Are Exhibited By Students

The Home Economics open house and Christmas tea held from 2:30 to 5:30 yesterday afternoon was attended by 450 people, including faculty members, town guests, high school students, and college students.

Guests were greeted by members of the Home Economics department who showed them to the fourth floor where afghans, model houses, and a variety of handicrafts were on display. The use of materials used in the manufacture of these handicrafts was demonstrated by the students, each of whom gave the general method and a few details of the work. Among the most outstanding of these handicrafts were carving, spatter prints, oil painting, pyrography, weaving, pastels, and pen and ink work.

From here visitors went to the third floor where clothing and foods were on display. One room contained the demonstrations of proper combinations of what the man-about-town, the college man, and high school boy should wear on different occasions. In the next room were displays of materials at various stages of manufacture, the finished cloth, and the articles made by the home economic students. On one table were six costumes out of which could be made twenty combinations; and on another, recent books on various phases of home economics were artistically displayed.

Next came the home economics kitchen with its many varieties of decorated cakes and other foods attractively fixed for the times when one wants to entertain. The pantry was the attractive result of economy and a little work with its red-topped jars and neat arrangement. The displays of cookies in various guises and chocolate-covered nuts and candies of many kinds added color and variety. Among other interesting things were demonstrations of the preparation of favorite salad ingredients, the use of kitchen equipment, and devices to lighten household tasks.

Tea was then served to the guests in the home economics tea room by other students. Guests signed at the door as they came out, and from this registration list the number of visitors was compiled. There were 40 faculty members, 65 town guests, 138 high school students, and 205 college students who attended this open house and tea.

Dr. Orr Writes Paper On Beliefs

Cumberland Presbyterian And Their Creed Are Study Subject

Dr. H. E. Orr, head of the department of Bible and religious education, has just completed a paper on the Cumberland Presbyterians, entitled "Adventuring in Heart Religion." The paper, which deals with the various phases of beliefs of this group and how the beliefs express themselves in the lives of the believers, is written in eight chapters. The final chapter "Lessons in History," deals with the application of their theology.

The college is to mimeograph about one hundred copies of this paper, and these copies are to be sent to local ministers and other persons interested in the subject. A copy will also be placed in the college library.

Dr. Orr has made this study for his own knowledge, and to understand what the Cumberland Presbyterians believe in contrast to the rest of the denomination and the Methodists.

Prizes To Be Given By Social Committee At Christmas Dinner

A Christmas dinner has been planned by the social committee to be held on Wednesday evening at 6:00 in Pearsons hall. Decorations will be elaborate, and prizes will be awarded to the five best-decorated tables in the hall. The classes will include the most artistic, the most original, the best seasonal, the best Santa Claus, and Nativity themes.

The judges will be the faculty members of the social committee and their wives: Dr. and Mrs. Frank D. McClelland, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Dollenmayer, Dr. and Mrs. E. R. Hunter, and Miss Jessie Johnson.

Dr. Hunter Will Read Christmas Poetry On Program In Pearsons

The second annual program of Christmas poetry read by Dr. Edwin R. Hunter, head of the English department will be presented by the YWCA-YMCA Sunday evening, Dec. 10, at 8:00 p.m. in Pearsons dining hall.

The combined "Y" program for Sunday evening will be the only activity on the campus that night. Because of the "Messiah" in the afternoon there will be no regular vespers; and the Student Volunteers do not ordinarily have a program the last Sunday before Christmas.

Jane Law and Catharine Pond, members of the worship committee for the YWCA, assisted by Marvin Minear and Warren Ashby, the worship committee of the men's association, and Ruth Mack, head of the music committee for the YW, have worked out the details of the program.

Also included on the program will be a vocal duet by Mary Alice Minear and Ruth Andrews, "O Wonderful Story."

Jussi Bjoerling Will Appear Here On Artist Series

Comes to Maryville After Triumphant Debut At Metropolitan

SELL TICKETS JAN. 6

Swedish Masters, Operatic Arias, German Lieder Are on Program

Jussi Bjoerling, gifted young Swedish tenor of opera, concert, and radio fame, will appear on the current Artist series on January 11, at 8:15 in Voorhees chapel. He comes to Maryville college fresh from a triumphant debut and an extended engagement with the Metropolitan opera association. Although but 26 years old, and with only one previous visit to America as a mature artist to his credit, Bjoerling has already, with his recordings, his nation-wide broadcasts, and his opera and concert appearances, won himself a lasting place as one of the truly great tenors of our time.

Bjoerling's earliest musical experience came at the age of eight when he toured the United States with his father and two brothers as the Bjoerling quartet. Soon after his return to his native country he attracted the attention of a cultivated fellow-countrywoman, Julia Svedelius, whose interest did much to stimulate him to further study. His first formal training was received at the Royal Opera school in Stockholm, where he had the invaluable opportunity of studying with the great John Forsell, director of the Kugsholm opera and himself a fine artist of the last generation. His debut there was followed by six years of leading roles which made him a national favorite. Concerts and operatic parts in Dresden, Vienna, Paris, Brussels, London and Prague followed. In 1937 he visited this country for the first time since his boyhood, and met with an enthusiastic reception in Chicago and New York.

November 24 of this year marked his achievement of probably the greatest distinction that can come to any singer: a debut in a leading role at the Metropolitan. He appeared in the part of Rudolpho in Puccini's "La Boheme" and his press notices were unanimous in their approval of his musicianship. Francis Perkins of the "Herald Tribune" commented that "the twenty-seven year-old Swedish tenor lost no time in displaying a voice of exceptional caliber, without any overt hints of debut nervousness. The volume is strong and the natural quality pleasing, while the singer's ability to project and sustain top notes of unusual power and sonority made his success with the large audience a matter beyond any doubt. . . . . "The quality of the middle and lower tones was warm and appealing, fluently produced, and the phrasing and general interpretation in these vocal regions were musicianly and well-schooled. His voice proved an effective vehicle of emotional color." Olin Downes, distinguished critic of the "New York Times" ended a most favorable review with the statement that "the sum of it was a tenor of ample tone and quality for the role, with a B-flat which rings and carries, and which has by no means reached the summit of its development."

The program Mr. Bjoerling is to present here will include a representative group of German lieder, songs by two Swedish masters, and three well-known arias from the standard operatic repertoire. He will be accompanied by Harry Ebert. The complete program follows:

I

"Adelaide" . . . . . Beethoven

II

"An Sylvia" . . . . . Schubert
"Die bose Farbe" . . . . . Schubert
"Morgan" . . . . . Strauss
"Caecilie" . . . . . Strauss

III

Ariar "O Paradiso" from "L'Africana" Meyerbeer

Christmas

Christmas! That season which for years and centuries has been the most joyous and spiritually beneficial time of all the year!

Christmas! Bringing with it that comfortable feeling of family unity and affection; and bringing, too, in a greater measure than ever before, that sense of brotherhood with the whole great family of mankind!

Christmas! With its exciting odors of evergreen and plum pudding; its gleaming streams of tinsel dripping from the rich green of the spruce; its mysterious sounds of swishy tissue paper being manipulated during the gift-wrapping operations, while eager children of all ages listen breathlessly in the next room; its cheery holly wreaths sending greetings from every window of the house; and its distant strains of Christmas carols coming faintly through the clear cold night, as a group of happy, bundled singers makes its rounds.

Christmas! Consciousness that the things we love and value most highly today have not come to us through our own merit or efforts, but through that great gift given to the world twenty centuries ago. Awareness that the greatest gifts always bring joy to the giver and to the receiver!

"And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them; and they were sore afraid.

"And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

"For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord . . .

"And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host, praising God, and saying,

"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

Luke 2:9, 10, 11, 13, 14.

Eddy Ciurczak

The sudden feeling of astonishment and loss that swept over the students of Maryville college last Saturday evening can hardly be expressed. That a calamity so great could take place in so short a time was hard to believe.

Laughing and joking, Eddy Ciurczak entered the college pool, and a few minutes later he was pulled out unconscious and quite evidently in a very serious condition. Teammates found it almost impossible to believe anything could be so seriously wrong as they worked over his body for four hours. Only a few minutes before he had been leading in the preparations for the Water Carnival. One short day before he had been walking around the pool making suggestions to the swimmers who were practicing. A week before he had been chatting with friends in the chemistry lab and talking over his plans for the future. It simply could not be true.

Only with the passage of time has the real loss been felt. His cheerful greetings on the campus, his quiet efficiency in the laboratory, his helpful suggestions in the swimming pool are more vividly remembered as the reallization of his loss comes to us. Eddy Ciruczak spent exactly twelve months of his life at Maryville and during that twelve months he left a lasting impression for scholarship and good sportsmanship that will not be forgotten. Eddy Ciruczak was the friend of every student who knew him and his loss leaves a feeling of emptiness and sorrow that is beyond expression.

Merry-Dille Go Round

By FRED RHODY

"Good afternoon. Are you Mr. Frogfuzz?"
"The man who stands between my ears,
Has had that name for many years.
And may your Christmas Day be spent,
In happiness, and true content."

"I was going to ask you if you were the Mr. Frogfuzz who writes the verses for Christmas cards, but I see ther's no need to ask. I've been looking for you for years, to get an interview for my paper. Why do you hide yourself away, alone on this barren island in the middle of the ocean?"

"Tis not by my own will, my man,
That I upon this island am.
And cheery greetings send I you,
This Christmas and the whole year through."

"Same to you. But, still, why don't you shave and come home and get a clean shirt? Incidentally, maybe you could learn to write poetry."

"On this bleak isle until I die,
I must remain; I don't know why.
And may this season's Christmas cheer,
Make glad and happy your New Year."

"You know, I think I'm beginning to understand why you are cooped up here this way."

"It seems that men don't like my verse,
And, as for me, they like me worse.
So here they put me as you see,
To let me bore myself with me.
A merry Christmas, full of cheer,
And good luck follow you all year.
Just once each year, at Christmas times,
They let me write a lot of rimes;
So I compose the greeting cards,
You always send with your regards.
From verses that I've written, may
You be spared this Christmas Day."

FRESHMUN FUNN

By CAP'N BELLS

"Hark, the herald angels sing, ta, de, da, de, da, dum, dum." Those Christmas carols we hear being hummed all around us have something in their music that gets us, don't they? And why not! They're good for everything from high fever to low grades. So let's take it all together now, folks, and "make it ring," "Joy to the world, da, de, dum, dum."

Christmas has been here since Thanksgiving for the commercial world, with Santa Claus arriving on that day by airplane, and along with him the usual spree of buying. Next thing we know, our be-whiskered friend will be coming by rocket on Labor Day. After that? Let H. G. Wells worry. (Haven't seen them yet, but we'll gamble our purple Christmas garters that somebody, somewhere, is selling mechanical toys called "Men from Mars"!)

Gift Suggestion: For Phyllis Heaton, Peggy Carter, Lois Thorson, and Janet Lindsay, a clock, so that they can get to Pearsons within five minutes after the doors open. (Record to date: 10 min., 50 sec.) Another gift sug.: for every girl, a bankroll. (Revolutionary, what?) Still another gift sug.: for the social committee, a big bouquet of roses, (and with every rose, a "Thank you").

During the bootball frenzy, we'd have sworn our favorite combination was orange and garnet. But now that we have become ourselves again, we're sure it is red and green. We'd like to add white, for snow, but the editor, who knows, says white is not a color.

Hint: Everybody (yes, you too) is expected to give a present to the personnel department before he leaves. A senior told me so. He said, "Don't cut classes Thursday. The personnel office counts on your presents here Thursday morning."

• • • •

There's-Always-Something Dep't.: In the land of St. Nicholas, Hitler is twisting the word "Santa" into "Satan." Christmas here in God's country is something to look forward to. Long live Santa Claus!

Present Messiah

newspapers and critics, and poets and tattlers exhausted every figure in their praise of the new composition. So great was the excitement aroused by the first performance that ladies of the period consented to leave their hoops at home in order that an additional listeners might be gotten into the room. The proceeds amounted to 400 pounds, and the event may truly be regarded as the greatest in Handel's life. Adhering to this memorable precedent, performances of the "Messiah" today contribute more money to charity than does any other work of art.

The first English performance of this oratorio was at Covent Garden theatre, London, in March, 1743. It was on this occasion, during the singing of the "Hallelujah Chorus," that King George II, greatly impressed by the music, stood up; at once the courtiers and people followed suit, thus originating a very pleasant custom which has been followed by "Messiah" audiences since that time.

The program for the presentation this year is as follows:

Overture—orchestra
Tenor Recitative: "Comfort ye my People"
Air: "Every valley shall be exalted"
Richard Woodring
Chorus: "And the Glory of the Lord"
Alto Recitative: "O thou that tellest good tidings to Zion"
Air and Chorus: "O thou that tellest good tidings to Zion"
Harriet Barber
Bass Recitative: "For behold, darkness shall cover the earth"
Air: "The people that walked in darkness"
Ralph Reed
Chorus: "For unto us a Child is born"
Orchestra—pastoral symphony
Soprano Recitatives: "There were shepherds abiding in the field"
"And lo! the angel of the Lord came upon them"
"And the angel said unto them"
"And suddenly there was the angel"
Bernice Cathcart
Chorus: "Glory to God"
Alto Recitative: "Then shall the eyes of the blind be opened"
Air: "He shall feed His flock like a shepherd"
Harriet Barber
Soprano Air: "Come unto Him"
Bernice Cathcart
Chorus: "Behold the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sins of the world"
Alto Air: "He was despised"
Harriet Barber
Chorus: "Surely he hath borne our griefs"
Chorus: "And with His stripes we are healed"
Chorus: "Lift up your heads, O ye gates"
Bass Air: "Why do the nations so furiously rage?"
Edwin Goddard
Chorus: "Hallelujah!"
Soprano Air: "I know that my Redeemer liveth"
Ruth Wood
Chorus: "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain"
Chorus: "Since by man came death"
"Amen"

THE HIGHLAND ECHO DECEMBER 10, 1938

SCOTTY SIDE SLANTS

By the
Sports Editor

A LOSS TO M.C.

All of you who knew Ed Ciurczak realized that he was not only one of the finest athletes on the Hill, but also one of the finest men on the campus. Ed was regarded by his team-mates as the best swimmer at Maryville, and his death occured while he was engaged in his favorite sport. We will always remember him as an athlete and as one of the best sports on the Hill.

JOKE

One of the best quips tossed out last night at the annual turkey stuffin' was by Coach Thrower. The two coaches, Honaker and Thrower, had just been presented shirts and ties by Al Burris, and Coach Thrower thanked them and then said, "We should be giving you boys the presents, but since you started it, we'll just let you finish it."

NO JOKE!

Last week we were speaking of the good old days. Well, last night Mr. Steinmetz, who managed the 1906 football team, told us of the trip they took that year. On successive days they played Ole Miss, Auburn, Alabama, Tennesse, and Sewanee. That's some schedule!

ANOTHER JOKE

Another pretty good joke came from Coach Honaker after Mr. Steinmetz had finished telling of the 1906 trip. Quote—Coach Honaker, "I want you to notice how these managers do it, Mr. Steinmetz told you how we beat Alabama, Tennessee, Ole Miss and etc., but when we came home, I'll be darned if they didn't go and lose to Sewanee."

Sully took his pictures and we went home. Another football season ended.

IT'S THE CUSTOM!

Dear Santy-Klaus:

We want a championship basketball team, a championship wrestling team, a championship track team, a championship baseball team, a championship swimming team, a championship tennis team, and something to write about each week in our column.

Yures Truly,
The Sports Staff.

SCRIBE VISITS RASSLIN'

When Coach Robert Thrower was asked about the prospects for this year's varsity wrestling squad, Coach Bob retorted, "You just come up to some practice, and if you see any good prospects, point 'em out to me."

This sounded anything but encouraging; so Wednesday afternoon found Ye Echo Sports Scribe wending his weary way to second floor Bartlett hall, where the rasslers hold their daily practice. Quite a number of the men were already in sweat suits, and were going through their preliminary exercises. The first that that attracted our attention was Clem Hahn throwing a combined Japanese toe hold, double wristlock, and double hammer lock on his playmate.

"Gosh! Hahn looks as though he'll be plenty good this year, Coach," the writer ventured.

"Yeah, Hahn would be all right if he had two more arms, another pair of legs, and something to think with," retorted Coach Bob.

However, Coach called on Clem and Obie Jenkins to demonstrate a few holds so he must have been joking about Clem, not knowing his stuff.

After Obie and Clem had taught the boys all they knew, Coach had the boys pair off with one another, and begin limbering up for a series of three minutes bouts.

Quite a few of the experienced men looked as though they will be hard to beat later in the year, and several newcomers displayed some mighty classy grappling. After seeing the boys work out, Ye Freshy Scribe is inclined to believe Coach Thrower must not have been in his usual sweet humor when he complained about his squad not being up to par.

Scot Cagers Open Season Tonight

Play Hiwassee Here On Wednesday Night

The Scottie cagers will open their season tonight in an exhibition game with the Friendsville Independents. The game tonight will be some indication of what material Coach Honaker will have to depend on for the rest of the season, although don't depend too much on the showing tonight because many of the first string boys have been practicing only a week due to the late football season. Coach Honaker will probably start the three Baird brothers, Scot Honaker and Dale Russell. With Etheredge, the only other first squad man back, seeing lots of action, Honaker will undoubtedly use plenty of men in tonight's game in order to see what they have got.

The Friendsville team will have Lee Hannah, former Maryville star and an all-conference selection two years back, playing in the center spot for them. Other players will probably be John Henry, formerly of Maryville, Curley Kennedy, an LMU player; Bill Chapman, Bob Peters, and Dan Magill, who is the brother of "Flash" Magill last year's high scorer for Maryville.

This Wednesday night, the Highlanders will play Hiwassee Junior college here.

The Scottie Scrubs will tangle with the Alcoa High team in the preliminary game starting at 7:00.

Weldon Baird, Kilbourne, Ohio, who is the only senior on the team, and will lead the Scotties in the game tonight.

Swimming Team Holds Practice

The swimming team has resumed light practice each afternoon at five o'clock. In the absence of Coach Gillingham, practice is conducted by John Ballenger, the manager, and the members of the team.

The first meets are being lined up for January. No dates will be decided, however, until the basketball schedule is made up. The swimming schedule will carry through February and part of March.

The certified lifeguards of the swimming squad are meeting the regular classes and open periods at Bartlett pool until the Christmas holidays.

Interclass Sports

The interclass basketball season will start immediately after Christmas.

No definite schedule can be made until after the varsity schedule has been arranged. However, as in the interclass football, each team will play each other team twice. The first game will be freshmen vs. seniors. A junior-soph tilt will complete the first round.

Gene Orr is directing the tournament. Each class athletic director will be in charge of his team. The class directors are: Judy, seniors, Morrow, juniors; Peterson, sophs,; and Wilson, freshmen.

The tournament last year was won by the Junior team. The seniors will miss Colombo, the outstanding player of last season, but left of last year's quintet are McCaskie and Judy, who will show their opponents plenty of stuff. Morrow will be gone from the junior squad leaving Stevenson to spark the football champs; Van Blarcom, one of last year's best will be on the soph team. Peterson will be missing, however; the freshmen are an unknown quantity.

An all-star team will be chosen from all classes by the athletic directors. It is probable that this team will play the winners of the tournament. All basketball games will be played in the Alumni gym. According to plans now the games will be played at night. Any man in each class is eligible except those out for varsity basketball after Christmas.

JAMES ETHEREDGE ELECTED FOOTBALL CAPTAIN FOR '39

Arnold Kramer Elected Alternate Captain At Football Banquet Attended By 72

James Etheredge of Town Creek, Alabama, was elected captain of the 1939 football team Thursday night by the members of the squad. He will succeed Alva Burris of Mulberry, Fla. Arnold Kramer, Maryville product, was chosen as alternate captain.

James "Joe" Etheredge, an end, has lettered three years, and will probably be chosen on the All-Smoky Mountain Conference team. Etheredge in thanking his team-mates for the honor bestowed on him, said, "I certainly want to thank you for the honor you have given me, but I want to say that I can hardly hope to do as fine a job next year as Al Burris did this. All I can say is that we will be out to win the Conference Championship in 1939." Arnold Kramer, big 190 pound tackle, also another probable selection of the All-SMC team, echoed Etheredge's sentiments.

The football banquet was attended by 72 people. Mr. Ralph R. Colbert was the toastmaster and introduced the main speaker of the evening, the Rev. R. O. Eller of the Southern Methodist church, who congratulated the members of the squad, and told them that football was a part of a well rounded life.

Coach Honaker also congratulated the team members, and called this year's team the most interesting team to watch that he has seen at Maryville in ten years. Quoting Coach Honaker, "With a few breaks, I believe that this year's team could easily have won the Conference." He cited a number of examples in the games played this year. He said, "The Lenoir-Rhyne game, which was a 12-12 tie, was the first game in several years that we have failed to make at least one extra point after touchdowns, in games where there have been more than two touchdowns. Another thing that was against us were the injuries. We have had more broken bones this season than in any other five years combined."

Other talks were given by Mr. Barbour of Knoxville; Mr. Steinmetz of Knoxville, who was manager of the most famous team Maryville has ever had, the team of 1906; Captain Al Burris, Dr. Hunter, Dr. Lloyd, Coach Thrower, and Dr. McClelland. Captain Al Burris was presented with a silver trophy by his team-mates, the presentation being made by Arnold Kramer, who thanked Burris on behalf of his team-mates for the fine leadership he has shown them.

The trick provides for a swimmer to be placed in an ordinary bag, ropes to be tied to give an impression that he is confined in it, while in fact the bag is not fastened and the swimmer emerges from it immediately after he is under water and releases a cork as a signal that he is safely out. He then swims to a point at the edge of the pool where there is an arrangement for his breathing. There he remains out of sight until an appointed time to reappear to the crowd.

The apparatus was tested beforehand and up to a certain point all went as planned. Ciurczak was let into the water feet first, the signal to show that he had disposed of the bag was recognized, and the next event on the program was carried through.

When he did not appear as expected, several swimmers went into the pool, found him lying on the bottom, took him out, and rendered first aid at once. Artificial respiration was administered for four hours by registered life guards despite the fact that from the first there was almost no hope for him.

Sunday afternoon at five o'clock a memorial service was conducted in Voorhees chapel by faculty members, students and an alumnus.

Hamlet Tryouts Will Close

Tryouts for the senior class production of "Hamlet" will close Dec. 14. The cast will be announced after the Christmas holidays. Seniors who are interested in a part in the play should go to the dramatic art studio for a tryout as soon as possible.

Ministerials Will Hold Party In YWCA Rooms Next Monday Evening

The Ministerial association will hold its last meeting of the year on Monday night. This meeting will be in the form of a party and will be held in the YW rooms. The program will include a talk by Mrs. George Brown on a Christmas theme. John Guinter will play several violin selections and Marianna Allen will sing.

Devotions, and group singing of Christmas carols, followed by refreshments, will conclude the evening's entertainment.

SENIOR PARTY POSTPONED

Because of a misunderstanding about schedules, the senior class party must be postponed until after the holidays in order not to conflict with the basketball game which is to be played in the big gym Saturday night.

Gordon Bennett To Play Hamlet In Senior Play

Magill and Bolton To Have Important Roles In Well-Known Drama

Mrs. Nita Eckles West, instructor of dramatics in the Fine Arts department, today announced the tentative cast for the production of "Hamlet" next spring by the senior class.

Gordon Bennett, who recently starred in the College Players' presentation of "Tovarich" will play the difficult role of Hamlet. John Magill will act the part of Claudius, king of Denmark, and Sara Bolton will play the part of Gertrude, the queen.

Polonius, the lord chamberlain will be portrayed by Carl Wells with Bruce Morgan as his son, Laertes, and Katherine Warren as Ophelia, his daughter. Fred Rhody will play the part of Horatio, the friend of Hamlet.

The rest of the cast, which has been selected after several weeks of tryouts is as follows: Rosencrantz, S. K. Taylor; Guildenstern, Robert Lucero; Orsic, James Rich; Marcellus, Miles Dills; Francisco, Lynn Curtis; Bernardo, Edwin Walker; Reynaldo, servant of Polonius, Eugene Law; player king, Arthur Byrne; Lucianus, William Napier; player prologue, Albert Rosser; player queen, Curtmarie Brown; first grave digger, Muriel Mann; second digger, Harriet Barber; ghost, Ed Goddard.

Eugene Law will also play the part of the priest and Palmer Mayo will be the captain and messenger; George Felknor, Fortinbras, Prince of Norway; Lynn Curtis, an attendant; Genevieve Metcalf and Mary Chambers, ladies in waiting.

William McGill will be the production manager and Hugh Smith will be business manager. Ellen Sauer will be in charge of costumes, and Glenn Young will be the electrician.

Hugh Smith and Ellen Sauer will choose committees to help with their work. Robert Brandriff will have charge of the preparation of the script.

Frosh Section Closes January 19; Cover For Annual Chosen

The cover design for the 1939 Chilhowean has just been submitted to the Chilhowean staff by the Kingsport Press, according to a statement issued today by Otto Pflanze, editor. The cover will be white with black overtone. The embossed design which will represent the medieval idea carried out in the book will be in garnet.

The freshmen section of the Chilhowean, which opened a week before the holidays, will remain open until Thursday, Jan. 19. Notices have been posted urging freshmen to submit their pictures as soon as possible. By special arrangement, a local studio will take care of all pictures made by them. Other pictures must be three-and-a-half by five inch gloss prints and should be placed in the hands of the editor.

The senior, junior and sophomore sections closed shortly before the vacation and have been sent to the engraving company in Knoxville.

Students wishing to subscribe for a copy of the Chilhowean may do so by paying the three dollars due by Feb. 2, to John Fisher, Phillip Evaul, Louise Wells or Jean White. On this date the second payment of two dollars will be due for those having already suscribed. This date will also be the deadline for all additional subscriptions.

Newly Finished Gate To Bear Bronze Plaque Acknowledging Donor

The new 600 dollar gateway in the northeast entrance to the college campus was completed during the Christmas holidays. Designed by Barber and McMurry, Knoxville architects, the imposing brick and stone pillars will bear a bronze tablet acknowledging them as the gift of Mrs. John Walker, whose generosity has been responsible for so many other improvements to the college.

Uniform in design with the two present gateways to the campus donated by the classes of 1917 and 1928, the new gate is thirteen and a half feet high with allowance for a twenty-eight foot driveway and two walks to pass through it. The structure has been placed at right angles to College street, although the boundary of the campus

Registration For Next Semester To Begin On Monday; Lasts Until Feb. 3

Seniors Register Next Week, Juniors-Sophomores Begin Jan. 23, And Freshmen, Jan. 30, Bill Deadline, Feb. 3

As in previous years, registration of old students for the second semester will be completed by the close of the present semester. Instead, of setting aside two afternoons for that purpose, as was done last year, the registration schedule will be extended over the last three weeks of the semester.

The registration of seniors will begin next Monday, Jan. 16, at the Personnel office and will continue during the week, closing on Saturday, Jan. 21. A credit card, tentative schedule card, and information sheet were given to each senior at chapel this morning. The tentative schedule card should be filled out by the student, then should be approved and signed by the major professor. It should then be presented at the Personnel office for further approval and for the filling out of the regular registration card. After this has been checked and approved at the Personnel office, it should be taken as soon as possible, during the regular student hours, to the Treasurer's office, for the assessment of the bills. Payment may be made at that time, or later, but should not be delayed beyond Friday, Feb. 3, the last day of the semester, after which the late payment fee of $5.00 will be required. All seniors should complete their registration at the Personnel office by Saturday, Jan. 21, since the late registration fee of $2.50 will be charged each senior registering after that date.

Registration of juniors and sophomores will be conducted in a similar manner during the week of Jan. 23 to 28. Credit cards and tentative schedule cards will be given to members of these classes at chapel on Saturday of the previous week. The late registration fee of $2.50 will be required of sophomores and juniors registering at the Personnel office after Jan. 28.

Freshmen will be registered during the week of Jan. 30 to Feb. 3, that is during the week of the final examinations. Each freshman should call at the Personnel office early as possible in that week to receive his tentative schedule card, and to fill out the regular registration card. Any necessary changes from the schedule of the first semester will be made at that time. When freshmen register they should be prepared to state the particular courses in physical training they wish to take.

All students are asked to register as early as possible in the weeks designated for their respective classes. This will serve to eliminate a long waiting in line at the close of the week. It should be clearly understood that bills will not need to be paid at the time of registration, but that the cards when approved by the Personnel office should be taken as soon as possible, during the regular student hours, to the Treasurer's office, for the assessment of bills. Late registration fees are charged for registration after the

Bates' Oratorical Contest April 1-15

Junior And Senior Men May Participate In 1939 Contest

The Bates' oratorical contest, open this year to the men of the junior and senior classes, will be held between April 1 and 15. The exact date will be determined by the contestants and the committee in charge of the contest.

The prize for this contest is furnished by the income from one thousand dollars given by the Rev. William H. Bates of Creeley, Colorado. The contest is open in alternate years to the men and women of the junior and senior classes.

All orations must be from 1500 to 2000 words in length, and all manuscripts must be submitted the first Tuesday in April. Each contestant will submit three typewritten copies of his manuscript, signed by a pen name. The writer's own name and his pen name will be submitted in a sealed envelope.

The subjects for the orations this year are "The Wandering Jew," Democracy a Dream", "The Meaning of Munich", "The Need for Economic planning", "The Goose Step", and "The Radio as a Factor in Culture."

Dr. E. R. Hunter and Miss Jessie K. Johnson are in charge of the contest.

Internat'l Relations Club To Discuss Lima Conference Results

The conference of American Republics at Lima, Peru, which figured in the news last week, will be discussed from every angle at a meeting of the International Relations club, formerly the Peace Forum, Friday at 6:45 in Thaw hall auditorium. The attitudes taken by the countries involved, the things accomplished at the conference, and their bearing on the future will be presented in discussion groups.

Albert Rosser will give a short history of the conference and its background at the beginning of the meeting. Afterward the audience will be divided into groups. The discussion of one group will be lead by Harold Copeland on the attitude of European countries toward the conference. Another will be lead by Robert Lucero on the part taken by South American countries, while William B. Felknor will lead a discussion in the third group on the role of the United States.

The Peace Forum meets for the first time on this occasion under its new name "The International Relations club." The organization has become affiliated with the Carnegie Founda-

Freshmen Debate Tryouts On Feb. 7th

Eight Will Be Chosen From Twenty-Two Candidates For Squad

Tryouts for the freshman debate team will be held Feb. 7, according to Professor Verton M. Queener, instructor in freshman debate.

The question for discussion "Resolved: That the United States should form an alliance with Great Braitain" will be debated by 27 of the 44 registered in the class. Eight of these, four men and four women, will compose the freshman debate squad.

Miss Grace Proffitt, a graduate of Maryville and a former varsity debater and officer of Pi Kappa Delta, will assist in the coaching of the freshman team.

Discussing the prospects for the season Professor Queener stated, "There are several good prospects this year. The squad will compare favorably with those of other years." If present tentative plans are completed the freshman team will begin its regular season about March 1, with a tournament at Union college, Jackson, Tennessee.

Maryville Debate Team Opens With Ripon On Jan. 6

Queener Coaches Squad Of Fifteen Chosen Before The Holidays

Maryville's debate team opened the 1939 season last Tuesday evening in Thaw hall against Ripon college of Ripon, Wisconsin. Ripon was given a decision over Maryville's team by Professor Melvin Morehouse of Knoxville college, who acted as critic judge.

Dave Miller and Tom Allson of Ripon upheld the affirmative side of the Pi Kappa Delta question: Resolved, that the United States should cease to use public funds for the purpose of stimulating business. Cliff Proctor and Arnold Kramer represented Maryville as the negative team.

Professor Morehouse, in rendering the decision, said that both sides showed thorough preparation and that the issues were so closely contested that the margin between the teams was very small, but that he thought that Ripon held a slight edge over Maryville.

Professor Morehouse also commented on the excellence of Maryville's debates, despite the fact that this was the first of the season for Maryville.

In the tryouts for the varsity debate team held before the Christmas holidays nine men and six women were chosen to make up the 1939 squad. Those making the men's team were Ernest Crawford, Arnold Kramer, Robert Lamont, Vernon Lloyd, Bruce Morgan, Otto Pflanze, Clifford Proctor, George Webster, and Tommy Woolf.

The women's squad is to be composed of Curtmarie Brown, Pauline Cope, Sara Lee Hellums, Harriet Miller, Louise Proffitt, and Arda Walker.

Tryouts for the 27 students competing for place on the team consisted of competitive speeches made by each of the contestants and the team was chosen from the rating of each of the contestants and the team was chosen from the rating of each of the contestants by judges. Dr. Edmund W. Davies, Dr. D. H. Briggs and Prof. L. L. Williams served as judges.

College Plans Three Art Exhibitions From National Federation

During the spring the Maryville college art department will sponsor three exhibitions which have been arranged by the American Federation of Arts, of which the art department is a member. The exhibitions will show the Carnegie prints, American paintings, and French peasant costumes.

The first exhibition is scheduled for February 7 to 21, and will be the Carnegie prints, a group of 50 prints of fairly modern painters. The second exhibition will be here in the evenings of March 21 and 28, and will be illustrated lectures on American painting. The first lecture will follow the history of painting from the early United States period up to the modern work. The second lecture will be on contemporary American painting. The third exhibition is of hand-drawn and hand-colored designs of French peasant costumes, and will be of a historical nature.

This is the second year that American Federation of Art exhibitions have been here. Last year they were viewed by more than 300 persons, and consisted of illuminated manuscripts, and Indian pottery designs.

Faculty Represents Maryville At Meeting Of Col. Associations

Representatives of Maryville at the meetings of several college associations in Louisville, Ky., this week include Pres. and Mrs. Ralph W. Lloyd, Dr. H. E. Orr, Miss Susan A. Green, and Miss Clemmie J. Henry. President Lloyd is chairman of two of the groups meeting, the Conference of Church Related Colleges and the Pan-Presbyterian College Union.

The schedule for the week included the meeetings of various groups of colleges affiliated with the principal denominations on Monday and Tuesday; the Pan-Presbyterian College Union on Tuesday; meetings of the Council of Church Boards of Education and of the National Conference of Church Related Colleges on Wednesday; and the association of American College on Thursday and Friday.

Many prominent speakers from all over the United States appeared on the program.

M.L.A. Hears Paper Written By Collins

Discusses Play As Part Of Decadence Movement In Germany

Dr. Ralph S. Collins, associate professor of French and German, read an original paper, "Hermann Bahr—Die Mutter, a play of the Decadence," before the fifty-fifth annual meeting of the Modern Language association in New York City, December 28-30, 1938. Dr. Hill Shine, professor of English, also attended the association meeting.

The M.L.A. meets each year between Christmas and New Year's in one of the larger cities of the country, at which time research work is presented by individuals and criticized by other members of the association. For more efficient work, the meetings attended by 2500 persons in 1938, are divided into groups of the various periods of English, American, or foreign literature. Dr. Collins' paper was read before the Modern German literature group.

"Hermann Bahr—Die Mutter, a play of the Decadence" discusses the play as a part of the Decadence movement, a definition of which Dr. Collins limits to "a negative evaluation of the forces of civilization and culture, in which the progressive differentiation and refinement of man's soul and feelings are considered signs of decay."

From this definition the author considers the background of the movement, mentioning Rousseau, Montesquieu, and Gibbon in the eighteenth, and Byron, Heine, and Nietzche early nineteenth century as developing the general idea of the Decadence as a negative force. About the middle of the last century Schopenhauer's pessimistic philosophy had a large influence on the French movement; and Baudelaire, French poet of the same period, was one of the same period, was one of the first to give the Decadence a positive meaning.

Dr. Shine reports as the high-point of the American and English literature group meetings which he attended the reading of a paper by Maxwell Anderson, modern American playwright, entitled "The Essence of Tragedy." Mr. Anderson described the chief necessity of tragedy as a discovery on the part

Audience Of 1100 Receive Bjoerling With Enthusiasm

Varied Program Presented By Young Met. Tenor On Jan. 11

A capacity audience of over 1100 people gave an enthusiastic reception to Jussi Bjoerling, outstanding young tenor of the Metropolitan opera in his concert here Wednesday evening. His program, one of the most carefully chosen ever presented here, was encored repeatedly, and from the first, Mr. Bjoerling's pleasant and unaffected presence won the sympathetic attention of his audience.

The opening number was the long and exacting "Adelaide" of Beethoven. The second group consisted of lieder by two German composers and included Schubert's "An Sylvia" and "Die Bose Farbe" and Ricahrd Strauss' 'Morgen" and "Caecilie." The encore was Geehl's beautiful ballad, "For You Alone." Two arias from Mr. Bjoerling's extensive operatic repertoire followed, "O Paradiso" from "L'Africana" by Meyerbeer and the familiar air from Puccini's "Tosca."

After the intermission Mr. Bjoerling sang four songs by Scandinavian composers, a feature of all his concerts and radio appearances. Included were "In the Dream" by Emil Sjogren and "Flicken kom" by Sibelius. For his final offering Mr. Bjoerling returned to his favorite genre, the opera, and sang "The Dream" from "Manon" and "The Flower Song" from "Carmen," and encored with "La Donna e Mobile" from "Rigoletto" and Rudolfo's narrature from "La Boheme."

Mr. Bjoerling was accompanied by Harry Ebert, an artist in his own right, who supplemented his judicious and restrained accompaniment with Faure's "Impromptu" and Ravel's "Alborado del Gracisso."

Disc Club Programs Will Include A Large Group Of New Records

A new recording of Tchaikowsky's fifth symphony was presented at the Disc club's first meeting since the holidays. The meeting was held on Friday afternoon at 4:30 with Mildred Dallas as commentator.

The program was the first of the series planned for this semester by a representative group of Disc club members which met Tuesday evening at the home of Miss Katherine Davies. This series will include a Wagnerian instrumental program, a complete recording of the opera, "Cavaleria Rusticana," by Pietro Mascagni, a new group of Stephen Foster recordings, Mozart's G minor, Beethoven's, 9th symphony, Franck's D minor, Schubert's Unfinished Symphony, and a program of modern music by such composers as Strauss, Ravel, and Debussy.

The Disc club has no formal organization and is open to all students and faculty members who are interested in hearing recordings of their favorite instrumental and vocal selections.

Athenian—Bainonian To Hold Play Tryouts

The Athenian Literary society has chosen "You Can't Take It With You," a comedy by Kaufman and Hart, as their annual midwinter, to be presented on February 24. The theme of the play is the value and permanence of friendship. The play saw a very successful run of two years on Broadway and has recently been made into a movie starring Lionel Barrymore.

Tryouts for the parts will be held Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week.

YWCA Service Under Direction Of Seniors

Seniors will have charge of the YW CA service Sunday afternoon. Using the theme of the program, Curtmarie Brown will talk on "Beauty." Mary Chambers is directing the program.

President Helen Bobo announces a brief cabinet meeting immediately after the service.

MINISTERIALS ELECT OFFICERS

The Ministerial association will meet Monday evening to elect officers for the next semester. The meeting will be held at 6:45 in Athenian hall.

Jussi Bjoerling's Great Love Is Opera

By ROBERT K. BRANDRIFF

In spite of newspaper publicity about his temperament, and an impressive list of triumphs in opera and on the radio and concert stage, twenty-seven year-old Jussi Bjoerling is one of the most approachable artists ever to appear on a Maryville artist series. The recital over and the autograph seekers satisfied, he at once became as friendly and affable as an unspoiled schoolboy—and as unaffected. His humorous acceptance of his difficulties with the English language only added to the ease and naturalness of his conversation.

His great love is opera, beside the glamour and color of which concert singing must be pretty tame. Asked his favorite role, he replied with evident enthusiasm that it was Rudolpho in "La Boheme." This is easily understandable since it was in this same popular work of Puccini's that he has enjoyed his two greatest successes to date. In 1936 he sang the part in a special performance of the opera dedicating John D. Rockefeller's gift of an American wing to the Cite Universite in Paris, and just two months ago he made his Metropolitan debut in the same part with the success that is the dream of every singer.

When he's not singing, Mr. Bjoerling said he liked "to do everything, but especially hunt and fish." He is also a skilled pianist, and plays his own accompaniments during his hours of study. Then there are always new roles to be prepared, or old ones learned in some other language, programs to be planned, and an unceasing search for new songs to be carried on, so that he never gets very far from music, even during vacations.

The Bjoerlings and their son, Anders, live in one of Stockholm's 90,000 cooperative flat close to the Royal Opera, where ten years ago, at the age of 17, Jussi Bjoerling began his professional operatic career. The Venice-of-the-North, Stockholm is a city of boats. To the inquiry as to whether he also had one he laughed, "Goodness, yes. Three!", and in one of them he week-ends regularly during the summer at his island home at Skargarden.

Although this is his third visit to the United States, Maryville is the farthest

Not For Monetary Value

Wednesday evening students of the college had the opportunity of seeing and hearing one of the most widely discussed artists of the present day, Jussi Bjoerling, young Metropolitan opera tenor.

People do not listen to concerts, or read good books, or look at paintings for the purpose of increasing their monetary income in life. Nor is appreciation of the fine arts dependent upon economic or intellectual achievement. Understanding and love of the beautiful can be developed regardless of normal variations in the other spheres of living; but not without some effort. To know and enjoy good music, just as to know and enjoy good books, requires time and effort.

To progress toward complete enjoyment and love of music, poetry, and art, should be a part of our general aim, just as we are also trying to progress toward complete knowledge and ability in the vocational field of our particular interest.

On the second floor of Anderson hall, we have an art gallery containing a number of valuable paintings done by Mrs. Elizabeth Gowdy Baker, eminent painter of life-size portraits in pure water color. Students (particularly freshmen) who have been neglecting their esthetic development, will find it profitable and interesting to visit the art gallery some afternoon.

Give Dictators An Inch And They Want—

(Reprinted from the Los Angeles Collegian)

When Mussolini first marched his black shirted legions into Ethiopia, he perfected an old philosophy of possession: "It's mine because I want it!"

Benito wanted Ethiopia; he got it. Adolph wanted first Austria and now a good part of Czechoslovakia; he got them. What the world now wonders is where will it stop? By these same tokens Hitler could demand parts of the United States for possessions. Rather absurd? Not at all. Milwaukee, which is as much, if not more German than Sudetenland, could well demand a plebiscite for self-determination.

Philadelphia, which is even more German than Milwaukee, would soon follow suit. It would not be long ere the German embassy in Washington would be delivering the curt notes from der Feuhrer to the state department. After all, Germany must look after her children in all nations, United States not excepted.

As far-fetched as the theory may be, in essence it is the same thing that happened in Czechoslovakia. A sane sensible world must do something to scotch the theory, "It's mine because I want it!"

Merry-Ville Go Round

By FRED RHODY

WE RESOLVE

NOTE: Having become increasingly conscious of the fact that we college students must be a terrific factor in the premature development, in the faculty, of gray and hairless heads, and of furrowed brows and stooped gaits, we students hereby resolve the following resolutions for this year of 1939:

1. Never to cause any teacher or college official the slightest bit of trouble or inconvenience, except at certain times.

2. Never to utter a derogatory remark about any faculty member, within hearing distance of said faculty member.

3. Never to stubbornly maintain an opinion of our own, in the face of a teacher's contradiction, except when we think we are right.

4. Never to complain of a teacher's method of grading a test, except when we don't get the highest grade in the class.

5. To do everything within our power, short of actually studying, to prepare ourselves properly for class recitation.

6. Never to use our radios, percolators or hot plates in the dormitory, except when the electricity is on.

7. Never to disobey any dormitory regulation, without making certain first that the dormitory head is nowhere around.

8. Every morning, to be the first one in the chapel, to leave.

9. Never to criticize the dining hall meals, except when we don't like them.

10. To think kindly and lovingly of every teacher, who has given us A the past semester.

NOTE AGAIN: Having become increasingly conscious of the fact that it is extremely difficult to maintain in the face of temptation the rigid standards we have set up for ourselves in these ten Resolutions, we hereby service notice on the faculty that these resolutions are subject to change without notice.

THE WASTEBASKET

By SCOTTIE, THE OFFICE BOY

Wandering lonely as a cloud through our peaceful little wastebasketdomain this week we have found conditions too good to be true. Not one desolate little "ten best" list (was there nothing new under the rain in '38?); not one solitary resolution (has civilization at last progressed to the point where people have learned the folly of making rash promises?); not even so much as a single wewish-greathingsforyouthisyear (have both of our loyal readers turned aside from following after us?) Alackalas!

But we did manage to excavate a little fan mail which liked these things about Wednesday's concert:

Jussi Bjoerling
Being ushed by a Maninatuxedo
Bjoerling's selection of program and encores
Attentive faces
Bjoerling's poise
Enthusiastic applause
Bjoerling's voice
Ermines, jewels, flowers, feathers, hoop skirts
Ebert's podalling
The Scandinavian group, with selections by Sibelius and Stogren
Bjoerling's high C's
Ebert's interpretation of Ravel
Bjoerling's sympathetic low tones
Sitting on the second row
Bjoerling's generosity in granting autographs and interviews
Professor Howell's unselfishness in remaining to play host back stage rather than hearing the concert from the audience
Jussi Bjoerling.

• • • •

Further patient labor with a pick and shovel unearthed these startling discoveries made in '38, (where were we while history was being made and destiny was being shaped?). We beg to suggest that if you have not already made the acquaintance of some of these noteworthy new wrinkles you plan to sample them in '39. Have you ever tried:

Imagining the weather without rain (don't overdo; take in small doses until accustomed to the unfamiliar effects).

Going to bed before "lights out" (be sure to warn room mate in advance that you are not ill).

Pumpkin pie and oyster stew
*Smiling, a miraculous panacea
Studying, eating, composing letter to girl at home, listening to radio, talking to room mate, etc., etc., simultaneously; or, for that matter
Studying
Being on time to Sunday breakfast; or, for that matter
Being on time to breakfast
Looking dignified at a basketball game; or for that matter
Looking dignified

* Heartily endorsed by such notables as Bruce Morgan, Miss Davies, Thomas Schaeffer, Helen Bobo, Irwin Ritzman, Miriam Nethery, Mr. Black, and Margaret Lodwick.

• • • •

None of us indulged in resolutions this year; perhaps we think we're just too good to be improved upon. (The writer of this column naturally excluded—we know we are.) Perhaps a profound truth from the pen of Confuse Us will not be amiss (verbally translated: will not be missed if omitted).

south he had ever been. His admiration of the people and the scenery was obviously sincere, but it is to be suspected that his first real southern cooking may have contributed much to his appreciation, for he is a discriminating lover of good food.

The most gratifying thing he mentioned in his short talk with his interviewer, however, was his pleasure in singing before an audience composed largely of college men and women. It was not an ordinary experience for him, and their youthful enthusiasm and quiet attention impressed him greatly. Still smiling graciously as he was hustled off to be photographed. Mr. Bjoerling left behind him the memory of consummate artistry and a glorious voice, and an even more delightful personality.

Faculty Club Hears Miss Jackson's Paper

At the regular meeting of the Faculty club last Monday evening, Miss Elizabeth Jackson of the English department read a paper entitled "Glances at the Dictionary."

Miss Jackson's paper discussed the various phases of the editing and printing of the Webster Dictionary on whose staff she served in the preparation of the 1935 edition.

Have Sports Forecast

The regular weekly meeting of Alpha Sigma society tonight will feature a sports forecast for the coming year. Managers representing all the athletic organizations of the college will be present to speak on the sports probabilities for 1939. Glenn McAfee will be in charge.

WNOX Director At Confab Club

At the Confab club meeting Tuesday evening, Jan. 17, Lowell Blanchard, head announcer and program director at WNOX, Knoxville, will speak on "Radio." Everyone is cordially invited to attend. The meeting will be informal and will be held at 8:15 in the Fine arts studio.

SCOTTY SIDE SLANTS

By the Sports Editor

GREEN GRUNTERS

Our wrestling squad, which made its debut last night at Raleigh, North Carolina, is one of the greenest squads turned out in quite a while. Only two lettermen made the trip, Hahn and Meares. Wood Everett, another letterman from last season in the 135-pound class, gained twenty pounds in the summer and took a jump up to the 155 pound division. Omar Judy, a veteran squad man, who although has never lettered, has been plenty tough for anyone to handle, is the other important 155 pound man right now. Tuesday night in the wrestling room Everett and Judy were to battle it out to see just who would wrestle in that class against North Carolina State. Well, they grunted and goaned for the scheduled match, and the referee, who incidentally was last year's captain, Jim Renfro, had to call the match a draw. So Wednesday afternoon they were at it again, and Judy got the decision, but not by a fall. Judy and Wood are two fine boys, and they are both plenty tough in that 155.

The fourth letterman who was to return from last year, was Obie Jenkins. We are sorry to say that there will be no more wrestling for Obie this season. Jenkins fell ill with appendicitis last year during wrestling season, and while Christmas vacation was on, he became violently ill again with the same trouble. The doctor has ordered a complete rest. So, Obie, take care of yourself, and we'll see you next year during football season, and rasslin' season.

LARRY'S OUT—

If you see someone hopping around on crutches somewhere, with a big, bright smile on his face, that's Larry Lowe. If you think that we are glad to see him out, you just ask him how glad he is to be out. Anyway, we are really glad to see you out of the hospital and wandering around on those crutches.

Honaker's Basket In Overtime Period Sets Hiwassee Down 34-33

The Highlanders came back in the overtime period, after trailing the whole game, to whip a determined Hiwassee quintet Tuesday night by the close score of 33-34.

Scott Honaker, diminutive guard for the Maryville five, tied the score 29-29 in the last seconds of the game, and then in the overtime period with the Highlanders trailing by one point and with but four seconds to go, Joe Etheredge had a jump ball with a Hiwassee man. Joe tipped the ball to Weldon Baird, who flipped the leather to Scot, who calmly proceeded to swish the field goal as the final gun sounded.

Hiwassee gained an early lead in the game, and led throughout the game up to the closing seconds. This was the second game played against Maryville by Hiwassee. Maryville easily won the first, but encountered a much stiffer team when they visited in Madisonville.

Lineups:

Maryville	Hiwassee
B. Baird—F	Jewell—F
W. Baird—F	Kilbourne—F
Russell—C	Johnson—C
Honaker—G	Baker—G
Bill Baird—G	Shelton—G

Maryville Trims Hiwassee 37-20

The Scottie basketball team crushed Hiwassee on Wednesday night, Dec. 14, by a score of 37-20. Led by Dale Russell and Scottie Honaker, each scoring over ten points, the Maryville team showed well in the first test against a college team. Johnson, center for the invaders, played a fine game, running up 8 points for top scoring honors of his team. Maryville led by the ample margin of 25-9 at the half, and coasted in, well ahead despite good defensive ball by Hiwassee's quintet. The game was non-conference.

Lineups:

Maryville	Hiwassee
W. Baird—F	Baker—G
Etheredge—F	Smith—G
Russell—C	Johnson—C
Honaker—G	McNabb—F
B. Baird—G	Shelton—F

Subs for Maryville: Husk, Whittaker, Manning, Shelfer, Walker.

Highlanders Take Two From Gulfs

Two practice games with the Gulf Refiners have ended with the Maryville college basketball team on top. The first of these games was played before the Christmas holidays, and ended with the Scotties leading their opponents 41 to 29.

The Highlanders also eased out a 38 to 35 victory over the Refiners last Saturday night. With the score tide at the half, and against them during the third and part of the fourth quarters, the Orange and Garnet made a thrilling and successful bid for the game during the closing minutes of play.

The lineup for the second game was as follows:

Maryville			Refiners
Weldon Baird 11	F	6	Kennedy
Honaker 1	F	10	Henry
Russell 10	C	12	Hannah
Bill Baird 3	G	4	Odell
Bdsn. Baird 8	G	1	Clemons

Subs for Maryville; Etheredge, 5, Manning and Husk. Refiners: Peters 1.

Grapplers Return From N. C. State

The Scotty grapplers are on their way back from Raleigh, N. C., today, after grunting and groaning around on the mat with the wrestlers of North Carolina State. This is the first meet of the year for Coach Thrower's charges, and consequently the squad as a whole is green and inexperienced. Only two lettermen, Clem Hahn, and Edgar Meares, made the trip.

The tryouts were held Tuesday and Wednesday, and the eight men who survived the trials and made the trip are: Phil Evaul, 120-lb. class; Herb Turner, 125-lb.; Davie McDaniels, 135-lb. class; Edgar Meares, 145-lb. class; Omer Judy, 155-lb. class; Clem Hahn, 166-lb. class; Hal Henschen, 175-lb. class; Howard Dizney, heavyweight.

Edgar Meares, 145 pound veteran of the squad will probably captain the team the rest of the season.

INTERCLASS SPORTS

Sophs 20—Juniors 19

The sophomore class quintet opened the YMCA intramural basketball season by turning back a fighting Junior team in the third overtime period, 20-19.

The juniors started off in the second quarter and gained a lead that they never lost until the third overtime period, when a field goal by Gastrock put an end to the game according to the "sudden death" rules.

Van Blarcom, sophomore captain and star guard, led the sophs in their attack on the large junior team. Jimmy Rae and Arnold Kramer weyre outstanding for the juniors.

The very closeness of the game indicated that this year's interclass basketball season will be the best in many years. Bigger and better teams point to a successful season.

Lineups:

Sophs			Juniors
Hulse 2	F	6	Rae
Gastrock 2	F		Stevenson
Van Blarcom 4	C	5	Kramer
Cragan 5	G	1	Proctor
Steakley 7	G	6	Taylor

Findlay Elected Swimming Capt.

Coach Gillingham announced Tuesday the tentative swimming schedule for the year and held an election to decide the captain of the swimming team. Gordon Findlay, a sophomore and a last year's letter man, was elected. Findlay is assistant to Coach Gillingham.

On this year's swimming schedule are some of the strongest teams of the South. Among them are the University of Tennessee, the University of Kentucky, Tusculum, East Kentucky Teachers, and Chattanooga. Maryville will journey to Johnson City to meet Tusculum in the first meet of the season on Jan. 21st. Tusculum is the only other school in the Smoky Mountain Conference to boast a swimming team. Therefore, Maryville will be going out of her class to meet the University of Tennessee in the first home meet scheduled for the 28th of January. However, in years past Maryville has made a remarkable showing against Kentucky and Tennessee. With the exception of Kentucky and Auburn, Maryville swims against each team twice.

A large squad of twenty men are out for the swimming positions. The Scottie Mermen lost six lettermen from last year's team; four lettermen returned. Among the outstanding swimmers back this year are Findlay, an all round man, starring in the dashes; Crane, diving; Akana, specializing in the breast stroke, Ritzman, also swimming the breast stroke, and Felknor, swimming distance. A large group of freshmen show promise.

Time trials determining positions on the team will be held Tuesday and Thursday of next week. Anyone in the college is eligible to enter the time trials.

Scotty Quintet Faces Knox "Y" This Eve

Tonight the Highland hoopsters will tangle with the Knoxville Y on the college hardwood. The Y always presents a tough team for the Scotties to beat. Last year they played here twice, dropping one before the holidays and winning the second.

The Scotties haven't lost any games this season, but the last two games have been too close for comfort. So be prepared for a fast game tonight in the Alumni gym.

Swimming Club Formed

As a part of the new schedule of open swimming periods, Gordon Findlay announces that a swimming club has been inaugurated. This club consists of a Junior and Senior division. The Junior division includes short swims and elementary instructions. The Senior division is composed of a series of tests, including advanced swimming, life ring throwing, and other such water activities. The new schedule for open periods is as follows: For the girls, Monday, 3-4; Wednesday, 4-5; Friday, 4-5; and Saturday, 2-3. For the boys: Monday, 4-5; Tuesday, 4-5; Thursday, 4-5; and Saturday, 3-4.

Reporter Discovers Maryvillia Studentsia

By CHARLOTTE COLBY

The old bus continues to rumble on, and our chances of borrowing the typewriter seeming to grow slimmer with the flying minutes, we come to the conclusion that we simply must be amused. Or, at any rate, prevented from wasting our most precious time. Searching about for the wherewithal to accomplish this purpose, a solitary copy of the Echo catches our eye and, lacking worthier pastime, we begin to read.

Let's see——what is the date on this issue? What? No! surely our eyes deceive us. Not January 14, 1929. Ten years ago! This explains lots of things, but what about the news? Is history repeating itself?

Furtive glance toward the door and bus driver. No creak out of the door. Typist's nose still buried in typewriter. So, hot on the trail of a monstrous idea, we steal cautiously to the closet files and begin to delve into the ancient history of Maryville college. Our education in the field of archaeology having been sadly neglected, our progress is slow, but we finally manage to unearth a few prehistoric relics. Bringing them back to the light of civilization, we excitedly begin to translate hieroglyphics and to learn something of the customs and habits of the aborigines.

Very little is known about these prehistoric men known as maryvillia collegi studentsia 'twenty eightus. It seems that they thrived best in a wet climate and made their homes in tall, cliff-like dwellings. There were different types and styles of archecture in these cliff dwellings, namely, the baldwin, the carnegie, the memorial, the bartlett, and the pearsons types. It appears that the latter name was especially applied to those dwellings or rooms used for eating, which resembled our dining rooms of the present day in several points.

The ancient man was strong and handsome, and usually wore a sort of a tunic known as a slicker, and a queer ornament known as a bowtie. The female of the species was very beautiful, usually blond, and very ferocious, always adorning her hair with something known as a bobbedpermanent. She wore an extremely short skirt and a dainty sort of shoe known as a high-heel.

The favorite food of these people was a fruit known as chewingum, which they considered quite a delicacy. They were quite warlike, and their military strategy was similar in appearance to one of our football games, although naturally not so well organized. They made history with their momentous victory over a tribe, the Lenoir-Rhynians, who had for years been their enemies.

But they were not always fighting. They had many sports and games. The one we find oftenest mentioned is one whose nature we have been unable to ascertain. It was called moonshining and is probably still popular in some form with their descendants. Their athletics are rather vaguely described also, but we find that they went by the names of snap, wink, and postoffice, the latter probably being an ancient form of badminton. Another was a form of dog fighting called student activities. They had a huge arena, called Thepalace, where they gathered on holidays to watch an ancient form of cinema known as silentmovies.

Government of this period was just and fair with its citizens and rewarded all followers with prizes known as ayes; for those who were out of sympathy with the ruler, there was a painful type of execution known as the eff.

The culture of this period was not too well developed, but its civilization has left a few gems to posterity in the field of the arts. For instance, they were the originators of the dramatic form known as the midwinter, much in vogue even in the theater of the present day. Their most noteworthy literary contribution was an ancient religious document known as the Chilhowean, much like the Catholic vulgate and revered by them as we revere our Bible.

Some of the leading philosophers and humorists of the age were called Griffitts, Howell, Hunter, Ellis, and West; but the only real genius who came out of the period was the great conqueror and militarist, Honaker, whose memory we still honor and revere.

Our findings revealed, our conclusions drawn, our thesis written, we lean back and picture in imagination that Golden Age when men were men and college was strictly an institution of higher learning.

Preston Will Address Theta

Dr. Newell T. Preston will address the members of Theta Epsilon at their regular meeting tonight at 6:45. He will give his impression of the Maurice Evan's production of "Hamlet" which he witnessed in New York this Christmas. Music and a short business session will conclude the meeting.

ALSTON SPEAKS TO CLUB

Bill Alston, senior and assistant in the biology department, gave a survey of the animals of North America at the regular meeting of the Nature club last Thursday evening in the Chemistry lecture room. This was the first meeting of the club since the holidays.

Next May 18 has been designated as "Peace Day" for the promotion of international good will at the 1939 California World's Fair.

Helen Hull Jacobs will be one of many famous speakers under auspices of the California Writers' Club during the 1939 Golden Gate International Exposition.

Fleming-Dill Announce Engagement Christmas

The engagement of Mr. Samuel Fleming and Miss Annie Lou Dill was announced Christmas day. Miss Dill graduated from Maryville college in 1937 and is now teaching in high school in her home in Waycross, Georgia. Mr. Fleming, class of '38, is pursuing his studies in the Louisville Presbyterian seminary, in Louisville, Kentucky.

Twopresent students announced their engagements during the Christmas vacation: Everett Gray and Edward Lodwick.

Orr, Wintermute Entertain

Bainonian and Athenian will exchange programs for their Saturday meetings. Bainonian will meet at Bainonian hall Saturday at 6:45. The program, presented by Athenian, will be principally musical. Stanley Bird and Dave Kidder will present a piano duet; and Charles Orr will sing several numbers. John Wintermute will offer dramatic readings between the selections. The critic's report will be given by Clifford Proctor.

Club Decorates For Dinner

Wednesday evening, preceding the concert of Jussi Bjoerling, there was a formal dinner in the dining hall. The Florida-Georgia club decorted in blue and white. Erwin Ritzman, chairman of the social committee, presented the prizes to the five tables which were best decorated at the Christmas dinner.

Dr. Joseph W. New Parking Space Almost Completed

Work on campus improvement projects continued steadily during the holidays with the result that many have been completed and several new pieces of work started. The latest project, a large new parking space behind Fayerweather Science hall, will be finished within a few days. The space is cinder covered, enclosed with iron railing, and will accomodate some thirty-five cars. It has been built to satisfy a need for additional permanent parking space on the campus.

Besides putting a new ceiling in Professor Howell's class room, the workers have redecorated the walls and sanded and varnished the floors of the typing room in Anderson hall during Christmas. The gymnasium floor was varnished and restriped and the first floor hall of Carnegie was also varnished. A project just recently begun is completion of work on the asphalt walk at the north of Thaw hall.

Construction of the new power house is progressing rapidly. Work on the bases for the boilers was begun last Monday. The brick walls of the building have been completed, and erection of the roof started on Wednesday. On that day the halfway mark on the new chimney was reached. The chimney will be 150 feet high.

Present plans call for the extension of College street across the corduroy to the gates, joining the road already there. Some work has already been done on the fill near the railroad tracks but the completion of this part of the work will probably occupy a protracted period.

Progress Made On Construction Work Of Heating Plant

Chimney Reaches 100 Feet As Brick Structure Nears Finish

Construction of the new Maryville college heating plant is making steady progress, the roof and guttering having been finished and the storm sewer completed through to Court Street on Thursday. The building itself, a brick structure approximately 45 feet high with floor dimensions of 48 feet by 52 feet, is now almost completed.

Two boilers are at present being assembled within the building, and when completed will be sufficient to provide heat not only for the present buildings on the campus but will allow for considerable building expansion. Steam will be conducted up the hill at the pressure of 150 pounds per square inch, and will pass through reducing valves into the various buildings. The new plant, lower than any of the buildings, will therefore allow for the return of condensation by gravity. The boilers will be fed by stokers which will create a minimum of smoke. Between the boilers and the railroad will be coal bins into which coal will be unloaded directly from the cars.

Of special public interest has been the construction of the chimney, which rests upon a deep concrete foundation and will be 150 feet in height when completed. The chimney is being built by specialists in this work, who are using a special form of tiled brick. Construction is done from the inside, and as this item is published the chimney has passed the 100 foot mark. Two sets of the letters "M.C." are to be placed in white tile near the top of the chimney.

It will be some weeks before the new plant and connecting system are ready to be put into service. In due time the old plant which has served so long will be taken down. It is expected that the total cost of the new heating plant will be approximately $40,000, of which about two-thirds has been provided by special gifts within the past year.

Barber and McMurray and their consulting engineers are the architects in charge of the project. The construction is being done by four contractors in the special fields involved and by members of the staff and student body of the college.

The large frame building next to the heating plant and connected with it was built some years ago by Mr. C. A. Sullinger, and is now being remodeled as a workshop and garage for the college.

Triangle Club Elects Jensen President In First Meeting Of '39

Triangle club members selected Marie Jensen of New Jersey president and Roland Anderson vice president in the election of officers held Tuesday evening in the philosophy classroom. Elsie Klingman and Philip Evaul were chosen treasurer and secretary respectively.

The question of sponsoring a card system cheering section for basketball games was discussed, but no further action will be taken until next meeting.

Entertainment for the evening was provided by students who gave impersonations of school and screen notables. Those appearing on the program were: Alf Davies, Allan Moore, David Hall, John Thompson, Eleanor Long, Sara Bolton, Georgia Ingle, and Kitty Bennett. In addition to the impersonations, Charles Orr rendered a vocal solo.

Mr. Oliver Speaks To Members Of Law Club

Mr. Wayne Oliver, local attorney, spoke to members of the Law club last Wednesday evening in Athenian hall, on "Law as a Chosen Vocation."

Mr. Oliver, a recent graduate of the law school of the University of Tennessee, explained some of the complexities that arise in the course of Law study, and told of some of the other problems that face every young lawyer today.

A report of the finances of the club was submitted by the treasurer, and the president appointed George Webster to take charge of the pin committee. The date for the next mock trial was set for February 15.

Literary Societies Will Meet Jointly

Athenians And Alpha Sigs To Hold Program With Sister Societies

"Information Please," a quiz program will be presented Saturday evening at 6:45 in Bartlett auditorium at the first joint meeting of Athenian and Bainonian this year.

"Information Please" is patterned from a popular radio feature and will be directed by Warren Ashby, who will present several selected questions to a "board of experts" consisting of four faculty members representing different fields of knowledge.

The questions to be asked have been selected from those turned in by the members of the two societies. Several musical selections will be presented by student artists.

A joint meeting of Alpha Sigma and Theta Epsilon societies will be held in the form of an informal tea at 6:45 this evening in the Fine Arts studio. Featured on the program will be violin music by Miss Dorothy Horne, a piano solo by Miss Ruth Thompson, selections by the Chilhowee trio, and saxaphone numbers by Robert Paul and Oliver Williams.

French Club Elects Sara Taylor President At Wednesday Meeting

Sara Taylor was elected president of the French club at its regular meeting last Wednesday night in Alpha Sigma hall. The other officers named were David Kidder, vice president; Mary Dean Allen, secretary; Ruth Moore, treasurer; Ruth Curtis and Irma Sue Pate, program committee; and Stanley Bird, critic.

A discussion on Paris as the center of fashion included the history of dress through the ages by Arlene Barrett, French dress from the time of Louis XIV by Aline Campbell and Frances Stewart, and modern dress by Etta Culbertson. It seems that the new spring styles will feature shorter skirts, a ruffled petticoat extending about five inches below it, huge bows over the ears to match, hair even higher than it is today, and hats worn with wimples.

Helen Bewley To Read At YWCA Meeting Sun.

Helen Bewley will read selected parts of "The Prophet" at the regular meeting of the YWCA tomorrow afternoon.

Special music, including a violin solo by Mary Gillespie and a soprano solo by Louise Allen, will precede the reading.

YM Meeting To Hear Miss Grace Proffitt Speak

Grace Proffitt, graduate of Maryville college and New York university, will speak at the YMCA worship program Sunday afternoon, Jan. 22, at 5 p.m., in the Bartlett hall auditorium. Her topic will be "What It Means to Grow Up."

After receiving the M.R.E. degree from New York, Miss Proffitt had charge of young people's work in one of the Presbyterian churches of Philadelphia. At the present time she has a similar position with the New Providence church of Maryville.

New Registration Schedule Started

Seniors Complete Tentative Schedules As Others Wait Turn

With senior registration being completed this morning, the juniors and sophomores will continue next week the new type registering schedule which will be completed the week of January 30—February 3 by the freshmen.

Credit and tentative schedule cards were given the members of the second and third year classes this morning in chapel. Under the present system the tentative schedules are made by the student, taken to the Personnel office for approval, registration cards are filled out and, after approval, are taken to the Treasurer's office for the assessment of bills. For juniors and sophomores procedure through the Personnel office must be completed by Jan. 28 and through the Treasurer's office by Feb. 3. Fines of $5.00 and $2.50 will be charged for late registration and late payment of bills.

Jan. 30 to Feb. 3 will be the freshman registration week. First, class members are to call at the Personnel office for their tentative and regular registration cards. Any changes from first semester schedules will be made during this week. Opportunity will be given the sophomores and upperclassmen for course changes early in the next semester.

Students See Life At Micro-Vivarium

Microscopic Animals Shown On Screen By Special Equipment

Last night forty members of the Maryville faculty and student body had the opportunity of observing microscopic organisms in a way which is usually accessible only to the research students and professors of the best equipped laboratories in the world. They went by bus to the Uuniversity of Tennessee Alumni Memorial gym, where they were enabled, in the microvivarium, to watch the antics of endless varieties of algae, bacteria, amoebae, rotifers, larvae of insects, hydra, paramecia, and other queer organisms found in drops of water, and to study their habits and life cycles.

The microvivarium is the invention of Dr. George Roemmert, formerly of Munich. In collaboration with Zeiss of Jena, he has been working for fifteen years on an optical apparatus which would succeed in projecting microorganisms on a screen for teaching purposes, where other inventions of this type had failed.

In the microvivarium, the microscope is mounted with the tube vertical and the speciments are projected as they lie horizontally on the stage of the microscope. Mirrors or prisms reflect the image so that it appears vertically on the screen. The beam of light used in projecting the images first passes through a series of cooling liquids in transparent condensers so that killing heat rays are filtered out.

If a bit of African jungle with all its forms of plant and animal life were transplanted bodily to one of our cities for exhibition it would last about one season. So it is with the micro-organic zoo. Dr. Roemmert has to feed and care for his little micro-organisms as though they were so many incubator

Choir Given Robes By Mrs. McMurray

Differ In Style And Color From Old Ones In Use Since 1917

Mrs. Kathryn McMurray, manager of the College Maid shop, has made a gift to the college of a complete set of new robes for the Vesper choir, it was announced today. The new vestments, of ivory and blue, will replace the present outfits which have been in continual use since 1917. Measurements are being taken this week, and it is hoped that the choir will be able to make its first appearance in the new gowns within the month.

The new robes differ from the ones now in use in style as well as color. The women will wear ivory broadcloth cottas over medium blue robes; the men blue and ivory robes without cottas. The emblem of a double cross will be embroidered on each, and will in general be similar to those worn by the "Messiah" soloists at Christmas.

The present black and white gowns were the gift of Dr. William P. Stevenson. Originally plain academic robes with white collars, they served in that form for twelve years, when they were remodeled and fitted with cottas.

Lima Conference Is Forum Topic

Meets For First Time Under Name Of Internat'l Relations Club

The conference of American republics at Lima, Peru, was discussed at the first meeting of the Peace Forum under its new name, the International Relations club, Friday evening in Thaw hall auditorium.

Albert Rosser gave a short history of the conference and its background at the beginning of the meeting. Afterward the audience was divided into groups for discussion. Harold Copeland led one group in a discussion of the attitude of European countries toward the conference. William B. Felknor led a second group in discussing the role of the United States and Robert Lucero led a third in considering the part taken by the South American countries in the conference.

The change in the name of the Peace Forum to the International Relations club is the result of the Forum's becoming connected with the Carnegie Foundation of International peace. This

Maryville Debaters Enter First Tourney Of Season Saturday

Maryville debaters will attend their first tournament of the season at Carson-Newman Saturday, Jan. 28. At the annual Smoky Mountain debate tournament for men, Maryville will be represented by Tommy Woolf, Bruce Morgan, Clifford Proctor, Otto Pflanze, and Arnold Kramer. Besides debating, Woolf and Pflanze will compete in oratory, and Proctor in after-dinner speaking.

The subject for debate is the national Pi Kappa Delta topic: Resolved, that the U. S. should cease the use of public funds (including credits) for stimulating business.

The next tournament to be attended by Maryvillians will be the following week at Boone, N. C.

Students Propose Plan For Purchase Of Chapel Organ Before Graduation In May

Part Of Deposit Fee Would Be Donated To Meet Deficit In Fund

800 DOLLARS NEEDED

Baird Initiates Drive For Voluntary Contributions From Students

At a class meeting held after chapel this morning the junior class approved a plan whereby an organ could be purchased and installed in Voorhees chapel by the middle of April. In so doing they followed the lead of the seniors, who approved the plan unanimously in a class meeting yesterday morning. It will be presented to all the classes individually and then approved by the students in a meeting of the whole school within a few days.

The proposed plan was formulated by student leaders on the hill at the prompting of Weldon A. Baird, president of the YMCA. It is a proposal to make up part of the deficit in the organ fund of over a thousand dollars by student contributions from the ten dollar advance deposit fee which each student has already paid at the beginning of the school year. Baird stated that the contributions could range from one dollar to two dollars. The college has been assured by the manufacturers of the proposed organ that if eight hundred dollars more can be raised for the fund, the organ will be installed and ready for use by the middle of April.

The establishment of an organ fund was made in 1938 with Mrs. Ralph W. Lloyd heading the committee to conduce the drive. A three thousand dollar organ was designed by the Wicks Organ company to fit the acoustical demands of the chapel, and the drive was conducted by placing boxes in the dormitories and by soliciting faculty members and friends of the college. In this way over two thousand dollars was raised.

According to the plans submitted last year, the organ would be of the two manual pedal variety. The pipes would be installed in what is now the choir-loft, but would be concealed by a grille of appropriate design. The console of the organ would be on the seating level of the chapel.

The commimttee is making a special effort to push the proposal as the contract must be signed by Feb. 1 if the organ is to be installed before commencement.

College Survey To Determine Needs

Questionnaire Data to Show Unbiased Picture Of Maryville Work

Mr. Harvey MacCauley, of Columbus, Ohio, is on the campus conducting an informational survey relating to the work and program of Maryville college, which lasts throughout the month of January. Representing the Presbyterian Board of Christian education, Mr. MacCauley is connected with the firm of Marts and Lundy who are directing the Presbyterian Sesquicentennial campaign for Christian education. This campaign, in process during the years of 1938, 1939, and 1940, has as its purpose the securing of funds to be used by the Board of Christian education, Presbyterian colleges, and the Westminster Foundations at work on university campuses.

Information and recommendations of this survey, which is conducted at the invitation of the college, and is similar to those already made at other institutions, will be submitted after the survey is completed. Various officers of the institution are cooperating with Mr. MacCauley in collecting the information needed. The expense of the survey is borne by the college. Although purposes of this examination are to secure a comprehensive, expert, and unbiased picture of the life, work, and financial needs of the institution, and the possibilities of securing additional funds at some future date, the directors and president have not yet decided as to whether the college will make special appeals for funds at present.

Dr. Stevenson To Speak On Savings

Special music will be featured at the regular Vesper service tomorrow evening. A women's trio, composed of Bernice Cathcart, Ruth Wood and Mary Russ, will sing Victor Harris' arrangement of "Deep River." As a piano solo, Bernice Smith will play the "Adagio" movement from Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata." John Guinter will play a violin solo, "Air for G String" by Bach-Wilhelny. He will be accompanied by Louise Marshall.

The theme of Dr. W. P. Stevenson's talk will be "Savings: safe, sufficient, and satisfactory."

The choir is planning a trip to Knoxville on Sunday, Jan. 29, to be the guests on a radio program over WNOX at 4:15.

Chattanooga Pastor To Speak In Chapel

Rev. Thomas B. Cowan of Chattanooga will speak at the chapel exercises on Wednesday morning. Formerly of Scotland, Mr. Cowan came to America shortly before entering Maryville college, where he took part of his college course, finishing at Yale university and Yale Divinity school. He has been active in church and civic matters in Chattanooga and Tennessee, and was the vesper speaker at one of the Young People's conferences held on the campus last summer.

Administrator Williams, Graduate Of Maryville, Gives Figures On NYA

Administrator Aubrey Williams, Maryville alumnus, announced today that 312,893 students were employed in the NYA Student Aid Program for October, an increase of 68,000 over the figure for the corresponding period in the preceding year.

The increase in Student Aid enrollment for the current academic year 1938-39, said Mr. Williams, is due to the enlarged fund quotas allocated to schools and colleges and to the familiarity with procedure which enabled the educational institutions to complete their arrangements earlier for participation in the Studen Aid program.

The total Student Aid enrollment in October, 1937, was 244,648. Of this number, 155,792 students were receiving high school aid and 88,855 were receiving college and graduate aid. In October of this year, of the total NYA enrollment of 312,893, high school students numbered 212,473 and college and graduate students numbered 100,420.

The enrollment is almost equally divided between the sexes, with 160,312 males and 152,581 females receiving Student Aid. The number of schools participating in the program in October was 22,395. Of this number, 20,824 were high schools and secondary educational institutions, and 1,571 were colleges and universities.

In the state of Tennessee 556 schools are participating in the NYA program, with a total number of 7,807 students being helped.

Maryville—1889 Pictured By Prof. Ellis

J. EDWARD THOMAS

Of those now connected with Maryville college, there are few who have seen it grow from a small institution struggling for its existence, to the institution that it is today. One of those few is Professor Horace Ellis, the college librarian. In 1869, three years before Mr. Ellis was born, his father furnished part of the material that went into the building of Anderson hall.

Professor Ellis began his association with the college in 1889, when he entered the preparatory department. At that time, the only buildings on the campus were Anderson hall, without the annex, and the older parts of Memorial and Baldwin.

In those days there were no jokes or grumblings about dining-hall food, because the students did their own cooking. The men cooked their meals in the basement of Memorial hall, and the girls cooked in the basement of Baldwin.

The heating system, as described by Mr. Ellis, would not conform to modern engineering requirements, but it was effective nevertheless. There was a wood stove in each class room. A huge pile of firewood stood on the present site of the campus fountain, and the men of the various classes carried the wood and made the fires.

In the old days the campus approached a "moonshiner's" paradise, since powerful electric lights were not extant, and, besides, the land surrounding the few buildings was a veritable cedar forest.

Mr. Ellis was a classmate of J. W. Ritchie, writer of the college song, and he remembers the composition of the first yell, as well as the selection of the college colors. These developments followed the organization of the first football team, which was trained by Kin Takahashi, a Japanese student. There was no coach; so, Takahashi gathered the team in his room and demonstrated his plays by maneuvering grains of corn on a miniature gridiron drawn on the top of his table.

As librarian since 1924, when the preparatory department of which he was principal for many years, was discontinued. Professor Ellis is stil lserving the college that, as he says, he "has seen grow from what it was not to what it is today."

An Opportunity

For the first time in the recent history of Maryville activities the students are being offered an opportunity whereby they may make possible a very necessary, practical and cultural addition to the equipment of the college. The opportunity is unusual in many respects—in its magnitude, its assurance of benefit, and its comparative simplicity. For some time the need of a pipe organ in Voorhees chapel has been salient. During the past two years a fund, collected from scattered voluntary contributions has been accumulating, but because of the size of the necessary amount, and because there has been a desire that no one should feel forced in contributing, the fund is still more than a thousand dollars short of its goal.

Realizing the fact that such a great proportion of the requisite amount has been collected, but that nevertheless another commencement must probably come and go before the installation or an organ, a student leader has come forward with a sensible, practical scheme for the immediate consummation of the drive. It is now in a formative stage, but if it is to be carried out, it must be rapidly executed. The idea has been examined and approved by the college authorities, but remains entirely a student project.

Fundamentally the idea is this. Each student would be allowed, if and only if he so desired, to give some stated contribution to the fund, which, instead of coming straight out of the individual's pocket, would be deducted from the regular ten dollar deposit which every student has with the treasurer's office. Voluntary giving and a wide choice of the size of the gifts would be the rule.

At this point the proposal is being submitted successively to the four classes of the college for explanation and consideration. The senior and junior classes unanimously expressed their interest and approval. Such sentiment is very encouraging but it must be followed by tangible results within the next two weeks. If an addition of approximately eight hundred dollars to the fund can be made by Feb. 1, the instrument, a two manual and pedal pipe organ, designed for the chapel's acoustical make-up, can installed by the middle of April.

It must be understood that this is a long-range altruistic undertaking of the student body itself. Considered from this viewpoint it is almost a unique opportunity for student service to our alma mater.

—O—

If—

At the close of each semester, just about this time, a large proportion of us students find it necessary to plunge ourselves into a period of concentrated work: term papers are to be finished, reading reports are to be prepared, final examinations are to be studied for. For many students, the last few weeks of the semester are ones of strain and anxiety, of tiring work continued long into the night and morning hours.

This end-of-the-semester rush could be almost eliminated, of course, if we had the foresight and the ambition to do our work during the semester, instead of waiting until the close of the term. It seems that the advice of the faculty in this respect is practically useless: unless work is actually required to be handed in early, it will not be done early. We students know that our procrastination is going to lead us into a pile-up of work at the semester's close, but we continue to put off, regardless.

If the inevitable consequences of our procrastinating here at college are unpleasant enough to cause a reformation in our habits before we begin our post-college life, perhaps the experience we are going through now may have some value.

Self-Analysis Test

(Note: Grade yourself with a minimum of cheating—certainly no more than is necessary to the maintenance of your self-respect. Turn to page 5 for correct answers. A grade of below or above 50 indicates that you have wasted your time in taking this test; so does a grade of 50.)

1—When you are angry, do you (a) go around giving away dollar bills; (b) write love poetry; (c) feel like punching somebody in the nose?

2—When it gets cold during the night, do you (a) yell to your roommate to close the window; (b) pull a blanket off your roommate's bed; (c) tuck your knees under your chin?

3—When you fail a test, do you (a) suspect the teacher of malfeasance and misfeasance; (b) accuse the textbook's author of gross distortion and misrepresentation of facts; (c) regard as anti-social conduct the studiousness of class average raisers?

4—When it is announced that a teacher will not meet his classes on a certain day, do you (a) sulk; (b) faint; (c) write a letter of complaint to the president?

5—If you had your choice, which of these would you take: (a) a million dollars on your seventieth birthday; (b) a hundred dollars five years from now; (c) a quarter to go to Monday's movie?

6—Do you get out of the (a) right side, (b) left side, (c) end of your bed in the morning?

7—Do you read the Echo because (a) you can't find the Journal, (b) you like to find mistakes; (c) you feel it your duty to keep posted on all that is new and best in the world of knowledge and literature?

8—When a heavy thunderstorm wakens you during the night, do you (a) crawl under the bed; (b) promise that you'll go to both church and vespers next Sunday; (c) remember that you haven't paid your Fred Hope pledge?

9—When a person in whom you are very much interested turns down ten consecutive dates with you, and accepts ten consecutive dates with another person, do you (a) begin to have a slight inkling that perhaps all is not as it should be, between you and her; (b) chuckle tolerantly at her fine sense of humor; (c) ask for the eleventh?

UP OUR HALL

By GEORGE L. HUNT

Our library has a copy of Graham's Magazine, which was an outstanding mid-nineteenth century periodical in Philadelphia. One of the volumes in the library was published under the editorship of Edgar Allen Poe, and it contains much of that literary light's works in what was probably their first publication. "Israfel" is in this volume as are poems by Longfellow and Lowell. There is a satire by Poe directed against his critics who claimed that his tales had no moral in them, and one of the features of the issue is a column of cryptograms deciphered by the editor from contributions of the magazine's readers. In the light of the incident in Poe's "Gold Bug" this is particularly significant.

It's a crazy idea, but what if one night's radio program could be "canned" and put in the Time Capsule at the World's Fair. Those people who dig up the thing two thousand years from now would find remarkable contrasts if they chose last Wednesday night's program to preserve. At 5:15 p.m. there was a broadcast from Fez, Morocco, transmitting the music of the band of the French Foreign Legion. They played, among other things, "The Star-Spangled Banner" and the "Marseillaise." This was only the second time a broadcast had ever originated in Fez. Then at 6:30 p.m. some blues singer announced triumphantly that she had found her yellow basket. In the preserved version they could have the singer inform the WPAers who dig up the Capsule while excavating for a subway that they have found a metal capsule which somebody dropped. (Not so, hot, Hunt!) Lin. op.

THE POWER OF WORDS

The Chinese language, so I've read,
Has not a single curse word;
But we have one, too often said,
That couldn't be a worse word.
If you've a foe you want to crush
With one word, here's a beaut;
For men of might will quail and blush
If you just call them "cute".
The Chinks could gain a hasty truce
By not remaining mute;
For militytants love abuse,
But not that cursed "cute."
Why Hitler might break down and shout,
"Ach, go ahead and shoot;
Or take my heart and cut it out,
But please don't call me 'cute'!"
Or Mussolini might admit,
"I'm fiendish; I'm a brute.
Your other gibes and insults fit,
But I can't bear that 'cute'."
So take these lines and team 'em up.
I wouldn't give a hoot;
But spare me, please, that bitter cup:
Don't call this poem "cute".

—Don Kent.

The above poem is a good introduction to an invitation to you to contribute some of your own literary efforts that you think might be publishable. We have often discussed the matter of having a contributor's column in the Echo; so for a time at least this column will be your medium of expression. Anything you contribute will be welcome, and if it meets with our approval we will be pleased to publish it.

We hope to make a regular feature of publishing the program of the Ford Sunday Evening Hour in this column every week because we know many of your are interested in it. This week Miss Helen Jepson, who appeared on our artist series four years ago, is guest soloist and Wilfred Pelletier, Canadian-born conductor of French opera at the Metropolitan, will conduct the orchestra. The program for Sunday, Jan. 22, follows:

von Weber Overture to "Oberon" orchestra
Charpentier Depuis le jour from "Louise" Miss Jepson and orchestra
Mascagni William Ratcliff's Dream from "William Ratcliff" orchestra
Massenet Gavotte from "Manon" Miss Jepson, chorus, and orchestra
Glazounow La Fricassee from "Ruses d'Amour" orchestra
Scottish air Flow Gently, Sweet Afton Miss Jepson and orchestra
Cottenet Red, Red Rose
Nevin Wynken, Blynken, and Nod Miss Jepson, chorus, and orchestra

Collegiate Digest Announces Contest

To give recognition to the outstanding photographs taken by college and university amateur photographers, Collegiate Digest, syndicated rotogravure section carried by most of the undergraduate publications in the United States, will again this year publish an annual Salon Edition, editors of the publication announced today. All students and faculty members of Maryville college are invited to enter their photographs in the annual competition, a special communication to The Echo states.

Besides giving recognition to individual photographers, the special Salon Edition of Collegiate Digest will show the high quality of the work being turned out by the nation's most active group of amateur photographers, and will show the great progress made by that group since the publication of the first Salon Edition last year.

For this special edition, Collegiate Digest editors will select two or three prints in each of the divisions listed below, the number selected depending upon the space needed for the presentation of the winning photos in each division. To the first photos in each division, Collegiate Digest will present a special cash award of $5. The second and third place winners, $3 and $2 will be awarded.

The following are the rules for this special Salon Edition:

1. All material must be sent in not later than March 1, 1939. Address packages to Salon Editor, Collegiate Digest, 323 Fawkes Building, Minneapolis, Minn.

2. Send technical data about photo submitted, and give the college year or the faculty standing of the photographer. Information about the subject of the photo will be helpful.

3. The following divisions have been set for the contest: (a) Still life; (b) scenes; (c) action and candid photos; (d) portraits. A special division to be called "College Life" has been added this year to give recognition to those photographers who take a special interest in recording the life and activities of students and faculty members.

4. There is no entry fee. Photos will be returned if postage accompanies entries.

For this reason, the microvivarium is much like a three-ring circus. It is not a moving picture nor a stereopticon, but is more real than either. It was demonstrated to enthusiastic crowds at the Chicago World's Fair and a permanent microvivarium is being built as a feature of the New York World's fair.

Why Go To College?

Even university students have questionnaires to fill out. When 464 freshmen at the University of Vermont were asked to set down the reasons for their choice of their school both men and women stated that the courses of study offered, more than anything else, decided the question for them. Fraternities and sports fared badly and scholastic standing scored heavily with the class of 1942.

SCOTTY SIDE SLANTS

By the
Sports Editor

THREE TOUGH ONES—

Next wek the Highlander's quintet will play three tough games, all on foreign courts. The first game will be played on Monday with Emory and Henry. On Wednesday night they will split a few rails with the Railsplitters of Lincoln Memorial, and on Friday night they journey to the Eagle's nest, and there they will hold a battle royal with Carson-Newman, who is our very ancient and honorable rival.

The games with Carson-Newman and L.M.U. will go a long way in determining just how strong Maryville is in the Conference this year. Carson-Newman just managed to squeeze out a 3-point victory over King college Thursday night, and L.M.U. has one of the teams to beat this year. Hope you gentlemen of the hardwood have a nice week.

LET'S QUIT BOOING!—

It casts a disagreeable shadow over any basketball game when the crowd reaches the stage where they think they know more about the game than the referee. Last night's game, and several games before this one have been marked by booing by the audience, resulting in several justifiable technical fouls called by the referee. Luck has been with us, because the games here haven't been close enough for one or two points to be the winning points. But, if it should ever get close in the last few minutes of play and if a foul called on the crowd should be the deciding factor of the game, then it would be too late.

Last night, two technicals were called because of booing. In the game with Tusculum, two more were called on the crowd because of booing of a fair decision. What kind of sports are we? After all, the referee is in much better position to see the play than the "griper" on the top row of seats. The referee is correct in his decisions 99 per cent of the time. Booing won't help matters, because he would never change the decision—and the team as a whole has requested that you please refrain from such unsportsmanlike behavior.

SAVE FOR NEXT FALL

The 1939 football schedule has been completed, and reveals that the Scotties will play six Smoky Mountain Conference foes, and three outside teams next fall. The schedule:

Sept. 10—Tusculum, there
Sept. 23—Union College, here
Oct. 7—Milligan, here
Oct. 14—Wesleyan, here
Oct. 21—Hiwassee, there
Oct. 28—Carson-Newman, here
Nov. 4—King, there
Nov. 11—East. Tenn. Teachers, there
Nov. 18—Cumberland, here

On the right—Boydson Baird, sophomore forward from Kilbourne, Ohio, who has led the Highlanders' offense in the last two Conference games.

On the left—Scot Honaker, another sophomore from Maryville, who is one of the smallest, but fastest offensive guards in the loop.

Both of these boys are around 5 feet, 8 inches tall, and have been leading scorers in games played up to date. Boydson's flashy play and Scot's ball handling are features of every game.

Scot Quintet Pushes Win Streak To Seven As King Falls 44-37

Highlanders Look Impressive In Second Conference Win: Boydson Baird Leads Offense That Clicks

The Maryville Scotties pushed their win streak to seven straight last night, when they outfought a taller team from King college and set them rocking on their heels with a 44-37 victory. This was also the second Smoky Mountains conference victory for the Highlanders.

Boydson Baird was again the high scorer for Maryville, sinking 10 points, with Russell and Honaker scoring eight apiece for second honors for the Scots. Messerole of King, however, was high scorer for the evening, making 15 points. Roberts, their six foot four center, swished 12 points for the Tornado.

Maryville started off when Weldon Baird sank the first basket with a crip shot after receiving a pass from Dale Russell. Scot Honaker then dribbled the length of the floor for the second basket. Two Bairds, Weldon and Boydson, combined to form a passing duo down the floor with Boydson finally sinking the shot for the third tally. Maryville scored twice more before King could get started.

The Tornado then blew into action with three quick baskets, featuring Roberts, who would jump into the air, whirl, and push in two points. A couple of long shots by Messerole also helped the score for King.

Maryville took the lead from the start and stayed in the clear all the game, although in the last half, with Roberts and Messerole pushing in shots from all angles, things did look tough for a few minutes for the Highlanders. The Honakermen made eleven field goals in the first half, and missed 22 shots. They also made two out of seven fouls. In the second half, they sank seven baskets, and again managed to miss 22 shots. They had their eye for fouls in the second half, however, making six out of seven of the charity tosses.

Lineups:

Maryville		King

Cagers Win Over Tusculum 48-23

With Boydson Baird, the younger of the three Baird brothers, leading a second half scoring spree, the Maryville college basketeers won their first conference victory by pinning down the Tusculum Pioneers, 48-23, in the Alumni gym Tuesday night.

The game started slow, with both teams missing easy shots under the basket, but with the Scotties holding a slight lead at half-time. The second half started with Boydson Baird coming out and making three field goals before the rattled Pioneers could get their hands on the ball long enough to score. From this point on the Highlanders couldn't be stopped, and soon piled up too big a lead for Tusculum to get near to.

Scotty Honaker swished 10 points through the hoop to tie with Eaves of Tusculum, for second scoring honors.

The Three Bairds were outstanding, along with little Scot Honaker. These four men, although small, are fast, and along with Dale Russell's or Joe Etheredge's height, form a fast and tough combination for conference foes to be on the lookout for. Although this was the first conference team Maryville has faced, from all indications her 6 game win streak has shown up well enough to justify Coach Honaker's hope for a good showing in the conference race this year.

Lineups:

Maryville, 48		Tusculum, 23

Swimming Season Opens Thursday

The swimming team held its first time-trials Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday of this week. Coach Gillingham announced that the results were very favorable. No places on the team will be assigned until next week, however.

Maryville opens against the Tennessee tankmen on next Thursday, Jan. 26. According to Coach Navotny of U. T.; their swimming team boasts its best talent in years. Tennessee lost only one meet last year, to Florida.

The Maryville-Tusculum meet scheduled for tonight was postponed until March 4 on account of illness in the Tusculum squad.

Meeting the University of Tennessee at Knoxville, Thursday, the Scots come home Saturday against East Ky. Teachers in their first meet here. The Teachers are an unknown quantity this year, but last year Maryville nosed them out.

The Maryville team has been hampered during the time-trials by an epidemic of flu. Dudley Moore was unable to compete at all. Findlay and several others have been out of practice several days.

The complete schedule is as follows:

Tennessee—Jan. 26 away
East. Ky. Teachers—Jan. 28 here
Chattanooga Y—Feb. 3 here
Kentucky—Feb. 17 here
Tusculum—Feb. 18 here

Grunters Lose To N. C. State 30-0

The Maryville wrestling team opened its season last Friday by losing to a strong North Carolina State grappling squad 30-0. No matches were won by the Scotties, by only three were lost on pins, five being lost on decisions.

Results:

Hunter (N.C.) decisioned Evaul; Pate pinned Turner (M) 2:02; Johnson (N. C.) decisioned McDaniels; Reichert pinned Meares (M) 3:42; Hines (N.C.) decisioned Judy, Brandt (N.C.) decisioned Hahn; Johnson (N.C.) decisioned Henschen; Fry (N.C.) pinned Dizney 8:45.

Quintet Wins From Knoxville Y 37-30

In its last practice game before the opening of the Smoky Mountain Conference, the Maryville basketball squad downed the team from the Knoxville YMCA 37 to 30, last Saturday evening at the Alumni gym.

The Scotties took an early lead, and held it throughout the game. Only once did the Knoxville team threaten to take the lead, although the high-scorer of the evening was Moore, their right forward, who accounted for 17 of the Y's points.

Captain Weldon Baird and Joe Etheredge led the Highlanders, each of them tallied 10 points.

Lineups:

Maryville		Knoxville "Y"
Byd. Baird 4	F	Moore 7

GIRLS' SPORTS

The freshman basketball team in the women's point system has won the two games that it has played in the tournament, three games of which have already been played. The first game found the sophomores defeated by a score of 24-18. The second game played Thursday with the junior-senior team was won by 27-19.

The game between the sophomores and the junior-seniors was played with the junior-seniors as victors by 24-18. All of the games have been good ones. There are three more games to be played in the tournament. A game between the junior-seniors and freshmen will be played the evening of Jan. 31. The other two games will be played Tuesday and Thursday of next week.

Bonnie Hayes captains the freshman team with May Persing as manager. Edith Hitch leads the sophomore team and Fontelle Hamilton is manager. The junior-seniors are headed by Barbara McCutcheon with Joy Corrigan as manager.

INTERCLASS SPORTS

Juniors—54; Frosh—34

The juniors squelched a hapless freshman team on Wednesday night, 54-34. The game featured fast scoring and fine individual playing. For the juniors Kramer scored nine field goals for 18 points and his teammate, Rae, came through with 17 points. Steve Callahan took scoring honors for the freshmen, collecting 22 of the 34 points scored. The game was well contested through the first half, the frosh holding the juniors to a scanty 23-22 lead. In the second half, however, with the addition of Stevenson to the junior lineup, they forged hopelessly into the lead.

Sophs—27; Frosh—25

Last Thursday evening the sophomore class basketball team beat the freshmen, 26 to 25, in the overtime period of their game. The sophs led the freshmen 13-8 at the half, but the frosh came back in the second half to tie the game 23-23, only to lose it in the overtime period which was played.

Juniors—20; Seniors—19

The junior classmen scratched out a one point victory over the seniors in an interesting interclass basketball game last Thursday night. The game ended with the score standing 20-19 in favor

Sophs—31; Seniors—28

Nosing out the seniors by a 31-28 score, the sophomores won their second intramural basketball game Wednesday night. The sophs came from behind in the second half to out-fight the seniors in a well-played game. McCaskie, with 14 points to his credit was the top scorer for the evening; Steakley and Van Blarcom played fast ball for the sophs.

Lineups:

Seniors 28		Sophs 31
Napier 4	F	Gastrock 5
Orr	F	Kerr 5
Walker	F	Steakley 9
McCaskie 14	C	Van Blarcom 2
Taylor 7	G	Hulse 4
Judy 2	C	Cragan 6

Seniors—29; Frosh—17

The seniors won easily over the freshman team in their first intramural basketball game, by a score of 29-17. Led by McCaskie, individual high-scorer, they found plenty of talent in the unorganized freshmen. However, among the frosh, Steve Callahan looked good, scoring 9 of the 17 point total.

Lineups:

Freshmen 17		Seniors 29
S. Callahan 9	F	Walker 5
Howard 2	F	Burns
Hunt	F	Taylor 1
J. Callahan 4	C	McCaskie 11
Alexander	G	Napier 7
Coulter	G	Orr 3
Abbot	G	Judy 2

Disc Club To Hear Cavalaria Rusticanna

Selections from the opera "Cavalaria Rusticanna" by Mascagni will be heard at the Disc club meeting next Friday afternoon at 4:30 in the Fine Arts studio. The records of the opera are from the large collection of Mr. McNaughton of Knoxville, who will preface the records with an explanation of the opera and will tell of the artists whom he has heard in performances of this and other operas.

Pietro Mascagni is one of the outstanding representatives of the Italian realistic school of opera. Born in 1863, he was a tireless exponent of the theory that opera should deal with every day subjects and common people, as opposed to the high-flown and romanticized world of fancy of the classical school. "Rustic Chivalry," as its title suggests, was composed in accordance with this theory, and is the work by which he is best known today, although he left behind many other works in various forms.

Fla.-Ga. Club Hears Song, Poetry Program

The regular bi-monthly meeting of the Florida-Georgia club was held on Monday evening in Dr. Briggs' class room in Thaw hall. A letter of congratulations from the Triangle club was read and plans were laid for the election of officers at the next meeting of the club.

A program of music and poetry was presented including several vocal selections by Rit Anderson, a reading by John Wintermute, and songs in Spanish by Julio Flores and Parker Santiago.

The next meeting of the club will be postponed two weeks because of examinations.

Make Good Progress Working On Campus

In spite of the unfavorable weather of the past week, much has been accomplished in the line of campus improvements, according to Mr. E. C. Brown, college engineer.

The roof and gutters on the new power house have been completed, and the smoke stack has been built to the height of 100 feet. The storm sewer has been extended to Court Street. Other work has included the planting of trees on various spots of the campus and the addition of more fill to the corduroy.

Howard Davis Elected Ministerial President

The ministerial association elected officers last Monday at its regular meeting. Howard Davis was elected president and Russell Stevenson and Paul Brown first and second vice presidents respectively. Vaughn Lyons was elected secretary-treasurer and John Thompson, custodian. Because of a special program this week the new officers will not assume their duties until later.

The program Monday night will be held in the Elizabeth Gowdy Baker art gallery at 6:45. Miss Rich will speak on "Appreciation of Art."

Students Enter Infirmary

The cold and rainy weather sent several students to the hospital this week. Jessie E. Johnson and Sam Cornelius who were suffering from colds were in the hospital. Louise Darden, Peggy Hammond and William McGill, who also were in with colds and flu, were released from the hospital in the middle of the week.

Chilhowean Announces Feature Section For Outstanding Students

A feature of the 1939 Chilhowean will be a page of informal snapshots of ten of the outstanding juniors and seniors in Maryville, according to plans made by Otto Pflanze, editor, and George Hunt, feature editor, of the annual. A committee of five students from the two classes will select the ten most representative members of their class on the basis of achievement and personality, and the judgment of the committee will be final. The names of the ten selected will be withheld until the book is released in May.

Charles Sullivan, photography editor, has been taking pictures of various student organizations in order to get the activities section of the yearbook closed as soon as possible. This week pictures were taken of the Nature club, the Confab club, and the German club.

The freshmen section of the yearbook closed on Thursday. This finishes all the class sections.

Carolina Club Holds Election Of Officers

A business meeting of the Carolina club was held Monday night at 6:45 in the philosophy classroom in Thaw hall. Election of officers for the coming semester, the specified purpose of the meeting, resulted in the choice of Helen Ridenhour, president; Virginia Pitts, vice president; Frances Bowditch, secretary; Ned Sams, treasurer; and Harriet Walkup, the retiring president, as sergeant-at-arms.

The constitution was amended to make necessary the election of officers at the last meeting in each semester, instead of the second meeting in the following semester. Retiring officers, in addition to Harriet Walkup, president; are Helen Ridenhour, vice president; Robert Clements, secretary; and Margaret Hamrick, treasurer.

Blanchard From WNOX Talks At Confab Club

Lowell Blanchard, program director and head announcer of WNOX in Knoxville, was guest speaker at the meeting of the Confab club Tuesday evening in the Fine Arts studio.

Vernon Lloyd, program chairman, presided, presenting first the club's official pianist, E. B. Smith, who gave several light piano numbers. He then introduced Mrs. Blanchard to the club before Mr. Blanchard spoke. Mr. Blanchard spoke of his radio experience, giving several interesting incidents of his work in Knoxville. He answered questions and gave advice to all "would-be" radio announcers. Light refreshments were served at the conclusion of the program.

Wintermute Reads And Hovel Sings At Ger. Club

A reading selection by John Wintermute and two songs by Mr. Ralph Hovel, were the features at the German club's meeting Thursday evening. Wintermute read "The Lodge" by Roark Bradford. Mr. Hovel sang "Still wie die Nacht" and "In einem kuehlen Grunde."

There was a business meeting led by the president, Ivan Blake. To close the meeting, Mr. Hovel led the club in singing a group of favorite German songs.

Blood, Right Off The Ice

Collecting and freezing blood of animals is a new "hobby" of the Westminster college chemistry department. Dry ice is the freezing agent. The blood, said to undergo no injurious change with freezing, will be examined at intervals in an effort to detect deterioration.

Wintermute, Bolton Named To Leads In First Midwinter

Pultizer Prize Play Chosen By Bainonian And Athenian Societies

After the tryouts held early this week for the Athenian-Bainonian midwinter production, "You Can't Take It With You," the following cast and technical staff was announced by Mrs. Nita E. West, director: the part of Grandfather Martin Vanderhoff will be taken by John Wintermute, with Sara Bolton as Penelope Sycamore, his daughter; Alice, her daughter will be played by Marion Northrup. The part of Tony Kirby, who plays opposite Alice, will be taken by Frank Brink. Other members of the cast include: Ed Thomas as Mr. Kirby; Carol Ward as Mrs. Kirby; Essie, Charlotte Colby; Ed Carmichael, William Gehres; Paul Sycamore, Charles Fish; Boris Kolenkhov, George Hunt; Reba, Mary Frances Spurlock; Donald, David Hall; Mr. De Pinna, George Tibbetts; Henderson, Robert Wilcox; Olga, Edith Gillette; the Three Government Agents: Bob Fisher, Melvin GcGhee and Percy Martin.

William McGill is production manager for the play with Glenn Young as stage manager and Eleanor Long, assistant stage manager. Business manager is Joy Corrigan with Carl Walton, assistant. Roland Tapp, electrician; Barbara Anderson, properties manager, assisted by Charles Orr and Troy Moore; Ruth West in charge of costumes; Worden Dubois, scenic artist; Sam Cornelius, in charge of sound effects; and Barbara McCutcheon, interior decorator, compose the technical staff.

"You Can't Take It With You" was released for non-professional production on Jan. 16 of this year and will probably be seen here for its first time in amateur performance. It is a three act comedy-farce; the fantastically hilarious story of a happy-go-lucky household presided over by Grandpa Vanderhof, where everyone is a rugged individualist and where you do as you please and no questions asked.

Its one set is the living room of the home somewhere "around the corner from Columbia University." Here, according to the whims of its occupants, everything is done from writing plays and practicing ballet steps to playing a xylophone, running a printing press and collecting snakes.

The play, written by Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman was the Pulitzer prize winner for 1936-37. Tentative date for the performance has been set for Feb. 24.

Dr. Lloyd Speaks To Presbyterian Young People In Knoxville

Last Friday evening Dr. Lloyd went to Knoxville where he addressed a large number of young people at the Fourth Presbyterian church. This meeting was in connection with "Denominational Young Peoples' Week" of the Presbyterian church, U.S.A.

On the same program, the college quartet, composed of Dick Woodring, Rit Anderson, Ed Goddard, and Warren Van Blarcom, sang several numbers among which were "I Love a Lassie," "I Know the Lord," and "I've Been Listening." Ingeborg Jung was also be a guest.

The group hearing Dr. Lloyd were largely members and delegates of the Christian Endeavor societies throughout this section.

Sophomores, Juniors Complete Registration; Frosh Begin Monday

So far for next semester, according to Dr. F. D. McClelland, 103 seniors have registered. With an influx of seniors registering on Monday, February 6, there will be approximately 125 members in the Senior class for the next semester. The majority of juniors and sophomores registered the first three days of this week; and freshman registration begins January 30 and continues through February 4, the date semester bills are to be paid.

First classes of the second semester begin Monday, February 6, and the usual penalty inflicted for cuts taken from classes preceding and following vacation will be in force.

Stephens To Speak To College I. R. C.

U.T. Professor Addresses Group At Maryville February 24

Dr. Ruth Stephens, well known in this section as an authority on international relations, has been secured as a speaker for the International Relations club in February, according to an announcement by the club officials today. Miss Stephens, who has a Ph.D. on this phase of political science, is one of the most popular professors in the University of Tennessee.

Dr. Stephens wrote, "I have received your letter of January 19. I can come to Maryville to an evening meeting on February 24. I suppose that you have the lecture and then a period for questions. That suits me perfectly." Dr. Stephens is much in demand as a speaker, and has proven quite popular in previous lectures before Maryville civic clubs.

The meeting will be open to the public, as is the custom of the International Relations club, formerly known as the Peace Forum.

Art Prints Lent To Baker Gallery

American Federation Sends Van Dycks, Durers To Exhibition

The Carnegie set of prints, circulated by the American Federation of Arts, a national organization for the cultivation of the arts, with headquarters in Washington, D.C., will be exhibited at the Elizabeth Gowdy Baker art gallery February 7-21 from 3-5 every afternoon except Sunday.

These prints, 24 in number, are done in many mediums, namely: etching, aquatint, engraving, lithograph, stipple, woodcut, and mezzotint. Etchings are scratched on metal plates with a sharp instrument, after which acid is allowed to eat a groove in the metal. The etching is then inked and printed. An aquatint is a form of engraving differing from an etching in that the acid is allowed to eat out spaces as well as lines; so that afterwards color can be added to the spaces. Mezzotint is a method of copper plate engraving in which there is produced an even graduation of tones. Stippling is the method of employing dots instead of lines to produce the desired effect. A woodcut is merely making an engraving from wood.

The works of many well-known artists will be included in the exhibition. Two Whistler prints—a lithograph titled "The Smith's Yard" and an etching "Hurlingham"—will be shown. "Juste Suttermans" by Van Dyck; "The Satyr and His Family," a copper engraving by the German, Durer; etchings by Bacher, Appian, Beaufrere, Lelanne, and Strang, will have a prominent part in the exhibition.

This is the first of three exhibits which are scheduled to appear here during the second semester. The others will show American paintings and French peasant costumes, both of which have been arranged for through the American Federation of Arts, to which Maryville college is a member.

Tryouts for the freshman debate squad are scheduled for Feb. 7, in Professor Edmund D. Davis' class room in Anderson hall. Thirty-two freshmen, who have been enrolled in Prof. Queener's speech class, will try out between one and six. There will be four in each debate rather than two, as in varsity tryouts.

Only four men and four women will be selected to represent the college at the freshman debate tournament to be held at Union University at Jackson the last of March. The date is the same for that state tournament for varsity debaters to be held at Union. This is a change from the recent years when the freshman debate tournament has been sponsored by the Maryville squad here.

Dr. E. R. Hunter, Professor John M. Kiger, and Miss Jessie Heron have been selected to judge the debates, which will be on the subject, "Resolved, that the United States and Great Britain should form an alliance."

NOTICES

The bookstore announced today that all books that will not be used next semester may be turned in to the store from Monday to Friday of next week. At the same time old books that will be used next semester may be re-rented without bringing them to the bookstore. This must be done by Friday, Feb. 3. After that date a fine of twenty-five cents will be imposed for books not turned in or not re-rented. New books for next semester will be available from Friday at one o'clock on into the next semester.

Dr. Fred Griffitts Publishes Article

Education For Chemists Is Theme Of Article In Dec. Magazine

Dr. Fred A. Griffitts, professor of Chemistry, defines clearly the proper education for chemists in an article by that name recently published in The Chemist, of Dec., 1938. At the request of Howard Neiman, Secretary of the American Institute of Chemists, Dr. Griffitts wrote the article preparatory to a symposium to be held at the next annual meeting of that organization, of which he is a member. He was selected on the basis of his experience.

In setting forth his opinions on the character and scope of a chemist's education, Dr. Griffitts points out the fallacy of believing in chemistry for the sake of chemistry, adding that there should be in the make-up of a chemist strong moral character and a sense of responsibility to the profession as a whole.

Because of a recent trend toward the general chemistry becoming chiefly physical, Dr. Griffitts includes eight hours of physical chemistry with the usual courses an undergraduate should take. Emphasizing the general chemistry course, he advocates using it each year in connection with other courses. That and a remedy of the lack of use of the chemical library are the chief changes suggested by Dr. Griffitts in the present curriculum.

Maid Shop Announces New Choir Robes To Be Completed In A Month

The measurements for the new choir robes will soon be completed and the cutting and sewing of the garments started. Progress cannot be made until the second shipment of material arrives. The robes are the gift of the Maid Shop to the College, and will be ready in about a month.

This week the Maid Shop is completing two other large choir robe orders. One of these is for Hastings college in Nebraska, and the other is for Mt. Holyoke in Massachusetts.

Maryville Chapter Of Theta Alpha Phi Elect Three To Membership

The Tennessee Delta chapter of Theta Alpha Phi, located at Maryville, recently elected three new members. Carol Ward, John Fisher, and Glenn Young have been made members of this national honorary dramatic fraternity.

The requirements for membership are ability, interest, and participation in plays either as an actor or as a member of the technical staff. The local chapter is making plans to see Ethel Barrymore in her forthcoming production which will be in Koxville in a few weeks.

The members were elected at a business meeting held last Tuesday evening in the Fine Arts studio. As the program for the evening, Mrs. Nita E. West, associate professor of dramatic art, reviewed the Pulitzer Prize play, "Our Town" by Thornton Wilder. The officers of Tennessee Delta chapter are Sara Bolton, president; Katherine Warren, secretary-treasurer; and John Wintermute, historian.

Rev. Dr. O. R. Tarwater, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church of Maryville, will speak at Student Volunteers Sunday evening on the subject "The Master Motive."

Men Debaters Leave For Speech Tourney

Squad Plans Trip To Boone Tournament February Third And Fourth

Clifford Proctor, Tommy Woolf, Bruce Morgan, Otto Pflanze and Arnold Kramer will represent Maryville college's debating squad today in the men's Smoky Mountain Conference debate tournament at Carson-Newman college.

Morgan, Woolf, and Proctor will uphold the affirmative side of the Pi Kappa Delta debate question: "Resolved, that the United States should cease to use public funds (including credit) for the purpose of stimulating business." The Maryvile negative team will be composed of Pflanze and Kramer.

Members of the squad will also take part in the various other speech events of the tournament. Pflanze and Woolf will enter extempore speaking and Kramer and Proctor will enter the oratory tournament. Proctor will also enter the after dinner speaking contest.

On February 3 and 4 the debate squad will make a trip to Boone, North Carolina, to participate in the Appalachian speech tournament. Those representing the school in this tournament will be Robert Lamont, Ernest Crawford, Vernon Lloyd, George Webster, Louise Proffitt, Arda Walker, Harriet Miller, and Sara Lee Hellums.

Those entering the men's division are Lamont and Crawford, affirmative, Lloyd and Webster, negative; the women's division, Proffitt and Walker, affirmative; Miller and Hellums, negative. Besides the debate tournament there will also be speech contests in oratory, extempore speaking, and after dinner speaking. Members of the debate teams will represent the school in these events.

Pearsons Accept New Constitution

On Tuesday evening the women of Pearson's hall met and voted to accept a constitution which has been drawn up by the officers of the hall in conjunction with Mrs. Grace Pope Snyder, supervisor of women's residence. The constitution signifies that the organization shall be called the Women's association of Pearson's hall, and it's object "shall be to act as a medium by which standards of Christian living may be stimulated and maintained by: Creating a sense of unity and fellowship among the women; increasing their sense of responsibility to one another and to the college; fostering cooperative planning of the administration of dormitory affairs."

The officers of Pearsons are Virginia Boys, president; Charlotte Moughton, vice president and chairman of social activities; and Harriet Barber, secretary-treasurer.

Broadcast Honors College Tomorrow

Tomorrow afternoon at 4:15 station WNOX in Knoxville will broadcast a program honoring Maryville college. The program is one of a series of salutes to colleges in this area.

The college a capella choir, under the direction of Ralph Colbert, will open the program with Avon's arrangement of the "Lord's Prayer." Then will follow a group of three anthems, " Send Forth Thy Spirit," by Schuetky; "Cherubim Song No. 2," by Bortniansky; and "Today There is Ringing," by F. Melius Christiansen.

President Ralph W. Lloyd will give a short address concerning the principles and purposes of Maryville college, after which the choir will sing a secular number, Czechoslovakaian Dance Song, a well known arrangement of an old folk-tune.

Concluding the program will be another group of three anthems by the choir: Noble Cain's arrangement of the Russian chorale, "Holy Radian Light," by Gretchaninoff; Ivanoff's setting of Psalm 103, "Bless the Lord, O My Soul"; and the familiar benediction, "The Lord Bless Thee and Keep Thee," by Lutkin.

Ralph Reed and Beth Pascoe were admitted to the hospital last Thursday, both with influenza. Jane Brunson and Albert Siemon were dismissed after a short stay.

Anderson To Conduct Sixty-Third Religious Meeting Series Beginning February 1, In Voorhees Chapel

Prominent Chicago Pastor To Preach Twice Daily To Students, Faculty; Stringham Directs Singing For Seventeenth Year

To Lead Meetings

Dr. Harrison Ray Anderson, Chicago pastor, who will lead the sixty-third series of Maryville college February Meetings which begin February 7.

The sixty-third series of February meetings will begin on Tuesday morning, February 7, at 9:45 o'clock. They will be led by Dr. Harrison Ray Anderson, pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church, Chicago. On the preceding Sunday the morning service at the New Providence Presbyterian church will be conducted by President Ralph W. Lloyd as introductory to the meetings, and the vespers in the chapel that evening will be led by Dr. W. P. Stevenson. Elsewhere in the Echo are schedule announcements.

The following information concernings Dr. Anderson and the Rev. Sidney E. Stringham, leader of the music at the meetings for seventeen years, is issued by the president's office:

It is a marked tribute to Maryville college that Dr. H. Ray Anderson should give almost two weeks to the meetings. His pastorate of Fourth Presbyterian church of Chicago, is one of the busiest and most demanding in the nation. There is a magnificent Gothic stone church and educational plant on North Michigan boulevard, near the downtown and lake areas; a membership of nearly three thousand, a congregational constituency of many thousand more, and a place of leadership in a great city of three and a half million; a staff of three ordained ministers and a considerable number of full-time salaried workers; three preaching services each Sunday, at two of which Dr. Anderson himself preaches. To leave his work there in the midst of the church's busy season and come to Maryville college for eight strenuous days of preaching and interviews shows his genuine interest and friendship, and he has never been to Maryville before.

"Who's Who in America" contains a sketch of Dr. Anderson. It says that he was forty-six years old last Tuesday. He is married and has three children, two boys and one girl. When he was

YW To Give Program Of Music On Sunday

On Sunday afternoon at 1:15 the YWCA will meet in the Fine Arts studio for an all musical program which is to be presented by members of the YMCA. This program called "Hymns of the Church," was presented and well received at the YMCA meeting two weeks ago. George Hunt is in charge of the program, which will consist of group hymns and of solos.

"Cavaleria Rusticana" Heard By Disc Club At Friday's Meeting

Yesterday afternoon at 4:30, in the Fine Arts studio, the Disc club heard the greater part of the opera, "Cavaleria Rusticana," (Rustic Chivalry), with comments by Miss Ruth Thompson. The records for this program were secured through the courtesy of Mr. McNaughton of Knoxville, and included most of the better-known vocal solos, choruses and orchestral selections from the opera.

"Cavaleria Rusticana" was composed by Pietro Mascagni to the libretto of C. Taigioni-Tozzetti and G. Menasci, from a story by C. Verga. Its first performance was on May 17, 1890, at Rome, and its first performance in the United States was at the Grand Opera House in Philadelphia on September 9, 1891.

Born December 7, 1863, Mascagni, the son of a poor baker, loved music and did not want to comply with his father's wishes and become a lawyer. So, financed by a sympathetic uncle, he

Why Are We Here?

Mid-year is a good time for us to take a few moments for reflection. What are we here in collegefor? And how well are we progressing toward the end which we have in view? Every one of us should be conscious of an aim. If we have no definite ideas concerning our vocation, we can at least focus our aim on being the best kind of whatever our interests, aptitudes and opportunities lead us into.

More than one student has been heard, this week lamenting the fact that he didn't have any notion of what he was going to do after graduation from Maryville. Moreover, the complaint was made that the average Maryville graduate is not prepared to do anything which he couldn't have been just about as well prepared for without spending four years in college.

We should remember that Maryville college is not a professional school; nor is it a trade school. It is a liberal arts college. As such, its aim is not to manufacture teachers, or preachers, or doctors, or electrical engineers; but to help develop its students into well-balanced, competent personalities—individuals capable of dealing effectively with life in every area of living, whether it be economic, social, mental, physical or spiritual.

Instead of continually evaluating everything here at Maryville in terms of "what good is this going to do me in my professional work," it might help us to think, "What effect is this likely to have on me as a personality?" Students who are puzzled about what they are going to do after college days, need not fear that four years of liberal arts college without a definite vocational end in view are four years wasted. To every thinking person, a vocation of any kind is never an end in itself, but merely an important means to a much greater end.

UP OUR HALL

By GEORGE L. HUNT

A cross section of Maryville students were asked the question this week: "Do you favor President Roosevelt's plan to strengthen the United States Army and Navy for the protection of all nations in the Western Hemisphere?" 61 percent of those questioned answered yes and 39 per cent were opposed to the plan. The same question was asked in a poll of American colleges by the Student Opinion Surveys of America, a no-profit organization of the college press interested in the scientific measurement of student opinion. Their results closely parallel what the local poll discovered. 62 per cent of the students in American coleges favor the plan, and an important minority of 38 per cent oppose it.

BALLAD OF THE BALLOT BATTLE

The Spanish war is quite a bore
To us so far away,
But here's a tale of sea and sail
For which you'll gladly pay:

"Caramba!" cursed the captain as he gazed out from the ship.
"That rebel boat, 'Prosperity', has given us the slip."
"The fog's so thick," the first mate cried, "It's like alphabetic soup."
The second mate, a joker, said, "Let's do a loop-the-loop."
Then the gunners filled their cannon with some million dollar shells,
And fired them far into the air to drop on ocean swells.
The captain said, "One might by luck land on the fleeing ship,
And even if it doesn't, well, we've had a pleasant trip."
They shelled and shot at logs and things for six successive years.
To pleas of "Please don't shoot so much!" they turned their deafened ears.
And several bullets dropped into great dams from Maine to Cal.
While others splattered harmlessly in the Florida Ship Canal.
Eventually the Loyalists of bullets were bereft,
And found to their amazement that they had no credit left.

The first mate cursed the fog, the luck, the crew and then Creation.
"It's none of those," the crew replied; "It's just the administration."

And then the ship that slipped away in nineteen thirty-three,
Sailed up to them and calmly said, "I hear you wanted me."
The moral is: If you would have good times and happy days,
Save your time and temper, your money, too—it pays.

So there's the tale of try and fail
For which you'll pay and pay.
But let them go. I love them so.
(I'm on the NYA.)

STUDENT (yawning): "Would you think we could have gotten nowhere as fast as we did in that class this semester? Why, she left us all the material we haven't covered to learn before the exam. Ho hum. What's a good definition of "emend."?

STUDENT'S ROOMMATE (looking up with yawn): Oh, that's like when David Hall, in tryouts for "You Can't Take It With You," reads "freezing the slaves" when all the time there's no "z" in the word.

STUDENT: I'd call that a plain case of over-confidence, stage-fright, or inability to read and concentrate at the same time, (or different times).

STUDENT'S ROOMMATE (saying nothing) (being too sleepy) (or busy): (Nothing)

RADIO: Flat foot Floogy with the floy floy—

STUDENT: La de a de a. Gosh, I'd like to have seen that game. Run over and ask Squirt who won.

STUDENT'S ROOMMATE: Busy studying.

STUDENT: Oh, all right, I'll go myself.

(Exit Student) (Followed by Student's Roommate) (who evidently is not busy at all)

(Enter Student) (Followed by Student's Roommate)

STUDENT: Oh, wish we'd gone to that game. But we gotta study for this exam. I don't know beans.

STUDENT'S ROOMMATE: So don't I.

(Sound of deep Concentration is heard in Room, as Thought's fly about.)

FIRST THOUGHT (unttered): Now be honest. Do you go to Vespers to be inspired and uplifted or to see if it's still Sally and Kramer, Ellen and Bill, Sue and Charley, and whether She is beginning to miss you and to be sorry or whether She still adores that other Guy?

SECOND THOUGHT (uttered) (by one or more of Occupants of Room): Wonder if there's any of that cake left. I'm hollow.

(Rummaging and Eating are heard, then Silence reigns once more.)

STUDENT (suddenly): Do you realize it's past time for Burns and Allen? Fix that radio.

STUDENT'S ROOMMATE (brutally): Says who? I happen to be listening to this program.

(Scuffling is heard in the Room, then Radio is turned off and Silence reigns for the second? (third, fourth?) time.

KNOCK (knocking on door): Knock knock.

OCCUPANTS OF ROOM (any, all or both): Don't be bashful.

(enter Borrower) BORROWER: Borrow your lamp? Gotta burn midnight oil this time. Went to the game. Swell! Haven't studied for that exam yet.

STUDENT: Oh, sure, sure. We've studied all evening long. Think we need some sleep. After all, there's no use of trying to take a heavy exam when you're exhausted for lack of rest. Gotta be careful of your health.

STUDENT'S ROOMMATE: Yeah, go ahead. We've studied four hours straight. Guess if that won't do it nothing will. We must have memorized the book by now.

BORROWER: Heap thanks and all that. Hope I make the grade you guys do. You got a head start on me.

YOU GUYS (simultaneously): Oh, sure you will. Nothing to it. Just takes a little concentration. Always said there's no use slaving all year when exams count so much more than anything else anyway and you can always study up on them. Yeah, just takes a little concentration. Well, best wishes. G'night.

BORROWER: G'night.

(Sound of Putting-books-away, Undressing, and Snoring.)

CURTAIN (falling)

The end.

Moral: (Must we tell you?) Studying for final exams is futile. (Unless you're better at it than we are.)

Friends, both students and faculty, of Ruth Crawford were much grieved to know of the illness and death of Ruth's mother, Mrs. Hugh R. Crawford, Sr. Mrs. Crawford died Monday evening, after an illness of several weeks. Her funeral, conducted by Dr. John A. McAfee, was held Wednesday, January 25.

Second Payments On Annual Made Friday

All organizations that intend to have their photographs included in the 1939 Chilhowean must submit them by Jan. 31, according to a statement from the editor, Otto Pflanze.

A two-dollar installment on the annual will be due by Febuary 2. All payments must be made by this date in order that the number of reserved copies may be turned in to the publishers. A member of the Chilhowean staff will be outside the treasurer's office to receive payments every afternoon next week.

Miss Jessie Johnson To Read At YM Sun.

Miss Jessie Johnson, associate professor of Engish, will read poetry at the Sunday afternoon YMCA worship program in the Bartlett hall auditorium at five o'clock tomorrow.

Tentative arrangements for the first two Sundays in February include Fred Brewer, superintendent of Maryville city schools, as speaker for February 5; and on the following Sunday afternoon there will be no Y program; the YMCA giving its time over to the Ministerial association, which will have Dr. H. R. Anderson, leader of the February meetings, as the speaker.

Merry-Ville Go Round

By FRED RHODY

Note: For the past several months your reporter has been busily engaged in conducting a scientific survey of Life at Maryville college. (Perhaps you have noticed that thus survey has already attracted imitators to the campus.) The survey, after long last, has been completed, and is ready for the long-threatened release to the public. If you would like your parents not to receive a copy of this survey, containing complete picture of Maryville Life, write your name plainly on a fifty-cent piece and leave at Echo office. In this Echo issue we print a condensation of the survey:

LIFE AT MARYVILLE COLLEGE

College students are funny: all semester long they just about kill themselves having a care-free good time, and at the end of the semester they almost break their necks trying to do four months' work in two weeks. And they pay a lot of money for the privilege of attending classes, and then cut just as many classes as the law allows. And they growl about their college, but just let anyone else say a word against it and look out!

Maryville students may be divided into several classifications. There are those who go to breakfast, and those who get to chapel during announcements. There are those who do nothing but study, and there are those who do nothing.

College students do things backwards; they stay up half the night studying, and then sleep during the class lecture next day. They come to college to "broaden their interests," and then confine their attention to just the things and people which interest them.

College students do lots of other queer things. For example, they start writing a column for the Echo, and it gets like and they have a million other things to do: so they give up trying to write a column.

SCOTTY SIDE SLANTS

By the
Sports Editor

EAGLES STAR HURT—

When Maryville ties into Carson-Newman tonight, the Eagles will be handicapped somewhat by the loss of their all-conference guard, Charlie Hamblen. Hamblen fell in practice, Thursday, and severely turned his ankle. He hopes to be back in harness in a couple of weeks. He holds the rare distinction of making all-conference his freshman year. This year is his last.

Frosty Holt's Eagle quintet is plenty tough still tho, and may put a team on the floor that will be the SMC champions. They have whipped Emory and Henry, and if you remember, the same Wasps gave the Highlanders quite a game. And another thing, their only defeat took LMU an extra period.

Coach Honaker will probably start the three Bairds, Dale Russell, or Joe Etheredge, and Scot Honaker, as scrappy a bunch as you'll find anywhere.

LAST NIGHT'S RASS'LING—

For those of you who witnessed the wrestling match last night, and are wondering about that decision that required the use of a rule book, a little explanation here might be appreciated. The referee forfeited the match to Henschen because the Vanderbilt man was stalling and obviously trying to get off the mat and avoid a fall. The ruling is that a man can not try to get off the edge of the mat in order to avoid a fall, and after being warned once, the referee may then forfeit the match. The main question was about the number of points. If we had only gotten three points, the match would have probably ended in a tie, and if five points had been given us, we would have won the match. Well, as it turned out, we got five points as the rule allows us, and we won the match.

The man that applied that vicious strangle hold on Dizney in the heavyweight division, was Fleming. Fleming, a skilled mat performer, has not lost a match in two years, and is one of the best heavyweights in the state. He will, however, have a little difficulty in keeping his good record clean tonight, for tonight he goes up against a man that will really put the screws on. Al Crawford, of the Knoxville Y, will be that gentleman. As most of you know, Crawford is a former Olympic champion, and a smooth person to encounter. Those who saw him wrestle say he goes right to work on his man, and wastes no time in putting his shoulders to the canvas.

INTERCLASS SPORTS

SENIORS 36—SOPHS 27

Last Thursday evening the senior class basketball team downed the sophomores 36-28. McCaskie of the seniors was high-scorer of the evening with twenty-one points to his credit.

Lineups:

Sophs 27		Seniors 36
Hulse 6	F	Walker 4
Steakley 4	F	Napier 2
Van Blarcom 9	C	McCaskie 21
Gastrock 2	G	Judy 8
Cragan 3	G	Burns 1

Subs: Sophs—Puncheon, Swede 2. Seniors—S. K. Taylor.

Seniors 24—Juniors 22

The senior quintet pulled a fast one out of the hat Wednesday night, and threw the interclass league into a three way tie for first place by defeating the favored junior team 24-22. "Red" McCaskie, senior ace, accounted for 16 points to lead the scoring for both teams. Etheredge and Tom Taylor each made six points, to lead the juniors. This win for the seniors left the juniors, sophomores, and the seniors in a three way toss up for first-half, first place.

Lineups:

JUNIORS 22		SENIORS 24
Amos 2	F	Walker 1
Kramer	F	Napier 4
Etheredge 6	G	McCaskie 16
T. Taylor 6	F	Taylor
Stevenson 3	F	Judy 2
Herrich		Jenkins

Rae 5

Sophomores 37—Frosh 35

The sophomore basketball aggregation finished the first half by clinching a position in the three way tie for first place by whipping an underdog freshman team Thursday night by the slim margin of 37-35.

The sophs, who had been trailing throughout the game, came back in the last quarter with a flurry of fast field goals to overcome the lead held by the frosh.

Gastrock with 10 points, and Steakley with 11 points, led the sophs attack, while Jeff Callahan, freshman forward hit the hoop for five field goals and two fouls for a total of 12 counters, to top the scoring for the night.

Lineups:

SOPHS 37		FROSH 35

Maryville Mermen Take Relay As Tennessee Overpowers Them 56-19

The Maryville Tankmen were outclassed, Thursday night, by the Tennessee swimming team, by a score of 56-19. The Scottles, while losing all the individual events, came back to finish several links ahead in the final relay.

Maryville's sole first place in the 200 yard relay was taken by Stevenson, Cross, Felknor, and Capt. Findlay. The Highlanders took two seconds and six thirds. Akana finished a few feet behind Yagodkin of U-T in record breaking time. High point honors were divided between Crews and Kellers of Tennessee, each with 10 points. Crews swam the 200 and 400 yard free style; Keller swam the 50 and 100 yard dashes. Crews swam the exceptional time of 5 min., 6 seconds in the 400 yard free style; some 43 seconds under our conference record.

This, Maryville's first meet, was not, inter-conference. Maryville will meet East Kentucky Teachers, tonight, in its first home meet. Tonight's meet will be Maryville's first real test in competition of its own class.

Weldon Baird Sparks Last Half Spurt In Eighth Straight Win

The Scottie basketball team outscrapped a fast Emory and Henry five, Monday night, to a 43-40 score for the eighth straight win of the season. Overcoming a seemingly hopeless lead, Weldon Baird led the Highlanders in a second half rally which left the Emory and Henry lads breathless.

The Baird brothers led the field against E. and H., Weldon caging 10 points for high point man among the Scotties, Bill pulling through in the pinches to deadlock the game three three; with Baby playing his usual sparkling ball. Emory and Henry proved to be the fastest company Maryville has encountered yet; they played a smooth and skillful brand of ball lacking only the Scottie cagers spirit. It is Maryville's first victory over them in over five years. Tucker stood out for Emory and Henry, tall and speedy with a deadly eye for the basket, he rang up 13 points to be high scorer for the evening.

Emory and Henry took the lead early and steadily increased it to 23-15 at half time. They swished goals in from all corners of the court, took the ball off the backboards by their superior heighth, and looked for a while, too hot for Maryville to handle.

Maryville came back in the second half fighting, however, and literally rushed the invaders off their feet. Russell took the tip, and Maryville promptly scored. Baird then showed the most spectacular playing of the game, taking the ball three times in succession from Emory and Henry men, scoring single handed each time. Several minutes later Bill Baird tied up the score with a foul shot, at 27-27. The score see-sawed for several minutes, the Scotties missing from over-eagerness. Then Bill Baird swished a long one through the hoop to tie the game again at 31-31, and Weldon put Maryville ahead for the first time at 33-32. Russell made good a foul shot to make it 34-32. Emory and Henry pulled ahead again however, but it cost them two good men through fouls. It was left for Bill Baird to pull through once more and clinch the score. Etheredge widened the margin with a field goal from underneath the basket; Emory and Henry sunk two foul shots, and Honaker rang a crip-shot. The score stood 41-40 with seconds to go. Baby Baird took the situation in hand, however and fought through a stout defense to drop in the final counter. Final score: Maryville 43, Emory and Henry 40.

Lineups:

Maryville 43		Emory-Henry 40
W. Baird 10	F	Tucker 13
B. Baird 6	F	Barker 8
Russell 6	C	Rogers 8
Honaker 7	G	Kuhn 3
Wm. Baird 4	G	Peery 5

Subs: Maryville—Etheredge8, Husk 1; Emory and Henry—Monger 3, Stewart, Wright, Hillman.

Scottie Swimmers Take On Teachers In Meet Tonight

Tonight at 7:30 in Bartlett pool, the Scottie swimmers go up against East Kentucky Teachers. The Teacher's arrived here, this morning, 10 strong from Richmond. The meet begins the Maryville schedule at home, and will be the first opposition against whom Maryville has real rivalry.

Although no positive statistics are available, the Teachers should be strong. In the last meet of the season last year, Maryville edged them out. The Highlander's victory last March, however, depended on a decision of the judges in the final relay, which gave Maryville the necessary points.

Maryville is handicapped by colds, and the fresh defeat at the hands of Tennessee. The regular lineup will be in there splashing for the first time, though.

The Scottie team meets a very strong team from Chattanooga YMCA here, next week, in what promises to be another hot contest.

Scottie Grapplers Down Vandy By A 16-14 Count In Colorful Meet

Evaul Pins Graves; Hahn, Everett, and Henschen Take Their Matches In Maryville's First Home Meet

Coach Thrower's wrestling squad displayed its wares last night for the first time before the Maryville fans as the team beat the grunt and growlers of Vanderbilt university 16-14.

In the first bout Evaul of Maryville pinned Graves of Vanderbilt in the second overtime period. The 121 pounders got the match under way in fine fashion as Graves drew first blood from Evaul's nose. From then on the bout was fairly even until the second overtime period when the Maryville contestant twice came very near to pinning his adversary. The third attempt to touch Graves' shoulders to the mat was successful after twelve minutes and forty-three seconds of wrestling.

Trailing the Highlanders by five points, the Commodores proceeded to take the next two bouts by decisions. Things looked mighty bad for Maryville's 135 pounder McDaniels twice during the bout, but he managed to keep his shoulders off the mat; thus saving two points for his team.

The Meares vs. Dozier bout went into extra periods also, and Referee Cox awarded the decision to the 145 pound Vanderbilt grappler.

His team trailing by four points, Wood Everett wasted no time in getting on top of his opponent Austin, and staying there. However, Wood was unable to turn the trick and he was forced to be satisfied with a decision.

With the count standing 8-9 in favor of Vandy, Clem Hahn and Bray of Vanderbilt in the 165 pound class put on what appeared to be the fastest bout of the evening. The final whistle found Bray with his right shoulder buried in the mat, and his left one very, very near, while Hahn strove to help it even closer. The bout was given to Hahn on a decision, giving Maryville a lead of two points.

The Henschen vs. Carmichael bout had the spectators guessing as to whether the majority of the match was fought on or off the mat. Seven times during the bout the two 175 pounders found themselves off the mat. The match was continued in extra periods,

Scotty Cagers Are Defeated By LMU

The Blue and Gray of LMU outshone the Orange and Garnet of Maryville college last Wednesday night, when the Lincoln-Memorial basketball team handed the Highlanders their first beating of the current season. The final score of the game was 54 to 35 in favor of the LMU team.

The Railsplitters took an early lead over the Scotties and continued to widen it as the game progressed. At the half Maryville's cagers were trailing their opponents by nine points.

Right guard Honaker tied with two of the LMU players for high-scoring honors of the evening. Scot tallied 12 of the Maryville 35 points.

Lineups:

Maryville 35		LMU 54
W. Baird 5	F	Nidiffer 12
Byd. Baird 2	F	Walker 7
Russell 6	C	Johns 4
Honaker 12	G	Summers 12
Bill Baird	G	Thomas 8

Subs: Maryville: Menning 2, Etheredged, Husk, Claybaugh 2. LMU—Bolinger 2, Welch 5, Wolfe2, Williams 2.

Highlanders Meet Eagle Five Tonight

The basketball team of Maryville college is traveling to Jefferson City, today, where they will meet the Carson-Newman Eagles.

The Scotties met Carson-Newman on the court twice last year. Each team won a game.

With their first loss of the season fresh in their minds, the Highlanders will probably play their best against the Carson-Newman team, and that should be enough to do the trick. The Carson-Neman team is reported strong this year, however, having already scored victories over King and Emory and Henry. Maryville returns home to meet Union on Tuesday night.

and six more times it was apparent that Mr Carmichael preferred the gym floor to the mat. When the referee called the match because of the Vanderbilt grappler's intentional efforts to crawl off the mat, and claimed the forfeit was worth only three points, Coach Thrower immediately protested. The controversy was finally settled when the 1939 rule book was consulted. Maryville was given five points.

In the heavyweight division Dizney forfeited the bout to Fleming of Vanderbilt after the latter all but took Howard's head away with a headlock that he used with no gentle action.

Results: Evaul (M) pinned Graves 12.43; Keefe (V) decisioned Turner; Pellett (V) decisioned McDaniels; Dozier (V) decisioned Meares; Everett (M) decisioned Austin; Hahn (M) decisioned Bray; Carmichael forfeited to Henschen (M) 12.27; Dizney forfeited to Fleming (V).

DISC CLUB

brought a few simple compositions to the attention of Count Florestano de Larderal, who sent him to the Conservatory of Milan. Hating the routine of counterpoint and fugue, he was a miserable failure and finally ran away from the school. He kept up his music, however, and when, in 1889, the publisher Sonzogo offered a prize for a one-act opera, Mascagni turned out "Cavaleria Rusticana" in a remarkably short time and won first prize. The opera was received with great enthusiasm, and he was presented with the order of the crown of Italy by the king, an honor not accorded Verdi until middle life.

The opera takes place in a little Sicilian village, where, amidst the celebration of the Easter season, the young girl, Santuzza, has learned that Turiddu, her lover, has returned to Lola, the girl he loved before the war. Insane with jealousy and grief, Santuzza plots with Lola's husband, Alfio, for revenge, and, picking a quarrel with Turridu, Alfio challenges him to a duel and kills him.

Some of the well-loved selections from the opera are Turiddu's love-song, "Prelude Siciliana"; Santuzza's song of grief, "Voi lo sapete " (Well you know, good mother"); the beautiful "Intermezza"; the Easter chorale, "Innegiamo, ie Signor," ("Let Us Sing Our Lord's Wondrous Story"); and Turridu's farewell to his mother, "Addio alla madre."

Juniors-Seniors Beat Sophs In Point System

On Tuesday the junior-senior basketball team of the women's point system trounced the sophomore team by the score of 52-34. Again on Thursday the sophomores were on the losing side to the freshmen, 35-19.

The last game of the basketball tournament will be played next Wednesday evening between the junior-seniors and the freshmen. It promises to be a great game. There will be point system on Tuesday of next week.

only twenty-eight years old he became pastor of the great First Presbyterian church of Wichita, Kansas, which has over two thousand members. After seven years he was called to his present pastorate at Fourth Presbyterian church of Chicago where he has served now for the past eleven years.

But the best thing about him is not that he has been in eminent positions from early in his ministry, but that he is sincere, is kindly and friendly, and is humbly consecrated to Jesus Christ and His will for men and women. His preaching is earnest and direct. He will share with us a rich experience.

In Rev. S. E. Stringham, leader of the music again, the college will welcome a tried and true friend. When he was a pastor of a Methodist Episcopal church seventeen years ago he was invited to lead the singing one year. So acceptably did he do it that he was invited again and again; he has rendered the same service each year but one since that time, coming from Tennessee and Illinois and St. Louis where his pastorates have been located. When he comes this year, one of the students to greet him will be his own daughter, now a member of our freshman class.

Pastor Conducts Quiet Service For Dorothy E. Smith

Body Of Freshman Student Sent To New Jersey For Burial

After a quiet funeral service conducted by Dr. William P. Stevenson and attended by students and members of the faculty Thursday afternoon, the body of Dorothy E. Smith, victim of suicide by poisoning, was sent to Camden, N. J., for burial. Miss Smith was a freshman at Maryville, having come here in September from Reading, Pa.

Wednesday after the evening meal the body of Miss Smith was found on her own bed in McLain Memorial dormitory by another student. A note on her desk and a small bottle containing a solution, which proved to be potassium cyanide, showed the manner of her death.

Reports sent home by Miss Smith during the year expressed interest and happiness in her experience at Maryville. Her grades were high and she had succeeded in securing funds for the expenses of the second semester but she had often seemed despondent and had spoken to friends at Maryville of the futility of her life. Aware of her unusual and highly emotional nature, students and faculty members tried to make her college life as pleasant as possible.

She had taken part in extra curricular activities on the campus and had come with an excellent high school record. She was a freshman apprentice on the Echo staff and had been a waitress in the dining hall earlier in the year. She was of German descent and was receiving part support in college from the Oberlaender Foundation of Reading. She had a great admiration for the German people of today and had spoken of plans to visit Germany in a few years on a scholarship. The full reason for her act in taking her own life probably cannot be fully known.

Dr. Stevenson, Miss Alice Wine, head of Memorial hall, and several students accompanied her body to Knoxville after the service Thursday. As far as can be determined, this is the first suicide in the history of Maryville college.

Six Tennessee Colleges Form Intercollegiate Council For Christians

Six East Tennessee colleges, including University of Tennesse, Tennessee Wesleyan, Maryville, Knoxville college and Swift college, have been meeting at Knoxville college to organize the Intercollegiate Christian council. The council was formerly an international organization, but the new council includes only East Tennessee colleges. It has as it's aim the promotion of better Christian fellowships between the students and the faculty, and better relations between races.

The YMCA, YWCA, Student Volunteers, and the Ministerial association have sent representatives from Maryville. Bill Baird is the present treasurer of the council. Dr. Daves, head of colored workers for the TVA, discussed the economic and cultural problems of the South last Sunday at the monthly meeting.

The next regular meeting will be held in the Bartlett auditorium on Sunday, March 5.

Women's Debate Teams Leave Next Saturday For Three Contests

Two Maryville women's debate teams will leave next Saturday for a series of debates with colleges in this section. Pauline Cope and Arda Walker, affirmative; and Curtmarie Brown and Sara Lee Hellums, negative, will represent Maryville college.

The first debate will be held at 8:30 Saturday morning against Carson-Newman. That afternoon they will meet Tusculum college in a decision debate; and in the evening the two teams will participate in a non-decision debate with Teacher's college at Johnson City.

The women's teams were unable to attend the annual tournament at Virginia-Intermont this year as it was scheduled during the February meetings.

Maryville's A Capella Choir in N-S Salute

Maryville college's a capella choir which was featured on the News-Sentinel's salute to the college over WNOX on Sunday, January 29, 1939. The choir is under the direction of Mr. Ralph R. Colbert.

Arts Federation Exhibits Prints In Baker Gallery

Miss Frances Rich Of Arts Dept. Will Discuss Prints Feb. 16

The Carnegie prints being exhibited at the Elizabeth Gowdy Baker art gallery February 6 to 21 from 2 to 5 every afternoon except Sunday, are circulated by the American Federation of Arts of Washington, D.C.

The prints are all examples of the graphic arts or black and white technique. The woodcut, the etching, and the engraving were first invented to speed up production in printing; for many copies could be made from the same plate. In time, however, these methods each became an art in itself, and the prints which are now exhibited in the gallery are all examples of the best of each type. Among the media exhibited are the etching, equatint, engraving, lithograph, stipple, woodcut, and mezzotint.

"The Lives of Saints", a page from a 15th century book, is illustrated with a typical woodcut. It is not known, said Miss Frances Rich, whether or not the entire page was cut from a block of wood, or only the illustration. The printing may be an example of the early movable printing type which was invented in 1450. The woodcut, however, is in keeping with the printing because the similarity of line and mass. More emphasis is placed on line than

Maryville To See Liquid Air Exhibit

John S. Sloan Will Give Series Of Lectures

Mr. John S. Sloan, scientist and lecturer, will be in Maryville college on Monday, Feb. 20, to give a series of demonstrations on liquid air. An experienced science instructor and a master of arts from Duke university, Mr. Sloan has performed these experiments more than a thousand times in various high schools and colleges all over the United States.

Liquid air has a pale blue color, weighs almost as much as water and has the low temperature of 312 degrees F. below zero. It is liquefied by subjecting normal air to high pressures and then lowering its temperature. Substances ordinarily not thought of as being affected by cold will, in the presence of liquid air, freeze solid with the most amazing results. Among its other properties, liquid air has an expansion of approximately 850 times its volume; a fact which Mr. Sloane demonstrates with great effect in his lecture.

The demonstration will probably be in the chapel and there will be no admission charge.

Dr. H. Ray Anderson Will Lead Volunteers

At the meeting of the Student volunteer group on Sunday evening after the vesper service, Dr. H. Ray Anderson, leader of the February meetings, will speak and lead the discussion. As special music Miss Ruth Thompson of the Fine Arts department will sing a number entitled "I Have A Need," which was written by H. I. Thompson, her brother.

Organ Fund Reached $3137.30 This Morning

The total amount given and pledged to the organ fund has reached $3137.30 announced the Treasurer's office this morning. This sum included $2171.80 given in cash; student pledges totaling $840.50; and pledges from the faculty and friends of the college amounting to $125. This is still approximately $300 short of the total amount the organ will cost.

Mr. Louis Black, director of maintenance, is in charge of the negotiations with the organ company and although an order has been tentatively placed no definite agreement has been reached yet.

Twelve Picked For Freshman Debate

British American Alliance To Be Questions For This Years' Contest

Thirty-two contestants participated in the freshman debate tryouts held Tuesday afternoon. From this number six men and six women were selected to compose the freshman debate team for this season.

Those chosen were Frank Cross, Glenn McAfee, Thomas Stahl, George Tibbetts, Henry Wick, Hilton Wick, Dorothy Buchanan, Betty Felix, Edna Gleaton, Janet Lindsay, Lucille Lynch, and Barbara Parsons. The judges were Prof. J. H. Kiger, Dr. David H. Briggs, and Miss Jessie Heron.

The question for debate this season is: Resolved, that the United States should form an alliance with Great Britain.

The state tournament, which in former years has been held at Maryville, will be held this year at Union university in Jackson, Tenn. Two men's and two women's teams will take part in this event.

Curriculum Director Announces Changes In Course Offerings

Several new course offerings, and the revival of a course given formerly are among the changes in curriculum for this semester, according to Dr. E. R. Hunter, director of curriculum.

A new course in sociology is being given this semester for the first time. This Sociology course, 306, entitled "The Family" was planned by the late Dr. J. H. McMurray, and is being taught by Dr. Frank D. McClelland.

Miss Gertrude Meiselwitz is reviving a course this semester which was given here before, but is now being given with a new emphasis. Called "Housing Problems", it deals with new projects in the way of improved housing, especially in the cities.

A new course in Bible is being offered, and is being taught by Mr. F R. Watt, who has for some time been one of the directors of the Maryville college Parish project. The course is entitled "Method and Administration of Religious Education" and meets "F" period.

Two new courses dealing with methods of teaching elementary school subjects, including music and art, are offered this semester by the Education department and will be taught by Miss Keller.

Glee Clubs Will Present 'Sorcerer'

Mr. Colbert Announces Date Of Presentation As March Tenth

On March 10, the combined glee clubs of Maryville college will give Gilbert and Sullivan's opera, "The Sorcerer," announced Mr. Raph Colbert, director, today. Chorus rehearsals began last week upon the arrival of the opera scores and the members of the cast will rehearse with the chorus next week.

The cast consists of nine members and will be chosen by the first part of this coming week. The leading roles are those of the Sorcerer and the romantic leads, Aline and Alexis.

This two act opera was first produced in London at the Opera Comique on Nov, 18, 1877. In the opening of the first act the villagers are assembled at the estate of Sir Marmaduke to celebrate the bethrothal of Aline and Alexis. After the signing of the marriage contract, Alexis, wondering if marriage is influenced too much by social barriers, calls in the Sorcerer, Mr. Wells, to mix a love potion which will

Dr. Samuel T. Wilson To Celebrate Eighty-First Birthday Friday

On Friday, Feb. 17, Dr. Samuel Tyndale Wilson, president emeritus, will celebrate his eighty-first birthday.

Dr. Wilson was born in Syria in 1858. He came to America where he entered Maryville college as a student, graduating in 1868. In 1882 he accepted a position in the college as teacher of English and Spanish. From 1882 to 1901 he served the college as teacher, registrar, librarian and dean, simultaneously. In the year 1901 he was elected president of the College, which position he held for twenty-nine years. He has been actively connected with the college for over sixty years. Since his retirement he has been at his home in Maryville, at 506 Indiana avenue.

Dr. Wilson will celebrate his birthday anniversary quietly at home with the members of the immediate family.

Mr. Harvey McCauley Makes Report Of Recent Survey Made At Maryville

Results of the questionnaire recently circulated by Mr. Harvey McCauley as a part of the financial survey made of the college by the Board of Christian Education of the Presbyterian church in the U.S.A. were today made public through the President's office.

The statistics indicate that the three chief reasons given by students for having come to Maryville college are the same three that have been the basis of the policy of the college since its founding: low expense rates to students, high scholastic standards, and definite Christian emphasis and program. Nearness to home ranked high among the reasons given, but obviously cannot be representative of the whole student body. Influence of family and the democratic spirit were also prominent factors of choice.

Based on a total of 481 questionnaires, the figures for first choice are: low expenses, 163; nearness to home, 89; academic standards, 77; religious emphasis, 77; influence of family, 75. The second, third, and fourth choices preserve much of the same proportion except for the addition of student help as a subordinate reason determining choice.

Reasons receiving less than twenty votes for first choice were reputation of alumni, geographical position, music, influence of present students, particular courses, and denominational affiliation.

Mr. McCauley of the accounting firm of Marts and Lundy conducted this survey during the past month in all the financial branches of the administration. The following note has been received from him, with the request that it appear in the Highland Echo:

"I wish to express my thanks and appreciation to the faculty, administration, students for most courteous help and friendliness. Maryville will be a most pleasant memory. I hope I may come back sometime."

Mr. McCauley is at present engaged in a similar study of Mercersburg Academy, Mercersburg, Pa.

Preparations For Mid-Winter Begun

Set To Be One Of Largest Ever To Be Placed On Chapel Stage

One of the largest sets ever to have been placed on the Maryville stage is being prepared for the Athenian-Bainonian mid - winter production, "You Can't Take It With You", to be given in Voorhees chapel, February 24. Consisting of eighteen flats, the set will be 34 feet across the front and will include all of the alcove. The walls will be done in mid-Victorian style.

This one set, the living room of the home of the Vanderhofs, "somewhere around the corner from Columbia university", will be the scene for all three acts of the play, and calls for a large number of properties. Nearly two hundred articles besides eighteen pieces of furniture are needed to complete the set. These include everything from a xylophone and printing press to a snake solarium and two live kittens.

"You Can't Take It With You" is a farsical comedy written by Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman. It was first produced in the Booth theater in New York on Dec. 14, 1936. Within three months tickets were being sold for four months in advance. During the sweltering months of July and August when many theaters were closing their doors, "You Can't Take It With You" was playing to packed houses.

Critics confessed that there was very

Kramer Wins First Place In Contest

Maryville Debaters Take Six Places At Boone, N.C.

Maryville's debate squad took six places in the Appalachian Speech tournament held at Boone, N.C., Feb. 3 and 4. Representing Maryville were Arnold Kramer, Bob Lamont, George Webster, Vernon Lloyd, Louise Proffitt, Arda Walker, Sara Lee Hellums, and Harriet Miller.

In the men's division of the tournament, Arnold Kramer won first place in debate and George Webster was second. Vernon Lloyd placed third in oratory.

Louise Proffitt placed third in oratory and second in after-dinner speaking, and Arda Walker placed second in debate in the women's division.

Thirteen colleges were entered in the tournament and took part in the various speech contests. Ratings were made only on the individual scores made in the various events. The tournament emphasized the individual speaker, and no team or school ratings were made.

Maryville's debate team will take part next in the tournament to be held at Union college on March 2-4.

Dr. Harrison Ray Anderson To Close Series On Wed. Morning

Dr. Harrison Ray Anderson, pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church, Chicago, began the sixty-third series of Maryville college February meetings Tuesday morning, February 7, in Voorhees chapel. The theme for the meetings, as chosen by the preacher is, "Our Christian Faith in This Time of Crisis." Following is a synopsis of the nine sermons to date:

TUESDAY

"God's Place in Faith of Modern Christian in This Present Crisis"

Morning

"Our Christian Faith—A Challenge"

Isaiah 6:1-5

The modern Christian's faith is a real challenge because of three attributes of God: His holiness, His power, and His mercy.

Evening

"The New Idoltry Challenging Christian Faith in God."

Isaiah 40; Romans 1:25; I John 5:21

Since the beginning of the industrial revolution inventive geniuses have made machines to save time, work, money; but these machines can be used to damn, to kill as well as to bless. Because of this it is much more necessary for modern man to have in him controls to make things work well. Instead of controls for his life, however, man has made new idols.

The first of these is the totalitarian state—the civic monster, State god. In Japan and Germany, for example, it is the nation in place of God. Whenever the state has become primary, subordinating other things to it, then it has made itself an idol.

Russia's communistic dream, the doctrine of the classes, is the second new idol. And though the two are deadly enemies, communism and fascism unite at the foot of the cross against Him.

In America we are confronted with each of these tendencies, but neither of them is our idol. The American idol is the attitude toward life found all around us, an attitude that makes physical, social life an ends and not a means; an attitude that excludes Christ to a search for pleasure. Pleasure cannot be made a god, for still "the chief aim of man is to glorify God and enjoy Him forever". Whenever God becomes second, he is no longer God. "And thou shalt love him with thy whole mind, they whole will, thy whole purpose."

"My little children, guard yourselves from false ideas of God."

WEDNESDAY

"Our Place in Christian Faith in Time of Crisis"

Morning

"On Coming to One's Self"

Daniel 4

Hell can be many things. Lynn Harold Hough calls it "the experience of being left alone with a disintegrated self." That would mean walking alone self-sufficiently, having meant to be a man in God's image, but becoming a beast.

The thing to remember about Nebuchadnezzar is that he came back to himself. We have an advantage that he didn't have; we can become ourselves by lifting up our eyes and seeing Jesus Christ. There is manhood at its best; and in seeing Him we see God.

"Thou hast made us for thyself, O God, and our hearts are restless until they rest in Thee."

Evening

"The Place of Human Nature in Christian Faith"

Romans 8

Our fathers feared God with a holy, reverential fear and were not afraid of each other. Today, we do not fear God; we fear other nations.

Young people look out into the world and wonder: wonder what thing as are beyond the senior days and if they are going to be victors or victims.

Some persons meet life cowardly. Though dark things do happen they needn't make you a victim: "if I make my bed in hell, thou art there." Others run head on into life; and when such Stoicism is coupled with Christianity, there you have a real man.

In Christ there are endowments that will enable man to stand anything. Christians do not deny or run away from life. There is no easy way out by denying it all.

Happy Birthday

On next Friday Dr. Samuel Tyndale Wilson, president emeritus of Maryville college, will celebrate his eighty-first birthday. For the past few years he has lived quietly at his home on Indiana avenue and has had little contact with the students now in college—yet his spirit has ever been present on the campus in the things he has built and done for Maryville. During his sixty years of association with the college Dr. Wilson saw it grow from a mere handful of students to a group of more than eight hundred and from a few small buildings to the present plant worth more than a million dollars. It was Dr. Wilson who nursed the college through its painful adolescence to the vigorous maturity of the present-day Maryville and to him the college owes more than to any living man. We cannot hope to repay all that we owe to Dr. Wilson, but we do take this opportunity to wish him a very happy birthday.

A Memorial

With the announcement from the Treasurer's office that the organ fund has reached $3137.30 and that the final negotiations are under way for the purchase of the organ comes the realization not only of a worthy end gained but of the means used to accomplish that end. The near completion of the organ fund by the student pledges signed in chapel means that student leaders have been able to suggest a workable plan for securing a very much needed piece of equipment for the college and that the student body has been willing to cooperate almost 100% to make that plan work. Only a little over $300 remains to be raised and the organ will probably be completed by Easter—a memorial to the initiative and cooperation of the present students of Maryville college.

More Than Text Book Instruction

This week the Highland Echo carries the announcement of two more educational exhibits brought to Maryville—the Carnegie prints in the Art Gallery and the Liquid Air demonstration in chapel next week. These represent the effort of the faculty to give more than mere text book instruction in the class room and to furnish the student with a rounded education that will prove both interesting and useful in later life. The faculty is to be commended for its efforts in bringing these to Maryville and the student body should show its appreciation by attending both of these exhibits and trying to get the most possible from them.

One Criticism Heard Of Present-Day College Students

In his Thursday evening sermon, Dr. Anderson made the statement that the one criticism which is frequently heard concerning present-day college students, is that so many have no purpose in life.

To live with no all-important purpose is not really to live on the high human plane which is open to us; for man is capable of rising above the influence and drive of chance circumstances and easy convenience. Every man or woman who has ever made anything worthwhile of his life has had a great aim dominating everything he did. All activities of living are valued according to the extent to which they help or hinder the progress of this undertaking.

As this new semester gets under way, we ought to take time to consider two things: first, have we thoughtfully decided just what is to be the great purpose of our lives; and, second, what course of action should we follow in order to progress toward the accomplishment of this purpose?

Unless these questions are asked and answered, there can be no real living.

UP OUR HALL

By GEORGE L. HUNT

I wonder if anything new could be written about Abraham Lincoln. Biographies, letters, anecdotes, dramas, state papers have revealed almost everything about him but his most private thoughts. Americans like to feel they know him from every angle, as the backwoodsman and as the president, as the father and as the statesman. They go to his grocery store cronies to hear the yarns he used to drawl out and to his secretaries to hear of the sleepless nights when he would ponder the fate of the nation. They contrast him with the courtly and polished Washington, and, while both represent the American tradition, they glory most in the man of the homespun. Stories, some true, some probably apocryphal, have grown up around this tall, ungainly figure with the lean, kindly face. Around him there has been spread a sort of reverential awe which has endured triumphantly the age of debunking public heroes. All this has been said before, and in this, the one hundred and thirty-ninth year since his birth in a Kentucky log cabin, it is but idle repetition to go over it all again.

What has made Lincoln stand out in the line of our nation's leaders? In his presidency the country suffered its greatest rupture, an acute blow to a nation priding itself on its solidarity. Uncouth, without formal education, his personage brought to the United States scorn from the other nations of the world and to his policies distrust from men more seasoned in the affairs of state than himself. The newspapers of his day considered the speech he made at a cemetery dedication a disgrace to his high office. Even his domestic life was not harmonious enough to be exemplary to the citizens of whom he was the leader.

But again it would be mere repetition of facts to explain his greatness. It is sufficient that on the eve of his birthday we feel it necessary to pay him honor at a time when humility, service, kindliness, courage, and simple faith are so much needed by the men who have followed him as determiners of the destinies of nations and people. Seventy odd years after he first invoked the challenge, the democracies of the world repeat his plea that government of, by, and for the people shall not perish from the earth.

Achieving
A calmness and a majesty in its very height.
God,
Could we attain such calmness
Such poise within
If we reached out and touched the Eternal
Above the realm of tears?

TALK OF THE WEEK . By Arlene Phelps

Maryville Psychology Department Is Experimenting In Mental Telepathy

Do you believe in mental telepathy? Don't answer too quickly—at least don't answer until you have talked to Bill Mooney, who is now conducting an experiment on extra-sensory perception, under the direction of the Psychology department. The experiment is no "slight-of-hand" trick either. It is being made according to a system developed by Dr. J. B. Rhine, of Duke university, who believes, along with Gardner Murphy of Harvard and Alexis Carrell, author of "Man, The Unknown," that he has proved the existence of extra-sensory perception.

The test given is a simple one. If you want to take it, all you need to do is make an appointment with Bill Mooney. Bill will invite you to sit in a comfortable chair with your back turned. He wil take a card from a stack of twenty-five and concentrate on the figure printed on its face. After he taps twice with his pencil you guess the symbol and he records your answer. If you guess five out of the twenty-five, you are considered only lucky; but if you consistently, in test after test, guess more than five, you possess extra-sensory perception.

Dr. Rhine, the orginator of the test, had one student who made a score of 25 on one test, 24 on two tests, 23 on two tests and 22 on one test. Bill has not as yet found a subject whose mind can pierce the unknown to this extent, but he hopes before the end of the semester to have found some definite proof that mental telepathy does exist.

For many years, psychologists had little confidence in mind-reading ability, and many of them still have the same attitude, but at a recent meeting of the American Psychological association, the existence of this phenomena was considered worth investigating.

Tests under varying condition have been made, and it has been found that stimulating drugs such as caffene increase the ability to guess symbols; while drugs, such as alcohol, which decreases mental activity, also have a negative effect on extra-sensory perception.

The College library has two of Dr. Rhine's recent books on mental telepathy, and the present investigation of mental telepathy may be continued next year either as an experiment or as a course in experimental psychology.

All those who believe that they have the ability to receive ideas by mental telepathy are invited to come in and take the test. Bill Mooney suggests that it is to every person's interest to discover his hidden talent in this direction, because if he proves to be a 25 score-man, he may, with practice, be able merely to look at a text book and absorb its complete contents. This would surely mean that the golden age of education would arrive for him.

Dr. H. Ray Anderson Leads Vesper Service

Sunday night vespers will be in charge of Rev. H. Ray Anderson, leader of the February meetings. The anthem sung by the choir will be Tschaikowsky's "O Praise The Name of The Lord."

There are four additions to the choir this semester, one returning member, Larry Lowe, and three new members, Leah Voight, Gene McCurry, and Jack Proffitt.

Mary Jo Husk Elected President Of Bainonian

Mary Jo Husk, a senior from West Point, Miss., was elected president of Bainonian society in an all-day election held in the lobbies of the women's dormitories yesterday. She succeeds Sara Bolton to the office. She is a member of the YWCA cabinet and has been an active member of Bainonian.

Other second semester officers were also elected yesterday. Ruth Mack was chosen vice president; Harriet Walkup, secretary; Edith Evans and Bernice Smith, program secretaries; Joy Pinneo, pianist; Elinor Long, poster chairman; Louise Darden, sergeant-at-arms; and Marian Garwood and Ruth West, house chairmen. These officers will be installed at the meeting of the society tonight in Bainonian hall.

The program following the installation of officers will be entitled "Your Future in the World of Tomorrow." It will consist of fortune telling, and will be in charge of Barbara McCutcheon.

SCOTTY SIDE SLANTS

By the

NOT SO GREEN NOW!—

Although the wrestling squad has greener men this year than ever before, and also one of the smallest squads in a number of years, they have so far managed to give an excellent account of themselves. They are now well on their way to become State Champs. They have defeated Vanderbilt, and the KnoxvilleY, two of the toughest teams in the state, and they have left only Tennessee to contend with .Tennessee was severly whipped by Vandy and so that should give us some odds over them. Of course, we must have return engagements with Vandy, and the Knoxville Y, but with our men that are new to the mat this year learning new things every day (we hope), we stand more than an even chance to give them their second defeat at the hands of Coach Thrower's rasslers.

The new men on the mat are Evaul, our 121 pounder, who wrestled a few times last year; Herb Turner, our 128 man, McDaniels, 136, who threatens to turn into one of the best 136 pound men around here; Wood Everett, although a veteran wrestler from last year, has gone from the 136 to the 155 pound division, quite a jump in one year; Hahn wrestled a few times last year, but this season, is the first that he has seen steady competition; Hal "Blondy" Henschen, 175, is a sophomore and a newcomer to the grapplers this year. Our heavyweights, Dizney and Smith, are both fresh from the ranks of scrubs. This leaves only one real veteran, Edgar Meares, 145 pounder, on the squad.

HOLE-IN-ONE—

Some of you may be interested in knowing that we have one of those golfers around here that has that almost impossible luck of having made a hole-in-one. Miss Catherine Walters accomplished that feat before Christmas vacation. She was playing with several students who are in her golf class, coached by Lynn Tyndall, and made her hole-in-one on the first hole with her instructor and several spectators watching.

She assures me that it was beginner's luck, because she hasn't been able to duplicate the feat! . . . . .

GOOD ADVICE—

One of the handiest bits of advice I have encountered this year comes from the basketball coach at Alabama. His advice to a substitute he was about to send in the game was this: "On offense shoot baskets, on defense keep the other team from shooting baskets!"

INTERCLASS SPORTS

The interclass basketball league is in a three way tie between the juniors, sophomores, and seniors. The tie will be played off as soon as the February meetings are over, the first game, with the sophs playing the winner to decide the first-half championship.

The following is a list of the individual players in the league with the number of points they have scored in the first six games of the season. "Red" McCaskie, senior ace, leads the field with 84 points, an average of 14 points per game.

Girls Sports

Last Tuesday afternoon in a heated battle the Junior-Senior basketball team of the women's point system was defeated by the freshmen, 18-16. The freshman team, undefeated in their four games, claim the basketball championship for this year.

The point system groups are now taking their tests in stunts. Track and swimming will follow on the spring program.

Hinkebein Brings U. of K. Swimmers To Maryville Fri.

Next Friday night the Maryville swimming squad will have their first meet after a week's rest from their meet with the University of Chattanooga. The opponents of the Scotties will be the swimmers of the University of Kentucky, which will be led by Sherman Kinkebein, breaststroke ace and center on the Wildcat's football team. Hinkebein was on the All-American check list this year, and was on the All-Southeastern Conference team.

The meet will be held in the Bartlett pool at 7:30. On Saturday the splashers will hold another meet with the Tusculum Pioneers. Tusculum is the only other team in the Smoky Mountain Conference besides Maryville.

The Highlander's team will probably be the same with the exception of the loss of Gene Craine, ace diver for the Scots. Craine left school at the end of the semester. Although Maryville is not rated to tie the Wildcat's tail in the proverbial knot, they will give Kentucky a good meet. And on Saturday night, the tankmen will be heavy favorites over the mermen of Tusculum.

Swimmers Drop Meets To Chatt. Y And Eastern Ky.

The Chattanooga YMCA scored a close victory over the Maryville tankmen February 3, when they won over the Scotty swimmers by a mere 3 point margin, the final score being 39-36.

Maryville, severely handicapped by the loss of Capt. Findlay, who was out due to illness, was able to cop only four firsts out of the nine events. Frank Cross, slim swimmer for the Highlanders, won the 200 yd. free style and the 100 yd. free style, to lead the individual scoring for Maryville.

The feature event of the evening was the fancy diving, which was won by Gene Craine over Walters of Chattanooga, former Southeastern Conference champion. This was the last meet Craine will be in, as he is leaving school at the end of the semester. His loss will be serious to the Maryville mermen.

The other first for Maryvile came in the final event of the evening, the 200 yd. relay, which was one of the finest seen in the college pool. The team, composed of Stevenson, Lee, Felknor and Cross, managed to nose out the Chattanooga swimmers by a very small margin to win the event in the time of 1.56.

Highscorer for Chattanooga was Garden.

EAST KY. SWIMMING

The Maryville swimming team was out splashed by an Eastern Kentucky Teachers squad here two weeks ago by the score 42-33. The meet was close all the way, with the winner not being fully decided until the final relay race was won by Teachers to give them the necessary seven points to clinch the meet.

Maryville won four races. Akana the Maryville breastroke ace, took the 100 yd. breastroke, with Ritzman of Maryville coming along in second place. Frank Cross, frosh swimming star for the Scots, splashed his way to win over Brock of Eastern in the 200 yd. free style. Cross also won the 100 yd. free style, with Evans of Eastern second. The medley relay team, composed of Wilcox, Akana and Captain Findlay, won the only other first place for the Scotties.

Dickman of Eastern and Cross of Maryville, each took two firsts for individual honors. Dickman won the 50 yd. free style and the fancy diving. He also swam on the winning 200 yd. relay team. Dickman's time of 26.3 seconds in the 50 yd. free style, broke the college pool record.

Baby Baird Leads In Win Over LMU

Three Bairds Score 31 Pts.; Boydson-14, Weldon-11 Bill-6

The basketball team of Maryville college avenged their 54-35 defeat at the hands of the Lincoln Memorial team by downing LMU 49-44 in one of the closest games of the season played Friday evening, Feb. 3.

The Blue and Gray team played the same fine brand of ball as it did the previous game, but the team wearing the Orange and Garnet were playing on their home court, and were in their stride.

Baby Baird, who was held for only 2 points during the first game with LMU, gave the Lincoln Memorial basketeers a lesson in caging by scoring 14 of the Maryville points. Capt. Weldon Baird added his 11 points worth to the "Railsplitters" defeat.

Lineups:

LMU—Williams 3, Wolfe 11, Welch 3.

Bucaneers Push Scotty Basketeers Out Of SMC Race

The East Tennessee Teachers handed Maryville a decisive 54-45 set-back on the hardwood Monday night to give the Highland quintet their third conference defeat, and practically throw them out of the championshi ppicture.

Wallin, a tall gangly sophomore, led the scoring with pretty one hand shots that he couldn't miss and that netted him 18 points. Bowers, another of those tall lads from Teachers, stood under the basket and dumped in 14 points to be second high point man for the evening.

Dale Russell and Joe Etheredge were the only Maryville men in the second half who seemed to be able to hit the hoop. Russell scored 12 points before he went out on four personal fouls, and Joe Etheredge who replaced him in the center position, managed to swish five field goals for a total of ten points. Maryville was severely handicapped by the loss of Boydson Baird, who left the game via the four personal foul route, and Dale Russell, who followed suit in the fourth quarter.

The Maryville quintet looked stale, especially on their shots. The team as a whole took 73 shots at the hoop and only made nineteen, which explains in part the loss to the Bucanneers.

Coach Thrower's Grapplers Win Over Knoxville Y.M.C.A. Matmen, 19-13

Evaul And Henschen Pin Opponents. Al Crawford, Olympic Champ for Knox Y, Shows Stuff That Made Him Champ By Easily Pinning Smith

The wrestling squad of Maryville defeated the Knoxville Y grapplers Friday evening, February 3, by the score of 19-13. Along with the former Olympic champion, Al Crawford, the Y team brought several other champs who made the evening a very warm one for the Maryville grunters but a very interesting one for the spectators.

The Y threatened to take the lead in the very beginning when Miller had Evaul's shoulder blades very near the mat, but the 121 pounder of Maryville turned the trick, and pinned his man after 7 minutes and 17 seconds of wrestling.

Knoxville's YMCA team matched Maryville's five points in the second bout, however, when Joslin flattened Turner after less than three minutes wrestling. In the 136 pound class McDaniels of Maryville came very near pinning Kelly several times, but failed to finish the deed. McDaniels was awarded the decision, thus drawing 3 points for Maryville, and placing them 3 points in the lead. Ed Meares, of Maryville, also drew a decision over his opponent, Loebker in the 145 lb. class. In the following match, Wood Everett lost to Householder of Knoxville, by the decision of the referee.

Hahn and Adams then staged the closest match of the evening. The bout was event, and after two extra periods the decision was given to Hahn, who had his opponent's shoulders very close to the mat at the final whistle.

E. B. Smith of Maryville's team then went to work on Crawford of the Y. After two flying tackles which carried Mr. Crawford completely off the mat, Smith unfortunately allowed himself to become entangled in Al's arms and legs until his shoulders touched the mat after 3 minutes and 55 seconds of a splendid exhibition of scientific grappling by the former Olympic champ, Al Crawford.

With the score 14-13, and the match depending on the final bout, Hal Henschen flattened Francis, the Knoxville heavyweight, in 2 minutes and 22 seconds, and drew 5 points for the Maryville team.

Summary of the match is as follows: 121 lb. class—Evaul (M) pinned Miller, 7.17; 128, Joslin (Y) pinned Turner, in 2.55; 136, McDaniels (M) decisioned Loebker; 155 class, Householder (Y) decisioned Everett; 165, Hahn (M) decisioned Adams; 175, Crawford (Y) pinned Smith, 3.55; Heavyweight class, Henschen (M) pinned Francis, 2.22.

Highland Quintet Loses SMC Game To Eagles 39-27

The Maryville basketeers lost their second conference game of the year when they journeyed to Jefferson City, where the Carson-Newman Eagles put on a second half scoring spree to decisively win over the Scots 39-27.

Led by Hudson, their six foot three center who scored nine points, and Cummings and Elledge who made seven and eight points respectively, the Eagles came back in the second half on the short end of a 17-16 score to start pushing in shots from all angles, and at the same time keeping the Honakermen limited to two field goals in the second half.

Boydson Baird whipped the net for four fouls and two field goals for eight points to lead the low scoring Highlanders. Brother Weldon sank two field goals and three free throws for second honors with seven points.

Lineups:

Maryville 27		Carson-Newman 39
Wel. Baird 7	F	Cummings 7
Boydson Baird 8	F	Elledge 8
Russell 4	C	Hudson 9
Honaker 3	G	Brown 1
Bill Baird 3	G	Bowen 4
Etheredge 2		Catlett
Claybaugh		Cates
Husk		Bryan 3
		Reams 2
		Huddleston 5

Scots Get Chance To Square Things With C-N Tonight

Tonight the Carson-Newman Eagles will be at Maryville. The quintet from Jefferson City will be one of the toughest that Maryville has faced yet. When Maryville was in Jefferson City two weeks ago, their hosts were rather rude and handed them a 39-27 licking that was one of the most decisive beatings that Maryville has had this year.

When they last played Maryville was leading at half time 17-16, but in the second half, the Eagles came out and sank four field goals before the rattled Scotties could get organized. Maryville played far under par the second half, making only two field goals.

Tonight, you will want to watch Hudson, their lanky center. He was a one hand marvel on pivot shots on their home floor. What he will be like here remains to be seen. The game tonight should prove interesting, for the Highlanders are due for a comeback after losing a lackadaisical game to East Tennessee Teachers here Monday night. Maryville stands more than an even chance to beat her Carson-Newman jinx on her floor, and hand the Eagles a defeat, the first in two years.

BYRNE'S

February Meetings

Christ put faith in man's hands. This faith in Him is the victory; for it enables a man not to run away from life, nor to run directly into it, but to face all of life's situations. Faith in Him is the only way through.

In Jesus we overcome and become victors and not victims.

THURSDAY

"The Place of Christ in Time of Crisis"

Morning

"And He is Before All Things"

I Collossians 13

The Christ of the New Testament, of the church, and of personal experience is not something that can be passed by, but is a tremendous force.

Christ is the revealer, the image of the invisible God. "O that I might find him!" has been the cry of every devout Christian. We look into the face of Christ and we see our Father.

Jesus is also the ruler in our lives, and in the church. We give people the wrong idea of the church because we are stingy, mean, little, when He meant for us to be catholic, great.

The only unifying principle we have is Christ; in Him we are one. The church, our homes, our lives, in all things He rules.

"In Jesus Christ all things hold together."

Evening

"Come Unto Me"

Matthew 11

Jesus offers a gracious invitation; for He is personal, He is lowly and meek. And the acceptance of the invitation is conscious, because Christianity cannot be thrust down anyone's throat. We can only find Christ if we desire to find Him.

We cannot find rest without taking His yoke upon us: every day we must do something for Christ.

What we need is a real purpose for living. Then, by doing and learning of Him we can lift real burdens.

"Come unto me....Take my yoke upon you and learn of me."

FRIDAY

Morning

John 14:15-17

The doctrine of the Holy Trinity is not something that the church fathers invented but it comes out of the scriptures, out of Christ, out of experience.

Jesus Christ is the supreme example; and His spirit comes to help people, not to make them religious freaks; it comes to make them normal, not abnormal. There are three things that this Holy Spirit will do for you.

First, the spirit will convict, will show a person himself, will enable him to hear the still small voice.

Second, the spirit will convert, will change wrong to right, useless to useful.

Third, the spirit will consecrate, will deepen, strengthen you lives.

Evening

"Our Place in Christian Leadership in This Time of Crisis"

Isaiah 6:1-8; Matthew 4:17

The thing lacking in college students today today is a passion for a cause; yet church movements in the past testify that in the colleges has always been found a pasion for Christ. When the call isn't to war,, or kill, but to save, and heal, isn't there something on the campuses that will sweep young people to meet every need, to rise up and say, "Here am I; send me."?

The church of Jesus Christ needs intelligent, clear-cut, sacrificial leadership from the colleges. His invitation is to a partnership, a discipleship that dares to do things.

Gives Course Changes

little body to the fantastic story and as critics Richard Lockridge said, "There is not a fleck of satire in 'You Can't Take It With You', but only gargantuan absurdity, hilariously preposterous antics and the rumble of friendly laughter with madly comic people." But the play was not only a tremendous success on Broadway, but ran for over a year and a half in Chicago. Since then it has been enjoying great popularity as a current motion picture.

The production as it will be given here, contains a cast of eighteen headed by John Wintermute, Sara Bolton, Marion Northrup and Frank Brink.

An extensive advertising campaign has been mapped out by Palmer Mayo and will soon be put into effect. Rehearsals for the first two acts of the play have been in progress for nearly two weeks. Third act rehearsals began last Thursday.

The set was designed and adapted to the Maryville stage by Glen Young and John Wintermute early this week. Painting of the set began yesterday. The play is under the direction of Mrs. Nita E. West, associate professor of Dramatic Art.

cause people to fall in love regardless of rank or wealth. This potion is served to the guests at the betrothal banquet.

The second act opens at midnight after the drinking of the potion. Comic situations arise when the couples are mixed up, and Alexis, realizing his mistake, tries to get the Sorcerer to break the spell. The only way the spell can be broken is with the sacrifice of someone's life. The Sorcerer is elected to be the victim and ends his life by sinking through a trap door into oblivion. After his death, the love affairs are straightened and the logical couples reunited.

on form in these early cuts. The artists only wanted to illustrate certain incidents, and felt that line was the only necessary requirement.

"Earl Granville," a mezzotint by Walker, shows a type of engraving that puts emphasis on graduation of tone, and achieves great realism. This print is a very good example of the mezzotint technique.

"Smith's Yard", a lithograph by Whistler, is a very simple print, and shows a small part of a blacksmith's yard. Some of Whistler's greatest achievements are in the graphic arts, although he is probably best known for his work in oil.

"The Reader" is a line engraving by Greatback, and shows the success with which simple lines can portray reality. "Les Chapitres des Interpretations," is a sophisticated cartoon by Daumier, the well-knonw satirist on Frech social conditions of the last century.

On February 16 at 3 o'clock, Miss Frances Rich of the Fine Arts department will discuss the prints, and all interested are invited to attend. There are two more exhibitions scheduled to appear here during the second semester. They include American painting from colonial times to the present, and French peasant costumes. These three exhibits have been arranged through the American Federation of Arts of which Maryville college is a member.

Theta Epsilon Salutes New Girls In Program

Theta Epsilon is starting a series of salute programs, beginning this week with a salute to the new girls.

Following the meeting Florence Butman will give a reading, "Ferdinand, the Bull" and Bernard Boyett will perform a tap dance, accompanied by E. B. Emith. The former Marian Huddleston will entertain with piano and vocal selections.

Three Students From Maryville Will Attend Christian Association

Three Christian associations, the Student Volunteers, the YWCA and the YMCA, plan to send delegates to attend the annual conference of the State Student Christian association in Nashville, Feb. 17, 18, and 19. This is the sixth year such a conference has been held, and this year the general theme is "The Outlook for Christian College Students."

Dr. Victor Obenhaus, student pastor at Oberlin college, Ohio, will be the main speaker. The program includes lectures, interest groups, student forums, and a social program. The delegates will arrive on Friday and remain at the conference through Sunday morning.

Scarritt college is the host to the meetings and committees from the Christian associations of Ward-Belmont, Peabody, and Nashville have arranged the program. The local delegates will be appointed early next week to represent the Christian associations of the Maryville campus.

And then there was the Southerner who hated the Yankees so he told his little son that Santa Claus lived at the South Pole.

John S. Sloan To Give Liquified Air Exhibition Mon.

Fascinating Experiments To Be Demonstrated In College Chapel

John S. Sloan, experienced science instructor, will present a demonstration on liquid air at 7:00 next Monday evening in Voorhees chapel, announced Prof. Edgar Roy Walker, head of the Physics department, which is sponsoring the demonstration.

A number of strange and fascinating experiments can be performed with the ordinary material, air, after it is liquefied by subjecting it to a high pressure and lowering its temperature. Liquid air will freeze a banana so hard it can be used to drive nails into a plank. If a rubber ball is immersed in liquid air and dropped on the floor it breaks into pieces like glass. Even alcohol, a liquid which was once thought impossible to congeal, freezes solid in liquid air. Other novel experiments Mr. Sloan will perform include "frying" an egg on ice.

By taking advantage of the fact that nitrogen evaporates first, leaving practically pure oxygen, spectacular combustion experiments can be performed. Steel wire burns fiercely in this liquid and fuses into small pellets; which means that an operation requiring 300 degrees Fahrenheit has been accomplished in a liquid more than 300 degrees below zero. Ignition of a mixture of aluminum powder and liquid air produces such intense heat that even the iron dish will be burned.

A few of the colleges and universities where Mr. Sloan's demonstrations have been enthusiastically received include Vanderbilt university, University of Miami, Georgia Tech, University of Florida, University of Georgia, Westminster college, and University of South Carolina.

No admission will be charged.

Twenty-One Students Register At Office For Coming Semester

Twenty-one new students registered at the Personnel office at the beginning of the second semester. Ten of those who enrolled were former students while the remaining eleven were new to Maryville college. Forty-six students left at the end of or during the first semester, having completed their graduation requirements or for various other reasons.

At present the total enrollment of the college is 755, and the total of students who have been at Maryville this year is 801.

The changes in schedule which were made this week were fewer than usual according to the Personnel office, which attributes this to the fact that the registration was much more accurate and more time was given to each student when he registered than had previously been possible. The office also stated that this method of registration by classes with more time devoted to each class was better and easier. There were very few lines of students waiting to register at any time as there had been during other registration periods.

Musical Program Will Include Bach Chorale, Trio, Choir At Vespers

Dr. William P. Stevenson, college pastor, will take "The Christian Life is a Strenuous One," for his theme at the regular vesper service tomorrow evening at 7:00.

Special music will be in the form of a two piano number, Johann Bach's Chorale, "Sheep May Safely Graze," played by Ruth Duggan and Louise Marshall. The chorale is a distinct part of Bach's music. It was the custom of Bach to write a new musical service every Sunday, based on the chorale for that Sunday. He is noted for this phase of his work, because of the fact that the German Lutheran church had a different chorale each Sunday. The two piano arrangement of "Sheep May Safely Graze" was made by Mary Lowe. The string trio, composed of Zula Vance, Erwin Ritzman, and John Guinter, will play the Second movement, "Adagio" of Anton Dvorak's "Trio in B flat." The anthem for this Sunday will be "O Thou in Whose Presence," by James, as arranged by Gain.

Wintermute, Bolton, Brink, And Northup Head Cast Of Eighteen In Athenian-Bainonian Bid For Theta Alpha Phi Cup

Final preparations for the Athenian-Bainonian mid-winter production, "You Can't Take It With You", to be presented next Friday night at 8:15 in Voorhees chapel, are progressing rapidly, according to a statement issued today by Glenn Young, stage manager. The set was finished early this week and the remainder of the work will be completed several days ahead of schedule.

SARA BOLTON

"You Can't Take It With You" has a cast of eighteen, with John Wintermute and Sara Bolton, Marion Northup and Frank Brink in the leading roles. The part of Grandfather Vanderhof will be an entirely new role for Wintermute, but promises to be one of his best. He will be remembered for his performance in "Night Must Fall," and "Tovarich," as well as for several recent one-act plays. Sarah Bolton will take the part of Penelope Sycamore, his daughter. Miss Bolton is well known for her character roles. She has appeared in "Night Must Fall" and "Tovarich."

This will be the first performance of Miss Northup before a Maryville audience. She will have the romantic lead of Alice and opposite her will be Frank Brink in the role of Tony Kirby. Brink was recently seen in a character role in "Tovarich."

Other members of the cast include: Ed Thomas as Mr. Kirby; Carol Ward as Mrs. Kirby; Essie, Charlotte Colby; Ed Carmichael, Williams Gehres; Paul Sycamore, Charles Fish; Boris Kolenkhov, George Hunt; Reba, Mary Frances Spurlock; Donald, David Hall; Mr. DePinna, George Tibbetts; Henderson, Robert Wilcox; Olga, Edith Gillette; the Three Government Agents: Bob Fisher, Melvin McGhee and Percy Martin.

"You Can't Take It With You" will be presented here for the first time in

Women Debate In Contests Today

Tournament Scheduled For March 4 With Union In All Divisions

Maryville's women's debate squad, represented by Arda Walker, Pauline Cope, Sara Lee Hellums, and Curtmarie Brown, will meet three other colleges of East Tennessee today in dual contests. The program as scheduled is Carson-Newman at 8:30 this morning, Tusculum at 2 o'clock this afternnoon , and East Tennesse Teachers this evening at each of the respective schools.

The contests will consist of two debates at Teachers and Tusculum and one at Carson-Newman.

Walker and Cope will uphold the affirmative side of the Pi Kappa Delta question: "Resolved: that the government should cease to use public funds (including credits) for the purpose of stimulating business." Hellums and Brown will uphold the negative side.

Maryville will be represented by 16 debaters at the state speech tournament to be held March 4, at Union college in Jackson, Tennessee. The tournament will consist of a freshman division and a varsity division, with both of the tournaments running simultaneously.

Professor Queener stated Thursday that none of the teams were definitely picked as yet with the exception of the men's varsity team which will consist of Arnold Kramer, Clifford Proctor, George Webster, and Otto Pflanze.

Besides the debate tournament members of the varsity team will take part in the various other speech contests. Arnold Kramer will enter the oratory contest in the varsity men's division; Clifford Proctor, after-dinner speaking; George Webster, impromptu speaking; and Otto Pflanze, extempore.

In the women' division, members of the debate squad will take part in the other contests; however, these teams have not as yet been definitely decided upon.

Rev. Seel Will Speak At Wednesday Chapel

The Reverend E. A. Seel will speak at the Wednesday morning chapel service on "Christian Work in South America." Mr. Seel is a graduate of Grove City college, Pennsylvania, and of Western seminary. He has been a missionary in Chile, South America, for a number of years, and is now in the United States working in the interest of missions. He is at present the executive secretary of the Missionary Board of the Presbyterian church U.S. A., in Colombia.

For two years, 1912-1913 and 1913-1914, Mr. Seel was teacher of German and French at Maryville college. While here as a teacher, he met Miss Miriam Rood, who later became his wife. Their daughter, Betty, a junior here, will see her father for the first time in four years.

Four To Attend TSCA Conference

Students Representing YM And YWCA Leave For 3-Day Meeting

Four Maryville college students, Fred Rhody, Russ Stevenson, Ruth Andrews, and Jane Law, representing the college YM and YWCA, left yesterday for Nashville where they will attend the three-day conference of the Tennessee Student Christian Associations at Scarritt college.

Planned for students, faculty advisors, student pastors, and association secretaries, the conference has as its theme, "The Outlook for Christian College Students"; and, based on this topic, there will be forums on "Students and Campus Living", "The Church in the World Today", "Students in the Educational System," "Students in the Thought and Action of Youth Movements", and "Southern Students and Human Welfare".

Victor Obenhaus, student pastor of Western Reserve university, will be the main platform speaker giving three addresses. Other leaders of the conference include students and professors of most of the Tennessee colleges and universities.

Rhody and Stevenson left early Friday morning with President and Mrs. R. W. Lloyd; Andrews and Law went in the afternoon with Professor George D. Howell. The four students will return to the campus last Sunday evening.

Hitch, Manges At YW

With Garnet Manges furnishing the musical background, Ellen Hitch will read Negro poetry at the YWCA program Sunday afternoon. Miss Hitch, a graduate of Maryville, will read from modern Negro poets, and will probably include "The Glory Road."

"Sorcerer" Cast And Scheduled For March 10th

Woodring And Huddleston Have Leads In Gilbert-Sullivan Comic Opera

Mr. Ralph Colbert today announced the cast for the opera "The Sorcerer," which is scheduled to be presented by the Maryville college glee clubs and orchestra March 10. Rehearsals have already begun for this work from the pens of Gilbert and Sullivan.

The romantic leads of Alexis and Aline will be sung by Dick Woodring and Elizabeth Ann Huddleston respectively. Woodring, a junior, is a veteran of the Maryville singing stage, and Miss Huddleston's coloratura voice is well-adapted to the role of Aline. Edwin Goddard has his last comedy role on this stage as Doctor Daly, and Ruth Woods will portray Constance. Both these persons were soloists in the "Messiah" and have had roles in local productions of Gilbert and Sullivan operas for the past two years.

The title role of the Sorcerer has been assigned to David Hall; in the opera his name is John Wellington Wells. Harriet Barber portrays Lady Sangazure, Lynn Birchfiel is Sir Marmaduke Pointdextre, Warren Van Blarcom is the Notary, and Louise Allen is Mrs. Partlet.

This is the third year that the combined glee clubs have presented a Gilbert and Sullivan opera. The first one was the "Mikado," in 1937, and last year they presented "Iolanthe." The college little symphony orchestra makes its second appearance of the year when it accompanies these productions.

Carnegie Prints Discussed Thur.

Mediums Explained By Miss Rich, Instructor In Fine Arts Dept.

In discussing the Carnegie set of prints which have been loaned to the college for the two week period from February 7-21, Miss Frances Rich of the Fine Arts department stressed the mediums in which the prints are done, and explained the lines of some of the prints before a group of interested students and faculty in the Baker art gallery on Thursday afternoon.

The prints, 24 in number, are done in many mediums, each exhibiting very good examples of their type, include; etching, aquatint, engraving, lithograph, stipple, woodcut, and mezzotint. Miss Rich explained how each one of these mediums done; etchings are scratched on metal plates and then the acid is allowed to eat grooves where the scratches were originally. The metal is then washed, inked, and printed. The aquatint is a form of engraving, differing from the etching in that the acid is allowed to eat out large spaces which are then, after printing, painted in with water color. Mezzotint is a method of copper plate engraving in which there is a gradual variation of tone, producing a print which looks very much like a photograph. Stippling is the method of employing dots instead of lines to produce the effect.

Dr. Harrison Ray Anderson Closes February Meetings; Raises Over $400 for Organ

Gifts On Wednesday Exceed Necessary Amount By Hundred Dollars

Returns from the appeal made by Dr. H. Ray Anderson in chapel Wednesday morning indicate that the minimum amount needed to complete the fund inaugurated a year ago to install a pipe organ in the college chapel was exceeded by nearly $100.

The fund had been built by gifts and pledges to an amount within $300 of the total needed and the order for the organ had been placed. Dr. Anderson, while on the campus, had heard about the fund and had shown an unusual interest in the project. On Wednesday morning after the February meetings proper had closed, but before the audience was dismissed, he surprised all who were present by calling forward those people who had been active in raising the fund and announcing that it was to be completed at that time.

President Lloyd stated Thursday morning that the results of the unexpected appeal "will probably make it possible to include in the organ some other features, including chimes, which were to have been ommitted because of lack of funds."

The organ is expected to be ready for use before the college year closes.

Speaker Delivers Seventeen Services During Nine Day Visit

The sixty-third series of February meetings closed Wednesday morning with Dr. H. Ray Anderson delivering his seventeenth sermon before Maryville students. His subject was: "Christ—The Way, The Truth, The Life." Pledge cards designed to carry out the theme of the 1939 series, "The Christian Faith in a World of Crisis," were distributed to all students, and the service closed with the choir singing the benediction.

Before returning to his pastorate in Chicago, Dr. Anderson went to Augusta, Georgia, to join his wife and some friends for a few days. The Rev. Sidney E. Stringham left immediately after the service for St. Louis to resume his work as pastor of the Epworth Methodist Episcopal church there.

Services were held morning and evening each day since February 7, excepting Saturday and Wednesday. Including his sermon at the New Providence church Sunday morning and his informal discussion before the Student Volunteers that evening, Dr. Anderson spoke seventeen times during his nine-day visit in Maryville. A synopsis of each of his regular meetings addresses follows.

SUNDAY EVENING

Text: Exodus 24:29; Judges 16:20

Dr. Anderson contrasted two Biblical characters, Moses and Samson. Samson is characterized as an adolesent who never grew up, the ruler of Israel for twenty years yet unable to rule his own passions. Moses was truest to the highest, one who was in the presence of the holy. His countenance shown, but he was not aware of it. People today are like Samson, eyeless in Gaza, tainted by a barren skepticism. Congregations, colleges, individuals either glow like Moses or are blind like Samson.

MONDAY MORNING

"The Kingdom in a World of Crisis"

Text: Matthew 6:10

Dr. Anderson defined the kingdom of heaven as the fatherly will of God in the life of the world. Man can understand Jesus Christ as Prophet and Forum Discussion Planned By I.R.C.

Dr. Ruth Stephens Secured As Visiting Lecturer

"Can Prime Minister Chamberlain keep the Peace in Europe?" will be the subject of Dr. Ruth Stephens in her lecture and open forum discussion before the International Relations club Thursday evening at 6:45. Dr. Stephens, who is considered one of the most brilliant professors at the University of Tennessee, has been secured by club officials as one of their visiting lecturers.

Dr. Stephens talk, which will be open to all students, and town people who wish to attend, is expected to center around the Munich settlement of France, England, Germany, and Italy made last fall. This settlement, which has been whole-heartedly condemned by many and just as whole-heartedly upheld by others, is considered one of the most important in recent European history. Future demands of the dictatorships and the attitude of the democracies, especially England, will probably be an important element in the lecture.

A club official issued the statement today that "The International Relations club has been endeavoring to get Dr. Stephens for a lecture here since last fall. Miss Stephens has been highly recommended by those who have heard her lecture previously before Maryville audiences. Maryville students who have done summer school work at the University and have been in her class on International Relations, have expressed a desire to hear her in a lecture here. We feel particularly fortunate in being able to secure her for our February 23 meeting."

Frosh Debate Teams For Union Tournament Announced By Queener

The freshman debate teams that will participate in the freshman debate tournament, to be held this year at Union university, were announced this week by Professor Verton M. Queener, debate coach.

The two men's teams selected to make the trip were George Tibbetts and Glenn McAfee with Frank Cross as alternate, and Hilton Wick and Henry Wick with Thomas Stahl as alternate.

The women's teams were Lucille Lynch and Betty Felix with Dorothy Buchanan as alternate, and Edna Gleaton and Janet Lindsay with Barbara Parsons as alternate.

The questions for debate at the tournament is: Resolved, that the United States should form an alliance with Great Britain.

YMCA Holds Tea For New Women Students Friday, February 17

Following an annual custom, the YWCA entertained the new girls for this semester with a tea in the Y rooms yesterday from 4:30 till 5:00. The new girls attending were Suzanne Fickes, Alma Loy, Mildred Sayler, Florence Barber, Mary Lynch, and Naomi Mann. Besides these, all members of the cabinet, the Advisory board, and Nu Gamma leaders were invited. Sue Lupton and Mary Orr poured tea.

Under the direction of the Social committee, composed of Etta Culbertson and Virginia Boys, the following girls helped plan the tea: Mary Darden, in charge of invitations; Charlotte Moughton, decorations; Ruth Mack, music; and Barbara McCutcheon, refreshments.

Prof. Ellis Tells About "Hall Of Fame"

By CHARLOTTE COLBY

That rainy evening was just exactly like all other rainy evenings and we were in an equally unstudious and unable-to-concentrate mood as we entered the library, secured the necessary references and attempted to dig a few gullies in the old gray matter. True to custom, we soon found ourselves staring at space instead of at our books, and, almost before we realized that we weren't accomplishing anything whatsoever, we found ourselves confronted with the grave eyes of a scholarly middle-aged gentleman with a frock coat and a kind expression. "Dr. Isaac Anderson" we read, and wondered as we had several times before just who he was and how he rated that place of honor. This time we'd find out about his and all the other faces that looked down on us every day of the world from the library walls.

We found only one person there who really knew all there was to know about them, and we discovered that he was ready to supply us with stories about them all. Since you have undoubtedly caught yourself in the same to accompany us as our college librarian, Mr. Horace Lee Ellis, takes us on a miniature tour of inspection of Maryville's hall of fame.

First, above and to the left of the wall directly behind the main desk, is the picture which first caught our attention—that of Dr. Isaac Anderson, the man whose little "Log college", Union academy, founded in 1802, grew into the Maryville college we know.

Beside him hangs a portrait of Dr. Samuel Tyndale Wilson, the red-haired language professor who became one of the most beloved of all the leaders in the history of the college. He was its fifth president, and this week, as president emeritus, is celebrating his eighty-first birthday.

On the right hand is a portrait of a kind and lovely lady, Mrs. Mary Copely Thaw, the donor of Thaw hall. With her husband, she contributed nearly a quarter of a million dollars to the endowment and plant and current expenses of the college.

Over the entrance we notice two more portraits, which, Mr. Ellis explains, are those of two former presidents of the college, Dr. John J. Robinson, its second president, and Dr. P. M. Bartlett, its third president.

Then as we stroll around to the right wing of the library, we find on the wall nearest to the library entrance, the portraits of three men who look very important. One was a great educator, another a professor, and the third a student. The portrait on the left is an old engraving of the great Horace Mann, while the engraving on the right is one of the Rev. William Minnis, first

Now Is The Time

It's difficult to believe that any of us could have attended the services of the February meetings without being affected by them. Some people, it is true, have felt the effect more than others; but, almost without exception, all of us have been stirred deeply by the meetings, and by the messages.

One of the very valuable results of experiences such as we have gone through at these services, is the desire we find growing in us to make of ourselves better men and women. All of us, as we listened to the preacher, were conscious of our shortcomings, and were conscious also of wanting to do something about these shortcomings.

Now is the time to start doing something about them. This college campus, just as any other campus, affords opportunities for the development of the finest type of characters. Likewise, there are plenty of ways at hand by which a person may progressively lower his character. No sane person would consciously choose a course leading to misery: why do people allow themselves to drift unconsciously into this course? If we could see ourselves as we will be twenty-five years from now, many of us would make radical changes in our ways of living.

This isn't intended as a sermon. It's an appeal to the common sense of each of us, to build our living around those ways which we know are the best ways of living.

Liberalism Or Radicalism—

(Reported From Los Angeles Collegian)

During the past five years there has been a definite trend toward radicalism in the United States. Number of radicals, that is, persons who voted as members of radical political parties, reached an all-time high in 1936 and is likely to increase by 1940.

The question, "Who is a radical?" has long been debated. Lincoln, Wesley, Luther, and other reformers were known as radicals in their time and the wisdom of their actions was not realized until after their deaths. Communist, Socialist, progressive, pension, and a score of Utopian parties are generally conceded to be radical in the accepted sense of the word. Webster defines a radical as "one who advocates sweeping changes in law and methods of government with the least possible delay."

The World war ended with economic radicalism very much to the fore in Europe. The Bolsheviki had seized power in Russia, and the Republican party ruled Germany. The Labor party was gaining in Great Britain. Socialism flared in America but disappeared when the railroads were returned to private ownership in 1920. Nineteen twenty-one was Communism's biggest year of that decade but the theory had lost many followers and dropped far back by 1930. By 1932, at the dawn of the Roosevelt administration, the radical trend was almost nil.

The New Deal and its many changes, especially those proposed in methods of government, stirred the embers of radicalism again and the liberal outlook of the administration fanned the political flame. After the very high radical vote of 1936, the Democrat administration again brought forth new changes with the same apparent result as before. Many new political affiliations sprang up, foremost of these being the pension plans and the newly constructed Progressive party. The 1940 election will be the first absolute barometer upon the latest phase of the trend toward radicalism.

A Real Place

During the sixty-three years that Maryville college has conducted February meetings many good speakers have visited the college but none has left so lasting an impression as Dr. H. Ray Anderson. As a speaker he was sincere and convincing and his series of talks on "The Christian Faith in a world of Crisis" brought a renewed insight and spiritual refreshment to the college.

He will probably be longest remembered, however, for the interest he took in the students and in their efforts to raise the needed amount for a pipe organ for chapel. His surprise move in completing the organ fund on last Wednesday was eclipsed only by his personal donation of one hundred dollars and he has made for himself a real place in the hearts of the students and faculty of Maryville college.

UP OUR HALL

By GEORGE L. HUNT

An unusual magazine came to my attention the other day. It is called "Think." I can find no subscription price on it, and there is no big amount of space devoted to its editorial board or its management. Yet its contributors are some of the most distinguished men in America and its articles deal with timely topics in a new and fresh way. It seems to be devoted to the purpose which its title suggests, to make men think. I mention it here so that if you see a shiny-covered magazine with nothing on its cover but blackness, a suggestive whisp of clouds, and five letters, THINK, you will pick it up and glance at it. I'd like to know more about the progressive group that sponsors this journal.

A few weeks ago Echo reporters asked Maryville students the question "Do you favor President Roosevelt's plan to establish a civilian air corps as he discussed it in his January speech to Congress?" About half the college enrollment were asked and the response was 60 percent in favor of the plan and 40 percent opposed to it. The seniors were most opposed to it, although a slim majority favored the proposal. In this class the voting was 51 per cent for and 49 percent against it. Sophomores counted 59 percent for and 41 percent against the plan, and the freshmen and juniors were about the same, each having approximately 65 percent for and 45 percent of their number against the measure. If the plan does go through, it will vitally affect college men. The convenience of the nearby airport perhaps makes it especially meaningful to students on this campus.

CLOSE RELATIONS

Though moon-light and flowers in rose-covered bowers bring visions of love and romance,
Though tonight you are charming, and yet so disarming,
I'll merely ask you to dance.
Then you'll laugh as you say in your musical way,
"Why, honey, you know that I'd love to."
As we dance I shall see how the rest envy me,
But I'll just keep staring above you.
Yet I do love you madly; I admit it quite gladly.
It's a wonder, in fact, I don't blister.
So it's not that I'm lifeless that you see me quite wifeless—
It's only because you're my sister.

LIFE CYCLE OF A COLLEGE STUDENT

"Collegium students" is the zoological name applied to that biological species which first appears as a worm-like larva (just "worm" for short); spends approximately four years in the quiescent pupa stage, sleeping and dreaming; and then suddenly emerges mysteriously as a lovely fragile butterfly-like creature, ready to flutter out in the world, to sip honey and make itself the envy and the wonder of the whole animal kingdom.

During the first year, the worm is of a greenish color, and feeds vociferously upon butter pecan ice-cream cones, a peculiar substance known as "gooium stickium," (which it devours together with huge slabs of a doughy cake), and any other edible thing it can get its powerful vice-like jaws clamped into.

During this period, the worm seldom leaves its bed, except to forage for food thrice daily. Occasionally, it ventures forth to sit with a number of other worms in a room, where a creature of a different species attempts to teach them how to grow up to be fine intelligent butterfly things.

The head of the worm is disproportionately large at this time, probably because of the numerous air bubbles within it. In general, during this first year, however, col-

During the second and third years the worm generally offensive worms are soon exterminated.

During the second and thrd years the worm generally loses some of its characteristics and acquires others. It continuously produces an annoying sound in this manner: "I, I, I, I, I!" Its favorite habitat is still its bed, but it frequently can be detected in drug stores, Turner's, the Y store, or any other place where food flourishes.

The moment the worm has passed through the fourth year of its development (sometimes), its whole appearance undergoes a remarkable metamorphosis. In a trice it appears as a wonderful butterfly-like animal, with beautifully-colored wings and sensitive antennae. Its parents and friends come from miles to see it in its newly-acquired glory. The other worms look up to it in envy and awe, and wish that they, too, might grow beautiful wings. And collegium studens having received his education, proudly flutters away into the big world, to seek its honey and its fortune.

TALK OF THE WEEK . By Arlene Phelps

February Meetings Close

(Cont. from Page One)

Priest, but the last citadel that falls is the surrender of man's soul to asknowledge Him as king. The paradox of the kingdom is that it is within and without of men, it is present yet to come. Christ's way is to make a fusion of God's way and Man's way, and the church's work is to strive to bring this about. The kingdom of God is the only thing that will save the world today.

Text: Revelations 3:10

The minister developed the verse picturing Christ as standing at the unopened door of men's hearts waiting to come in. He characterized Him as "always a cultured gentleman with the insight of love." The words are directed to any man as an invitation to the fellowship of the feast with Him. The things that must be overcome by students are fear and timidity, pride, the fear of changing their minds, and the fear of the opinion of the other fellow.

TUESDAY MORNING

Text: Galatians 6

As in the laboratory there are laws that are always the same, so in the spiritual world there are immutable laws. The person who multiplies two times two and gets five is guilty of the sins of commission, and he who multiplies and gets three is guilty of the sins of ommission. But it is not the statement that is wrong, it is the answer. Warped personalities are the result of being fooled in life, seen in the drunkard, the skeptic, and the liar. "Be not deceived," express your right self. God is not mocked in the laboratory of the soul.

Evening

"The Direction of Desire"

Text: I Kings 3:5

College at its best is showing a man his abilities and then having them ask to have these abilities brought out. All we do is the result of desire, and we are free in choosing what we should desire after. This freedom of a man's will, the gift of a sovereign God, is part of man's greatest heritage. The directing of desire in right channels is seen in the lives of men like Albert Schweitzer and Admiral Byrd. Paul is an example of changed desire, from wanting to persecute to wanting to preach Christ. Jesus Christ makes a man want to be something other than he is and gives his power to achieve.

WEDNESDAY MORNING

"Christ—The Way, The Truth, The Life"

Text: John 14

The church has not accepted Christ in His fullness. He is the way, the truth, and the life. He is the way to our truest self, beyond and in time. To men who want more than an example, He is the truth personalized. As science has its mystery, so the mystery of religion is that Jesus is the whole truth, the individual Saviour yet the Saviour of the whole world. For those who get lost following the way and feel a doubt of the truth, He is the life. Man receives that life as he enters into Christ and allows Christ to enter him. This new birth makes the way possible, truth reasonable, and the life open to all men. He is in the crisis with us, He who mastered crisis.

French Club Has Party

Irma Sue Pate was hostess to the French club last Wednesday evening at her home in Maryville. The decorations were in blue, white, and red, the colors of the French tricolor, and French games were played by the twenty-seven members present. The committee which planned the games was headed by Sarah Taylor, president of the club. Mary Deane Allen and Margaret Hodges prepared the refreshments.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hovel and Miss Frances Wilkinson were the faculty guests.

Mrs. Snyder Invited To Read Paper Before Association Of Deans

Mrs. Grace Pope Snyder, supervisor of women's residence, has been invited to read a paper to be read at the meeting of the National association of Deans of women. This meeting will be held from February 21 to 24 in Cleveland, Ohio.

There has been established this year a section in the association which is devoted to the deans of church related colleges. It is for this section that Mrs. Snyder has prepared her paper entitled "Distinctive Elements in the Personnel Program of the Church Related College." Occording to her observation, 41 percent of all institutions of higher learning are church related colleges, and take care of one-third of the nation's college students. Mrs. Snyder emphasizes that "these colleges should be not only church colleges, but distinctly Christian colleges, and as such they can offer unique services, which ordinary universities and colleges do not offer. They can make central in the entire program the development of true Christian character."

Play Skit At Theta Tonight

At the weekly meeting of Theta in Theta hall at 6:45 this evening, a short skit from the play "You Can't Take It With You" will be given by members of the cast. There will also be a business meeting at which nominations from the floor for new officers will be received. Music will be furnished by Kathleen Cissna.

Not Ready For War

A poll just conducted by the Student Opinion Surveys of America among the male collegians of the nation reveals that if the nation went to war today for other reasons than the defense of the country, the United States government would find less than two ready volunteers out of every ten college men. However they are quite ready to defend the country.

FROM THE "Y"—

The following letter was received by Coach Thrower last week. Offering this in comment we might say that the wrestling meet that we have with the Knoxville YMCA each year are one of the best from the viewpoint of not only the wrestlers, but also from the viewpoint of the spectators. Their team is always a tough one for Maryville, and an interesting match, fast and furious, can always be expected when the Y blows into town.

Coach Thrower
Maryville College,
Maryville, Tennessee
Dear Coach Thrower:

I just wanted you to know how much our boys enjoyed the wrestling meet at Maryville last week. Coach Maher and several of the boys that I talked to said it was one of the nicest meets they had had, and they enjoyed the fine treatment and the fellowship very much.

Cordially yours,
George F. Barber, Physical Director.

Thanks a lot for your letter, Mr. Barber, and might we say that the same goes for us, too.

INTERCLASS SPORTS

A basket by Russ Stevenson in the final seconds of the interclass game between the Juniors and Seniors resulted in a 24-22 victory for the Juniors. This gives the Juniors the right to play the Sophomores Monday night to determine the first half champions.

The schedule of the second half of the basketball tournament is as follows:

Feb. 22—
Sr. and Frosh
Jr. and Sophs
Feb. 23

Unless some announcement is made these games will start at seven and eight o'clock so be on time so we can get them over with.

JUNIORS 24—SENIORS 22

The Junior class cagers downed the Senior class basketball team by the score of 24 to 22, last Wednesday night.

Although his team was on the short end of the score, "Red" McCaskie dropped 16 points through the basket; therby doing two points better than his 14 points per game average.

Jimmy Rae led his team to the victory with 10 of the 24 points to his credit.

Wrestlers Go To Vanderbilt Today

The Maryville mat squad is in Nashville today where they have a meet with Vanderbilt university. Eight men made the trip with Coach Thrower. A victory over Vandy there would go a long way towards winning the coveted state championship for the Scots. The Maryville grapplers are rated an even chance to give Vanderbilt their second straight defeat; however, Clem Hahn, 165 pounder, has been sick the past week, and is probably out of condition.

Tuesday night Maryville will play host to the wrestlers of the University of Tennessee. The Vols have been beaten by Vandy and the Knoxville Y. U-T, however, handed the Y matmen a decided whipping Thursday night, and they may give Maryville plenty of trouble.

Maryville has also scheduled a return match with the Knoxville Y in Knoxville for the end of the week, and one with Tennessee the first of the following week. This will close the wrestling team's schedule for the year.

The men who made the trip to Vanderbilt are: Phil Evaul, 121; Herb Turner, 126; McDaniels, 135; Edgar Meares, 145; Woody Everett, 155; Clem Hahn 165; Hal Henschen, 175; and H. Dizney, heavyweight.

Maryville To Meet Tusculum Tonight

The Scottie swimmers face their first conference opposition in the Tusculum Pioneers tonight. Maryville, though handicapped by the loss of Stevenson and Craine, will be splashing with good chances to set the Pioneer squad under. This meet is the Highlanders' sole conference meet at home.

The statistics show the teams fairly evenly matched. Maryville's defeat last night will not help the lads physically, but should point them against Tusculum. The shakeup in the lineup will probably hold in tonight's meet.

The mermen will clash in Bartlett pool at 7:30. It will be the first of a two-meet series, the second being held at Tusculum in two weeks. Maryville has won for several years.

Next Friday Maryville meets the Auburn Tigers from down in southern Alabama. The Tigers boast one of the best teams in the southeastern conference. It is the first crack the Scotties have had at Auburn in several seasons. Maryville should give the Auburn splashers a hard meet. The Highland-team, rather green at the beginning of the season, is beginning to show its colors. There is no return meet with Auburn.

Highlanders Are Outsplashed By Kentucky Mermen

The Hinkebein Wildcats from the University of Kentucky easily outswam Maryville's squad last night, running up a score of 54 points to Maryville's 21.

Maryville showed up very well, however, taking into consideration that Kentucky is a very strong southeastern team, rated to have better than even chances to take Tennessee tonight. The Highlanders counted two firsts, and two seconds to Kentucky's seven firsts and five seconds.

Hinkebein, Kentucky's star center last season, was as good as expected, sharing top scoring honors with Roberts. Roberts has been swimming the fastest fifties in the Southeastern conference this season. Each of these men had 11 points for their night's work. The Scotties high scorer for the evening was Cross with 8 points. His time in the two hundred yard free style lowered the college record. Gene Hudson accounted for Maryville's other first in the 400 yard free style.

The Maryville splashers face Tusculum tonight in what should be a very good meet in light of the improvement last night. Coach Gillingham pushed in a changed lineup which kept Kentucky pulling hard in every race. The team, however, missed Craine in the diving and Russ Stevenson in the dashes. Stvenson will not be back in the lineup until the Auburn meet next Friday. The main change in the team is the addition of Heydinger to the medley relay, and Akana to the 200 yd. relay. Felknor has also been changed, from the dashes to distance, showing good form in his new duties by taking a second in the 400.

Tonight's meet begins at 7:30 in the Bartlett pool.

Basket In Final Minute Wins For Maryville 40-39

The Maryville quintet came from behind in the second half of their basketball game with Carson-Newman Saturday night, to squeeze out a 40-39 victory over the Eagles. Maryville, who started out with an early lead, soon relinquished their small margin to Carson-Newman and at the half they were on the short end of a 20-16 score. Their second half drive for victory was climaxed by a pretty field goal in the last minute of play by Clabaugh, a substitute.

Dale Russell, sophomore center for the Scots, lead the way for the victory by hitting the hoop for 15 points. Hudson, Eagle star, tallied 18 points to lead the scoring for both teams. The victory over Frosty Holt's club avenged the 39-27 licking the Highlanders too earlier in the season on the Eagles' home floor. Maryville looked impressive with her passing attack, showing up better than usual. Her shooting, however, was still weak, with easy crip shots being missed time after time. The team as a whole looked better than they have in quite a number of games. This was a Smoky Mountain Conference victory for Maryville.

Cumberland Falls 42-36 In Third Straight S.M.C. Win For Highlanders

Climaxing a week of fast basketball the Maryville cagers handed the Cumberland quintet a 42-36 drubbing here last night. Weldon Baird, older of the famous Baird brothers, was "hot", hitting the basket with consistent accuracy for 16 points.

The game was Maryville's all the way with the Highlanders gaining an early lead and never once having it threatened. The score at the half was 23-7, the second half merely being a repition of the first with the exception that Edwards, Cumberland six-footer, had found his eye and was sinking one hand shots from all angles thus giving his team a slight scoring advantage over the Scots. Edwards tallied 19 points. Eight field goals and three fouls.

Some of the best playing was done by Bill Baird. Bill, who doesn't do much of the shooting as a rule except for an occasional long shot, is a man mountain on defense, and last night he was at his best. He was easily the best ball handler and defensive man on the floor.

This game marks the third straight victory after the defeat at the hands of Teachers. Although it does not give Maryville a very large chance at the Conference crown, there is a possibility of their annexing the title. A lot depends on the games that will be played this week away from home.

Lineups:

Maryville 42		Cumberland 36
W. Baird 16	F	Conwill
B. Baird 1	F	Ligon 1
Russell 9	C	Fisher
Bill Baird 3	G	Edawrds 19

LAST HOME GAME

The game with Cumberland last night was the last home game for the Highland quintet this season. This week they will play Monday night at Milligan college, on Tuesday night they play East Tenn. Teachers, and on Saturday night they go to Tusculum. On the following week they play Emory-Henry there on Monday the 27th, and King the following night.

Scots Come From Behind To Whip Milligan 32 To 30

The Scotty basketeers drove out a second close victory within a week when they handed the Conference champs, Milligan, a 32-30 lacing. The game was a typical Maryville one, the Highlanders trailing at the half 21-15, and still behind going into the final minutes of play and then making a vicious hard drive to overcome their opponents lead in the last minute or two.

A basket by Dale Russell clinched the game for Maryville, when with about 45 seconds to go he stood under the basket and sank one of his two field goals of the evening. Joe Etheredge and Scot Honaker paced the Highlanders offense, scoring eight points apiece. Perkins, tall and lanky Buff center, hit the basket for 12 points with his teammate, Swanay, scoring nine for high scoring honors for both teams.

Joe Etheredge was the best player on the floor last Thursday for Maryville. The Scotties being decidedly outclassed until Joe entered the game. Scoring two quick field goals, he helped the locals' cause out immensely. He was constantly fighting for the ball, and getting rebounds off both baskets.

Milligan was Conference champs last year, and East Tennessee Teachers and the Buffaloes are fighting it out for top SMC honors this season.

Shirley Jackson, '37, Teaches At Ft. Craig

Miss Shirley Jackson, a former Maryville student and graduate, sister of Miss Elizabeth Jackson, has returned to this section of the country from Connecticut to teach in the Fort Craig school. The position Miss Jackson holds at present is a temporary one for the rest of the year. She is teaching chiefly geography together with other of the regular grade school subjects.

"The Case of the Tick-Tock," a mystery play by John Wintermute will be read by the author this evening in the Alpha Sigma meeting at 6:45. The meeting will be short so that those present may attend the swimming meet.

Ministerials Plan New Series Of Meetings

Monday evening, the Ministerial association will begin a series of four meetings in which the ministry will be discussed in relation to public life and service. The first topic will be "The Minister as a Business Man." Mr. Louis A. Black, director of maintenance, will be the first speaker. At succeeding meetings, the topics will be: "The minister as a citizen," "The minister as a speaker," and "The minister as an evangelist." The meeting will be held in Athenian hall at 6:45.

College Purchases New Equipment For Biology And Physics

The biology department has purchased a new sterilizer which is to be used in the work with bacteria. The sterilizer is heated to a high temperature by the use of electricity and will be used in preparing the mediums in which bacteria are to be studied.

The Physics department has several new instruments among which is the harmonograph which is to be used to demonstrate Lessajous' curves which represent graphically the relation between simple harmonic motions at right angles to each other. The tangent galvanometer consists of a compass surrounded by a coil of wire. This instrument is used to determine the horizontal component of the earth's magnetic field. Also there is the mechanical timer which is used to spark recording work. The Fitch fall apparatus is used in connection with the mechanical timer in order to get the exact time of a falling body. To measure the strength of various unknown resistances, the Wheastone bridge is used. An elaborate system of pulleys is used to illustrate the mechanical advantage of assembled pulleys.

an amateur performance; it was released for non-professional production on January 16 of this year. The play was the Pulitzer prize winner for 1936-37.

Written by Moss Hart and George S Kaufman, "You Can't Take It With You" is the story of a scatter brained Manhatten family, presided over by Grandfather Vanderhof, that believes in doing as it pleases, getting itself into ridiculous insane situations and having a genially good time in the process.

WINTERMUTE

The play came to Broadway in December, 1936, a highly perfected comedy, and was an immediate success. "Moss and Kaufman have written their most ingratiating comedy," were the comments in the New York Times. "They have been consistently brilliant in the past but they have never scooped up such an evening of tickling fun. It is written with a dash of affection to season the humor and played with simple good spirit. Nothing this season is so madcap as a view of the entire Sycamore family working at their hobbies simultaneously. They make an evening a frantic business and the comedy one of the funniest along Broadway." Today after 750 performances, it is still playing to packed houses. It has recently been made into a motion picture.

The play is a three act comedy farce, and while consisting of only one set, it is singular in the elaborate property outlay required. The set, 34 feet wide and more than 20 feet in depth is one of the largest that has ever been built for the Maryville stage. The scene is the living room of the Sycamore home and includes such things as a xylophone, printing press, a bowl of snakes and two kittens.

An ambitious advertising campaign under the direction of Palmer Mayo, advertising manager, has been in progress during the past week and will continue through the next. Projected slides on the walk in front of Pearson's, and posters and reminders all over the campus are only a part of the program.

Scenes from the play will be presented at the Athenian-Bainonian, Theta Epsilon and Alpha Sigma meetings tonight. Tickets are on sale at Thaw hall in the afternoons and in the lobby of Pearson's following supper. They may be purchased at Byrne Drug Co. in town.

The following compose the technical staff for the play: William McGill, production manager, and Eleanor Long, assistant; Joy Corrigan, business manager; Roland Tapp, electrician and sound effects manager; Barbara Anderson, properties manager, assisted by Charles Orr and Troy Moore; Ruth West, in charge of costumes; and Barbara McCutcheon, interior decorator. A large backdrop is being painted by Lloyd Shue and Eleanor Long.

Final dress rehearsal will be held on Wednesday night.

"HALL OF FAME"

graduate of the college, whose diploma, awarded in 1825, may be found among the other interesting relics in the museum collection. Between them is a man who came to Maryville college in homespun clothes, with all his worldly possessions tied up in a red bandana handkerchief. Professors were ashamed of him and tried to discourage him with unusually difficult assignments, while students jeered him out of every social gathering. Yet John Sawyers Craig is remembered as one of the most brilliant professors in the history of this institution.

On the front wall in this wing are two others who should not be forgotten. On the right is the Rev. Samuel W. Boardman, the fourth president of the college, while the portrait on the left is that of Dr. Edgar E. Elmore, president pro tem between the resignation of Dr. Bartlett, for whom Bartlett hall was named, and the appointment of Dr. Boardman. Dr. Elmore's name is significant in connection with the February meetings, since he was the first man ever to conduct them.

On the wall at the end of the left wing we find the most interesting picture of all. Graduating classes and graduating classes, the oldest, that of 1901, having only twelve members. And in the center of the wall is the picture that attracts our attention because it gives us a concise comparison of our school as it was almost forty years ago with our school as it is today.

It is a photomontage of the faculty, students, and buildings, of Maryville college in the year 1900. Only two of the sixteen men and women who made up the faculty under President S. W. Boardman are known to most of us today. We can recognize Mr. H. L. Ellis, who was then a young instructor in the prep school which made up a part of the college, and Mrs. Nita E. West, a pretty young dramatics teacher with the title of professor of elocution. Of all the others, eleven have died and one has been unheard of for several years.

The little group of thirty-three girls and thirty-six boys made up the entire student body of the college, and recited their lessons in Fayerweather, went to chapel in Anderson, did their reading in Lamar Memorial library, now our post office, and lived in Memorial, the men's dorm, and Baldwin, the women's dorm. The only other buildings which we have today were the president's residence and Bartlett hall which was then, as now, the YMCA building, and which was built by the students themselves from bricks which they had made out of clay dug up in the area that is now our football field.

Thus, on the walls of our own library is pictured much of the history that has made Maryville college the distinctive institution that it is, and many of the men and women whose vision and devotion have been responsible for its success.

Otto Pflanze, editor of the 1939 Chilhowean, today announced that all the photographic copy was sent to the engraver on Wednesday of this week. The staff of the Chilhowean hopes to have all the written copy which accompanies the pictures in the hands of the printer by March 1.

A final order for 455 copies of the year book was sent in this week. According to the editor, the date on which the books will be ready for distribution to the students is uncertain, but will be approximately the same time as last year's.

Tea Room Begins Second Semester

Management Class Project Is In Home Ec. Dept.

The Home Economics tea room on the third floor of Fayerweather science hall, which is in charge of the Special Institutional Management class of the department, this semester will provide work for study in the fields of large quantity buying, the cafeteria, partnership basis, and the short-order resturant. Each semester five members of the class are in complete charge of the tea room, managing it on the profits from their luncheons. This semester the women in charge are Katherine Warren, Lucy Varnadore, Lois Barnwell, Mary Earl Walker, and Alice Sliffko.

Since the beginning of school the women have been able to purchase from the tea room profits new linens and linoleum and are now planning to buy a gas refrigerator for the use of the home economics department. Luncheons are served every day at noon except Saturday to members of the faculty, friends, and townpeople at twenty-five cents a plate.

Reverend E. A. Seel Of South America To Discuss Mission Work

The Student Volunteers will have as their speaker at their Sunday evening meeting the Reverend Edward C. Seel, executive secretary of the Colombia Mission, Colombia, South America. Mr. Seel, father of a present member of the junior class, was at one time on the faculty here at Maryville college. He later went with his wife as a missionary to Chile, going from Chile to Colombia, where he now serves. Mr. Seel will speak of South American missions and of his work in them.

As special music Charles Orr will sing a solo.

ART GALLERY

These prints have been loaned by the American Federation of Arts, to which Maryville college is a member. Other exhibitions which will appear here this spring include a series on American art from the colonial times to the modern period, and an exhibition of colorful French peasant costumes.

Mock Trial Again Planned By Club

Dizney Accused At Second Law Club Open Program

Mr. Howard Dizney has been summoned to appear before the Circuit Court of Blant county to answer charges of alienation of affections instituted by Mr. Marion Birmingham. The trial will take place at the regular meeting of the Law club next Wednesday evening.

Mr. Birmingham stated that the circumstances surrounding the question of the suit were of a very intimate nature. He intimated, however, that the cause of the suit was due to Mr. Dizney's alienation of the affections of that renowned beauty, Miss Peggy Carter; and that justification of the wrong could never be completely made, but that he thought that "heartbalm" would have a very desirable effect toward the healing of his wounds.

Mr. Dizney will be defended by three of the country's most noted attorneys; Mr. H. F. Lamon, Mr. G. Dewey Webster, and Miss Harriet Miller. With such an array of legal talent there is little hope for Mr. Birmingham's gaining all the damages claimed.

Mr. Birmingham is also ably represented by Mr. Charles Aubrey Sullivan as senior councilor, and Miss Louise Proffitt and Mr. W. B. Felknor.

The prominence of the participants in the trial and the general knowledge of the public of the case will tend to make it one of wide interest. Added to the other notable features of the trial is the fact that his honor Judge Thomas Bryson Woolf will preside for the first time over the Circuit Court of Blant county since his election.

The general public will be permitted to attend as long as there is room and as long as order is maintained.

Dr. Griffitts At Nature Club

Dr. Fred A. Griffitts addressed the Nature club Thursday evening in the chemistry lecture room. Dr. Griffitts spoke on nature from the chemists' viewpoint. He showed the important part chemicals play in rock formation and other practical applications of chemistry in nature.

Preceding the address nominations for second semester officers were received and ballots cast. Emma Probasco was elected president to succeed Marguerite Justus and Ruth Bigler was elected vice president. Marian Garwood was elected secretary and Marguerite Justus and Don Calhoun were chosen program secretaries.

Hamlet Rehearsals To Begin After Completion Of Mid-Winter

The production of the senior class play, "Hamlet", got under way last night with a meeting of the entire staff and cast in Dr. Hunter's classroom. The group was called together by the production manager William McGill, for the purpose of arranging the first rehearsal next week. The play will be directed by Mrs. Nita E. West, associate professor of dramatic art.

During the past week the scripts were mimeographed and distributed to the members of the cast. Rehearsals will begin soon after the completion of the present mid-winter.

"Hamlet" has been carefully studied throughout the year and will be presented by the senior class on the Saturday of commencement week, May 27.

Liquid Air Show Given To Large Audience Monday

John S. Sloan Demonstrates Peculiar Properties Of Liquid Air

An audience of approximately 500 students and faculty members witnessed a series of experiments with liquid aid by John S. Sloan last Monday evening in Voorhees chapel. The demonstration was sponsored by the physics department of which Prof. Edgar Roy Walker is the head.

The intense cold of liquid air causes objects to freeze instantly. Mr. Sloan used a frozen banana to drive nails in a plank; a frozen rubber ball broke like a piece of glass when it was thrown against the wall. Liquid air caused lettuce and flowers to crumble like dried leaves and lead, when treated with it, would not write. To the wonder of the audience, Mr. Sloan fried an egg on ice with liquid air, burned steel, and froze mercury. The highlight of the demonstration was the experiment with explosives. The combination of aluminum powder with liquid air on cotton, rags, or sawdust, because of the great affinity of aluminum for oxygen, causes a rapid evaporation of the oxygen which results in an explosion.

The five liters of liquid air which Mr. Sloan used were preserved in a double-walled container, the space between the walls being exhausted of air and the glass being silvered like a mirror to reflect heat. To liquify it, the temperature of the air is lowered and the pressure is greatly increased. Liquid air boils at 192 degrees Centigrade.

It is by allowing liquid air evaporate that almost all the gases used for commercial purposes are obtained, nitrogen being liberated first, then oxygen and the rare gases—neon, helium, argon, xenon, and krypton. Commercial oxygen is used mostly for welding and nitrogen for fertilizers and explosives.

The largest industrial plant where liquid air is commercially manufactured is at Muscle Shoals, which was constructed during the World War as a nitrogen fixation plant for making ammunition. After the war, it was used mainly in the manufacture of fertilizers. Although it has lain practically dormant for the last few years, new interest in it has grown with the recent war threats. At present it has eight generators and a total capacity of 261,500 horsepower.

Eminent Psychologist's "Rediscovery of Man" To Be Reviewed At YM

Dr. John A. McAfee, pastor of the New Providence Presbyterian church of Maryville, will review Henry C. Link's "Rediscovery of Man" at the regular worship program of the YMCA in the Bartlett hall auditorium at 5:00 Sunday.

The author of the book, Dr. Link, is director of the Psychological Service Center in New York and is one of the few psychologists to receive an international reputation by the age of thirty. Several years ago he wrote "The Return to Religion," which "continues to be the most widely read and discussed book of spiritual interest in a decade."

Most of Dr. Link's work has been with the Intelligence and Personality quotients; both of which he has proved can be raised by proper training and practice. "The most interesting thing about the psychology of recent years," he says, "is its rediscovery of man and the powers of which he is capable when he has been freed from the prevailing fallacies about himself."

Hymns Featured At YW

Hymns will be the subject of the regular YWCA program tomorrow afternoon. The call to worship, the scripture, the prayer, and the other parts of the program will all be hymns. John Guinter will play a violin solo and Hettie Whitehill will sing.

The program will be under the direction of Helen Bewley.

WILL DISCUSS SPIRITUAL HEALTH

The theme of Dr. William P. Stevenson's sermon Sunday, February 26, is "Conditions of Spiritual Health." The choir will sing Ippolitioff-Ivanoff's anthem, "Bless the Lord, O My Soul."

Committee Sponsors Party This Evening In Gym and Pearsons

The social committee will sponsor an As You Like It in the Alumni gymnasium and in the lobby of Pearsons hall this evening at 8:00 announced Chairman Erwin Ritzman this morning. Ping pong tables will be set up in the gym and Chinese checkers, cards and bingo will be played at Pearsons.

The committee also sponsored a formal dinner before the Athenian-Bainonian play, "You Can't Take It With You", last evening in Pearsons dining hall. Music was played over the amplifying system and the green and white decorations were planned by members of the Bainonian and Athenian societies.

U. T. Professor Addresses I. R. C.

Dr. Stephens Says World's Fate Lies In Hands Of Germany

Dr. Ruth Stephens, professor of international relations at the University of Tennessee, spoke to the International Relations club Thursday evening on the question, "Can Prime Minister Chamberlain keep the Peace in Europe?"

In discussing the present situation in Europe, Dr. Stephens said: "The fate of the continent of Europe lies in the hands of Germany and Russia," and expressed the opinion that Britain's position as a world power is rapidly declining, because she can no longer command the aid of her imperial possessions which have now become parts of a Commonwealth of Nations.

As to America's position in world affairs, Dr. Stephens said that she believed that Cordell Hull's policy of reciprocal trade agreements is one of the few constructive international policies now being carried on in the world, and that in the face of Fascist domination in Europe the best thing America can do is to preserve democracy on this side of the Atlantic. Following the main address, an open forum discussion was held.

President R. W. Lloyd Makes Extended Trip To Attend Meetings

Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Waldo Lloyd attended the state YMCA convention in Nashville, Friday and Saturday of last week. Friday evening Dr. Lloyd spoke at the annual banquet; his scpeech, "The Relationship of the YMCA and the Church", was based on several year's inquiry on the subject. Saturday morning he was present at a conference with a committee planning for a meeting of the Synod of Tennessee to be held next summer at Maryville college. Russell Stevenson and Fred Rhody accompanied Dr. and Mrs. Lloyd to Nashville, where they attended the YMCA convention.

Saturday Dr. Lloyd began a trip to Birmingham, Alabama; he stopped at Columbia, Tennessee, to visit an elderly woman in her eighties—Mrs. J. P. Street, the only child of the second president of Maryville college. Sunday morning he spoke at the Independence Presbyterian church of Chattanooga.

Early this week Dr. Lloyd left for Washington, D. C., to attend, on Wednesday, a joint meeting of committees

New Prints Shown At Baker Gallery

Unusually Fine Qualities In Recent Reproductions On Exhibition

A collection of ten new prints from the permanent collection now being made by the Art department are on exhibition at the Baker art gallery in Anderson hall, and will be shown from 3-5 every afternoon except Sunday.

These reproductions are of so perfect a texture that it is possible to see the porous qualities in the water colors; the grains in the oil canvas; the lines of the oils. It is unusual that such fine qualities are ever obtained in reproductions; this fact adding to the excellence of the exhibition. The pictures are put out by the Living American Art association who are interested in putting into the hands of the public excellent reproductions at a minimum cost.

The reproductions include: "Japanese Toy Tiger," Josuo Kuniyoski; "Anna", Rico Lebrum—this is a cartoon for a fresco, a large wall painting done in tempora on wet plaster; "Valhalla Bridge", Thomas Donnelly; "Daisies," Georgina Klitszaard; "Minnesota in August," Adolf Debn; "Landscape," Henry Mattson; "Lanscape," Vincient Van Gogh; "Plowed Field," Sidney Laufmar; "The Kid," Isabel Biship; "Woman in White," Picasso. These are all by living artists except the Van Gogh, and include brightly colored landscapes, still life, and portraits.

These prints will be exhibited for several weeks, and will be followed by several other exhibitions from the American Federation of Art, which are scheduled to be shown during the spring. However, the prints will be exhibited from time to time displaying the recent additions to the collection. Also later in the spring, the Japanese prints, which are a gift of Mrs. Walker, will be shown.

Traveler-Author Speaks In Chapel

Dr. Cleland McAfee Son Of Park College Founder

Guest speaker at the Wednesday chapel next week will be Dr. Cleland B. McAfee, uncle of Dr. John A. McAfee of Maryville, and a former Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A. Dr. McAfee is a graduate of Park college, of which his father was the founder and president, and is also a graduate of Union Theological seminary in New York.

For 13 years Dr. McAfee was a teacher and pastor in Parksville, Missouri. Following that he was pastor of the 41st Street church in Chicago, which is now the 1st Street church. From Chicago, he went to the Lafayette Avenue church in Brooklyn.

Dr. McAfee then returned to Chicago as a professor of theology at McCormick and remained at the Chicago Presbyterian seminary for twenty years. After this he became the secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, and two years ago retired.

The speaker has traveled widely in the U. S., giving lectures. His extensive traveling at one time took him around the world. As a preacher, he has been in great demand, and has written a score of books. His youngest daughter

Jane Law Elected TSCA Secretary

Andrews, Stevenson, Law, Rhody Represent Y's At Conference

Jane Law, Maryville college junior, was elected state secretary of the Tennessee Student Christian association at its annual conference held at Scarritt college in Nashville last week end. Law, with three other Maryville students, Fred Rhody, Ruth Andrews, and Russell Stevenson, was representing the college YM and YWCA's at the conference.

The theme for the meeting was "The Outlook for Christian College Students." Forum groups, under the leadership of college instructors, discussed the following topics: Students and Christian living; The Church in the World today; Students in the Educational system; Students in the Thought and Action of Youth Movements; Southern Students and Human Welfare. Principle speaker, Victor Obenhaus, at one time was director of young people's work in the Riverside church of New York city; and at present is principal of Pleasant Hill academy, here in Tennessee.

JANE LAW

Twenty Tennessee colleges and universities were represented by 115 students at the conference which lasted 3 days. Student delegates lodged both nights in private homes of the community.

Mr. Colbert Gives "Sorcerer" Staff

Rehearsals For Gilbert And Sullivan Opera Began On Wednesday

The production staff for "The Sorcerer", Gilbert and Sullivan opera to be presented by the combined glee clubs and orchestra on March 10, was announced this week by Mr. Ralph R. Colbert, director.

Glenn Young will head the stage crew of Charles Eble, Gene McCurry, and Jim Pollock. Marvin Minear in charge of ticket sales, and Jack Proffitt manager of publicity, will be assisted by Bruce Walters, E. B. Smith, Lula Wade Diggs, Ann Gammon, and Ernestine Foulke. Costumes will be under the supervision of Ellen Sauer, Pat Mann, Charlotte Colby, Mary Clark Caldwell, and Charles Lovette. The properties committee includes Oliver Williams, chairman, Paul Brown, Dave McDaniels, Arlene Barrett, and Doris Smith.

Rehearsals of the first act were started last Wednesday.

Triangle Club Has Meeting

The Triangle club will hold its next meeting Tuesday evening at 6:45 in Athenian hall. After a short business meeting, there will be a program consisting of three varied parts. Marie Fawcett will play the xylophone; Sara Bolton will give "Congo"; and the college quartet composed of Rit Anderson, Dick Woodring, Warren Van Blarcom and Ed Goddard will sing.

Local DAR Chapter Entertains District Delegates March 1

The Mary Blount Chapter, D.A.R., of which Miss Clemmie J. Henry is regent, is entertaining the Cherokee District meeting on Wednesday, Mar. 1. The Cherokee District includes all chapters from Maryville to Chattanooga. The meetings will be held in the YWCA rooms and the Home Economics department will serve a five course luncheon in the Home Economics tea room. A delegation of seventy-five women is expected, among whom will be Mrs. Walter M. Berry, state regent, of Memphis; Mrs. James A. Reagan, District chairman, of Sweetwater; a number of state officers; and perhaps some of the national officers.

Women Debate In Three Contests

Cope, Walker, Brown, And Hellums Made Trip On Saturday

Maryville's women's debate team, represented by Pauline Cope, Arda Walker, Curtmarie Brown, and Sara Lee Hellums, were guests of Carson-Newman, Tusculum, and East Tennessee Teachers, for dual debates with each of these colleges, last Saturday.

Cope and Walker upheld the negative side of the Pi Kappa Delta question against Carson-Newman in a non-decision debate at 8:30 at Jefferson City in the first debate of the day.

The second stop of the Maryville squad was at Tusculum college at 2:00 in the afternoon. Here Cope and Walker upheld the negative side of the question and were given a decision over the Tusculum team. Brown and Hellums lost to the affirmative team of Tusculum. Both teams also took part in a non-decision debate with representatives from Teachers' college on Saturday evening.

Film Wednesday Shows New Teaching Methods Adopted In California

"Dynamic Education", a film on modern education, was shown Wednesday afternoon in the chemistry lecture room to members of Dr. Newell T. Preston's history of education class.

The film showed methods of teaching in the Santa Monica, California, schools. Beginning in the first grade, children are taught construction, to solve concrete problems of community life and to work together cooperatively rather than routine reading, writing, and arithmetic. They learn to read as the need is felt in doing other things.

The film brought out the fact that in this new education the home, the school, and the community provide experiences for the children to learn to play effective parts in the changing, complex modern civilization.

Dr. Preston obtained the film from the Progressive Education Association in New York.

Fla.-Ga. Chooses Allen, Russell, Caldwell For Offices Last Tuesday

Louise Allen was elected president of the Florida-Georgia club at its meeting in the philosophy classroom last Tuesday evening. Lamar Russell was elected vice president and Mary Clark Caldwell, secretary. Harry Pearson continues in the position of treasurer.

A committee composed of Alice Prime, Lamar Russell, Franklin Hunter and Mary Louise Mays was appointed to make plans for a club party.

The next meeting of the club will be on the sixth of March.

Oak Chosen For Organ

This week Dr. Lloyd, Mr. Black and several other college officials chose oak as the wood for the new organ which is to be installed in the chapel in the near future. The finish of the organ will correspond to that of the chapel.

Debaters Leave March First For State Contests

Varsity Team Victorious In Past Two Years; Hopes To Keep Trophy

Nine members of Maryville's debate squad will leave next Wednesday morning to take part in the state speech and debate tournament which is to be held at Union college in Jackson, Tennessee, from March 1 to 4.

Those who will represent the varsity squad are Clifford Proctor, Arnold Kramer, Arda Walker, Harriet Miller, and Sara Lee Hellums. The freshman squad will consist of Hilton Wick, Henry Wick, Betty Felix, and Janet Lindsay.

Besides the debate tournament, the members of the varsity team will take part in the various other speech contests of the meet. Arnold Kramer will enter the oratory contest in the varsity men's division and Clifford Proctor, after-dinner speaking. In the women's contests Arda Walker will enter the peace oratorical contest; Harriet Miller, impromptu speaking; and Sara Lee Hellums, extempore.

The only event scheduled for the freshman meet is the debate tournament. Members of the freshman squad will remain throughout the entire meet, however.

The peace oratorical contest is sponsored by the Intercollegiate Peace association and offers a prize of fifty dollars to the winner of the contest each year. Winner of second place receives thirty dollars, and third place, twenty dollars. This contest is sponsored by the association in every state in the nation.

Maryville will be represented in this contest this year by Arda Walker. Last year second place was won by Louise Proffitt, and two years ago Curtmarie Brown won second place. This contest is a separate event from the rest of the state meet and is under the supervision of Mrs. Helen B. Heart of Vanderbilt university.

Maryville's debate squad has, for the past two years, won first place in the state speech and debate contest and if Maryville is successful in winning first place this year the trophy for first place in the meet becomes permanent property of the Maryville team.

$250,000 In Damages Awarded In Case Of Birmingham vs. Dizney

A true bill and $250,000 damages were awarded to the plaintiff by the Blant county Circuit court in the alienation of affections suit of Birmingham vs. Dizney tried last Wednesday evening before the Law club in Athenian hall. The jury returned the verdict only 10 minutes after receiving their charge from Judge T. Bryson Woolf by an eight to four decision.

The defendant was sued by Birmingham for alleged attentions to the plaintiff's girl friend, Peggy Carter. Until the interference of Dizney, it was brought out, Miss Carter's affections had been centered in the plaintiff, but the defendant's prestige as a wrestler and the unfair advantage taken by the latter during the plaintiff's illness had brought about a complete reversion of feeling on the part of the young lady.

Dizney was ably defended by H. F. Lamon as senior counsel, assisted by G. Dewey Webster and Harriet Miller. Although marshalling a strong defense, their case failed to convince the jury. The prosecution was represented by C. A. Sullivan and his aides, W. B. Feiknor and Catherine Walters.

The prominence of the witnesses introduced contributed much to the interest of the trial. First witness for the plaintiff was Dizney's roommate, the journalist Douglas Steakley, whose testimony concerning the defendant's conversation in his sleep in which he plotted his escapades, came to have great bearing on the decision.

Counsel for Dizney also introduced the plaintiff and Miss Carter. The fact that Birmingham had been deeply affected was evident in that he had lost fifteen pounds from worry and an attack of influenza. Miss Carter was the same demure beauty so vividly described by Dizney in his sleep talking. Her roommate, Janet Lindsay, also produced by the prosecution, gave several details about Miss Carter's private life which were of interest to the jury and audience alike.

Scribe Surveys Student Salutations

By DON KENT

Little Miss Muffet sat on a tuffet
Eating her curds and whey;
Along came a spider and sat down beside 'er,
And said, "Hi", and she answered, "Hey!"

Just a couple of collegians! A careful study of college greetings reveals that you, like the spider, will probably say "Hi" or "hyah" when you meet a friend or acquaintance on the campus. Worse than 75½ of us do. Under certain circumstances, the "hi" may be shortened to a grunt or lengthened to a "Good morning. How do you do?"

An extensive survey of campus greetings brought out the following facts:

Early morning greetings are rare. If you should get to Pearsons before the doors open for breakfast, you will probably be greeted only by the thud of heavy lids dropping over drowsy-looking eyes. But then, anything more chipper is not to be expected so early in the day. Late-comers to the table are met with a slight grunt; the campus is now coming to life.

By the second chapel bell, everyone has his or her voice tuned up and is ready to dish out his or her favorite expression to the person in F-108, M-105, or Armenian history 237 dx.

"Hell-o" is heard occasionally but is not as popular as one might think. "Good morning", "good afternoon", and "good evening" are still less popular, and "how do you do" is practically extinct except in the streamlined "howdy" form.

After the twelve-ten bell, greetings increase in length. Now the "hyah" becomes "whadayasay" or "whadayaknow." The reason for this loquacity has not been satisfactorily explained. Of course, it can be explained when a boy greets a girl with "Good afternoon. How do you do?" As you can see, this is nothing but a disguised invitation to become better acquainted and is frequently heard about three post-mortem (or whatever P.M. means).

Supper time finds the average Maryville college student back in the old swing. "Hi" or "hyah" slides nonchalantly off every tongue. It has been estimated that if everyone who says "hi" at Pearsons should be placed side by side at a long table, they would reach.

Though hardly recognizable as such, "hyah" is only "how are you" cut

"The Rediscovery of Man"

One of the most interesting psychological discussions of recent publication is Henry Link's book, "The Rediscovery of Man." In it, Link attacks the current widespread attitude that individual man is a helpless pawn in the hands of circumstance. Instead of man's being at the mercy of the economic system, the social order, his own inferiortity complex, or any other such force or institution, Link believes every man to be capable of rising above the many influences which tend to shut down upon him and to smother his individuality. Each of us has within him the key to the greatest possible success and happiness: his own personality.

A thought-provoking subject such as this one deserves careful consideration. Link's book is an especially good one for those of us who have been tempted to lay the blame for our failures at the door of economic depression, social set-up, political order, bilogical inheritance, inherent traits, etc.

"The Rediscovery of Man" is to be reviewed by Dr. Cleland McAfee, at the YMCA meeting tomorrow afternoon.

Ode On A Departing Smoke Stack

O come, ye muses of the realm of smoke!
Ye goddesses of anthracite and coke!
And help me sing my sad song, lest I choke.

• • • •

Through many a bitter year she nobly stood,
A kindly patron of the neighborhood;
And showered soot alike on evil and the good.

• • • •

When sunny skies and flowers all abloom,
And opened windows tokened winter's doom—
Her sulphur fumes came wafting in my room.

• • • •

Her blackened bricks have borne the wildest blows;
Through every trial her smoke triumphant rose—
And settled down again upon my nose.

Full oft I wanted bathing water hot,
And shivered 'neath a shower that was not;
But this I've long forgiven and forgot.

• • • •

And when at dawn I woke in zero chill,
And icicles glittered from the window sill—
My love for the old stack was constant still.

Now, after toiling for us all these years,
The time for execution of her nears—
Such cruel ingratitude moves me to tears.

There stands, down yonder 'cross the railroad track,
A gross imposter, usurper and quack;
For a mess of brick we sell our stack.

• • • •

As in my life the years to come go by,
I'll oft remember her with wistful sigh—
Each time I get a cinder in my eye.

UP OUR HALL

By GEORGE L. HUNT

The following review of last night's performance of "You Can't Take It With You" is by Robert Brandriff. It is given with the hope that constructive criticism by an impartial observer will benefit Maryville dramatics.

Last night a packed chapel witnessed the first amateur performance of Kaufman and Hart's stage and screen hit, "You Can't Take It With You." The result was gratifying. A play with neither plot nor plausibility, its effect depended entirely on smoothness of action and rapidity of dialog. In both of these, last night's production was not deficient. In a dramatis personae which could never have been assembled outside the psychopathic ward of a general hospital, to look for motivation or verisimilitude would be heresy. There were non—but strangely they weren't missed. The satire was necessarily broad, but no broader than the comedy on which it was thinly spread. Apparently the Kaufman-Hart technique in this play was anything for a laugh—and they got it.

Versatile Sara Bolton created a living character in the part of Penelope Sycamore, latest of a long line of dramatic Malaprops. Erstwhile devotee of the plastic arts, and playwright because someone left her a typewriter by mistake, she possesses the ingratiating quality of being able to make a bad situation worse almost without opening her mouth. The particular excellence of Miss Bolton's performance, however, was in the restraint with which she preserved the sympathies of the audience for this artless woman, who, for all her inadvertencies, possessed both warmth and sincerity. Less discrimination would have resulted in mere burlesque.

John Wintermute's Grampaw Vanderhof was a study in philosophical detachment. With a voice which readily adapts itself to the effect of age, and an easy, complacent manner, Wintermute gave conviction to the role of the man who one day rode the elevator up to his office, and then rode down again to devote the remainder of his life to the less strenuous pleasures of college commencements and the public zoo. And the Wintermute slouch, not entirely the product of any special research for this part, well became the only man who could remain unruffled at the sudden raid of the "J-men."

Marian Northup and Frank Brink supplied the inevitable love interest with all the insipidity to be expected of youthful infatuation. Miss Northup's pale pink characterization suffered, however, from the natural eclipse of mere normalcy in a family of such gloriously colorful eccentrics. Nor did the part of Tony Kirby draw heavily upon Brink's greatest resource—his voice, which showed to far greater advantage in his previous appearance in "Tovarich."

George Hunt gave a solid performance in the difficult role of the Russian dancing master. His accent approached the norm of the musical comedy exiled count, but his action achieved much of the headlong impetuosity which has come to be accepted as characteristic of stage Russians.

Ed and Essie were the most irresponsible of a family in no way noted for its sense of heavy responsibilities. William Gehres supplemented his histronics with an exhibition of considerable skill on the xylophone; while Charlotte Colby, as a vacuous birdbrain in a white muslin ballet costume, divided her attention between her dancing (which, by the way, was too good to have been the result of the ministrations of M. Kolenkhov) and her Love-Dream confectionary.

Charles Fish as Paul Sycamore did well in a part of limited possibilities. Mary Frances Spurlock and David Hall portrayed colored Reba and Donald with honest humor and careful attention to details of dialect and makeup. George Tibbetts de Pinna had only to pose—and was the noblest Roman of them all.

Robert Wilcox, as Henderson from the "internal something-or-other"; Edward Thomas, as the dyspeptic Mr. Kirby; Carol Ward, his affected spouse; Edith Gillette, as countess Olga of Child's; and Robert Fisher, Melvin Magee, and Percy Martin, the "J-men", contributed much to the success of this unusually well-cast play.

Credit is also due the whole production staff; especially the designer of the set, whose ingenuity in providing for one xylophone, one printing press, one cageful of snakes, one typewriter, one dining room table with chairs, and still finding room for 18 people, most of whom were on simultaneously, represents a minor miracle in Maryville stagecraft; and Mrs. Nita Eckles West, director, whose judgment and experience have been behind a long series of Mid-winter successes.

College Men Read More Than Average; Women Less, Maryville Survey Reveals

By DON KENT

A few weeks ago, 328 students, representing 42 percent of the student body, were handed blanks on which they were requested to answer the question: "In what three kinds of leisure-time activities have you spent most of your time since you became sixteen years of age?" The survey was conducted to compare the leisure time activities of college students with an unselected group of the same age range, 16 to 24.

"Although no definite conclusions can be drawn from the survey," Marvin Minear, who conducted it, stated, "it is interesting to note several possible conditions." College men seem to read more than the average. Twenty-three percent of the college men rated reading as one of their principal spare-time activities as against seventeen percent for the average. College women, however, fall seven percent behind the average group in reading, twenty-eight percent of the campus group having recorded it as one of their main ways of spending leisure time. It is assumed that the wider range of social activities for the college girl accounts for the difference.

Individual sports were second among the women of the college with 22 per cent and third among the men with 13 percent. On the other hand, team games were second among the men with 13 percent and third for the women with 15 percent. Dating and dancing rated 9 percent with the men and 11 percent with the women.

Other figures are: movies, men 6 percent, women 9 percent; Handicrafts and hobbies, men 7 percent, women 5 percent; Loafing (includes idling, bull sessions, pleasure driving, etc.) men 6 percent, women 13 per cent; Listening to radio, men 1 percent, women 2 percent.

Results of the survey were contrasted with the results of the unselected group of 13,000 in Maryland, and the figures of each group were used in a Social Pathology paper entitled, "The Use of Leisure Time in Relation to Juvenile Delinquency."

German Club Meets Thurs.

The German club will hold its regular meeting in the philosophy class room next Tuesday evening at 6:45. Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hovel and Ingeborg Jung, exchange student from Germany, will have charge of the program.

Cissna Chosen Pres. Of Theta In Election Held On Wednesday

Kathleen Cissna, a senior from Kansas City, Kansas, was chosen to succeed Harriet Barber as president of Theta Epsilon society in the election held Wednesday in the lobby of Pearsons hall.

Other officers were elected as follows: Virginia Partridge and Betsy Gaultney tied for vice president; Mary Deane Allan was elected secretary; Kitty Bennett, Katherine Warren, and Nina Clark, program secretaries; Dorothy Quass, publicity chairman; Phyllis Heaton, sergeant-at-arms; and Janet Lindsay, Peggy Carter, and Lois Thorson, house committee.

Installation of officers will be held tonight at 6:45 in Theta hall.

Mr. Louis A. Black To Address Ministerials

The program for the Ministerial association meeting, postponed last Monday because of the liquid air demonstration in the chapel, will be given on Monday night at the regular meeting of the association. Mr. Louis A. Black, director of maintenance, will speak on "The Minister as a Business Man", the first of a series of four topics to be discussed in this and subsequent meetings. Topics for the following meetings are: "The Minister as a citizen," "The Minister as a Speaker," and "The Minister as an Evangelist". The meeting will be held in Athenian hall at 6:45.

Rain Delays Exterior Improvements On Hill

The immoderate weather of the past week called to a halt the majority of the outside campus improvement activities. Building of the brick walls about the stokers and boilers in the new power house began on Monday, and should be completed within the next week and a half.

New screens have also been installed in the windows of the Bartlett hall gymnasium.

Outside labor has been limited to work on the lawn at the north of Thaw hall in preparation for sodding, with intermittant work on the new road at the corduroy.

SCOTTY SIDE SLANTS

By the Sports Editor

SPORTS

CLEM HAHN—

In case several of you have wondered what has become of Clem Hahn, who wrestled in the 165 pound division, we thought we might take this opportunity to tell you that Clem is very sick with a blood disease, the identity of which has not yet been ascertained. He has, however, been ordered by the doctor to take a complete rest, and to stay in bed.

His loss to the wrestling team will be seriously felt. We feel sure that Clemmie would appreciate you telling him so, and calling on him in his room at 425 Carnegie hall. He is in bed, and sometimes the time passes slowly, so if you are around, stop by and pay him a visit.

SHORT STUFF—

Earlier in the year we predicted that Maryville needed heighth to win basketball games. Well, we are glad to say that we were wrong. The fast breaking, hot passing combination of the three Baird Brothers and Scott Honaker, none of whom are over five feet eight inches tall, has proved too much for a couple of the bigger teams that we have run across. Sheer speed alone won the Milligan game, the Carson-Newman game, and the East Tenn. Teachers game. We were outheighthed under the basket by almost every man, but two tougher guards than Scott Honaker and Bill Baird we haven't been able to find yet.

As for passing, after the Carson-Newman game two weeks ago, I happened to overhear an Eagle player say to a teammate, "Those boys have the best passing team we have run up against yet."

Let the opponents' words speak for themselves. They need no explanation if you have seen them play.

TROUBLE! TROUBLE! TROUBLE!—

Another Woe! Baseball this time. If ever we were short of returning lettermen in any sport this must be it. Only one infielder returns this year, J. D. Hughes, and J. Q. Wilburn, Short and Scott Honaker are the only two pitchers left from last season. There is plenty of room for any ambitious ball player this year. We'll have some more dope on this next week when the weather warms up, we hope.

Serious practice has not started yet, but it will this week.

Track Practice To Start Monday

Coach Robert Thrower has issued a general call for all track candidates to report to Bartlett auditorium Monday at 3:30. The track squad, Smoky Mountain Champs, has an excellent chance to annex the title again this year, and perhaps an opportunity to win the State championship.

Coach Thrower will depend on Weldon Baird, who is this year's track captain, Gene Orr, the other two Baird brothers, Bill and Boydson, Joe Etheredge, Vernon Lloyd, and Everett Gray to form the nucleus of this season's team.

Weldon Baird holds the college record in the 440 yd. dash, and the SMC record for the half mile run. Weldon also throws the discus and the javelin.

Gene Orr will be depended upon to garner quite a few points in the hurdle races, his specialty. Boydson Baird, a miler, will be out to try to better the conference record this year. Bill, follows in Weldon's footsteps and runs the half mile, and throws the javelin and discus. Joe Etheredge won the state high jump at Knoxville last year, and we hope he pulls a repeat this year. Lloyd, is a member of the record breaking relay team and also runs a very fast 440. Gray is a two miler from last year, and is expected to win a lot of points in the distance runs this season.

Auburn Mermen Beat Highlanders

The Auburn tankmen trounced the Highlanders last evening 49-27. Traveling nearly 500 miles, the Tigers of Alabama Poly, better known as Auburn, showed plenty of stuff in outclassing the Maryville lads. The meet was hard won though; for the Scotties showed better than the score would indicate. The relays on which a great deal of points depended, were narrowly taken by the Tigers. Auburn is a member of the Southeastern conference and now is touring, meeting teams all over the south.

Maryville showed strong in the back stroke and the dashes. Heydinger, a new backstroker for the Scots took his event, and Lee showed plenty of speed to lead the 50. For Auburn by far the outstanding swimmer was Kelly. Kelly took 13 of his teams total for top honors in the 200, the 100 and the final relay.

This is Maryville's only meet with Auburn this year. Maryville finishes her home schedule here on Tuesday, in a return meet with Tennessee.

Maryville Tank-Men Win From Tusculum 38-37

The Maryville swimmers came thru in the final relay to spurt ahead of the best Pioneer squad in years, and cop the meet 38-37 last Saturday evening. The meet, the first with Tusculum, proved a plenty tough fight for the Scottie mermen, but for their superior relay teams, might have been lost to their sole conference rival.

The decidedly outstanding man for Tusculum was Whitley. Whitley took 13 points to lead the scoring for both teams and Akana, Maryville's crack breast-stroker, stood out with 11 points to his credit. Akana was a member of both relays, as was Captain Findlay.

The Highlanders started in a very fast medley relay, giving them a lead which they lost until Dirmingham and Gehres monopolized the fancy diving event. The homelings held their lead easily as Akana took his event; but dropped behind as Whitley showed his heels to the hundred and the four hundred. The relay team composed of Cross, Lee, Akana, and Findlay then edged Tusculum out of the running in the final event. Maryville took four firsts and four seconds, Tusculum five firsts and two seconds.

Tennessee Matmen Fall Before Scot Grapplers 24 To 8

The wrestling team of the University of Tennessee came to Maryville Tuesday night and were pinned back on the mat by the score of 24-8. Maryville won every match but the 155 lb. class and the heavyweight.

Phil Evaul, 121, started out for Maryville by gaining a decision over Jones of UT without much difficulty. Evaul was on top most of the time but couldn't quite pin him for the Scots. "Killer" Herbie Turner then came up with his first fall of the season by pinning Smith of the Vols squad in 4 min. 55 sec. Smith drew Herb to the mat and was successfully holding him there until Turner suddenly winged him and the hapless UT man was pinned in short order.

McDaniels, curly headed 136 pounder for Maryville, also gained his first fall of the season in a tough match with Grissin of Tennessee. "Mac" pinned his man in 10 min.

Captain Edgar Meares, appearing for the last time on Maryville's home mat, swarmed all over his opponent Swafford, but was unable to apply the pin for a fall; winning, however, a decision over the UT man.

Wood Everett and Crane of UT, battled it out in the 155 pound division, and the match went into overtime before Crane could gain his decision over Everett. Crane applied the "figure four" around Everett's waist and he was unable to shake it loose. Crane then rode Woody most of the match, and thus gained the decision.

Omer Judy, replacing Clem Hahn in the 165 pound class, was unable to gain much over Noble Freeman of the University, until the overtime period, when he suddenly switched on Freeman and pinned his shoulders for the fall and his letter.

Hal Henschen and Howard Freeman, 175, had the closest match of the evening. Henschen was unable to do much with Freeman and Freeman couldn't do anything to Henschen. "Blondy" finally gained the decision over Freeman, however, when he almost pinned him near the close of the match.

The two heavyweights, Tanner of UT, and Dizney, Maryville star, got out and mixed it up for 5 min. and 45 sec., with Tanner doing most of the mixing and winning the fall from Dizney.

Maryville Wrestlers Claim State Intercollegiate And Amateur Title

Here's Chance To Prove You Are A Man!

Grunts and groans are going to really fill the air the next month or two as all the amateur wrestlers who think they are grapplers of the first water will get a chance to try their skill at the gentle art of bone-crushing. Aproximately 75 men have signed up in the interclass wrestling tournament, which is a brand new thing this year, and which is being sponsored by the YMCA athletic association.

Lists have been placed on the bulletin boards of Carnegit hall and Bartlett hall, and anyone who thinks he is able, and is willing, can sign up there to enter the tournament. This tournament will be run off the week of March 13, or March 20. The date has not been definitely announced yet.

The entrants will be divided up according to their weights, there being nine divisions one can enter: the 121 lb. class, the 128 lb. class, the 136 class, the 145 lb. class, the 155 lb. class, the 165 lb.s class, the 175 lb. class, and the heavyweight division. Each person is allowed a three pound weight allowance. The matches will be six minutes long; two periods of three minutes each.

The athletic committee suggests that you who plan to enter the tournament sign up as soon as possible so the drawings can be made and the tournament run off soon. They also pass along the helpful advice that a little training would help you.

Thrower's Grapplers Whip Knox Y 21½-16½

The Maryville college matment laid claim to the state intercollegiate wrestling title and the state amateur wrestling title last night when they defeated a Knoxville Y team 21 1-2 to 16 1-2. The Maryville grapplers have lost only one match, that being to Vanderbilt. Maryville earlier in the season, however, had defeated the Commodores. Maryville has whipped the University of Tennessee, the Knoxville Y, and Vanderbilt university for the foundation of their claim to half the title of state champs.

At the Knoxville Y last night Maryville had an easy time, winning four falls and having one draw. Evaul pinned Miller of the Y in 8 min. 45 sec.; McDaniels pinned Kelly of the Y in 7 min. 25 sec.; Meares in an overtime match finally put Loebker's shoulders to the mat in 10 min. 23 sec.; Judy pinned Schoolfield in 5 min. and 6 sec., in the best match of the night.

Herb Turner, 128 pounder for Maryville, and Joslin of the Y team, went into an overtime match before Joslin of the Y could pin Turner. The time was 9 min. 46 sec. Wood Everett and Don Householder also went into an overtime period. The match was called a draw due to the simple fact that neither man could do anything with the other. E. B. Smith, wrestling in the place of Hal Henschen, who was being given a rest in preparation for the UT meet tonight, fared ill against Day of the Y and was pinned in the short time of 2 min. "Headlock" Dizney had the headlock put to him by Francis, a Knoxville Y heavyweight, and was unable to come out of it, being pinned in 5 min. flat.

This afternoon the wrestlers are having their final meet of the year. The meet being with the University of Tennessee. If Maryville wins, she will have ample grounds for her claim to the state title.

INTERCLASS SPORTS

JUNIORS 33—SOPHS 26

The junior interclass quintet annexed the first half title of the YMCA interclass basketball tournament by severely whipping the sophomor aggregation 33-26 in the final game of the playoff. Russ Stevenson made 11 points to lead the juniors, while Jack Hulse sank 10 points for the losers.

SENIORS 34—FROSH 32

Starting off the second half right, the senior basketball team barely edged out a fighting frosh outfit 34-32. The frosh led most of the game, but the last quarter found the seniors, led by Red McCaskie, who made eleven points, closing the gap and forging ahead. McCaskie and Jenkins scored 11, and 8 points respectively for the victors, while Sutton and Callahan scored 10 points apiece for the frosh, with Howard scoring 8.

Teachers Bow To Highlanders 47-46 In Extra Period

A foul shot in an overtime period by Joe Etheredge contributed the one point margin of victory over the East Tennessee Teachers by the Scotties Tuesday night, when the Highlanders gave the Buccaneers a 47-46 defeat on the Bucs' home floor.

Maryville held a lead most of the game, although the lead was often small. At the half the Highlanders were leading 18-16. When the final whistle went off the score stood 42-42, and the game went into overtime with Maryville coming out on top of the heap.

Dale Russell hit the basket for 14 points to lead Honaker's men, Weldon and Boydson Baird scored 11 and 10

JUNIORS 53—SOPHS 31

The juniors walloped the sophs for the second time in the same week in the second half of the basketball tournament 53-31. Although the sophs took an early lead, 10-3, at the end of the first quarter, the juniors led by Russ Stevenson, who made 19 points, and Tom Taylor, 16 points, got hot in the second half and pushed the fighting sophs completely out of the picture.

Mrs. Nita Eckles West Surveys Years As College Dramatic Art Instructor

By DORIS M. SMITH

Upon being asked for an interview, the first statement Mrs. Nita Eckles West made was "Imagine someone interviewing me. Why, I'm the most uninteresting person there ever was.' This is not at all the truth, for anyone like Mrs. West couldn't be the least bit uninteresting.

Mrs. West was born in Iowa, and reared in Mississippi. She received her Bachelor of Arts degree at Murphy college and her degree as Bachelor of Oratory at Grant university. After her career as a student had been closed, Mrs. West came to Tennessee to be married. She stated that at this time she had no intention of teaching. It was in a curious manner tat she came, to be on the faculty of Maryville college ,but the College as a whole is glad that it came about.

Her first connection with the College was as a guest speaker at one of the girls' societies. She was asked to give some readings at one of their meetings and left a good impression behind her, for it wasn't long after that that she was asked to take a coaching job. This job was only for three months; so Mrs. West, who was living in Maryville at that time, decided that it would be fun to try. Then for some reason, and somehow, that three months extended into thirty-five years, for Mrs. West has been here since 1899 with the exception of five years. In addition to this she has successfully fulfilled her career as a wife and mother. She fully intended to retire from teaching when the youngest of her three children graduated from Maryville, but as she said, somehow she just stayed on.

Mrs. West's work is a part of her. She enjoys it thoroughly and states that she has been rewarded well. Her former pupils have gone to all parts of the country and many of them have continued studying and carrying on her work. In going back over her experiences, Mrs. West related the fact that in his senior year, Dr. Lloyd was the manager of Stephen Philip's play, "Herod." Incidentally, she said that the job was well done.

When Mrs. West first came to the College, Dr. Samuel W. Boardman was its president. She was here during Dr. Samuel Tyndale Wilson's office, and then welcomed Dr. Lloyd back, this time not as the manager of a play, but as the president of the college. She has witnessed the growth and development of Maryville from a small institution of learning to its present size and standing. Rules have changed, styles have changed, and another generation is tramping the same paths their parents have trod. Mrs. West stated that it was interesting to experience teaching the sons and daughters of her former pupils.

As an associate professor of Dramatic Art at the present time, Mrs. West is conducting classes in Dramatic Interpretation, Speech, Religious Drama, Pageantry, Play productions, and Problems in Play productions. She has coached numerous plays in her experience and has coached as many as seven plays in one year. As to her most recent success, "You Can't Take It With You," Mrs. West felt confident that it would be well liked by those who saw it. She made special mention of the fact that several of the cast were appearing before Maryville audiences for the first time.

At the present time Mrs. West lives on a farm two miles from the campus. She does her work in a quiet, unassuming manner and is well liked not only by her students, but also by everyone with whom she is in contact. She is friendly and sincere in everything she does.

Bowers, slim boy for the Bucs, scored an unlucky 13 points for the losers, while Bullington made eight for second best for Teachers.

If Maryville had beaten Milligan the night before, along with this victory, she would have been in the running for the SMC crown. As is she is somewhere in a jumble for second or third place.

Law Club Trial

The most damaging stroke of the defense was the introduction of one of Birmingham's former fiances by Dudley Moore and Frank Cross. A. B. Waggoner and Miss Phyllis Heaton were also used in an attempt to tear down Miss Carter's reputation. The defendant himself was the last witness. His testimony was refused by Judge Woolf, however, on the ground that even under oath a man charged with such a serious offense would be prone to slight misconstructions of the facts in defense of himself or his loved one.

The defendant is given until 1979 to pay the plaintiff or to file suit for an appeal.

Freshmen Discuss Problems

On Wednesday morning after the chapel service, the Freshmen guidance groups met for their monthly discussion of campus problems. The discussion topic was "Good Manners for the Campus," and was concerned with the necessity and value of courtesy in dress and in behavior in social relationships.

Due to the long chapel service the meeting was brief. The next meeting of the groups will be the first Wednesday in March.

To Have Backward Meeting

Bainonian literary society will have a backward meeting tonight in Bainonian hall at 6:45. The backward program was planned by the society's two new program secretaries, Bernice Smith and Edith Evans, and includes a vocal trio number by Mary Alice Minear, Ruth Andrews, and Helen Bewley; a piano solo by Janice Graybeal; a novelty number by Alan Moore, and dialogue by Bernice and Doris Smith.

Language Group Holds Meeting In Chattanooga

Hunter, Jackson, Collins, And Shine Take Part In Program

Four members of the Maryville college faculty are taking part in the 33rd annual meeting of the Tennessee Philological association held yesterday and today on the campus of the University of Chattanooga.

Dr. Edwin R. Hunter, president of the association and head of the Maryville English department, gave an address on "Shakespeare and Common Sense" last evening at 6:45. Three other Maryville faculty members read papers yesterday afternoon. These included Miss Elizabeth H. Jackson, "A Note on Milton's Spelling"; Dr. Ralph S. Collins, "Boheme in Modern German Drama"; and Dr. Hill Shine, "On Carlyle and the Saint-Simonians."

The Tennessee Philological association, interested in scholarly work in English and the foreign languages, met last year on the Maryville campus. Several of the college music students took part on that program. The highlight of this year's meeting was "Elizabeth and Leicester", a romantic opera by Edwin S. Lindsay of the University of Chattanooga, which was presented last evening at 8:00.

Other faculty members, besides those on the program, who left early Friday morning for Chattanooga are: Miss Jessie Heron, Miss Jessie Johnson, Miss Catherine Wilkinson, and Dr. Edmund W. Davis.

Workshop Picks Five Manuscripts To Be Placed In The Library

At a regular meeting of the Writers' workshop on Monday afternoon, Helen Bewley read a short story, a study of conflicting character types and their ultimate solution, entitled "Illusion". The other reader for the afternoon was Arthur Byrne, who contributed a short story with a rural baseball background, "Little Matt." George Hunt and Betty Seel led criticism of the papers.

Following the usual custom, the workshop chose the five manuscripts considered the best of those read during the first semester. Those selected were "Trails That Crossed", a short story of the Cherokee Indian removal, by Bill Alston; "Up and Beyond", a short story by Harold Copeland; "Our Dumb Animals", an essay by Miss Elizabeth Jackson; "Here's to Mr. Kipling", a study of the philosophical aspects of inter-racial sex relationship, by John Fisher; and "Two Sides to Every Question", a contrast of adolescent viewpoints, by Ruth Abercrombie. The manuscripts will be placed in the college library.

One-Act Plays Given At Faculty Club, Mon.

On Monday evening, March 6, the Faculty club will hold its regular monthly meeting. Two one-act plays given by the office staff in collaboration with members of the faculty will be the feature of the evening. "Babbitt's Boy," written by Glenn Huges, is the story of a boy who, after his first year of college, comes home and trys to turn his family from conventionalism to the higher things of life. The cast of this play includes Miss Dorothy Hunter, Miss Phyllis Dexter, Dr. Newell T. Preston, Mr. Edward Gillingham, Miss Mary Sloan Welsh, and Miss Geneva Hutchinson.

The second play, "The Twelve Pound Look," by J. M. Barrie, is concerned with a wealthy man who prides himself on his success, while his former and his current wife wonder if independence is not better than a successful husband. Miss Viola Lightfoot, Miss Anna Lee Fornter, and Mr. Raymond J. Dollenmayer will be the cast.

Schedule Is Changed

In order for Dr. John Timothy Stone, president of the Presbyterian theological seminary in Chicago, to speak in chapel the regular long service will be held on Saturday instead of Wednesday next week, announced President Ralph W. Lloyd today. The regular Saturday "a" period classes will meet at 8:30 on Wednesday morning.

Carnegie Announces Annual Open House On March Sixteenth

The men of Carnegie hall will be hosts to the college at an open house to be held on Thursday evening, March 16, from 8:30 to 10, Mr. E. E. McCurry, supervisor of men's residence, announced today. Final arrangements and the appointment of committees are not complete, but it is expected that guides will be available to conduct groups of guests on the tour of inspection. Of special interest will be the valuable collection of German prints on display in the lobby, the gift of Mrs. John Walker, which has never before been accessible to the general public.

Christian Assns. Sponsor Program

Dr. J. T. Stone, Pres. Of Chicago Seminary To Speak March 12

Dr. John Timothy Stone, president of the Presbyterian Theological seminary in Chicago, will speak in Voorhees chapel, Sunday afternoon, March 12, at 4:30 in a meeting sponsored by student Christian organizations, the YW, YM, Ministerial association, and Student Volunteers.

The program, which will take the place of the college vespers as well as the regular weekly meetings of the four associations, will include special music by the choir and the string trio. Dr. William P. Stevenson, college pastor, Helen Bobo, president of the YWCA, Weldon Baird, president of the YMCA, Howard Davis, president of the Ministerial association, and Edward Thomas, president of the Student Volunteers will probably have some part on the program.

Ordained to the ministry in 1894, the Rev. Dr. Stone was active in New York and Maryland churches for fifteen years. In 1909 he became pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church in Chicago; which pastorate he held until 1930, succeeded by Dr. Harrison Ray Anderson, leader of the 1939 February meetings. In 1913-1914 Dr. Stone was Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church. At present he is president and professor of pastoral theology in the Presbyterian seminary.

Dr. Stone, coming to Maryville especially to speak to the students of the college, will also speak at the Loyalty Crusade dinner of the New Providence Presbyterian church on Friday evening, March 10, and will preach in the New Providence pulpit Sunday morning.

Students Attend M. E. Sunday School Party

About 125 college students attended a banquet given Friday evening by the college class at the Methodist Episcopal church, South. The Rev. R. O. Eller delivered the main address of the evening.

Entertainment was furnished by Thelma Ritzman, who played a flute solo, and by John Guinter and Carl Walton who played a violin duet. Frank Brink acted as toastmaster. Faculty guests were Dr. and Mrs. Frank D. McClelland, and Dr. Susan A. Green.

Theta Entertains College Tonight

Progressive Party Starts In Chapel With Drama And Music

This evening at seven thirty in the chapel Theta Epsilon will entertain the rest of the college with a progressive party which is being sponsored by the social committee. It is the first of a group of programs which will be in charge of the societies during the remainder of the year, the committee announced this week.

The program will begin in chapel where the college quartet of two years ago, composed of John Magill, Don McArthur, Lloyd Wells, and Carl Wells will sing several sections. Bob Claflin and Helen Wilhoit, who have appeared at the college on other programs, will give a rope tap routine. Claflin will also give some impersonations and he and Helen will sing and dance.

Marian Huddleston Howell, who is noted for her swing, will sing, and a skit from the "Sorcerer" will be given. Pat Mann will give several parts from "Quality Street," which Alpha Sigma and Theta Epsilon have chosen as their midwinter this year.

From the chapel the party will progress to the Bartlett gym where there will be ping-pong, pool, chess, and checkers. The party will end in the YWCA rooms where refreshments will be served.

Pat Mann, program secretary for Theta, has planned the program for the evening.

Maryville Is Host To District D.A.R.

Eighty-Two Guests Served By Home Economics Department

Nearly one hundred women from the various chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution in the Cherokee district met in the YWCA rooms at the college last Wednesday morning for their annual district meeting. Mrs. James A. Reagan of Sweetwater, who is district chairman, presided.

Miss Clemmie J. Henry, regent of the host chapter, extended greetings to the visitors and Mrs. George Westerburg of the Ocoee chapter responded. Miss Mary W. Rothrock, TVA librarian from Knoxville, spoke on the restoration and preservation of Fort Loudon and music was furnished by Misses Gloria Keirn and Lois Martin at the piano. Mrs. Walter M. Berry of Memphis, who is state regent, addressed the group on the educational program of the D.A.R.

Under the direction of Miss Gertrude Meiselwitz, a five course luncheon was served to eighty-two guests by the men's and women's home economics classes in the home economics tea room. Table decorations were in the national colors, red, white, and blue, which are also the colors of the D.A.R.

Among the distinguished guests present at the meeting were Mr. Willard Steel of Chattanooga, who is a national officer of the D.A.R., and Mrs. Albert Craig of Knoxville, who is state president of the U.S.D. 1812.

This was the first time the district meeting of the D.A.R. has been held in Maryville.

Maryville Tied At Union Tournament

Friday Night Contests End In Deadlock For First Place

A deadlock resulted last night in the Tennessee forensic tournament when Maryville tied Union university, host of the tournament, in three contests and Johnson City Teachers in a fourth.

Clifford Proctor of Maryville tied with Kent Herrin of Johnson City Teachers for first place in the men's after-dinner speaking event, with James P. Sutton of Cumberland university third. Maryville and Union tied for first in the women's extempore contest; for first in the women's impromptu, and for second in the women's after-dinner speaking contest. Maryville was second in the men's oratory contest.

In the freshman debating contests, Union won the women's division and Maryville, Johnson City Teachers, and Middle Tennessee Teachers qualified for the final round in the men's division.

Those representing Maryville in the tournaments were Arnold Kramer,

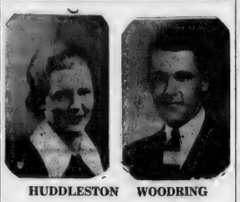
Six Enter Bates Oratory Contest

Miss Johnson Calls First Meeting Wednesday After Chapel

Miss Jessie Johnson, associate professor of English, called the first meeting of senior and junior men interested in entering the Bates oratorical contest Wednesday morning after chapel. She explained the rules of the contest to the six men who attended the meeting. They were Fred Rhody, Warren Ashby, Clifford Proctor, Otto Pflanze, Roland Tapp, and George Hunt.

Manuscripts for the contest must be given to the committee by the first week in April, and the successful contestants will be given until early in May to prepare the oration for delivery. The prize is the interest on a fund established some years ago by the Rev. William H. Bates, D.D., of Greeley, Colo.

The contest is open to men and women of the junior and senior classes in alternate years. The topics chosen by the committee this year center around present-day social problems. Miss Johnson announces that there is still time for further entrants in the contest.



Maryville Will Be Host To Collegiate Council

Members of the East Tennessee Intercollegiate council, formerly called the Inter-racial council, will meet in Bartlett hall on Sunday at 3 o'clock. The council was reorganized recently at a meeting at Knoxville college, when Edith Gillette was elected vice president, and Bill Baird, treasurer.

A panel discussion will be led by three people from Knoxville college and three from Maryville. Edward Thomas, Howard Davis and Barbara Ann Swift, members of the race relations class, will discuss a topic which has been used by the class: "Would Parallel Culture Be a Solution to the Racial Problem?"

Goddard, Barber Appear On Maryville Stage For Last Time

HALL HAS TITLE ROLL

Final Dress Rehearsal Is Scheduled For Next Wed. Evening

Gilbert and Sullivan's opera, "The Sorcerer" is well on its way toward production by the combined glee clubs on next Friday evening, March 10, at 8:15. For the past week the cast and chorus has been rehearsing on stage under the direction of Ralph S. Colbert. The final dress rehearsal is scheduled for Wednesday night of next week.

Gilbert and Sullivan's opera is noted for its humor and "The Sorcerer" is an excellent example with its abundance of fun found in the complications which arise. The comic role of Dr. Daly, the vicar, is well portrayed by Ed Goddard, who will be appearing for the last time in an operatic role on the Maryville stage. Harriet Barber, in the delightful role of Lady Sangazure, will also be making her last appearance in an opera at Maryville college, Dick Woodring, as Alexis, Elizabeth Ann Huddleston, as Aline, Ruth Woods, as Constance, and Louise Allen as Mrs. Partlett have all had experience in former operas given at the college and portray their roles well. The newcomers to the Maryville operatic stage this year are David Hall in the title role of the Sorcerer, Lynn Birchfiel as Sir Marmaduke Pointdextre, and Warren Van Blarcom as the Notary.

The first act of "The Sorcerer" is one of gayety and rejoicing, because of the betrothal of Alexis Pointdextre to Aline Sangazure. Everyone partakes in the general festivities except the daughter of Mrs. Partlett, Constance, who is in love with the village vicar, who in his turn believes himself to be a confirmed bachelor. In order to assure the villagers the same happiness that he is experiencing, Alexis tells Aline of his plan of having the Sorcerer mix a love potion to put into the tea at the betrothal feast. Following this the mysterious incantation scene occurs and the act comes to a close with the drinking of the tea.

When the second act begins the villagers wake and immediately fall in love with the first person of the opposite sex in their sight. The vicar is suddenly overwhelmed by the num-

Individual Gifts Boost Organ Fund

Over $3700 Contributed To Date By Students And Friends

Gifts and pledges made to the organ fund through March 2 totaled $3703.25, of which $1036.95 was donated by 609 students this year and $27 by students of the past year. Others who contributed to this fund with gifts of $50 and over are: Rev. George N. Makely, $500; Dr. Roland L. Taylor, $500; Mrs. John Walker, $250; President and Mrs. R. W. Lloyd, $250; Dr. George H. Opdyke, $200; Dr. and Mrs. W. P. Stevenson, $100; Dr. H. Ray Anderson, $100; Class of '36, $80.80; Mrs. McIlvaine, $65; Dr. Samuel T. Wilson, $50; and Miss Katherine C. Davies, $50. These donations total $2145. Other faculty gifts amount to $895.50, and gifts of other friends, $98.00.

Included in the above list is Dr. Roland L. Taylor, a business man of Philadelphia, Pa., who has long been a friend of Maryville college. Rev. George N. Makely is a retired Presbyterian minister now of Albany, New York, and formerly of Chambersburg, Pennsylvania. Dr. George H. Pres. R. W. Lloyd Attends Meeting Of Church Union Dept.

President Ralph W. Lloyd left last Tuesday for Pittsburgh, Pa., to attend a meeting of the Department of church cooperation and union of the Presbyterian church in the U.S.A., of which he is a member.

Two of the matters for consideration were the reports of two sub-committees appointed to discuss church union with two other leading denominations. The results of the discussion have not yet been released for publication. One of the sub-committees met several weeks ago with a similar committee from the Protestant Episcopal church. The other, on which President Lloyd served, met last week with a committee from the Presbyterian church in the U.S. (Southern). Bases and possible procedures of union were considered and are now to be reported to the larger committee for further study. The results of the discussion will probably be reported to the General assemblies of the Presbyterian churches when they meet in May.

President Lloyd is scheduled to preach on Sunday morning in the Mt. Auburn Presbyterian church, Cincinnati, before returning home.

Tryouts Will Be Held For "Quality Street"

James M. Barrie's play, "Quality Street" has been chosen as the Alpha Sigma—Theta Epsilon play for this season, officers of the Alpha Sigma society announced early this week.

"Quality Street" is one of Barrie's best known plays, and was successfully presented here ten years ago. The staff will soon be appointed and tryouts for the cast will be held next week.

Members Of Athenian Give Bell To Dr. Lloyd As Token Of Esteem

After a treasure hunt which constituted the Athenian program last Saturday night, a resolution was introduced and carried by the society to the effect that a small bell which for many years has graced the hall with its silence, should be presented to Dr. Lloyd, in answer to a plea made by him that morning for some means by which to quiet the chapel for announcements. The bell was given to Dr. Lloyd on Tuesday morning by John Thompson with the accompanying note: "The Athenian literary society, in its desire to be of the greatest possible service to the college, presents to you this token of its extreme affection in order to save your voice and in the interest of a prompt beginning of chapel in future days." Dr. Lloyd read the note to the assembly.

The bell is of unknown origin but is supposed to have been used in ancient days to call the society to order. It has long since been replaced by a gavel.

President William McGill, production manager for "You Can't Take It With You", gave a tentative report on the play, given the night before. Proceeds amounted to between $180 and $190. After expenses have been paid each society will receive about $35.

Athenians will meet for a short business session tonight at 6:45 in Athenian hall, at which time plans for the coming banquet will be discussed and a final report of the play committee will be given. The society will then adjourn to the chapel for a program to be given by the Theta Epsilon.

Copies Of Famous Prints In Gallery

By ARLENE PHELPS

The collection of ten prints from the permanent collection being made by the art department will continue to be shown for two weeks more in the Baker art gallery in Anderson hall from 3 to 5 every afternoon except Sunday.

Jasuo Kuniyoshi, painter of the "Japanese Toy Tiger", was born in Japan in 1893, and his pictures are now shown in the Metropolitan museum, and elsewhere. Says Alexander Brook of Kuniyoshi: "He is of a timid nature, but encouraged by a discriminating public has opened up more than ever his diverting sense of humor; it has given him stronger assurance and helped develop more quickly his extraordinary talent. One of the most delightful characteristics of his painting is the selection of detail and the precise depiction of the component elements."

Thomas Donnelly who painted "Valhalla Bridge," was born in Washington, D.C., in 1893, and is represented in paintings in collections of the Whitney Museum of American Art, Dartmouth college, Hamilton Easter Field art foundation, and various other private collections. Donnelly said about Valhalla Bridge: "I did not paint directly from the subject, but from observations, notes, and sketches made on the spot while the bridge was being built. I made whatever changes, both in color and in composition, seemed best to achieve a vigorous and interesting relation of light and dark shapes."

"Anna" is by Rico Lebrun, who was born in Naples, Italy in 1900. He was awarded a Guggenheim fellowship, and is represented in only a few art galleries in this country. "Possessed of the finest talents he produces very little because always before he has finished a canvas he finds something in it that does not quite satisfy him. His critical standards of his own work are so high that they prove to be an insurmountable obstacle."

Henry Mattson, who painted one of the landscapes exhibited, works from memory, much within himself, and far from actuality. Translucent blues and quiet greens predominate his canvasses. He was born in Sweden in 1886, and came to America when he was 19, and since has been under the influence of Americans. Said Lewis Mumford of Mattson: "He is a quiet artist who broods over an image, and warms it near his heart. When it comes forth again in his paintings, it is rich, and

Stimulating And Unusual

On Wednesday of this week, the national flag was displayed over Anderson hall. It was a stimulating, as well as an unusual sight. Somehow, it made us feel more conscious of our relationship with the part of the United States lying outside the Maryville college limits.

Many of our students believe that it would be worthwhile to have the flag displayed every day, on the tower of the administration building. If not every day, why not on the national holidays, at least? Washington's birthday would seem more like the anniversary of the birth of a great American if an American flag decorated the flag pole atop Anderson.

Louis D. Brandeis Resigns

"He was the first Jew to sit on the court, and his critics had pictured him as a radical and a violent partisan."

Justice Louis D. Brandeis, who retired from the Supreme Court February 13, 1939, was the Kentucky-born son of Czechoslovakian Jewish parents. After graduating from the Harvard Law School, he practiced first in Louisville and then in Boston.

His nomination to the Supreme Court by President Wilson in 1916, brought great opposition from financial interests and a number of attorneys.

It was more than four months before the Senate confirmed his nomination.

In his long service, Brandeis constantly enunciated the rights of the common man and vigorously supported social experimentation. He voted to sustain much of the New Deal legislation which a majority of the Court held unconstitutional.

Justice Brandeis "served his country well in the time of need." The present administration will feel the loss probably more than they realize.

THOUGHTS WHILE NOT THINKING
(Having taken great liberties with free verse)

(Note: In spite of the striking similarity between this poem and some typical G. L. Hunt verses, it must be said, in all fairness to G. L., that this is not one of his efforts.)

Shoes, shoes, shoes, shoes,
Moving up and down again;
And it's mighty hard to get out of the army before your four years are up.

(Notice the marvelously effective use of "shoes, shoes, shoes, shoes," to picture the marching soldiers' feet.)

One night, about
Twelve, while I pondered, weak and Weary, over
A quaint and curious volume of psychology,
I almost fell asleep, when suddenly someone Tapped
On the door. Imagine!

(Note the effect of heightened suspense.)

Boy, it's a snap to write Stuff like this! And
To think that guys get paid just to write Poetry!

(Observe the cadence here, as well as the sentiment so beautifully expressed.)

I have to go down to the Ocean,
Some time again soon;
I wish
Somebody would give me a yacht to cruise
Around in.

(Catch the note of pathetic longing in this soul-stirring gem of verse.)

The supper bell tolled the Knell
Of parting day, and about five hundred
People swarmed into the dining hall.

(Note how skillfully is pictured the scene of domestic tranquillity and peace at the close of the day.)

There is
Lots more to this poem, but you get
The idea.
If this feeble effort of mine has increased your Love for poetry, I shall Feel amply repaid for my labor on this Stuff.

TALK OF THE WEEK

By ARLENE PHELPS

UP OUR HALL

By GEORGE L. HUNT

The Echo scoops a prominent journal! In the February 1939 issue of Woman's Home Companion is a short article on the Frontier Nursing Service in the mountains of Kentucky. In the Highland Echo of last year was a feature on this very work. It is a courageous activity of young women who are devoting their time to the needs of mountain people who not so long ago did not know the advantages of medical care. The headquarters of the Service are at Wendover, Kentucky, "five horseback miles from the nearest road." Maryville's associations with the work have been rather intimate since women graduates of the college have been going there for the past several years. Clara Dale Echols, president of the YWCA last year, is employed there at the present time and writes graphically descriptive letters to her friends here relating her experiences. Bernice Gaines, '37, was with the service for a while.

Our question last week about the editorial staff of the magazine "Think" has been answered by Miss Bernice Gaines in a letter received Wednesday. She writes that the magazine is the house organ of the International Business Machines Corporation. The motto of the company is "Think," hence the name of the magazine. Thanks to Miss Gaines for her information.

If you want to see another successful Maryville alumnus, turn to page forty-one of this week's (March 6) TIME. Dr. Mark Arthur May, class of 1911, as head of the Yale Institute of Human Relations, is pictured in the "Education" section of the newsmag. The Institute was founded ten years ago (Dr. Robert Maynard Hutchins, president of University of Chicago, was one of the founders), and Dr. May has been associated with it since 1935 as head. A few years ago he worked with several other experts in formulating a tentative theory ("with 14 definitions, 8 postulates, and about a dozen theorems") to unify the work of the Institute. This week thesy published a summary of their study containing considerable evidence to support their theory. The article characterizes Dr. May as a psychologist, expert on educational movies, and one-time theology instructor. It is interesting that when he was a senior here at Maryville, he was an assistant in the psychology department. Dr. Orr and others were among his fellow-students here.

human and soberly exciting. Mattson's emotions are primary, inward, self-sustained and every aspect of the paintings is pervaded by them." The original of this lanscape is owned by the Worcester Museum of Art.

Adolf Dehn, painter of "Minnesota in August",, earned himself first a reputation in lithographs for which he won several prizes, and then as a painter of watercolors. Edward A. Jewell said when speaking of Dehn: "His water-colors—some so beautiful and not one that lacks in expertness—do take the breath and shape the response to exclamation, first because they are unexpected and then because, at their best, they attain so high a pitch of lyric freshness and power."

"Daisises," which was done by Georgina Klitgaard, who was born in New York, studied art in the National Academy of Design, was awarded a Guggenheim fellowship in 1933, is an extremely beautiful and decorative water color. "Painted on a very light gay background, this bunch of daisies becomes a thing of beauty. Except for the green stalks and vivid white petals there are no light or large masses of color; only a toch of uleramarine blue or pinkish decoration on the vase which rests on a table covered with a pale yellowish cloth. It is astonishing how these few spots of color enhance the delight in the pattern of light and color of the flowers."

Other pictures include those by Picasso and van Gogh. During his life, Picasso produced approximately 4000 canvasses, all of which have the same style. Picasso makes strong use of line and areas of light and dark. As there is no illumination, there is no shadow, and no attempt at producing an illusion of depth. Everything is kept flat. The movement and the lines are the primary interests in the picture.

Vincent van Gogh's pictures may best be understood in relation to his life. He was half mad, wholly mystic; a fanatic, and in general an emotionally unstable person. Naturally his pictures show that madness, and contain bright colors put on in odd places, perfectly reflecting his personality.

These prints will remain on exhibition for another two weeks, and will be followed by two exhibitions from the American Federation of Art.

New York World's Fair To Offer $1000 Prize For Descriptive Poem

Aspiring poets are now offered an opportunity to evince their genius in a nation-wide prize competition for an official poem descriptive of the spirit of the New York World's fair of 1939, it was announced by Grover A. Whalen, president of the fair corporation, and the Academy of American Poets, which is conducting the contest.

The required subject and title of the submitted poem is the "World of Tomorrow," this being the dramatic theme and inspiration at the fair.

Six prizes are to be awarded, a first prize of $1000 and five of $100 each. Duplicate prizes will be awarded in case of ties.

By the terms of the contest the submitted poems must be in the English language and comparatively brief and also consonant with the spirit of the fair. In addition to being original, they must not have been previously published. No contestant may submit more than three poems. An official entry blank must accompany each entry. Blanks are obtainable at the Academy, 435 E. 52nd Street.

The Academy reserves publication and all other rights to the poems submitted. Poems must be mailed to the Academy at 435 E. 52nd Street not later than March 15, 1939.

French Club Program On Works Of Chopin

At the meeting of the French club Wednesday evening, March 1, the new president, Sara Taylor, presided over a business meeting after which there was a program based on the life and works of the great French musician, Chopin. Stanley Bird gave a brief sketch of the life of Chopin, and David Kidder played Nocturne, Polonaise, and one of the Preludes from Chopin. Stanley Bird, critic, then gave a critical sketch of various members of the club.

Disc Club Meets Thursday

Because of conflicting arrangements, the regular bi-weekly meeting of the Disc club will be held next week on Thursday afternoon at 4:30. A program of orchestral numbers from several well-known operas, including the works of Wagner and Bizet, will be played.

Freshman Class Takes Second Reading Test

The second section of the Iowa reading test was administered to over 300 freshmen Wednesday morning after the chapel service. The purpose of this test, according to Dr. David H. Briggs, head of the psychology department, is to determine the progress of all first year students, including those who have participated in the remedial reading work, during the first semester. Results of the test will be announced by the personnel office as soon as the grading is completed.

Last Chilhowean Copy Sent To The Publishers

The final copy for the 1939 Chilhowean was sent to the publishers this week. The last few pages were being held until the end of the wrestling and basketball seasons. The date of publication has not been released, however. The uncertainty of time involved in printing, binding, and final proofreading make it impossible to set a date, the editor announced.

Mrs. Snyder Is Called Home

Mrs. Grace Pope Snyder, supervisor of women's residence, was called to her home in Champaign, Illinois because of the illness of her mother. Mrs. Snyder left Tuesday evening, and will be gone only a few days.

Debate Tournament

Clifford Proctor, Sara Lee Hellums, Harriet Miller, and Arda Walker for the varsity squad; and Henry Wick, Hilton Wick, Betty Felix and Lucille Lynch for the freshman. Besides the debate tournament the members of the varsity squad took part in the various other speech contests. Members of the freshman squad took part in the debate tournament for freshmen.

No results are available for the varsity debate tournament yet.

Final results for the whole tournament will not be released until this evening, but for the past two years Maryville has won and if they should win the tournament this year the cup will become their permanent possession.

Members of the debate team are expected to return to Maryville sometime this evening.

AMATEUR GRAPPLERS—

The interclass wrestling tournament, which will be run off in a week or two, presents an opportunity for anyone who thinks that he is anything of a wrestler to show off his wares. The idea for the tournament was taken from the Vanderbilt interclass athletic department. When the wrestling squad went to the University two weeks ago, they heard of the tournament sponsored there. They had about 300 men signed up to participate. Of course that may seem like a large number off hand, but then you must realize how much larger the enrollment Vandy has over Maryville.

The main object of this shindig is to get some of the men who do well in the tournament to come out for varsity wrestling next year. You may discover an unknown prodigy in yourself if you try it. If any of you want advice from some of the members of the wrestling squad, they will be glad to pass a little along to you. And if you want to, they will work out with you and try to teach you a few simple holds in preparation for the first matches. We advise you to get in some sort of training, because if you don't a number of sore spots will appear after your first match.

The meet will be in charge of Phil Evaul and Clem Hahn, who we are glad to say is well on the road to recovery after his two weeks of illness. Competent referees will be on hand to handle all the matches and to see that no one gets hurt while wrestling. The matches will not all be open to the general public, in other words your gal friend can't come to see you wrestle until the finals, which will be run off in the big gym and will be open to everyone.

There are around 70 men signed up for the tournament, and although the drawings will be made this week there is still time to enter, the lists are still up on the boards in Bartlett and Carnegie. The drawing for the first matches will be made next week and will be posted as soon as possible.

INTERCLASS SPORTS

SENIORS 21—JUNIORS 15

The seniors, who are now leading the second half interclass basketball tournament, pulled a fast one out of the hat Wednesday night when they took over a junior quintet 21-15. The seniors held the juniors to 8 points in the first half, scoring 13 themselves. Judy made six field goals for 12 points to lead both teams in scoring. Rae kept up his good average for the juniors, scoring nine points.

SOPHS 30—FROSH 23

The sophomores broke back into the win column again, when they handed the freshmen, who haven't won a game, a 30-23 lacing. Although the sophs won by 7 points, the game was closer than the score indicates, the frosh being ahead at one time. The score being tied at the half. Callahan scored 11 points for the frosh, while every man but one on the sophs team hit the basket for some points.

SENIORS 41—SOPHS 26

The seniors turned on the steam Monday night to take over a sophomore sub-riddled aggregation 41-26. The seniors, in their drive for second half championship honors, took an early lead and kept it throughout the game. Red McCaskie scored 20 of his team's tallies to lead the point system for the night. Johnnie Astles hit the hoop for 14 points to lead the sophs.

Scot Cagers Drop Close Game To Tusculum, 39-35

Last Saturday night the Maryville college quintet lost to the Pioneers of Tusculum, 39-35. The Scots had previously trimmed Tusculum by a large margin in a game played on the home court, but last Saturday night at Tusculum the Pioneers were just a little too hot to handle.

Led by Bailey, their centerman who scored 11 points during the evening, Tusculum took the lead over the Highlanders, and at the half were 6 points to the good over the Maryville team; the score was then 21-15. The two final quarters found the Scotty cagers closing the gap between the two teams, but time would not permit the trick to be turned. The game ended with Tusculum four points in front.

Weldon Baird, captain and forward on the Maryville team, managed to take high scoring honors for the evening by dropping five field goals and four foul shots through the bucket, totaling 14 points for Maryville.

Tornado Blows Its Best To Whip Scots

Avenging its 44-37 defeat at the hands of Highland cagers earlier in the season, the King Tornado blew at its worst last Tuesday evening when it downed the Honakermen, 60-54.

The King team led the Maryville basketeers by 7 points at the half; the score then being 28-21. As the game progressed it became apparent the Tornado intended to hold a margin of points over their opponents. The game ended with them holding a 6 point lead over Maryville.

Although Maryville dropped the game, Dale Russell, Scotty center, led the teams in individual scoring with 19 points marked up alongside his name. Captain Weldon Baird, who was playing his last game for Maryville, accounted for 11 of his team's points.

The game was the last one scheduled for the 1938-39 Maryville basketball squad.

Quintet Loses To Emory-Henry 45-42

The Wasps of Emory-Henry stung the Honakermen three points too many last Monday night as the basketball team of Emory-Henry beat the Maryville team 45-42. This win avenged the 43-40 defeat handed them earlier in the season by the Highlanders.

The score was tied 22-22 at the half, but after the two hard fought quarters, the game ended with Emory-Henry in the win column.

As to individual scoring, Barker, Wasp forward, walked off with top honors. Barker scored 21 of theE-H 45 points. Dale Russell was second high man with 13.

Quintet Has Easy Win Over Jett's In Practice Game

The Jett's Service Station quintet proved to be an easy touch for the Maryville basketeers Thursday night when the Highlanders came out on top of a rather lopsided score of 51-31.

The game was merely an exhibition game to keep the Scotties in shape for the remaining games of the season.

Joe Etheredge led the attack with 14 points to his credit. Red McCaskie, Jett man, tallied nine points to lead the garagemen. Bill Baird scored eight points, while his two brothers, Weldon and Boydson each made six.

Maryville took an early lead in the game, and their advantage was never seriously threatened by the servicemen. Quillen, former all-state high school star, was unable to get off his usual number of shots and was held to five points.

Trackmen Finish First Week Of Inside Workouts

The first week of track practice brought out a number of sore muscles, quite a few freshmen, and a few sad facts. The discouraging news being that Everett Gray, who was depended upon for several first places in the two mile run, will be unable to participate this year. The doctor has put his foot down, and Gray will be forced to sit on the sidelines. Another bit of bad news is that Boydson Baird, miler supreme, is turning his attentions to the old and honorable sport of baseball, and will not be out for track this spring. However, there is a possibility that he will be out later in the season. He has made a standing agreement with Coach Thrower that if he fails to register in the "Grand Old American Game," he will come back out for track.

A number of freshmen have been out and prospects look good, although it is far too early in the season to be able to tell if we have any stars among the newcomers. Coach Thrower, however, is depending upon several of the freshmen to come through, especially in the dashes and distances.

Maryville has scheduled only one home meet this year, that being with the University of Chattanooga. The trackmen will go to Davidson in the first meet of the year. They will also have meets with the University of Tennessee, and LMU. Besides these four meets there will be the Smoky Mountain Conference meet, of which Maryville was champ last year, and the state meet, which will be held at Cookeville.

Tennessee Swimmers Outsplash Maryville Tankmen With 48-27 Win

The University of Tennessee splashed the Scotties swimmers Tuesday night, to capture the second straight this year, 48-27. Maryville looked considerably better this time against the Vols, however, taking over all the second places in the meet with the exception of one. Tennessee showed their power, however, in easily taking both the relays.

The Tennessee highpointers were Jones, a versatile dash man and Yagodkin, a breaststroker and diver. Both took two firsts. U-T showed potential power for next year's squad in several exhibition swims. Maryville pushed the Tennessee men in nearly all of the events and the outcome of the meet not certain until the diving and final relay results came in. For Maryville, Cross, Akana, Hudson, and Heydinger took high scoring honors. The meet was the last for Hudson, who has handled distance duties this season.

Maryville completed her home schedule in this meet. Three meets away remain, the first at Tusculum tonight.

Complete results:

150 yd. relay—Tennessee—time 1:88.7
Spain, Yagodkin, and Hultquist
200 yd. free style—time 2:49.4
Cross, Webb, Hudson
50 yd. dash—time 26.2
Jones (T), Elmore (T), Lee (M)
Fancy Diving—Yagodkin (T), Birmingham (M), Hudson (M)
100 yd. dash—time 1:03—Jones (T), Cross (M), Stevenson (M)
150 yd. backstroke—time 2:11.7—Spain (T), Heydinger (M), Wilcox (M)
200 yd. breaststroke—time 3:00.4—Yagodkin (T), Akana (M), Ritzman (M)
440 yd. dash—time 6:13.7—Webb (T), Hudson (M), Felknor (M)
200 yd. relay—Tennessee—time 1:51.5
Miller, Elmore, Jones, Hultquist.

Scotty Tankmen Hope To Win SMC Crown At Tusculum Today

By FRANK CROSS

The Maryville swimming team meets the Pioneer's of Tusculum college tonight at Tusculum. Both teams will be set to fight out the traditional and sole swimming competition of the Smoky Mountain conference. The Scotties hold a decided edge to the dispute now with the first meet chalked up to their credit. Maryville won here two weeks ago by the close margin of 37-36. The feat will be a difficult one to repeat, however, at the Tusculum pool. Maryville will go into the fray with a defeat at the hands of Tennessee and the loss of Hudson, a distance man and diver. Maryville will take their full team, however and swim nearly the same squad as met U-T.

This will be the first of Maryville's trips since the meet with the University of Tennessee at the beginning of the season. Maryville has two more opponents before the season closes—Emory at Atlanta, Georgia, on next Tuesday, and Chattanooga on Wednesday. Maryville has good chances against both of these teams. The meet with Chattanooga will be the second this season, Maryville being edged in the first by a one point margin.

GIRLS' SPORTS

Thursday afternoon the junior-senior volley ball team of the women's point system defeated the sophomore team, 40-29. Two more games in the tournament will be played off on Tuesday and Thursday of the coming week.

Cumberland University rated front page news last week in Tennessee papers with its mock murder planned by several law students. The only drawback being that it was too real for the audience. We think our Law club trial last week was pretty real too, even if there weren't any drastic emotional disturbances we really don't see why it couldn't have made headlines.

College Cedars Doomed By Blight: Wind Takes Two Weakened By Rust

As a result of recent wind storms, two large cedar trees on the campus have been uprooted. According to Mrs. Bonnie H. Brown of the Biology department, the reason that they are unable to withstand the storms is that they are infected with a blight known as apple rust, a fungus disease that has affected most of the cedar trees in the southwestern part of the United States, and has caused the outlawing of cedars in apple-growing states.

The complete loss of these cedars, all that remain of the cedar forest which once covered the hill, is certain, since they are all doomed by their diseased condition. They can never be replaced as any other trees of the same variety would become infected if planted in the vicinity of those now living.

In discussing the problem of planting trees to take the place of the dying cedars, Mrs. Brown said that it would be necessary to use elms, maples, or some other variety that is not susceptible to the destructive fungus disease.

Bill Rich Released Thursday

William Rich, who has been confined to the hospital for the past three weeks with scarlet fever, was released Thursday afternoon. Jean Shaeffer has also returned to the campus after a short illness. Adele Staley was admitted to the infirmary after a tonsilectomy at the Birchfield hospital in Maryville.

erous requests for hasty marriages among the hitherto unromantically inclined villagers. Alexis is overjoyed to see the success of his plans. It is in this portion of the opera that the amusing situations arise between the ill-mated couples. Alexis's pleasure at the success of his plan to bring about marriages regardless of rank or station is short lived, however, when his own Aline falls in love with the vicar. He realizes his mistake then and approaches the Sorcerer to see how his mischief can be undone. The only solution lies in the sacrifice of the life of either Alexis or the Sorcerer. The Sorcerer is elected to be the victim and sacrifices himself to the evil spirit, Ahrimanes. Immediately the former couples are reunited and Sir Marmaduke, who claims Lady Sangazure as his future wife, invites everyone to partake of a feast rejoicing over the happy state of affairs.

"The Sorcerer," which is the third Gilbert and Sullivan opera to be presented on the hill will be accompanied by the college symphony orchestra. The technical staff for the production will be composed of Glenn Young, head of the stage crew; Marvin Minear, in charge of tickets; Jack Proffitt, publicity; Ellen Sauer, costuming; and Oliver Williams, properties.

Tickets are on sale in both of the Y stores at 35 cents each.

time as a lecturer on art in American colleges, serving under the auspices of the American Institute of Architects. Such work in a sense represents his hobby. Dr. Opdyke lectured at Maryville a few years ago.

Mrs. Walker, who lives at Morningside in the college woods, Dr. and Mrs. Stevenson, and Dr. Wilson, are, of course, well known to Maryville college people for their repeated beneficiences. Mrs. McIlvaine, who lives near the campus, has been a friend of the college for many years; she is an aunt of Miss Jessie E. Johnson of the faculty. All are familiar with Dr. Anderson's gift and other assistance. Many other faculty members, and the student body of 1938-1939, have become permanent benefactors of Maryville college in their generous support of this cause.

The contract for the organ has been let to the Wicks Organ Company of Highland, Illinois, near St. Louis, and installation is expected in April.

The cost price of the organ is $3412 plus certain installation expenses which the college is to pay and which are expected to be between $50 and $100. The cost of the chimes is $250 additional. Dr. Anderson's gift of $100 may be used for this cause or for other stage furnishings if enough money can be secured for the organ otherwise.

Mrs. West Will Read Before Theater Group

Mrs. Nita Eckles West, professor in the department of Dramatic art will give a resume of Thornton Wilder's Pulitzer prize play "Our Town" before the Maryville Little theater. The public is invited to the meeting of the Little Theater group on Tuesday evening at 7:30 at the West Side grammar school in Maryville.

Mrs. West's reading of this play before several civic groups of Maryville has been enthusiastically received.

Singers Hold Party In Fine Arts Studio

Following rehearsal on Wednesday night, the members of the college choir met in the Fine Arts studio for a party and brief social hour. Five gallons of cider and a box of cookies had been given by Dr. and Mrs. Stevenson in appreciation of a musical program given them by the choir on Mrs. Stevenson's birthday recently. Miss Elizabeth Ann Huddleston was chosen to serve the cider, after which everyone joined in the singing of favorite songs, including several selections from the forthcoming "Sorcerer". Lights were extinguished and the group sang by candle light.

Byrne, Rich, Brown Speak To Law Club

Last Wednesday evening the Law club met in Athenian hall at 7:00 for its regular bi-weekly meeting. The program consisted of a talk by Art Byrne on "The Legal Profession", James Rich spoke on "The Passing of the General Practice of Law," and Horace Brown read a paper on "The Lawyer's Use of Psychology on Juries."

Dr. Claude A. Campbell concluded the program with a critic's report of the meeting.

Four Groups To Bring Prominent Speaker Sunday

Dr. John Timothy Stone In Special Program On Sunday At 4:30

Sponsored by four Maryville college student Christian organizations, the Ministerial association, Student Volunteers, YWCA and YMCA, Dr. John Timothy Stone will speak in Voorhees chapel tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 on the subject, "Leaders for Tomorrow."

Presidents of the four organizations represented will be included on the program: the scripture will be read by Weldon Baird, YMCA; prayers will be by Edward Thomas, Student Volunteers, and Howard Davis, Ministerial association; and the introduction for Dr. Stone will be by Helen Bobo, YW CA. Dr. W. P. Stevenson, college pastor, will also have a part on the program, giving the opening prayer and benediction.

Special music will include an anthem by the choir, Noble Cain's arrangement of the Russian chorale, "Holy Radiant Light" by Gretchaninoff; and a request selection played several weeks ago by the string trio, composed of Zula Vance, Erwin Ritzman, and John Guinter, the second movement, "Adagio" of Anton Dvorak's "Trio in B Flat". Miss Katherine Davies will play a prelude and a postlude.

Coming to Maryville especially to speak to the students of the college, Dr. Stone spoke last evening at the Loyalty Crusade dinner of the New Providence Presbyterian church, and this morning at the regular chapel service. Tomorrow morning he will preach in the New Providence Presbyterian church.

For over ten years he has been president and professor of pastoral theology in the Presbyterian seminary. Previous to his present position, he was pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church in Chicago for twenty-one years. He was succeeded to that pastorate in 1930 by Dr. Harrison Ray Anderson, leader of the 1939 February meetings. In 1913-1914, Dr. Stone was Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church.

Freshman Honor Roll To Be Released Soon

Grade cards for the first semester are being sent to the homes of all students this week. Freshmen grades are also being sent to the high schools from which this year's freshman class graduated. The honor roll will be released in a few weeks.

The method used in distributing grade cards to the freshmen is new this year. The object is, according to Dr. Frank D. McClelland, director of personnel, that the personal interviews will act as an encouragement and a help and afford opportunity for needed counsel.

Honaker Talks At Alpha Sig

Alpha Sigma society will meet in Alpha Sigma hall at 6:45 next Saturday evening. Coach Honaker will talk and Dave Hall and Al Seaman will present several musical selections.

Will Speak Tomorrow

DR. JOHN TIMOTHY STONE

Dr. John Timothy Stone, president of the Presbyterian seminary in Chicago, Illinois, who will speak at 4:30 tomorrow afternoon in Voorhees chapel. His topic will be "Leaders for Tomorrow."

Make Final Plans For Open House

Head Of Carnegie Gives Committees Who Will Welcome Guests

Final arrangements for Carnegie's open house, to be held Thursday evening from 8:30 to 10 o'clock, have been made, Mr. E. E. McCurry, supervisor of men's residence, announced today. Knox Coit and Glenn Young have been appointed to act on the reception committee. Frank Brink, Henry Millison, Samuel Cornelius, Arthur Peterson, and Charles Baldwin will be in charge of refreshments. Guides will include Harold McCurdy, Anderson Haynes, William Walton, Morris Stewart, Wilfred Johnson, Clifford Proctor, John Baptiste, Ralph Thompson, Dudley Moore, Robert Wright, John Fisher, Charles Orr, Harold Austin, Fred Rawlings, William Mooney, David Hall, George Felknor, William Felknor, Warren Ashby, Russell Stevenson, Roland Tapp, Paul Akana, William Lewis, George Webster, Warren Corbett, Marvin Minear, Erwin Ritzman, Ivan Elder, Tom Schafer, Jimmy Lee, Marion Birmingham, Paul Brown and Stanley Bird.

YMCA Cabinet Host To Y's Travelling Secretary

William W. McKee, Southeastern field secretary of the National Council of Student Christian Associations, will visit the college YMCA Saturday afternoon, according to an announcement by the YMCA secretary early this week. Mr. McKee will speak at a meeting of the YMCA cabinet Saturday evening at 8 o'clock in the YWCA rooms, and is expected to be present on the campus until Sunday afternoon.

Anyone interested in Y work may interview Mr. McKee by arranging for a meeting through the YMCA office in Bartlett hall.

Executives Attend Mountain Workers Conferences In Knoxville March 7, 8, 9

This past week President Ralph W. Lloyd, Dr. Frank D. McClelland, and Miss Clemmie J. Henry attended the 27th annual meeting of the Conference of Southern Mountain workers in Knoxville. The Conference meetings were held on March 7, 8, and 9 in the First Presbyterian church, with Conference headquarters in the Farragut hotel.

Tuesday evening Herman N. Morse presided at the opening meeting of the Conference at which William J. Hutchins, president of Berea college, was the speaker. Wednesday morning, afternoon, and evening there were general sessions led by Ellsworth M. Smith, director of the Adult Education Cooperative project of the Conference of Southern Mountain workers, who spoke on "Cooperatives—the Hope and the Unknown of the Southern Highlands"; Marcella R. Lehmann of the American Hospital association, who spoke on "Health—an Economic Problem"; and Arthur H. Raper, Research and Field Secretary of the Commission on Interracial cooperation.

Thursday, general sessions were held morning and afternoon. At the morning meeting, Douglas Kennedy, director of the English Folk Dance and Song society of London, spoke on "Traditions Common to England and America". "Recreation in the Southern Highlands" was the subject of Frank H. Smith, recreation director of the Conference of the Southern Mountain workers, and "Group Activity in Mountain Schools" that of John T. Morgan, recreation leader of the Conference. The afternoon session was divided into four groups, the general discussion topic being "How can we better use the Conference of Southern Mountain workers and the various agencies in our Southern Mountains to effect a more constructive program of action?" The theme of these various group meetings was "the consideration and solution of the common educational, social, economic, and religious problems in the Southern Highlands."

Mrs. West Gives Cast For Theta-Alpha Sigma Play

Pat Mann, Dave Heydinger, And Curtmarie Brown Have Leads

Muriel Mann and Curtmarie Brown will play the feminine leads of the two old maid sisters, Phoebe and Susan Throssel, in James M. Barrie's "Quality Street," Theta Epsilon-Alpha Sigma's mid-winter, to be presented in Voorhees chapel April 14, announced Mrs. Nita Eckles West, director, today. Valentine Brown, the male lead, will be played by David Heydinger, a newcomer to the Maryville stage.

Other roles in the play that have been cast are Miss Fanny, Kitty Bennett; Henrietta, Virginia Bell; Patty, Ester McCollum; Ensign Blades, Melvin Johnson; Harriet, Betty Felix; Sargent, Franklin Hunter; Spicer, William Holman; Gallant, Albert Rosson; and Holman; Gallant, Albert Rosser, and the play have not been definitely cast yet.

Muriel Mann, a senior, will be presented on the Maryville college stage for the last time in the romantic lead of Phoebe Throssel. She has played many roles in plays at Maryville, one of the most outstanding of which was her performance in "Tovarich" as Tashiana, the exiled Russian grand duchess.

Curtmarie Brown is also a senior and will appear for the last time in "Quality Street." She is delightfully cast as the lovable old-maid, Susan Throssel, who has given up every hope of marriage and who lives to see her younger sister, Phoebe, suitably and comfortably married.

Miss Rich To Give Illustrated Talk

History Of American Art Is Subject For First Of Lectures

On the evening of March 21 there will be a lecture on American painting, accompanied with colored slides, given in the Baker Art gallery by Miss Frances Rich. At this first lecture will be discussed and illustrated the history of American art. On March 28 another similar lecture will be given on contemporary painting, and will show art in our own country.

These two lectures are circulated by the American Federation of Art, of which Maryville college is a member. Later in the season another Federation collection of French peasant costumes, will be shown.

The prints, belonging to the Art department, which have been exhibited for the past two weeks will continue to be shown through the following week.

Group Will Hear Freshmen Debate

Election Of Club Officers Will Follow Debate

Freshmen debaters who attended the state tournament at Jackson last week will debate before the International Relations club Friday evening, March 16, in the Thaw hall auditorium. Betty Felix and Lucille Lynch will debate against Hilton and Henry Wick on the freshman subject: "Resolved, that the U. S. should form an alliance with Great Britain."

Following the program new officers will be elected. Nominations by the committee are George Webster and William Felknor for chairman, and Jean White and Joy Corrigan for secretary. Otto Pflanze and Edith Gillette are the present officers.

Plans are being made for delegates of the club to attend the regional conference composed of southeastern states to be held at Williamsburg, Va., about the middle of April.

Mary Allen To Address Club

The French club will have it's regular meeting next Wednesday evening at 6:45 in Alpha Sigma hall. The program theme will be centered around the Basque country. Mary Deane Allen will read a paper on the "People of the Basque Country," and the group will sing French folk songs.

IN A MESS!

Editorial by Douglas Steakley, Sports Editor

No doubt most of you are wondering why the conference ratings given out by Commissioner Lowe of the Smoky Mountain Conference placed Maryville last with only one conference victory. According to Commissioner Lowe, four Maryville basketball players were ineligible, their failure to fill out an eligibility blank for both basketball and football for the first semester making them eligible for the second semester only.

This is the first time in several years that this ruling has been enforced and a conference team compelled to forfeit games on this technicality. However, in enforcing the rule this year, the Commisssioner has placed himself in a very bad position. As he was reminded by Coach Honaker, not only has Maryville failed to comply to this rule, but Milligan, Cumberland, Tusculum, and King college have also neglected to do the same thing for which Maryville players were declared ineligible. This would mean that Teachers, LMU, and Carson-Newman are the only teams in the conference that would not have to forfeit at least one conference game. As most of you know, Milligan won the SMC. If Mr. Lowe had called this ruling on Milligan, Teachers would then be the champs. We agree with the sentiment of the Commissioner himself, expressed when Coach Honaker questioned him about the matter, "I'm in a mess!" We don't want to be troublesome, Commissioner Lowe, but YOU ARE IN A MESS!

In all the years that Maryville has been in the Smoky Mountain Conference, she has never used an ineligible player. Surely she should not be called now for using one on purely technical reasons.

Varsity Debaters Win State Tourney For Third Time; Cup Made Permanent

Both Freshman Squads Are Ranked Second In State Meet

Freshman debaters of Maryville college placed second in both the men's and women's divisions in the state freshman debate tournament held at Union college during the past week.

Henry and Hilton Wick, representing Maryville, got to the finals in the men's tournament, but were defeated by representatives from Murfreesborough.

Betty Felix and Lucille Lynch represented Maryville in the women's division and were awarded second place by the judges in the final round.

The subject for debate was "Resolved: That the United States should form an alliance with Great Britain." This subject was chosen by all the schools taking part in the tournament.

The freshman tournament was held in conjunction with the Tennessee State Forensic tournament which was held at Union college at the same time.

Women's Debate Team Wins First Place; Men's Ties With ETT

Maryville college debaters won first place in the Tennessee State Forensic tournament for the third consecutive time during the past week at Union college in Jackson, Tennessee. As a result of the Maryville team obtaining permanent possession of the cup awarded each year to the school totaling the most points in the tournament. Members of Maryville's debate team were Arnold Kramer, Clifford Proctor, Sara Lee Hellums, Harriet Miller, and Arda Walker.

Hellums and Miller won first place in the women's division of debate by defeating Union college in the finals of the tournament by a unanimous vote of the judges. Kramer and Proctor tied for first place in men's debate with East Tennessee Teachers college.

In the other divisions of the tournament, Maryville was equally successful. Arda Walker won first place in the women's oratorical contest, second place in extempore speaking, and tied for first place in impromptu speaking. She also placed fourth in the peace oration contest which was held in conjunction with the meet.

Harriet Miller placed second in women's after-dinner speaking.

Arnold Kramer won second place in men's oratory and first place in the individual ratings of men's debate. Clifford Proctor tied for first place in after-dinner speaking.

Walter Gieseking To Appear Here

Begin Reserved Seat Sales On Monday Afternoon In Pearsons

Tickets for the concert of Walter Gieseking, distinguished German pianist and last number of the current Maryville college Artist series, will be placed on sale Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the lobby of Pearsons it was announced today. Activity cards must be presented for all reserved seats.

Gieseking has been characterized by some as the "Poet-Pianist." He does not thunder and lighten. He does not attempt to imitate an orchestra or to deafen and awe the listener by his speed and power. Nor is he a parlor poet poseur or sentimentalist. First of all, he senses, and knows, the exact sonorous limitations of his instrument. He keeps within these limits, with such a wealth of nuance and variety of color that he can make a dozen climaxes within the limits of many a pianist's one. Yet he is not a miniaturist. He is a musician of consummate skill and a sense of proportion which gives his art a beauty and eloquence which lingers with singular distinctness in the memory. Mr. Gieseking is a profound thinker and student of his art, but his thinking is the vehicle of poetry and beauty, and his obviously meticulous examination of every note of a score never results in pedantry. On the contrary, the phrasing is of the most expressive sort and Mr. Gieseking's treatment of problems of tempo and rhythm are worth careful study in themselves.

Will Have Open Swim

There will be open swimming in the pool this evening at 8:15, the social committee announced today. Dormitory parties may be held with the permission of the matrons in charge of the dormitories.

Mrs. West With Bainonians

Mrs. Nita Eckles West will read several selections before the regular meeting of Bainonian this evening at 6:45 in Bainonian hall. Marie Fawcett will also entertain on the xylophone. A brief business meeting will conclude the program.

Large Audience Sees Glee Clubs Give "Sorcerer"

Dave Hall Gives Successful Performance In Role Of Sorcerer

A near-capacity audience assembled in Voorhees chapel last evening to hear the first Maryville presentation of Gilbert and Sullivan's comic opera, "The Sorcerer." With David Hall in the title role of John Wellington Wells, sorcerer extraordinary from a time-honored firm of family sorcerers, and Elizabeth Ann Huddleston and Richard Woodring in the romantic leads of Aline and Alexis, the production moved with smoothness and decision toward the climactic disappearance of the evil-working sorcerer. Mr. Ralph Colbert conducted the performance with Miss Dorothy Horne as concert master of the college Little Symphony orchestra.

From the well-staged opening lyric trio, "It is not Love", it was evident that the roles of Alexis and Aline and that of the pining Contance, carried by Ruth Wood, would be adequately accounted for. Ed Goddard as the wan ascetic Dr. Daly, Vicar of Ploverleigh, was outstanding in his singing, best characterized by his mournful, moaning solo, "Engaged to So and So"; and in his spoken interpretation of his regretfully other-worldly character. Harriet Barber was very real as the matronly Lady Sangazure. Her emotional apostrophe to the immortal Sir Marmaduke Pointdextre, Lynn Birchfiel, was a high point for the evening. The brief part of the notary was made striking by Warren Van Blarcom, and Louise Allen was sufficiently mincing and virtuous as the socially-aspiring Pew Opener, Mrs. Partlett.

The plot of the comic opera is built around the respectably ubiquitous activities of the sorcerer. Gilbert, the writer of the stories of the operas, has injected his usual didactic note, a gentle touch of irony toward social panaceas in general, when Alexis, the altruistic young lover, initiates a scheme for the rapid and complete marital conjunction of the villagers. To accompish this laudable purpose, he has engaged the services of John Wellington Wells, who is capable of producing a marvelous love phitre, designed to bring love at first sight to all who indulge in it. The sorcerer arrives and, after making Alexis and Aline afraid of him, proceeds to manufacture large quantities of the potion. This he does by a weird incantation. Hall made a dramatic success of this difficult episode, which was accompanied by most realistic descriptive music from the orchestra. His singing was marked by his interpretation of the well-known clipped notes and syllables characteristic of Gilbert and Sullivan. This was particularly evident in the sorcerer's first solo, "My Name is John Wellington Wells". The complication of the plot, which has involved all the villagers and the leading characters in ill-matched but desperate love affairs, is fittingly resolved when the sorcerer disappears, by this action leaving every lover in his suitable situation for the grand finale.

Author Will Review Book On Smokies At Nature Club Thursday Evening

Mrs. Elizabeth Skaggs Bowman, author of the most recent publication on the Smoky Mountains, will review her book "Land of High Horizons" at the meeting of the Nature club on Thursday night. With her will be Mr. Carlos C. Campbell, director of publicity of the Great Smoky Mountains National park, who spoke here last year. Mr. Campbell took the pictures with which the book is illustrated. He will have enlargements of the pictures and will discuss them folowing Mrs. Bowman's lecture.

"Land of High Horizons" has been hailed as "probably the first book to do justice to the wonderland of the Smokies". Its author is well qualified to write such a book. Having lived in Knoxville most of her life, she has spent fifteen summers in the heart of the mountains at her home, "Twin Trees" near Elkmont, studying the Smokies, its people and wild life. This is her first full length book, although she has written many articles on the mountains and other subjects. Besides being an author, Mrs. Bowman is a poet of considerable note. She is also an outstanding member of The National league of American Pen women.

In "Land of High Horizons" Mrs. Bowman has given an account of the history, geology and geography of the Smoky mountains with a discussion of its people, traditions and wild life. As the author said in her foreword, it is not intended as a guide book, but mostly as an attempt to give something of the beauty and fascination of this region. The book, released last year by the Southern Publishers, contains 80 photographs, taken by Mr. Campbell, and is now on hand at the college library.

The program will be preceded by a short business meeting at which plans for future Nature club projects will be discussed. All those interested in the Smoky mountains and in meeting Mrs. Bowman are cordially invited to attend. The meetings will be held at 6:45 in the chemistry lecture room in Fayerweather hall and will be over in time for the Carnegie open house.

Dangerous And Unsatisfactory

When a student population such as ours here at Maryville is asked about its post-graduation plans, a very large proportion of the students reply that they expect they will "have to" teach, at least for a while; relatively few people indicate that teaching is the real ambition.

Such a state of affairs is dangerous and unsatisfactory. Teaching children is not an undertaking that can be properly carried out by teachers who have no taste for the job, and who have neither the training nor the personality suited to teaching. School-teaching at its best is a life-time profession, not a stop-gap between a year, or two or four, of college and "something better" than teaching.

Students who see the great need of good teachers, who have reason to feel that they have or can develop the qualifications a good teacher should have, and who are willing and eager to devote a life-time to this vitally-important matter of teaching children, should enter this profession—it needs such people. Students who have no particular interest in children or teaching, who are contemplating teaching merely as a sort of necessary evil between college days and something that they really want to do, should keep out of the schoolroom! No one knows how much harm is done to children by teachers who have no business being teachers.

Merry-Ville Go Round

By FRED RHODY

ALICE IN THE MAGIC ROOM

And all of a sudden Alice came to a door, and it said over it, "The Magic Room of Sports Talk Come True." And so Alice pushed the door open and went in.

Inside, she met a figure in white.

ALICE—Who are you, a street cleaner or a dentist?

FIGURE—I am the Spirit of Truth, sent to guide you through the Realm of Sports Talk Come True. Follow me.

A.—What is that terrible shrieking and groaning, mixed with pistol shots, that I hear?

SPIRIT OF TRUTH—Oh, that's the umpire being shot again. It happens all the time. Best thing that could happen to the poor fellow—he's blind as a bat.

A.—Why are all those men in those barred cells over there?

S. of T.—They are all being punshied for stealing bases, using deception plays, sneaking home, hitting balls foul, using fake reverses and robbing people of hits. One of them, Joe Louis, is in jail for carrying a concealed deadly weapon: he wore a glove over his lethal right hand.

A.—Well, what about that fellow who is walking around holding the oil painting against his face?

S. of T.—A sad case! Always feels lost and helpless when he isn't kissing the canvas.

A.—What's that noise, as of some one hammering?

S. of T.—Just a mole-skinner being nailed on the five-yard stripe.

A.—Somebody must have left a window open: see those laurel leaves blowing around up near the ceiling?

S. of T.—No, there is a big game on today: that's victory in the air.

A.—Then what's that black, shadowy, cloth-like substance piled up in the corner?

S. of T.—That is the Curtain of Gloom which is being kept in readiness to be hung over the campus of the team which loses today.

A.—Look, where did those ripples in the water come from?

S. of T.—Some one probably just sank a basket, or a putt.

A.—Goodness, what is that man going to do with that dangerous-looking knife clenched in his hand?

S. of T.—He is either going to take a vicious cut at a baseball, or else stab a fly.

A.—That large sack of lime in the corner—what is that for?

S. of T.—That, Alice, is being prepared for the Maryville baseballers to use in their annual job of white-washing the rest of the conference.

Alice turned doubtfully toward the Spirit of Truth. "Until now," she said, "I believed you. Now I'm not so sure." And she skipped out of the Magic Room, and away.

TALK OF THE WEEK

By ARLENE PHELPS

UP OUR HALL

By GEORGE L. HUNT

Dr. Anderson's remark a few weeks ago that the English novel may have a sad ending but the American novel must always end happily was pointedly emphasized to those who saw the movie version of A. J. Cronin's book, "The Citadel." Written by an English doctor, it was a grippingly interesting story. It ended sadly, with the death of his own wife making Dr. Manson realize how false he had been to the ideals of his profession. The movie story, however, ended with the death of his best friend instead, and his wife walking smilingly beside him after his trial. This was probably designed for the American public, yet I kept wishing that it had been faithful to the book in this important detail. It is an unfortunate comment on we Americans if all our medicine must be sugar-coated. We cannot live on a continual diet of the sickeningly sweet love stories of most women's magazines, for life is not always like that. It is paradoxical in an age that prides itself on its realism that those who cater to the public taste must hide the facts in a Pollyanna-like dispensation of truth.

However, do not misunderstand me. I enjoyed the movie of "The Citadel" very much. It was refreshing to see the unfamiliar faces of English characters in the supporting roles, the photography was striking, and the acting did justice to the magnificent story.

Someone recently gave the library several issues of Fortune magazine. They are recent copies of this ten dollar a year monthly, and would be a valuable contribution to any library. The photography, paintings, articles, and the authoritative survey of opinion on current affairs are only a few of its decorative features. The March issue is on the rack and the others can be had on call.

Bidu Sayao, coloratura soprano from Brazil, will be the guest on the Sunday Evening Hour tomorrow night. She sang in Knoxville last winter and many Maryvillians then had an opportunity to hear her. The symphony orchestra, under the baton of Eugene Ormandy, will open the program with the Ride of the Valkyries from Wagner's "Die Walkure." Other orchestral numbers will be Scherzo from "A Midsummer Night's Dream," Mendelssohn; Waltzes from "Der Rosenkavalier," Johann Strauss; and the Polovetsian Dances from the Russian opera "Prince Igor," Borodin. Miss Sayao will sing Variations on a Theme of Mozart, Adam; the Waltz Song from "Romeo and Juliet," Gounod; and a group of three numbers: Lullaby for Liana, Bellini; The Little Shepherd's Song, Watts; and When I Have Sung My Songs, Charles.

It's not too early to suggest that the Maryville little symphony orchestra continue the custom it started last year and give a concert this spring. Their concert last year was not well attended, but it was altogether worth-while, and support by the students would encourage further work in this direction. The music department here deserves much credit for the contribution it makes to the cultural life on college hill.

Head Of College Men Is Young Enough To Have Graduated In The Class of 1934

By CHARLES D. ORR

Without a doubt, "Mr. Mac" is one of the best known men on the campus. And with equal certainty, he probably is one of the least known-about members of the faculty. As long as any of the students and many of the faculty members have been here, Mr. McCurry has been quietly presiding over his household of boys; but concerning his age, he will only say, "I am old enough to have seen the building of Voorhees chapel, Carnegie hall, Thaw hall and the hospital; yet young enough to have graduated with the class of 1934!"

Eulie Erskin McCurry—that is his full name, though few there are who know it—was born on a farm, ten miles northwest of Greeneville, the county seat of Green county, in East Tennessee. Of Scotch-Irish descent, his early years were spent as a farm boy. His father's land adjoined that of a Mr. Cox—who had a daughter, Callie!

At the age of fifteen he left his home to enter the Preparatory school at Maryville. Callie also came to Maryville. His program soon became a heavy one and most of his spare time was taken up in working about the campus, one of his jobs being that of carrying the mail. On Saturday evening, the only time allotted to such purposes, he would visit Miss Callie Cox in Baldwin parlor. Those were the days that all college men wore hats, hooks for which may still be found under each chapel seat; and instead of raincoats, umbrellas were carried in inclement weather.

After finishing his preparatory work, Mr. McCurry entered the freshman class of Maryville college, at the same time having risen to the position of proctor of Memorial hall, at that time the men's dormitory. He was a member of the Alpha Sigma literary society, and at one time program chairman of the organization.

Toward the close of his freshman year, he was stricken with an attack of typhoid fever, which temporarily halted his school work. The following year, 1913, he came to be in charge of the campus grounds and in August, 1914, married Miss Callie Cox, the couple making their home in an apartment in Memorial hall. Probably the most outstanding experience of Mr. McCurry's stay as manager of the grounds came when Carnegie hall burned in 1916. The loss, he attributes to lack of fire fighting apparatus; the only supply of water being an inch main from the campus water plant. Drinking water was taken from a 100 foot well, the cover of which may still be seen in the sidewalk in front of Carnegie.

In 1918 Mr. McCurry resigned his position at the college and returned with his wife to the farm near Greeneville, where they spent the next two years, returning to Maryville in January of 1920.

His years at Maryville were not idle ones. In spite of the numerous duties required of him as proctor, he found time to take courses in the college toward his graduation. In 1932 he set about earnestly to finish his work and received his B. A. degree with the class of 1934.

Not satisfied with only his college work, he devoted the next two years, especially the summers, to work in the University of Tennessee toward his Masters, using Education as his major with a minor in Sociology. He received his masters degree from the University of Tennessee in 1937.

This year he has been teaching a course, "Introduction to Education," entirely new in Maryville college.

Besides his heavy work on the campus he is active in many outside organizations, being a member of the University of Tennessee Alumni Association, the Alpha Kappa chapter of the Phi Delta Kappa National Education fraternity, the Tennessee Education association, the National Educational Association and several civic organizations. He is an active member of the New Providence Presbyterian church.

Members Of Faculty Give Play At Dinner

On Monday evening, the Faculty club had its regular monthly meeting. After dinner prepared and served by members of the Home Economics department, two one-act plays were given by members of the faculty and staff of the college. The plays were "Babbitt's Boy", and "The Twelve Pound Look." The casts of the plays included Miss Viola Lightfoot, Miss Anna Lee Fortner, Mr. Ray J. Dollenmayer; Miss Dorothy Hunter, Miss Phyllis Dexter, Miss Mary Sloan Welsh, Miss Geneva Hutchinson, Dr. Newell T. Preston, and Mr. Ed Gillingham.

Triangle Club To Hear Inside Stories By Eble

Triangle club members will be treated to the inside story on Campus lives and loves at their meeting Tuesday evening in Athenian hall. Charles (Paper-Stabber) Eble will read several notes he is purported to have picked up with his weapon on paper stabbing trips about the campus.

It is reported that there will be several plain-clothes men on duty to prevent possible injury to the speaker. The meeting starts at 6:45 if Mr. Eble is not spirited away in the meantime.

Law Club Holds Forum

Members of the Law club will meet in Athenian hall at 6:45 next Wednesday evening for their usual bi-monthly meeting. The program will consist of an open forum discussion on the profession of law.

Reed Is Commentator At Disc Club Meeting

The Disc club held its meeting Thursday afternoon in the Fine Arts studio at 4:30. Ralph Reed was commentator on an all-Wagner program. The first number was the Overture to "Rienzi," an early opera based on the novel by the same name. Following were the Overture to the "Flying Dutchman", the Entrance of the Gods into Valhalla from Gotterdammerung", the Prelude to the third act and the Bridal chorus from "Lohengrin," the Overture and Dance of the Apprentices from "Die Meistersinger" closed the program.

Following a brief discussion, it was decided to change the time of meeting to alternate Thursdays at 4:30 until further notice.

Mrs. West Gives Play Cast

David Heydinger will appear for the first time on the Maryville stage as Valentine Brown, the young doctor with whom Miss Phoebe is so much in love. Although this is Heydinger's first appearance at Maryville, he is by no means a newcomer to the stage and is expected to give an excellent interpretation of the eligible young bachelor.

The production staff has not been completed as yet and will be announced in its entirety later.

Barrie's humor in "Quality Street" in his character contrasts, characterizations, and portrayal of English life in the early nineteenth century helps to make it one of his most successful plays.

Dr. Newell T. Preston Will Speak On "Hamlet"

The Maryville chapter of Theta Alpha Phi, national honorary dramatic fraternity, will meet in the Fine Arts studio Monday night at seven o'clock. The Maurice Evans prdouction of "Hamlet", which ran in New York last fall, will be discussed. Dr. Newell T. Preston will talk on the interpretation of the lines, and accounts of the staging, acting, and costuming will be given by Catherine Pond, Sara Bolton, and Ivan Elder.

Members of the Senior Play cast and any others interested are invited. A business meeting will follow the program.

SCOTTY SIDE SLANTS

By the Sports Editor

BRIGHTER NEXT YEAR—

Although the swimming team has won only two meets this year, there are brighter things in store for the Scotty mermen. For the squad will lose only one man this year, that being George Felknor (our worthy editor, too). Next season should bring back these men: Findlay, Cross, Lee, Heydinger, Akana, and Stevenson. The team, considering the fact that three of the varsity men were freshmen and totally lacking in experience, didn't do as bad as one might expect. With a year of seasoning under their belt, the tankmen should come back next year to really do some fancy splashing in our pool.

WHAT! NO TENNIS PLAYERS EITHER?—

Another minor sport that is really going to take a belting this year will be tennis. Every man on last year's squad has either graduated or transferred. Frank Morrow, Van Cise, Gillingham, Colombo, and Augenstein are all elsewhere this year. With the exception of course of Gillingham, who will render his services as coach in the absence of Mr. Fishbach. Not only that, but there doesn't seem to be but about two or three prospects for the team this year. Paul Akana and Bruce Morgan look like the best bets right about now, but who will be the other two men? This situation reminds me of baseball, too. The only sport that is going anywhere this year is track. (We hope.) At least that is the only sport with more than one or two lettermen back from last year. What we need around this place is a flock of tennis players, a few Carl Hubbells, and two or three Joe DiMaggios, let alone, Glen Cunningham and Jesse Owens.

INTERCLASS SPORTS

The YMCA athletic association is sponsoring an interclass swimming meet to be held April 1. Last year a similar meet was held and met with great success. Anyone is eligible to participate who is not on the swimming squad. If enough participants are willing all the regular events will be held.

Last Wednesday night the basketball team of the junior class defeated the senior team, 29-15. The juniors held a five point lead over their opponents at the half, and it was that same five point lead which told the story when the game ended.

Lineups:
Seniors 15		Juniors 29
Jenkins 1	F	Rae 4
Judy 5	C	Hook 7
McCaskie 5	C	Kramer 6
Napier	G	Taylor 1
Taylor 2	G	Proctor

Subs: Srs. Walker 2, Jrs. Amos 2.

The Juniors and freshmen fought it out on the basketball court last Tuesday night, and the result was decidedly in favor of the junior team. The freshman were defeated by the score of 32-21.

Juniors 32		Freshmen 21
Rae 8	F	Callahan 5
Taylor 5	F	Sutton 7
Kramer 4	G	Wright
Proctor	G	Whittaker 2

Milligan Wins SMC Basketball Crown

In a five page letter setting down rulings to member institutions, Commissioner W. O. Lowe ruled that Milligan college was the official 1939 Smoky Mountain Conference basketball champion.

Maryville college's Scotties, according to unofficial records having won seven games and lost six finished last in the official standings with one victory against 12 defeats. Commissioner Lowe reversed the decisions on six games because Maryville used players who were not eligible.

Cumberland and Appalachian State Teachers didn't play enough Conference games to be given a standing. Following are the standings as announced by Commissioner Lowe:

	W	L	Pct
Milligan	10	2	.833
East Tenn. Teachers	9	5	.692
LMU	9	5	.642
Carson-Newman	7	6	.538
King	6	6	.600
Tusculum	2	10	.166
Maryville	1	12	.077

Maryville Loses Close Swim Meet To Tusculum Col.

The Maryville swimming team dropped a poorly swum meet to Tusculum last Saturday night by a score of 38-37. The meet was close, being decided by several hard races in which the Scotties were crippled because of a cold epidemic. Tusculum, however, was also off form from sickness, but outlasted the Scots to tie up the conference lead 1-1. There will be no more meets this year to confirm the victor.

Outstanding for Tusculum: Whitley, distance man, and Condit, backstroker, each took points in a relay and an individual race. For Maryville, Lee, speedy dash man, and Cross, middle distance and relay. Lee took the fifty and relay, Cross the 100, and relay. Marion Birmingham won his event, topping two excellent Tusculum divers. The meet was Maryville's first trip since the U-T meet.

Prospects Slim For '39 Baseball Team To Win SMC

With one week of baseball practice gone by, Coach Honaker faces one of his longest seasons as far as prospects go for another baseball team like last year's. With only three veterans back from last year, the team will have to be chosen from a bevy of freshmen prospects that at present have shown no signs of replacing Odell, Hernandez, Black, Parker, Collins and the rest of the good ball players from last season.

Maryville has always been known, however, for her baseball teams and baseball players. Most of you no doubt know that Johnathan Stone, Washington Senator star two years back, was a Honaker product. Odell, Hernandez, and Collins are playing professional ball in the semi-pro leagues around here. Coach Honaker will have plenty of chance to use his ability to bring out all the talent possible in his '39 team.

The only infield man available right now is J. D. Hughes, who handles the hot corner. Scot Honaker will probably be called upon to handle second base along with his mound duties. The only other veteran is "Nig" Wilburn, who at present is the best hitter on the club, and that is not saying too much. "Nig" is a fine southpaw twirler, one of the best in the Conference. Besides his pitching, he will do considerable roaming in the grass chasing flies in the outfield. Short, a sophomore pitching prospect, looks like he has the chance to fill in where he will be needed, and will probably be used quite a bit on the mound this year.

First base is an unanswerable problem right now, Lamar Russell, Red McCaskie, and no one knows who else are the only prospects off hand. Shortstop ??, Catcher ?? second base ??? right field ?? left field?? center field?? in case you don't know what the question marks are, well, Coach Honaker doesn't know either. So, if Coach doesn't know, how do you expect us to? All we can say is, that don't be too surprised if Mr. Honaker pulls a fast one out of the hat and comes up with a better team than you or I expected.

BASEBALL SCHEDULE

The 1939 baseball schedule has been announced by Coach L. S. Honaker and reveals that the squad will play nineteen games, thirteen at home and six away. The schedule is as follows:

Grapplers Begin YM Tournament This Afternoon

The intramural wrestling tournament sponsored by the YMCA and in charge of Phil Evaul and Clem Hahn looks as though it will be a perfect success. There is no doubt that there are many interested in the tournament which is evident by the large number that signed up to participate. Sixty-six men have entered the tournament and are ready to wrestle starting Saturday night.

Phil Evaul, who has by hard work made most of this possible, has announced the following instructions and information: The first matches will be Saturday afternoon (today. All matches must be wrestled as scheduled unless Phil Evaul is notified in sufficient time to postpone the match. All matches will start at 7:30 p.m., when in the evenings; and they are closed to the public. The first round must be finished by next Saturday night. This means that they will be wrestled this afternoon, Tuesday and Thursday night, and next Saturday afternoon. The time of your match will be posted on the bulletin board at Carnegie. The wrestlers will weigh in between 3 and 3:30 on the days they are to wrestle. You must be within the 3 pound weight limit or you will forfeit the match. The referees will be Clem Hahn, Edgar Meares, and Obie Jenkins. Coach Robert Thrower will referee the finals, which will be in the big gym and open to the public.

The athletic association of the Y is going to try to get medals for the winners of each class, so the best of luck to you.

The following is the list of first round matches:

121 lb. class: Alvin Brown vs. L. Lovingood.

128 lb. class: Fred Rhody vs. Vernon Lloyd; Fred Speer vs. Bye; Al Seaman vs. J. Badgett.

136 lb. class: Al Davies vs Chas. Fish; Gene Orr vs C. McCammon; S. Amos vs Graham; W. Mooney vs. D. Mathias; J. Nicely vs D. Steakley; J. Hulse vs R. Butts.

145 lb. class: Jarrell vs Bye; Butler vs Porter; B. Morgan vs Birmingham; C. Stroup vs D. Campbell; Bob Short vs T. Etheredge; E Ritzman vs A. Moore.

155 lb. class: Blake vs R. Barber; B. Lewis vs Akana; I. Hodges vs H. Brown; J. D. Hughes vs Rosser; Rus. Stevenson vs G. Findlay; Ralph Reed vs Loololian; D. Moore vs L. Best; E. M. Barber vs E. Tweed; H. Burns vs J. Burns.

165 lb. class: T. Taylor vs Bye; H. Jochinson vs B. Baird; J. Etheredge vs P. Nusche; C. Abbott vs H. Lamon.

175 lb. class: Jack Butler vs C. Proctor; Napier vs Peterson; W. Baird vs Puncheon.

Swimming Team Closes Season With 40-35 Victory Over Chattanooga YM

The Maryville Scottie swimmers breezed through Chattanooga YMCA to win the final meet of the season, 40-35. Finishing a successful trip which took them south to Atlanta as well as Chattanooga, the Scot lads overcame a good handicap in the first victory Maryville has ever scored against the Y.

The meet, the last of the season's, was also the last for George Felknor, senior distance swimmer who has splashed through the season in good style. The meet is also Coach Gillingham's last for the swimming squad; he plans to enter graduate school next year.

Maryville took five first places, including the seventh win for the free-style relay. Only three schools have been able to beat the crack Highland combination: Kentucky, Auburn, and Tennessee, all three outstanding Southeastern conference schools. Individual winners included Heydinger in the backstroke, Lee in the fifty yard dash, and Cross in the 200 yard free style and the 100 yard dash. The final relay team consisted of Cross, Findlay, Akana, and Lee. Walters, the recently named Number 6 diver in the United States, was outstanding for Chattanooga in taking his event over the neat diving of Maryville's Birmingham.

The meet was the first defeat for the Chattanooga team this year, it having won five, including a one point win over the Scot mermen at the first of the season. Both meets were bitterly contested, the last with Maryville an experienced and superior squad.

Complete results:

120 yd. medley—Chattanooga—1:16.4
220 yd. freestyle—Cross (M), Manning (C) Felknor (M)—2:49.9
40 yd. dash—Lee (M), Carden (C), and Findlay (M)—22.3
Diving—Walters (C), Birmingham (M) Nixon (C)—Points 115
100 yd. dash—Cross (M), Carden (C), Stevenson (M)—1.04.7

Scot Tankmen Lose To Emory 47 To 27

Odd-Length Pool Hampers Scot Swimmers

The Maryville college swimming team journeyed to Atlanta last Tuesday to swim the University of Emory. Emory outsplashed the travel-weary Scotties by a score of 47-27. Maryville was not by any means outclassed in the meet however, although the score would indicate that they were badly beaten. The Highlanders were beaten in part by a non-regulation pool. The Emory pool, is an odd length, 33 1-2 yards, making it advantageous to Emory, and very difficult for the Scotties to show their best. Each race, however, was very close, several with "blanket finishes", Emory taking the decisions in all cases. In the relays, Maryville led the field, the final relay being won by Cross, Findlay, Akana, and Lee, in an odd distance of 133 1-2 yards; the medley being lost on a bad turn.

The meet was Maryville's sole meet with the large southern university. Among the outstanding men on the Emory team were Hutchinson who had beaten the diver from the national collegiate champions from Florida the night before, and Dennyl, crack 220 and 440 yard swimmer. Maryville took every second in the meet. Emory garnered all the firsts with the exception of the final relay.

Dale Russell Leads Basketeers Scoring

The 1938-39 basketball season is over, and the following resume will give the reader a fairly accurate account of the campaign of the team of Maryville college.

Out of 21 games played, the team won 14. The total number of points scored during the season by the Scotties was 849. This figure is 75 points higher than the sum of points scored against the Maryville team. Maryville's opposing teams scored 674 points during games with Maryville.

The following is a list of players on the Orange and Garnet team, and their individual scoring records:

PLAYER	NN. of POINTS
Dale Russell	178
Weldon Baird	159
James Etheredge	130
Boydson Baird	128
Scott Honaker	119
William Baird	68
H. Clabaugh	31
Stan Menning	17
Harlan Husk	6
J. D. Hughes	1
Jack Burns	1

The freshman volley ball team of the women's point system won the volley ball championship title this week by defeating the junior-senior and sophomore teams.

In the first game of the tournament the junior-senior team defeated the sophomores 40-29. The sophomores again met defeat on Tuesday by a score of 51 to 17 in favor of the freshmen. The final game on Thursday between the freshmen and junior-seniors was won by the freshmen, 47-24.

Softball will be the next sport taken up.

Hot dogs will be dispensed at 75 stands and girlls on Treasure Island at the 1939 California World's Fair.

One Way

There are ways and ways of earning one's way through college, and we supposed most of them had already been thought of but Ralph Lidge, student at Northwestern university has a means of income that we hadn't heard of before. He raises bees, 6,500,000 of them. It has been suggested that he should wind up with a "B" average.

Musical Debate

The music department of the University of Kentucky recently sponsored a musical debate. The debate was between swing and the classics, and the music spoke for itself. The program consisted of several modern selections such as Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue", and of classics such as Mozart's "Quartet in F Major." The debate was non decision, because of the wide variance of musical taste of those present.

Did They Get It?

Whizzer White of recent football fame showed his sense of humor upon arriving in England to attend Oxford university on a Rhodes scholarship. He said, "I think I'll like it over here, because I'm just a country boy, and I'm not very used to modern conveniences anyway." Do you suppose the English got it?

Carol Ward will read "An Instinct For Love."

"Nothing New Under The Sun" Goes For Bull Sessions, Too, Reporter Discovers

By DON KENT

About fifty years ago, Lewis (Alice-in-Wonderland) Carroll wrote:

"'The time has come,' the Walrus said,
'To talk of many things:
Of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—
Of cabbages—and kings—' "

which proves that bull sessions are nothing new. Though the discussion was carried on to the music of Neptune's Nippy Nifties instead of Sammy's Sizzling Swingaroos, the bull session of the past is the bull session of the present.

The topics have remained almost the same. It is true that dictators, instead of kings, are for the moment predominant, but it is believed that they are only a passing fad and are not to be taken seriously. Aside from such minor differences, bull sessions have changed very little.

Today there are three types of bull sessions. The first may be called the "library type"; because one may come and go as he pleases. One of these sessions may start among four friends with such a simple statement as, "I don't think much of the second hand on my Ingersoll." Immediately after this innocent remark, the battle begins. No official choosing of sides is necessary, for in a flash, it is Elmer and Ferdinand vs. Claude and Percival, or vice versa. Three minutes later, the subject has already changed twice and may be on the verge of changing a third time when the balance of power is upset by the entrance of a couple of Jacks and a Joe to add fresh fools to the fire.

A rapid change in subjects follows which will probably include Paris, girls, Hitler, girls, and crab-meat salad, this latter being brought up when someone remarks that his girl is an expensive eater. Meanwhile, Elmer and the three original bulls leave only to be replaced by recruits who have been loitering near in the hope of being able to add a few gems of their own. Eventually, someone will look at his watch and declare that he doesn't "think much of the second hand." And that is where we came in.

The second type of session is the "classroom" type (so-called because once you get in, you stay in). There is no jumping from subject to subject. There are three main topics: Life, Politics, and Religion, (which include everything anybody knows about anything). One of these three will be thoroughly discussed. Indeed, discussion may last for hours if conditions are favorable and the lights don't go out. If, by chance, it should last until 11:30, Mr. Mac is always willing to give a "cordial invitation" to the tired tongues to rest. And they need it.

The third type of bull session is, paradoxically enough, the "cow session." No self-respecting male has ever been present at one, but a study of human traits reveals that there must be such a thing. On the other hand, although everyone has heard the expression, "slingin' the bull", the corresponding term, "slingin' the cow" is, to say the least, rarely heard. And then again—(Ed. note—This is no place for an argument).

Public Finance Class Attends Open Forum

Dr. Claude A. Campbell accompanied by eight students from his public finance class attended an open forum on taxation held Tuesday evening in the Knoxville high school auditorium. This meeting was sponsored by the Adult Educational council of Knoxville, and was one of the council's series of forums on prominent public questions. The tax problems of Knoxville and Knox county were discussed by city and county officials.

Nine Applications For Honors Work Received

Nine applications for honors work for next year have been received to date by Dr. E. R. Hunter, director of curriculum, announced today. One week remains in which juniors may make application for this special study. Honors work as carried on at Maryville involves the completion of a special project of extensive reading or investigation or a combination of the two. The student works under the supervision of some member of the staff of the major department in which he chooses his subject.

Play Writing Contest Opens

The third annual Drake university Natiinal Radio Playwriting competition opens officially today according to the announcement of Edwin G. Barrett, director of the Drake university department of radio. The R. A. Crawford Award, sponsored by the Valley Savings Bank, Des Moines, in memory of the late R. A. Crawford, pioneer Iowa banker and former treasurer of Drake university, makes possible cash prizes totalling fifty dollars for the three radio plays judged most meritorious.

This year in addition to plays running approximately 13 or 26 minutes, hour length plays will be accepted. Official entry blanks may be secured by writing the Drake University Department of Radio, Des Moines, Iowa. There is no entry charge. All plays must be in by April 1, 1939.

Bewley And Law Are Nominations For Y President

Tuesday Set For Election In Pearsons Lobby By YW Women

A committee composed of seniors and the advisory board of the YWCA met last night to place in nomination candidates for the offices of the organization for the coming year. Two juniors, Jane Law and Helen Bewley, are the nominees for the presidency. Law has served as worship director of the women's association during the past year and was recently elected secretary of the Tennessee Student Christian Association in a conference held at Scarritt college in Nashville. Bewley is the present treasurer of the Y and is assistant to the supervisor of women's residence. Those nominated for the other offices are: Mary Orr and Sara Lee Hellums, vice president; Jean White and Charlotte Moughton, secretary; Barbara Ann Swift and Edith Evans, treasurer; and Mary Clarke Caldwell and Ruth Crawford, Nu Gamma chairman.

In accordance with the constitution there may be additional nominations from the floor during the regular weekly meeting on Sunday afternoon. The election will be conducted all day Tuesday in the lobby of Pearsons hall.

The YWCA cabinet and the Advisory board will attend a dinner at Cates' Tea Room, monday evening at 5:30. An annual affair, it is being served off the campus for the first time this year.

A short program will be given by some of the members of the association. Miss Katherine Davies, a member of the advisory board, will play several selections on the piano. The principal address will be given by Miss Jessie Johnson, also on the advisory board. Miss Harriet Barber will sing several numbers.

Internat'l Relations Club Elects Webster And Corrigan Friday

At its bi-monthly meeting held last night in Thaw hall the International Relations club elected new officers. George Webster, of Rogersville, Tenn., succeeds Otto Pflanze as chairman, and Joy Corrigan is the new secretary, replacing Edith Gillette.

The feature of the meeting was a debate between the men's freshmen team of George Tibbetts and Glenn McAfee and a team from Johnson City Teachers college. The visitors upheld the affirmative of the question, "Resolved, that the United States should form an alliance with Great Britain."

The International Relations club started two years ago as the Peace Forum and was sponsored by the YM and YWCA. This year it became affiliated with a national organization although it it still under the student sponsorship of the Christian associations. The faculty advisor is Dr. Claude A. Campbell.

Nature Club Has Review By Author

Mrs. Elizabeth S. Bowman Discusses Book On Smokies

Mrs. Elizabeth Skaggs Bowman, author of the latest book on the Smoky mountains, reviewed her recently published book, "Land of High Horizons," at the meeting of the Nature club on Thursday evening.

In discussing the literature that has been written about the Smoky mountain region, Mrs. Bowman said that books which give a true picture of southern mountain life are seldom published, while those which portray only the backwardness and ignorance of the mountain people are widely publicized. Mrs. Bowman stated that one of the purposes of her book is to help correct this erroneous impression.

Dealing in particular with her book, Mrs. Bowman told the stories connected with some of the seventy-six illustrations in it and related some of the experiences which occured in the writing of the book. It has been highly praised by critics in New York, Miami, Fla., and elsewhere. A copy is in the college library.

Mrs. Bowman was introduced to the Nature club by Mr. Carlos C. Campbell, director of publicity of the Great Smoky Mountains National park. Mr. Campbell furnished many of the photographs of mountain scenes which appear in "Land of High Horizons."

The Nature club, accompanied by Miss Susan Green, took a hike today to Coulter's greenhouses to see his collection of spring flowers.

Production Staff For Alpha-Theta Midwinter Announced By Fisher

John Fisher, chairman of the play committee for Alpha Sigma and Theta Epsilon, yesterday announced the production staff for their midwinter, "Quality Street," by James M. Barrie. Tom Stahl will be stage manager, assisted by Lloyd Shue; William Felknor will be business manager; Dot Quass and Stone Norton, advertising managers; Elizabeth Stone, costume mistress, assisted by Nina Clark; and Virginia Partridge, property manager.

Rehearsals of "Quality Street" began last Monday with Muriel Mann, Curtmarie Brown, and Dave Heydinger in the leading roles. Mrs. Nita Eckles West is directing. The play is to be presented in Voorhees chapel April 14.

Sir James Barrie, until his death a few years ago, was one of the foremost English playwrights, well-known for his "Peter Pan," "The Admirable Crichton," and others.

"Courage" Vesper Theme

The theme of Dr. W. P. Stevenson's sermon for vespers, March 19, is "Be of Good Courage". The choir, under the direction of Ralph R. Colbert, will sing Will C. Macfarlane's "Open Your Eyes."

As is the custom every year, the next five issues of the Highland Echo will be edited by the junior members of the staff. This week the editor is George L. Hunt.

Swing Session In Voorhees Tonight

Dr. Mayo's Professors Of Swing To Entertain College Tonight

"Swing School" will be the topic of the As You Like It program tonight, to be given at 8:00 in Voorhees chapel by the Athenian literary society. Palmer Mayo, D.S. (Doctor of Swing), will be in charge of the program and will be assisted by the Six Professors of Swing, a six piece orchestra. The program will be conducted on the order of Kay Kyser's popular radio feature with a one dollar prize for the winner of the music-questionnaire contest. Dr. Mayo was awarded his D.S. degree by Kay Kyser in 1936.

Ten members of the audience sitting in previously selected seats will take part in the contest. Contestants will be divided into two groups, with five members in each group. During the course of the program, each contestant will be given ten questions on both popular and classical music, the winners of each group being given five additional questions. The person giving the largest number of correct answers will be awarded the prize.

Interspersed through the program will be popular specialties by the orchestra with vocal selections by Miss Jane Clepper.

Refreshments will be served in the gymnasium following the program. This is the second in a series of As You Like It programs sponsored by the literary societies of the college.

Fine Arts Department Plans Second Series Of Teas And Recitals

The department of Fine Arts is planning a series of entertainments and teas for the remainder of the semester. First on the schedule of the dramatic arts department are two studio teas on April 1 and May 6 in the Fine Arts studio. April 1, three one-act plays, directed by Ruth West, Mary Frances Spurlock, and Mrs. Annarine Atkins Hamilton will be given. The May 6 recital will also consist of three one-act plays, this group to be coached by Gordon Bennett, Muriel Mann, and Mrs. Hamilton. Attendance to these teas is by invitation only, but arrangements to see the plays may be made through Mrs. Hamilton.

Other plans of the department are the presentation by the play production class of Zona Gale's "Neighbors," and a program by the major graduates of fine arts. To be held May 26, this program will be presented by Zula Vance, Harriet Barber, Muriel Mann, Gordon Bennett, and Sara Bolton.

Recitals by music students will be announced later.

Dr. Richards To Speak To Students Wednesday

Dr. James McDowell Richards, president of Columbia Theological seminary, Decatur, Ga., will be the chapel speaker Wednesday. Dr. Richards received his A.B. at Davidson college; his M.A. at Princeon university; A.B., M. A. at Oxford university; B.D. at Columbia Theological seminary; and his D.D. from Davidson college. This will be his second appearance before the student body of Maryville. He will be available for interviews with theological students interested in information about the seminary.

Miss Shirley Jackson To Speak At YWCA Service

Miss Shirley E. Jackson, a graduate of Maryville, will speak at the YWCA meeting Sunday on the poetry of Edwin Arlington Robinson. Miss Jackson, of the class of 1938, is a former officer of the YWCA, and a sister of Miss Elizabeth Jackson, of the college English department.

Miss Jackson is now teaching at Ft. Craig school. She majored in English while at Maryville, and last year did an honors work project on imagery in E. A. Robinson.

Alpha Sig Elects Byrne President

11 Other Officers Chosen After Balloting Thursday

Arthur Byrne, a senior from Gainsboro, Tennessee, was elected third term president of Alpha Sigma society in the election held Thursday in Pearsons lobby. Byrne, business manager of the Highland Echo, member of the Writer's workshop, and twice manager of the football team, has held many offices in Alpha Sigma, having been secretary for the first term of this year, and vice president for the second. He was opposed in this election by Albert Rosser, a senior from Broadway, North Carolina.

Those elected to the remaining offices were: Erwin Ritzman, vice president; Charles Sullivan, secretary; Gene McCurry, James Etheredge, Gordon Findlay, and Lamar Russell, program secretaries; Herschel Pyle and Joe Swift, critics; Dudley Moore, sergeant-at-arms; Arthur Miller, pianist; and William Alston, janitor. Howard Davis, the treasurer, serves throughout the year.

Alpha Sigma society will meet this evening at 6:45, in a joint meeting with Athenian literary society, in Athenian hall.

Marriage Forum At YM This Week

Beginning tomorrow afternoon at 5 in the Bartlett hall auditorium the YM CA will start a series of meetings on "Marriage and the Home" led by Dr. Horace E. Orr, head of the department of Bible and religious education.

The programs, planned only for the men students of the college, will last for several Sundays. Tomorrow afternoon Dr. Orr will discuss such points as factors leading toward a successful marriage, significant changes in the family, and ideas about divorce. The following Sunday he will direct the discussion on any of the main points that the men want discussed.

At the monthly meeting of the cabinet, in the YWCA rooms last Saturday evening, William McKee, regional secretary of the YMCA and guest of the cabinet, offered suggestions as to projects the organization at Maryville could work on.

The nominating committee for next year's officers, who will be elected April 4, was elected by the members of the cabinet at the same meeting. Those on the committee include Neal Rosser, chairman, senior; Arnold Kramer, junior; Paul Brown, sophomore; Frank Cross, freshman; and Bruce Morgan, William Alston, and Warren Ashby, representatives from the cabinet.

Weldon Baird, president of the Y, announced the appointment of Fred Rhody as business manager for the annual spring retreat; and the cabinet elected Phil Evaul as cabinet representative.

Miss Frances Rich To Lecture On The History of American Art

MISS FRANCES RICH

Illustrated Lectures Are To Be Given In Art Gallery Tuesday

The history of American painting will be the subject of an illustrated art lecture which will be given Tuesday evening at 7:15 in the Elizabeth Gowdy Baker art gallery in Anderson hall by Miss Frances Rich. This lecture, which has been prepared by the American Federation of Art, will discuss and show painting from the Revolutionary times through the early 20th century.

The first part of the lecture will show the works of John Singleton Copley, Gilbert Stuart, Benjamin West, and others. This group painted only portraits for two reasons. They were directly influenced by England, and the English artists were, at this period, painting only portraits; so it was only natural that America should copy the mother country. Secondly, many of the American painters were from the north where Puritanism flourished, and the Puritan religion prohibited painting of any type other than portraits.

The next part of the lecture will show a group of landscapes, products of the Hudson River school. This school was composed of groups of men who lived in the Hudson River area of New York, where the scenery is especially beautiful. They were the first pure landscapists in America.

Painting in the middle of the 19th century was done by Whistler, Winslow Homer, and others. This period is directly influenced by Europe; for it was then "the thing" to go to Europe to study art. There was no definite subject matter, and mediums varied. Homer became known as the greatest water colorist; Whistler, for his use of water color and oil.

This lecture will follow painting through its American history up to the modern period in which surrealism and cubism became prominent. It will bring painting up to the influence of the Paris school.

A second lecture, a continuation of the first one, will be given on March 28 in the Baker art gallery, and will follow painting through the Paris school and up to the present time.

These illustrated lectures, containing about 75 slides, colored and uncolored, are circulated by the American Federation of Art of which the Maryville college art department is a member.

The prints of contemporary painting, which have been shown for the past few weeks, will continue to be exhibited indefinitely.

Curriculum Office Schedules Exams

Comprehensives Are To Be Given Three Weeks Before Finals

The examination schedule for the second semester has been released from Dr. E. R. Hunter's office, with the accompanying regulations:

Each teacher is to give at least two announced tests in each course during the semester, and pains are to be taken to space these tests at as nearly as possible equal intervals throughout the semester. At the end of the semester there will be a six-day season of final examinations, for which a schedule will be set up, and according to this schedule, final examinations designed to occupy from two to three hours each, will be given in all courses. No announced tests are to be given in any course in the week immediately preceding this final examination season.

Comprehensive examinations for seniors and National Coooperative tests for sophomores will be held on Thursday and Friday afternoons, May 4 and 5. There will be no senior exemptions from final examinations this year.

The final examination schedule is as follows:

May 23—9:00-11:30—a
Tuesday—1:30-4:00—A
May 24—9:00-11:30—b
Wednesday—1:30-4:00—bx, B
May 25—9:00-11:30—c
Thursday—1:30-4:00—cx, C
May 26—9:00-11:30—d
Friday—1:30-4:00—dx, D
May 27—9:00-11:30—e
Saturday—1:30-4:00—E, x
May 29—9:00-11:30—f
Monday—1:30-4:00—F

Minor Epidemic Fills The Hospital For Past Week

This past week a minor epidemic of influenza has been present on the campus. Stanley Bird, Dick Woodring, Jack Burns, Margaret Peters, Viola Turner, George Felknor, Frank Cross, and Mary Elizabeth Karg have been discharged from the hospital. Marie Caldwell, Jean Schaeffer, and Lois Thorson are still confined there. Joe Swift, who was just recently discharged from the hospital, and Wilfred Johnson are ill in Carnegie.

Dr. Orr Has Articles In March Issue Of Presbyterian Tribune

The March 16 issue of the "Presbyterian Tribune", leading organ of the Presbyterian church in the U.S.A., contains an article by Dr. Horace E. Orr, head and professor of the department of Bible.

Dr. Orr's article is entitled "How Far Back to the Fathers?" and is a discussion of the psychological interpretation of what one may believe about the transcendence of God.

A leading article in this same issue is by Dr. John Timothy Stone, entitled "A Challenge." It deals with his work on the placement committee of the seminary of which he is president.

Johnson City Teachers Meet Frosh Debaters

Last evening, the International Relations club was entertained with a non-decision debate between a Maryville college freshman debate team and the freshman debate team of East Tennessee Teachers college on the subject: "Resolved: that the United States should form an alliance with Great Britain." The boys' team of Maryville college, consisting of Glenn McAfee and George Tibbetts, upheld the negative.

In the afternoon, three non-decision debates were held on the same question, two between the girls teams of the two schools and one between the boys teams, in which the boys upheld the affirmative. The Maryville girls team, Lucille Lynch and Janet Lindsey, first upheld the negative and then the affirmative.

Personal Life Of Gieseking Is As Interesting As His Musical Career

By CHARLES D. ORR

The personal life of Walter Gieseking coupled with his great musical career, makes him one of the most outstanding men of today. Entirely lacking in the artistic temperament usually ascribed to artists, yet probably one of the foremost men in his field of music, he lives the full wholesome life of a great man. Mr. Gieseking will be heard here in recital, March 27.

Gieseking was born in Lyons, France, on November 5, 1895, the son of a musically inclined physician. He began his studies of the piano at the early age of four, under the tutelage of his father. His parent, wishing his son to be familiar with two instruments, also gave him instruction in the violin. At the age of 16, Gieseking and his family moved to Hanover, Germany, where, in 1911, he entered the conservatory under professor Karl Leimer.

In 1915, while still a student at the conservatory he gave a series of six concerts in Hanover, performing the remarkable feat of playing the entire 32 Beethoven sonatas.

During the World War, he enlisted in the German Army in the capacity of pianist and violinist in the regimental symphony orchestra. Returning to Hanover in 1918, he found his family's finances at a low ebb, and their property in France confiscated. Immediately he set about to rebuild the fortune. For several years he taught music, at times for as low as forty cents a lesson. During this time he developed many of his theories of training, which he later worked out with his former teacher into the Leimer-Gieseking Method.

From his savings as a teacher, he was finally able to arrange a full series of European concerts, and with the post-war demand for modern composition, soon became famous as one of its outstanding interpreters, especially of the works of Debussy. His American career began when he was booked for a New York concert by Charles L. Wagner. His recital in Aeolian hall in 1926 was practically unheralded, so that the outstanding success that he immediately became was completely on his own merit. Critics' reports and magazine articles concerning him became so numerous that he was soon nationally famous.

Gieseking is a big man physically,

Mr. Host and Miss Visitor Comment On Carnegie's Open House Program

By DON KENT

Mr. Carnegie Hall, the most eligible bachelor in Maryville college society, received his annual shower, shave, and shine Thursday, in anticipation of his duties as host that evening to the debutantes of the school. And did he put on the dog! Everything but the bark!

At eight-thirty, when the doors opened, there wasn't a speck of dirt visible in Carnegie hall. How could there be? Hadn't the boys spent hours washing, dusting, cleaning, and sweeping. And just to have a few women look in and murmur, "How nice," and move on! Many of those who worked very hard to look their best felt insulted at such ordinary expressions of approval. They expected rave notices, at least. But after all, what could they expect? Should the girls walk into each room throw her arms around each boy and exclaim as if she meant it, "Oh, how darling your room is!" (Of course, the boys wouldn't have objected, you know.)

It could have been worse. They might have said, "How cute!" Ugh!

Several of the boys were amazed at the girls' intelligence. "Oh, Jack, this is where YOU room." (One of the wise lads put up a sign, "No, this is

At last our curiosity has been satisfied. For the past week we have been hearing tales of spring house cleaning in Carnegie. All the dust flying out of Carnegie's windows, shouts demanding brooms, mops, and the like, quick departures from meal tables and a general bustle are explained. On this past Thursday evening the better half had a chance to see how the other half lives once a year. We of the fairer sex do say that your mothers would be proud of you.

And by the way, now we know where all the posters on the campus end up. They do make lovely wall paper, don't they? Speaking of pictures, keep up the photography. Seriously it's really very good, but a word to the wise. Take down the pictures you made of the room in its natural order before the next open house clean-up week. They give the idea that your rooms are sometimes a bit messed up. Of course, we know this isn't true, but —. Oh yes, we have a question to ask your Would you be willing to open closet doors if we should come and visit you sometime? However, you needn't answer that question, for you have the rules with you. You noticed

A Critical Situation

One of the situations on the hill that needs attention is the balancing of Maryville extra-curricular activities, particularly the place of the four literary societies in the college program. When they were founded half a century ago they filled a definite need; today, however, the projects which they formerly sponsored are taken care of by organizations specializing in speech, dramatics, and creative writing. Attendance at the meetings of at least the men's societies has declined so that they appear to be existing for a minority of the students.

The societies are aware that the problem is an acute one. One of them has started a program of reorganization Those interested in the future of these tradition-bound organizations do not want them to die the lingering death with which they are threatened. They feel there is still a place for the literary society, but it must make a conscious adjustment to the times and not continue to foster the age-worn programs no longer appealing to Maryville students.

The bigger problem, however, is not the reorganization of the individual societies, but a complete investigation by a faculty-student committee of the Maryville extra-curricular program. This would include a study of both the social and religious activities of the college. Do they appeal or provide for the needs of a majority of the students or just a faithful minority? Are the emphasis poorly balanced? Students are conscious of the situation. We believe the faculty senses it. The thing to do is to bring these two groups together within the remaining months of the school year to plan a program that will appeal to new and old students coming here in September.

A Word of Appreciation

The Echo thinks it only fitting that some public expression of appreciation be extended to the men of Carnegie hall for the cordial reception which they gave to their visitors Thursday evening.

It required no little effort to prepare the dormitory for Open House; the entire building was given a thorough cleaning. It is a commendable fact that the men were willing to undertake the job, and that they carried it out so well.

Those few men who took an indifferent attitude, and refused to cooperate with the plan, doubtless had good reasons for their behavior; yet one cannot help but think that such men will go all through life finding excuses for not cooperating with society in its enterprises.

To Mr. McCurry, his Open House committee, and all of the men of the dormitory the Echo says: "Thank you for a pleasant evening!"

Merry-Dille Go Round

By FRED RHODY

These Carnegie boys learn fast. A couple of years ago it took them a week or more of scrubbing, dusting and polishing to prepare the dormitory for the eyes of the outer world. Now, the Carneguys take it all in stride . . . a half-hour session with a broom, mop and dust-cloth, and a fellow's room is spic, span and spotless (provided only the fifteen-watt lamp is turned on).

A lot of us boys may turn out to be pretty punk teachers, preachers, doctors and lawyers; but no wife of a Maryville graduate is going to complain about her husband's floor-mopping technique, or his proficiency with the duster.

This column cannot conscientiously sanction the practice of one mercenary-minded individual, who ran a profitable little business of washing windows at the rate of ten cents per room. It seems to us that hiring someone, in cold blood, to wash your windows for open house, is akin to cribbing in an examination, or plagiarizing something.

• • • •

The theme song of Carnegie on Thursday was that great hymn of thanksgiving, "Thanks be for closets!"

• • • •

A close-second favorite was Sandburg's little poem, "I am the bed; sweep it under; I cover all."

• • • •

It's too bad that the visitors could not really see the Carnegie house-keepers in earnest action. There are times when a chance guest can find such domestic skills being practised as toasting sandwiches to a delectable brown, brewing a percolator of robust coffee, pressing a pair of trousers, or sewing a button on a shirt sleeve.

• • • •

If you girls are wise, you'll forget about those boys whose rooms were so meticulously tidy: a too-fastidious husband can be very annoying to a wife who has no particular ambition to spend her waking hours in an atmosphere of mops, pails, brushes and soap chips.

• • • •

Nothing like these Open Houses to clean up things—your columnist is for them one-hundred per cent! (Especially since he engineered a very satisfactory working arrangement with his roommate, whereby the roommate cleaned the room while the columnist retreated next-door, and wrote his column.)

UP OUR HALL

By GEORGE L. HUNT

I am glad to turn the column over to Robert Brandriff for this week. His interesting discussion of what constitutes good music follows.

• • • •

It has always been interesting to me to observe the catholicity of musical taste evident here at Maryville and to suppose that it duplicates the attitude of most of the undergraduate campuses in the country. I have seen starry-eyed co-eds applauding until their palms were red for another song by Jussi Bjoerling, who an hour before had been doing the same for an encore of recorded Goodman in the dining hall. Preference has apparently drawn no sharp line; only at the outskirts are the camps divided. By the large majority these tastes are shared, and with no feeling of incongruity. I think this is a healthy condition and speaks well for the many-sided enthusiasm and tolerance of this generation.

But speculation doesn't stop with that. If one thinks about the matter at all, it is only to question the possibility of honestly maintaining a balance on the fence. Uncritical appreciation is soon no appreciation at all. There must be a preference—which of course leads into the more fundamental question of what to prefer. What constitutes the best in music: is it good because it is, or because we like it, or because somebody says it is? The question is old, and the answers are still coming in, and probably shal continue to do so, since aesthetic criticism is both a popular and inoffensive pastime. But their variety is all out of proportion to their number, because write as often and as much as you please, you still have to stand in the rear-guard of a body of thinkers whose chief virtue, as far as you are concerned, is that they said it first.

One answer, and the oldest, is that music (or for that matter any of what C. E. M. Joad calls the "dowagers of philosophy": truth, goodness, beauty) is good or bad as it measures up to an absolute standard of worth which exists independently and in spite of anything we can do about it. "Imagine, for instance," says the objectivist, "that the world's last man is listening to a phonograph record of a Beethoven sonata. In the middle of it, he too goes the way of the rest of civilization on this hypothecated judgment day. Do you suppose that the beauty of the sonata is in any way minimized or altered by the mere fact that it is no longer being heard?" Well, probably not, but the spectacle of a lone phonograph grinding out Beethoven in the midst of eternity is of doubtful aesthetic significance.

On the other hand, there are those who hold that music exists only in the ear of its listener, and is good in so far as it pleases him or satisfies his needs. It would follow, then, that the greatest music is that which give pleasure to the greatest number, which at once puts the moving lyricism of "Jeepers Creepers" far in front of the impassioned Weltschmerz of Beethoven. Also that Fords are more desired than Cadillacs. Most of us would accept this first judgment only under pressure, and the second not at all; yet, the position logically, at least, is irrefutable.

Neither view is completely satisfying except to its adherents, and any compromise between the two suffers the disadvantage of not even having adherents. Nevertheless, one resolution of the difficulty does lie in the direction of compromise, and consists, I think, of standards of musical taste based on the opinion of qualified experts. Aside from the obvious difficulty of defining a qualified expert, this will be objected to as being too arbitrary; but an analogous situation already exists popularly unnoticed in our language. "Pronunciation," we like to say, "is established by usage"; which is manifestly not the case or our speech in a few years would be reduced to a dialect of slang and vulgarisms by sheer force of numbers. As a matter of fact, linguistic standards are maintained by a relatively small group of men who represent the philological knowledge o our time and write our dictionaries. In despair of ever establishing an absolute, then, and in view of the highly subjective nature of aesthetic judgments, it really seems as if we might do worse than trust the concerted opinions of the musically elect—minds qualified by thoroughness of training, breadth of experience, and depth of personality to speak as the representatives of our highest attainments in this art—experts whose estimates, though subjective, shall be valid criteria of taste for the age of which they are a part. For all its weaknesses, this does at least avoid the dangerous levelling that must attend any standard based on the prejudices of vast numbers of the undiscriminating; and, ideally, it would preserve the heritage of our musical culture on its highest plane.— R. K. B.

Bida Sayao, who was to have sung on the Ford Hour last week, was suddenly taken ill, Walter Gieseking, the next and final number on our artist series, moved his program up a week and gave his concert last week. It is expected, however, that Miss Sayao will be the guest on the Sunday Evening hour tomorrow at 8 p.m., and her program will follow the numbers we listed in this column last week.

TALK OF THE WEEK . By Arlene Phelps

Freshman From China Relates Many Experiences Met On Shanghai Jaunt

(Editor's note: David Kidder, a freshman from Chefoo, China, has written the following interesting account of some of his experiences in the land where he has spent most of his life. We appreciate his kindness in letting us print the article.)

By DAVID KIDDER

The mouth of China's Yang-tze river is always muddy and the weather very often rainy. My arrival in Shanghai last June on a northern coastal boat was in typical Yang-tze weather. Due to the rain we did not see land until we had reached the Whangpoo, a tributary which enters the Yang-tze near its mouth, and on which the former metropolis of the East, Shanghai, stands. However, for hours before we reached the Whangpoo there was plenty of evidence as to where we were, due to the large amount of river traffic. The predominating flag was that of Nippon, borne mostly by freighters and transports carrying munitions and food stuffs for her armies. There were also several warships carrying European flags. An occasional Chinese junk was visible through the mist. But it was a time of war, and practically all activity of this port was military, which served mainly as a base for the supplies for the mammoth army Japan was maintaining in her drive up the river.

At the mouth of the Whangpoo were stationed about a dozen Japanese transports, used of course to take home the wounded and dead and to bring back fresh troops on the return trip. The few hours it took to go up the Whangpoo were, I think, the most interesting hours I have ever spent in my life. The only signs of life were Japanese military trucks moving here and there, carrying ammunition and provisions to the troops stationed in this occupied area. Not one house or building stood complete. Using one shell for each building, the Japanese had damaged them past habitation. Factory chimneys were leveled with the exception of one, which stood like a spectre out of the ruins, a hole shot through it. The Jap aim had been perfect but the shell a dud. With their warfare methods of total destruction, this part of Shanghai could be exhibited as a grim and representative piece of their work.

As we approached the International settlement, Japan's bane and the European's refuge, we began to see what looked like the old Shanghai. The skyline of the bund raised its familiar head and behind it stood the skyscrapers of upper Nanking Road. At this place the river presented a most interesting spectacle. The cosmopolitan population of the city makes this truly an international waterway. The ancient hulk of the Japanese cruiser 'Idzumo" lay up against the Japanese consulate in Hongkew, the Japanese share of the International settlement. This ship figured prominently in the fighting, especially from the air, and due to its proximity to the Settlement proved a constant source of worry to those living there. In mid-stream were several up-to-date Japanese warships which had done their work in demolishing Shanghai almost six months before. Stem to stern with one of them was the U.S.S. Augusta, flagship of the United States Asiatic fleet. Behind were ships of other nationalities; two French, two German, and three Italian had drawn up positions in mid-stream. That ships of these countries should live at peace with one another under such tense conditions may be surprising. But it can be understood when we realize that they all had their hands full safeguarding the rights of their nationals. They also had to be ever on the watch for themselves when Chinese and Japanese aviators attempted to strafe each other's positions. That neither the Chineses nor the Japaneses are good shots was well known, and as a result, several of these ships experienced some of this misdirected fighting, during the course of the war, to their great discomfort.

Against my hopes, our ship, the Shuntien, docked on the Pootung side of the river across from the Settlement. The business of crossing the river became an unforgettable experience. I had expected to be met by a missionary for whom I had brought a refrigerator machine to be fixed. But he misunderstood the time of the ship's arrival and was not there. Waiting for him was my first concern; so I stayed till the last launch left the ship for the shore. My patience exhausted, I got aboard with my three small pieces of baggage, leaving my trunk and the machine in the care of the China Travel service, one of the many agencies whose representatives had swarmed the ship when it docked. While I was sitting in the launch, I had the pleasure of watching my trunk being slid over the edge of the ship supported only by a rope and dangling dangerously over the water, between ship and launch. However, it was safely landed and the next I saw of it was in my room at the YMCA.

Adding to the many difficulties of debarkation in Shanghai are the hordes of coolies, seeking to serve you as porters and ricksha men. But being used to oriental ways, I could deal with this situation fairly well, except that I could not speak their dialect. My northern dialect, while essential there, was of no use to me here. The talk of the Shanghai coolies was Greek to me. While disputing with them, the launch ponderously docked on the other side of the river. I was told that I would have to wait for the customs inspector, but with true oriental negligence, he never turned up. The chances were he was afraid of getting wet, so I didn't blame him. It was while standing here waiting for this expected procedure that someone cheerfully remarked, "It's a great life if you don't weaken." The adage applied so well that I still find myself using it, but never without thinking of that eventful night when I first heard it.

When the customs officer failed to turn up, I hired a ricksha and started off for the "Y". Riding a ricksha involves a considerable amount of risk in Shanghai, because of the large number of automobiles. However, we arrived safely and to top the evening off, the coolie, in asking ten cents more than the bargain price, got it, and still

Contrast Of New And Old Music Features Meeting Of Disc Club

The Disc club met Thursday afternoon at 4:30 in the Fine Arts studio with Thomas Schafer as commentator. The program was a comparison of the new and the old in music. The example of modern music was John Alden Carpenter's "Perambulator Suite" as played by the Minneapolis symphony orchestra under the direction of Eugene Ormandy. This is a musical interpretation of a nurse's daily walk through the park with her young charge. Each new theme brings a familiar picture of the nurse, the baby, the policeman on his beat, the hurdy-gurdy, the lap of the lake waters; even the barking of the dogs is very plainly brought into the music. The piece closes with the peaceful sleep of the baby after the excitemen and exhaustion of his adventurous day.

The latter part of the program consisted of Schubert's Unfinished Symphony, played by the Boston symphony orchestra under the direction of Serge Koussevitzky.

The Perambulator Suite will be repeated at a later date to give more people the opportunity to hear and enjoy the music of our present day composers as compared with that of the older masters. Sibelius' Fourth Symphony will be heard on the program of March 30.

Fla.-Ga. Club Meets Monday

The Florida-Georgia club will have its regular meeting Monday evening at 6:45 in Bainonian hall. There will be a program arranged by Martha Wilcox and Fred Shelfer. Janice Graybeal will give selections at the piano and John Wintermute will read.

JOKE!

When Coach Honaker was questioned on what kind of a team he was building this year from so many inexperienced men, he replied, "I am going to build a character team this year, none of this champion stuff for me."

A.A.U. CHAMP!

We have an A.A.U. champ in our midst. Floyd Green is the gentleman under question. About two weeks ago, Floyd hitch-hiked home to give his brother a blood transfusion. (His home is in Cincinnati, Ohio), and upon arriving there the night before he was scheduled to, he entered the district A.A.U. meet held in Cincinnati. He entered the mile event and won it in the time of 4 min. and 40 sec. He ran on an indoor track. Floyd was out for track last spring, but was unable to do his best due to an illness. He seems to be coming along in fine shape this spring, however, and we are hoping for better things fro mhim.

WRESTLING TOURNAMENT—

The interest shown in the Y interclass wrestling tournament has certainly been gratifying to those in charge of the affair. The sportsmanship of the audience and of the wrestlers is of the best. As a whole the matches have been run off in the best manner possible and so far there have been no complaints from anyone. No one has been seriously hurt yet, which might be considered a small miracle, except Al Rosser, who was knocked out when he fell on his head in one of the 165 pound matches. He was alright in a few minutes, however, and no damage was done. Perhaps we should knock on wood, because with so many of the amateurs out of practice, and out of condition, it is a wonder that no one has been injured. We have the referees to thank for that, with them watching for illegal and dangerous holds the wrestlers are protected somewhat. (Steve Amos wants to know why someone didn't protect him the other night.)

The fastest match so far on record was the Nuschke vs. Joe Etheredge bout in the 165 lb. division. Joe flattened his man in the record time of 14 seconds. The matches today and next week shoud be interesting, for competition is keen in all the classes.

I wish I could write poetry like Art Byrne, I need copy bad.

INTERCLASS SPORTS

JUNIORS WIN TITLE

The Junior class basketball team proved its supremacy in the interclass division by defeating the Senior team, 25-24, last Wednesday evening. The game was one of the closest games played this season, and an overtime period had to be played to decide the winners and interclass champions.

The victors led their opponents by one point at the half; the score was 17-16. Had not Russ Stevenson, junior class "star," sunk two foul shots in the closing minutes of play, the game would not have gone into an overtime period, and would have ended in a senior victory. The juniors turned the trick, however, and their right forward, Jimmy Rae, whipped the net for the winning basket.

Despite the fact that he was taken out of the game because of fouls, Red McCaskie was able to net himself and the senior team 10 points during the time he played. He took individual scoring honors for the game.

Lineups:

JUNIORS 25		SENIORS 24
Rae 9	F	Judy 3
Stevenson 9	F	Jenkins 2
Kramer	C	McCaskie 10
Taylor 1	G	S. K. Taylor
Proctor 4	G	Napier 2
Herrick 2		Walker 7

ALL-STARS SELECTED

As is the yearly custom, an interclass all-star basketball team was selected following the close of the interclass tournament which was won by the junior quintet.

The team was selected by the captain of each of the class teams. Each class placed one man on the team, with the freshmen placing two. This was surprising due to the fact that the freshmen have not won a game this year. The all-star team is as follows:

Forward—RAE—Junior Forward—CALLAHAN—freshman
Center—McCASKIE—Senior Guard—WHITTAKER—Freshman
Guard—STEAKLEY—Sophomore
Honorable Mention—Judy (sr), Kramer (jr.), T. Taylor (jr.), S. K. Taylor (sr), Gastrock (soph).

'39 Tennis Team Still A Puzzle To Coach Gillingham

A squad of nineteen men, the largest in many years, gives Coach Gillingham only gray hair as far as prospects for the 1939 tennis team is concerned. With none of the regular men from last year's varsity team back, and only one letterman, Paul Akana, with which to work, the chances for a winning team are slim.

When asked about the most promising men, Coach Gillingham ventured the following information, "Perhaps the eight showing the most promise are Kidder, Morgan, Felknor, Stevenson, Van Blarcom, Gastrock, Schultz, and Akana, but anybody can be a darkhorse this season."

"Bad weather has hampered practice and the team will probably not be in any toog ood shape for the first match, which is against Wayne university, from Indiana on April 8."

Coach Gillingham has made the drawings for the tennis tournament which is held every year for the squad in order to determine, somewhat, the strength of the squad. The drawings are as follows: Brink vs. Cornelius; Kidder will play the winner of this match. Morgan vs. Proctor; Webster vs. Felknor; McKinnon vs. Smith with Stevenson playing the winner; Dizney vs. Pollock with Van Blarcom playing the winner; Grabb vs. Gastrock; and Schultz vs. Heelzer; Whittaker vs. Anderson, with Akana playing the winner of this match.

The complete schedule for the tennis matches has not yet been definitely fixed, but will probably be done so within this week, and will be announced next week.

Athenians Make Plans For Literary Contest Open To All Students

President William McGill of Athenian last week revived the custom of having a literary contest on this campus as he appointed George Felknor and George Hunt, members of Writers' Workshop, to work out the details of the project. It is in the constitution of the society that such contests should be held annually. This year it will be open to all students with the exception of members of Writers' Workshop.

Details of the contest have not been fully formulated. The plan, however, is to receive the entries of men and women students, choose the best attempts, and present them to a competent group of faculty members to choose the best one. The date for the close of the contest will be announced in the near future.

Faculty Repeats Play For Confab Club Fri.

The Confab club met Friday evening in the Fine Arts studio. Kitty Bennett opened the program with a tap dance, accompanied by E. B. Smith. Members of the faculty then presented a play, "Babbitt's Boy," which was given at the Faculty club dinner last week. Those in the cast were Miss Dorothy Hunter, Miss Phyllis Dexter, Miss Mary Sloan Welsh, Miss Geneva Hutchinson, Dr. Newell T. Preston, and Mr. Ed Gillingham.

Following refreshments a brief business meeting was held in which the constitution and minutes were read and dues and meeting dates decided on.

TENNIS COURT RULES

Tennis Shoes Only

Only flatsoled tennis shoes are permitted on the courts. Street shoes, crepe soles or not, and tennis shoes with heels are prohibited.

Courts May Be Used Only When Nets Have Been Put Up By The Caretakers

The caretakers know when the courts are in condition for play. When the nets are not up students may not put them up without the consent of the coach or the caretakers.

Who May Use The Courts:

Memorial Courts—Courts 1 and 2 are for men. Court 3 is for women when they want to use it. If men are playing on court 3 when women who wish to play arrive, the men shall vacate the court. Tennis classes and the periods they meet are listed below. Classes will have preference durin gthose periods. The varsity tennis squad will use these courts from 4 till 5:40 in the afternoon. Members of the squad are requested to stay off the courts before 4:00 so as to give the other students as much time as possible.

Proffitt Courts—These courts may be used by men or women. Court 2 is reserved for the use of the faculty when they care to it. If students are playing on this court when faculty who wish to play arrive the students shall vacate the court.

Baldwin Courts—These courts are for women only. They may be reserved, for not more than one hour at a time, by posting reservation at the courts.

Carnegie Court—This court is for men only.

Lloyd Court—This court may be used by men or women.

Edward Gillingham.

Y. M. Wrestling Finals Is To Be Next Sat. Night

The intramural wrestling tournament is well under way, and the second round will be run off this afternoon, and the early part of next week. The finals will be presented next Saturday evening in the Alumni gymnasium.

Those who have already assured themselves of a place in the final bouts are Lovingood vs. Brown—121 lb. class, and Rhody vs. Badgett—128 lb. class. Others who have lasted the first round are Fish, Orr, Nicely, Mooney, Rae in the 135 lb. class; Butler, Stroup, T. Etheredge, E. Ritzman in the 145 lb. class; H. Burns, Stevenson, Hughes, D. Moore, Akana, R. Barber, Hodges in the 155 lb. class; J. Etheredge, B. Baird, T. Taylor, Lamon in the 165 lb. class; and B. Napier, Proctor, and Weldon Baird in the 175 lb. class.

None of the heavyweight matches have been fought, but the Kramer vs. Dysart, and S. Taylor vs. Moon bouts will be run off early next week, and the winners will meet in the finals next Saturday night.

Scotty Runners Work Hard In Preparation For Davidson Meet

Finish of Second Week of Practice Brings Smiles to Coach Thrower's Face As He Views Prospects For '39 Season

With two weeks of practice under their belts, the track squad is beginning to get into shape in preparation for the first meet of the year with Davidson on April 7.

A week of warm weather gave Coach Thrower an opportunity to take his runners out on the track for the first time, and to view the men under running conditions. A promising group of freshmen, from which some varsity material must be selected is receiving most of Coach Thrower's time. The dash men in particular, in which Maryville will be weakened by the loss of Roy Talmage, took up most of his time last week. A lot will depend on whether or not Jimmy Rich, a sprinter of two seasons ago can make his comeback after a layoff of two years. Rich was the varsity sprinter in both the 100 and 220 yard dash. Sutton, a freshman, is also showing plenty of speed and power in early sprints. Harland Husk, six foot frosh, a hurdler and broad jumper, is showing lots of form early in the season.

The distance men were strengthened by the return of Everett Gray to the fold. Gray is going to try to overcome his ailments, and has done so, so far. Bob Martin and Al Davies have also been looking well in practice. With the absence of Boydson Baird, Coach Thrower has been looking for a replacement in the mile, and it looks as though he might have it in Floyd Green. Green just a couple of weeks ago went up to Cincinnati and won the district A.A.U. meet in the mile run in the time of 4 min. and 40 sec.

The weight men have been working out considerably and it looks as though it will be the Bairds, Weldon and Bill, in the discus. Gene McCurry and Weldon are doing most of the shot putting this season. The javelin is one of the wide open positions this year. Maryville did not have a good javelin tosser last year, and so far have had no prospects for one this year. If you can throw a javelin, Coach Thrower wants you out for track. The pole vault has Jimmy Rae back from last year. Rae tied the college record in the conference meet last year and is going to be depended on for some points this spring. Besides Rae, several newcomers have added their names to the list of prospective jumpers, but time alone will tell their worth.

Jim Etheredge, state high jumping champ last year, will be back this spring to try to add new laurels to his already colorful record. Nicely, his jumping last season, is also back this year, being only a sophomore. The broad jump is a bit undecided, but Nicely will probably do most of the jumping, with Coach Thrower on the lookout for new prospects all the time. Gene Orr and Husk look like they will take the hurdles in full stride, and do most of the tall timber topping this year. The 400 yd. dash is one run with plenty of candidates who all are good. Vernon Lloyd, Weldon and Bill Baird, Charley Fish, and Gene Orr, are among the most promising right now.

Baseball Team Has Impressive 15 Year Record

A glance back into the records of the Maryville baseball team, assures us that Maryville, according to the law of averages, should win over half of their games this year. Because since 1923, not including 1930, due to the fact that the records for that year could not be found, tells us that Maryville has played 285 baseball games, and has won 181 of them, losing 96 (the rest being tie games).

Away back in those days, Maryville played many larger and stronger teams such as the Knoxville Smokies, Ohio State, and Michigan State, and in '32 they played Vanderbilt three games.

The records are as follows:

	Played	Won	Tied	Lost
1923	16	10	0	6
1924	13	4	0	9
1925	20	5	0	11
1926	13	6	1	6
1927	21	16	0	5
1928	17	15	0	2
1929	18	12	1	5
1930—No Record
1931	15	11	1	3
1932	20	13	0	7
1933	20	14	0	6
1934	21	6	2	13
1935	23	19	0	4
1936	20	9	0	11
1937	25	19	0	6
1938	23	21	0	2

Out of the University of Indiana the bows in girls' hair mean more than just a decoration or ornament. When the ribbon is worn on the right side, it means that Betty Co-ed is a customer for the date bureau for the coming week end, but if it appears on the left side, she's all dated up. When the bow is on top, there's no chance for the boys, because she is a bad case of "Steady-it-is."

not my room. I just rent it for a few months.") "That's your picture, isn't it, David?" (Chances are it was somebody else's before the night was over.)

Signs and decorations from all over the United States and a good part of the rest of the world were found in many rooms (before 8:30; they were gone a couple hours later. Getting even, girls?) Alarm clocks seem to have been attractive to grasping hands. One boy with a mechanical turn of mind changed an old clock so it would ring four hours before the hour for which it was set. Then he put it in a handy place and, sure enough, by 10:00 p.m. it was gone! Some girls woke up about 2:30 Friday morning with a ringing in her ears and a blush on her cheeks!

And Bruce Morgan, (you know him), put a lamp wick in a biology speciman jar, covered it with alcohol, and amazed many visitors with his scientific knowledge of the genu "lamwickius," its habitat, and life history. Report has it that he had even Professor Green believing him for awhile. The boys might be amateurs at dusting, but they're experts at fooling the women! (they hope).

But it really wasn't so bad. We did have fun entertaining you girls. Of course, we have to apologize for the disorder of our rooms; you walked in on us so unexpectedly! Come again, girls! You'll always find us at home.

How did we do, Mr. Mac? Aren't you proud of us?

that it said IF we come. Confidentially though, you did a good job of cleaning. In fact almost as good as we did last November.

As a favor to us, could we borrow your easy chairs sometime? Just for a week anyhow—maybe? We would darn your socks in return. Is it a bargain? And speaking of all the comforts of home, we did see a very neat kitchen set-up. Can you cook, too?

But seriously, we did have a good time as your guests and thank you for the opportunity. We think that your German prints in the lobby are really fine. They are worth being seen and appreciated. We would like to come again.

Guidance Groups Plan Toward Selection of Majors

On Wednesday morning the freshman guidance groups discussed "Looking toward a vocation", an appropriate topic in view of the signing of major cards in the first part of May. The discussion followed a mimeographed outline suggesting plans to aid in choosing and surveying a vocational field. A list of the eighty-six career monographs available at the personnel office, were given to all freshmen. These monographs, are short inspections of a broad range of vocational fields, and were edited and published by the Institute of Research in Chicago.

The personnel staff is giving tests which should be helpful in making a decision in regard to ones future vocation. One, the Strong vocational test, requires about thirty minutes and may be taken any time. Twenty-four vocational fields are covered in the tests for men, and seventeen fields in the tests for women. The questions cover a wide area of ideas and are based on the similarities shown as rated with men in a large number of occupations. It is not a timed test, but grades the student's interests as compared with the ideas of successful men in a given profession. The other, a mechanical aptitude test, may be taken by appointment and requires twenty minutes. It is recommended for those interested in any field of engineering, and gives mechanical ability over theory.

Any student may borrow any of the career monographs or may take either of the tests at the personnel office. Announcement will be made in chapel when the tests have been checked and given ratings.

The next guidance group will meet April 5 and will discuss "Choosing a major."

Ministerials To Hear Curtmarie Brown On Ministers' Problems

Curtmarie Brown will speak to the men of the Ministerial association Monday night at their regular meeting in Athenian hall. She will speak on "The Minister and His Relations with the Young People of His Church." This is part of a series of meetings designed to discuss the various problems the minister is called upon to face.

Miss Brown is a varsity debater and a member of Pi Kappa Delta. She has spoken to many church groups recently on a variety of subjects. Her associations in Brooklawn Manor, New Jersey, form the basis for the remarks she will make before the ministerials Monday night.

New Theta Alpha Phi Members To Receive Formal Initiation Wed.

Wednesday evening at seven o'clock the Maryville chapter of Theta Alpha Phi, national honorary dramatic fraternity, will hold the formal initiation of members elected to the chapter during the past year. The initiation will follow a dinner of the chapter in the banquet rooms of the S & W restaurant in Knoxville. Those to be initiated into membership are John Fisher, Carol Ward, and Glenn Young. Mrs. Nita E. West and Dr. Edwin R. Hunter, both members of Theta Alpha Phi, will accompany the group to Knoxville. Sara Bolton is president of the local chapter.

Personal Life Of Gieseking

personally and artistically. Standing six feet three inches in height, he resembles a business man or doctor more than an artist. His tastes and habits are simple. His home, on a hilltop in quiet beautiful Wiesbaden where he lives with his wife and two young daughters, is built in modernistic style of steel, concrete and brick glass. The most interesting room of the house is his studio, where he studies, practices and entertains. The room contains two concert grand pianos, a combination radio and phonograph, big easy chairs and a desk. There are also paintings of contemporary European and American artists, with several models of Gieseking's head and hands. Built into the walls are bookcases containing his favorite works, and beneath them is his invaluable collection of butterflies. The collection contains over 8000 specimens of rare moths and butterflies, and was in part inherited from his father. He has more than tripled its size and value, making it perhaps the finest private collection in the world. Part of his concert tours are usually devoted to some time in which he may add to his collection.

Gieseking has a great interest in gardening and while the climatic conditions of his home prevent extensive work in this line, he utilizes all its possibilities.

In his music, he is gifted with one of the most unusual minds in existence. He has millions of notes stored in his mind which he can instantly command. He requires little practice to keep his hands in trim and never carries a mute piano. Once after a six weeks hiking trip through the Alps, he found that he was able to play quite as well as he had when he left. The coordination between his mind and hands is so phenomenal that he is probably unique among concert pianists in being able to reproduce music from memory without practice. While riding on a train, he is able to commit a new piece of music to memory and play it at the end of his journey with every prescribed shade and effect.

Mr. Giesecking's recital is the last in the current Maryville college artist series and will be held in Voorhees chapel.

Allen Reads Paper At French Club Meeting

At the bi-weekly meeting of the French club held on Wednesday evening, Mary Deane Allen read a paper on the Basque people, a tribe of unknown origin and history, who live in the Pyrenees. Although not much is known about these strange people, they are very interesting, strong in the traditions of their ancestors and prosperous in modern business. Before Mary Deane Allen spoke, Sara Taylor presided over the business meeting, and the minutes of the last meeting were read.

Campus Crew Prepares Corduroy And Courts

Due to the favorable weather much work has been done on the campus during the past week. The garage adjoining the new heating plant has been painted and a new roof put on it. The bricklayers have finished encasing the boilers with a total of some fifty thousand bricks. Much work has likewise been done on the corduroy and the leveling of the walks.

The tennis courts have been reconditioned and the track made ready for spring practice.

German Club To Show Film

The German club will meet Tuesday evening in the chemistry lecture room, at 6:45. The feature of the program will be two reels of sound film entitled "Germany—The Heart of Europe" and "The Palatinate". These films are presented through the courtesy of the German Railroads Information office, 11 West 57th Street, New York City.

YW Elects Bewley To Presidency For The Coming Year

Orr, White, Evans, And Crawford Will Be Installed April 9

Helen Bewley, junior from Bellefontaine, Ohio, was elected president of the YWCA for the coming year at the annual election held Tuesday in Pearsons lobby. The other officers of the association elected were: Mary Orr, vice president; Jean White, secretary; Edith Evans, treasurer; and Ruth Crawford, Nu Gamma chairman.

The new president, Helen Bweley, is treasurer of the YW for the present year. Before she held this office, she was a Nu Gamma leader. Miss Bewley represented the Maryville YWCA at the National Assembly of Student Christian Associations in Oxford, Ohio, last year during the Christmas vacation. She is secretary to the dean of women, Mrs. Grace P. Snyder, a member of the governing board of the Writers' Workshop, a member of the choir, and president of the women's glee club. She was selected to appear in the "Who's Who in American Colleges" for 1939.

HELEN BEWLEY

Mary Orr, the new vice president, lives in Maryville. She is a sophomore and served as a Nu Gamma leader this year. She is a member of the Echo staff, and was program secretary for Bainonian's rush week at the beginning of this year.

Jean White, of Wakefield, Mass., is the new secretary of the Y. She is also a sophomore and was a Nu Gamma leader this year. She is a member of the Echo staff, was treasurer of the French club last semester, and is a member of the Chilhowean staff.

The new treasurer, Edith Evans of Chattanooga, is a junior. She is a program secretary of Bainonian and served as a Nu Gamma leader this year.

Ruth Crawford, Nu Gamma chairman, of Maryville, was a member of the YW cabinet this year and was a Nu Gamma leader the year before. She is a junior and secretary of the Student Council.

The new officers will begin their duties April 9th when there will be an installation service for the new cabinet.

Campus Crew Begins New Leveling Work

The campus is getting a raise. During the past week several hundred yards of dirt have been brought to fill in sinks and depressions about the campus. The banks around the new drive and the new parking area are being leveled in preparation for seeding; the walks are being lined with rich dirt, brought from a college project excavation, and have been planted with grass seed. 2000 yards of the dirt has been put on the corduroy, which will be thirty feet across when completed.

The new furnaces are nearly finished. The stokers are installed, and work has begun on the pumps. College students are surveying the pipe lines, which will come to the back of the chapel, thence to the front of Carnegie; where a large manhole will be installed in the road. From there the line will connect with the old line at the present power plant. Campus workers will begin digging the ditches within a few weeks.

Social Committee Asks Suggestions Of Students

Wednesday morning after the regular chapel exercises, questionnaires prepared by the social committee were distributed to the student body. These questionnaires were intended to discover the viewpoint of the students upon the various social activities held on the campus and an opportunity was given to give additional suggestions for the social program.

The questionnaires will aid the social committee in planning their work this year and in succeeding years according to the will of the student body.

Contemporary Art To Be Discussed At Second Lecture

Slides to Follow American Painting Through Past Two Decades

Contemporary painting, the second of the lectures on the history of American painting, will be given in the Baker art gallery March 28, at 7:15 by Miss Frances Rich. This lecture has been prepared by the American Federation of Art, and is accompanied by 98 slides.

The lecture begins with a few of the same artists that were shown at the last lecture; so as to tie up that lecture with the modernism of this lecture. There will be a repetition of Duveneck, Hunt, Thayer, and Sargent. From these artists we come directly to the modern movement, and influences that directly effected it. The backers of this modern movement are Caughin, who did painting of the South Seas; van Gogh, the eccentric Frenchman; Matisse, Picasso, Renoir. These men represent post-impressionism and out of this development comes cubism and futurism.

Another group of contemporary painters, who combine the methods of the modern and traditional painters, produce a picture which is not difficult to understand. This influencial group include Katz, Chapin, Hammer, Picasso, Speicher, Krall, and Carroll.

From April 15 to 30 there will be exhibited a series of pictures of French peasant costumes, which are likewise circulated by the American Federation of Art.

An exhibition of contemporary painting from the Art Students League of New York City, done by students and associates, will be shown in the art gallery starting April 17. These works include drawings and water colors and are of various types of subjects.

"Kay Kyser" Mayo Leads Swing School

Saturday night in Voorhees chapel the student body was entertained at a "Swing School" sponsored by the Athenian literary society under the direction of "Kay Kyser" Mayo.

Two teams of five members each were selected at random from the audience and asked questions pertaining to the stars of the radio and musical world. Chalmers Stroup of the first team was the "swing fiend" and Bruce Morgan, jitterbug winner of the second group. The judges decision was a draw and the prize was divided between the two.

The high spot of the evening was a novel skit written and presented by Ralph Reed. "Professor" Reed, garbed in a cap and gown, related the story of a King—"A Grand and Noble King"—to a highly appreciative audience.

During the program the orchestra, composed of Gehres, Calfin, Paul, Reed, Wells and Mosley, gave several original selections and popular music of the day. Following this, the audience was served refreshments in the YWCA rooms. Phil Evaul was chairman of the refreshment committee.

Kramer Is First In Tenessee State Debate Tourney

Arnold Kramer placed first in the individual ratings of the men's debate division of the Tennessee State Forensic tournament held at Union college March 3 and 4, according to a release received during the past week.

Sara Lee Hellums and Harriet Miller tied for second place in the women's division, and Clifford Proctor tied for eleventh place in the men's division.

In the freshmen women's debate tournament Lucile Lynch and Betty Felix placed second and third, and Henry and Hilton Wick placed third and fourth in the men's division.

Maryville's team was successful in winning the tournament for the third consecutive time and thus obtained permanent possession of the cup awarded for first place in the tournament. Awards in the other speech contests were announced several weeks ago.

Evaul, Stevenson Are Nominees For President Of YM

Other Officers Nominated; Amendment To Be Proposed April 4

Phil Evaul, sophomore from Haddon Heights, N. J., and Russ Stevenson, junior from Pittsburgh, Pa., have been nominated for president of the YMCA for the year 1939-1940. The election will be held Tuesday, April 4 in Bartlett hall.

Nominees for other offices include: vice president, Clem Hahn and Erwin Ritzman; secretary, Paul Brown, George Hunt, and Edward Thomas; treasurer, Arthur Peterson, Bill Baird and Charles Baldwin; and representative to the advisory board from the class of '42, Hilton Wick and Charles Orr.

Both of the nominees for the presidency have been active in Y work since coming to Maryville. Evaul has been cabinet representative for the past year of the Artist series; and Sevenson for two years has been the manager of the Y store.

Besides being on the association's cabinet Evaul was a member of the wrestling team, a former president of the Triangle club, is a student biology assistant, and has held offices in the Athenian literary society, Ministerial association, and Student volunteer group.

Stevenson is president of the junior class, a member of the swimming team, and likewise, has held offices in the Athenian literary society and Ministerial associaton.

At the regular annual business meeting of the association, held on the evening of April 4, three amendments to the constitution will be presented for approval to the Y members. A revision of Amendment 2 will provide for the filling of a vacancy to the advisory board by appointment of the YMCA cabinet, subject to the approval of the advisory board. An amendment of Article 4, Section 7 reads: "The YMCA cabinet shall be approved each year by the advisory board." And an amendment of Article 4, Section 4 provides that only two men shall ever be nominated for officers in the association by the nominating committee.

The polls for the election of next year's officers will be open at least three hours before and one hour after the business meeting on April 4. All members of the YMCA are entitled to vote.

Queener Will Speak At Ministerial Meeting

Prof. Verton M. Queener will speak at the Ministerial association meeting Monday evening at 6:45 in Athenian hall, discussing the minister as a speaker. This will be part of a series of meetings; the others to concern the minister as a citizen, and the minister as an evangelist.

Freshmen Lead As 141 Receive First Semester Honors

Ruth Mack and Dan McGill Have Highest Average With 9.1

A total of 141 students made the honor roll at Maryville college during the first semester of 1938-39. The freshman class led with a total of 43; the seniors and juniors tied for second place, each having 33; and the sophomores followed with 32.

The highest average, 9.1, was made by Ruth Mack and Dan M. McGill, both juniors this year. The highest senior averages, made by Catherine Pond, was 8.3; highest sophomore, by Aline Campbell, 8.6; and freshman, by Miriam Jenkins, 8.5.

Amphitheater, Gardens, Woods Are All In Our Back Yard

What do you know about the college woods? Most students fail to appreciate the natural beauty and splendor of the woods. Few of us realize the great advantage of having them so close at hand.

Probably the most interesting and the most beautiful part of the college woods is the natural amphitheater. Ideally situated near the center of the woods and outlined by the stream, making a perfect setting of the annual May day festivities, it has served as a stage for six years. Four years ago Mr. Brown and his boys went to work on it. They dynamited three large trees, built a background, planted vines and shrubbery, and cleared away the underbrush. "Brownie" still hopes to terrace the bank and improve the seating arrangement. Last year for the first time an Easter sunrise service was held, but rain at the time when the chorus was singing "Unfold Ye Portals" brought it to a damp conclusion.

The botanical gardens have a very interesting history. Many rare and beautiful plants were being rooted up by the college pigs which were allowed to run wild. Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Olin were particularly concerned about the loss, but were unable to do anything about the condition until about five years ago when Mrs. Walker took an interest in it. She chose a plot of ground and financed the building of gates, bridges, paths, and the fence around it to keep the pigs out. Boys were put to work and soon it began to resemble a garden. Each year the botany classes make many field trips for plants to add to the already mounting collection in the garden. By constant improving, the gardens may some day be as beautiful and well kept as those who have worked with them have dreamed.

A story about the college woods wouldn't be complete without some mention of its buildings. "The House in the Woods" was built in 1917, as a memorial to Mr. and Mrs. William Cooper, for the use of the college pastor. "Morningside" is the beautiful home of Mrs. John Walker, formerly of Pittsburgh, Pa., who has given so much for campus improvements. Near it are located the Guest House and the doll house, which is a miniature of a real house, equipped with correspondingly small furniture.

Walter Gieseking, Famous Poet-Pianist, To Give Concert March 27

Artist Likes Good Jazz, Popular Music, Butterflies, Gardens; Has Repertoire Of 24 Concertos, Several Hundred Sonatas, 1000 Pieces

The program of Walter Gieseking, internationally famous poet-pianist, to be heard in concert on Monday evening at 8:15 at Voorhees chapel, has been announced as follows:

1. Concerto in Italian Style, F major Bach
2. Sonata, A major ..... Mozart
   Andante grazioso (with variations)
   Minuetto
   Alla Turca (Turkish March)
3. Fantasia op. 17, C major .. Schumann
   Molto fantastico e passionato
   Moderato, con molta energia
   Lento, sostenuto
   INTERMISSION
4. Pagodes (Padogas) ..... Debussy
   Reflects dans l'eau (Rlections in the Water ..... Debussy
   Poissons d'Or (Golden Fishes) Debussy
5. Jeux d'Eauz do la d'este ..... Liszt
   Benediction de Dieu dans la solitude Liszt

Gieseking stands over six feet, a mental, physical and artistic giant, entirely lacking in the temperament usually attributed to artists of his rank. Born in Lyons, France, in 1890, he began his musical studies at the age of four, moving with his family in 1911 to Hanover, Germany, where he entered the conservatory under Professor Karl Leimer. In 1915, while still a student in the conservatory, he gave a series of six concerts in Hanover, performing the unprecedented student feat of playing the entire thirty-two Beethoven sonatas.

His first American concert, in Aeolian hall, New York City, in 1926, was practically unhearalded, but his immediate success soon ranked him among the leading pianists of the day.

Gieseking is well known as an interpreter of modern composition, especially the works of the French composer, Debussy. Because of the popularity of the type of classic calling for brilliant, showy finger technique, Debussy's music, demanding a half-carressing touch, was not accepted in French music circles prior to the World War. Consequently, Gieseking did not come in contact with Debussy's works until he had moved to Germany. His playing of the pianissimo passages in Debussy's compositions has won him world-wide acclaim. In answer to questions as to his method of achieveing this unique pianissimo, he modestly answers, "Because I play Debussy correctly." He stresses the importance of playing each composer's works in his own particular style. From January 10 to June 1, in 1938, Gieseking averaged four concerts a week in Europe. Two of these recitals were in Paris, one of which was all Debussy.

In fortissimo passages, Mr. Gieseking holds volume in check to be sure of revealing melodic content, being unwilling to sacrifice melody for noisy harmonics. Resulting accusations of hs being a miniaturist were disposed by his playing of the Rachmaninoff's C Minor Concerto with the New York Philharmonic orchestra, last November, with such thunderous Slavic interpretation as to astound critics and win him countless new admirers.

While known for his programs of modern music, Gieseking has more recently preferred to choose from works composed before the turn of the century, wishing to play that which has been tried and found good. This, however he suggests as one reason for the slow progress of music. Audiences are often so skeptical about the introduction of new and unproven compositions that artists hesitate to include them in their programs.

Gieseking is one of the most open minded and well balanced of present day concert artists, feeling that jazz has contributed much in widening both musical appreciation and expression. He often plays it for entertainment and seeks out good jazz orchestras. A program which he gave in New York in 1930, featuring works of living composers, included some of the better selections of modern popular song writers.

Mr. Gieseking is a genius in his field, being singular in his ability to play perfectly, from memory, a piece he has never practiced. Studying a composition while riding on a train, he is able to play it in concert with every required expression, with out practice. Through supreme concentration

Debaters To Leave Thursday For Ky.

Will Take Part In Pi Kappa Delta Tournament At Lexington

Maryville's varsity debate team will leave next Thursday afternoon to take part in the provential forensic tournament at Lexington, Ky. Those who will make the trip are George Webster, Otto Pflanze, Vernon Lloyd, Harriet Miller, and Arda Walker.

This tournament is held by the 13 provinces of Pi Kappa Delta every other year, and includes the states of Indiana, Kentucky, and Tennessee. Eight schools will take part in the tournament, representing the strongest debate squads in these three states.

George Webster and Otto Pflanze will enter the men's division of debate and Harriet Miller and Arda Walker will represent Maryville in the women's debate. In the other speech contests Varnon Lloyd will enter oratory and after-dinner speaking; Pflanze, extempore; Walker, extempore; and Harriet Miller, after-dinner speaking.

Members making the trip will return to Maryville Saturday evening after the debates.

Rev. Mr. Eller To Speak In Chapel

The Rev. R. O. Eller, pastor of the First Methodist church, South, of Maryville, will speak at the chapel service Wednesday evening. The Rev. Mr. Eller is a graduate of Emory and Henry college in Virginia, and did graduate work at Emory university in Georgia and also at Duke university in North Carolina. He has been pastor of the local Southern Methodist church for the past three years, and has previously led the devotional service in the college chapel.

National Sunday School Supervisor Dies Mar. 14

Rev. F. R. Watt, local Sunday school missionary, has been notified of the death of Dr. John M. Somerndike who has been the general supervisor of all the Sunday school missionary work of the Presbyterian church, U.S.A. Dr. Somerndike had just returned to his home from a southern trip in which he participated in conferences with his workers at Nashville and at Charlotte. He was apparently in splendid health when in these conferences, but on Mar. 14 was taken with a sudden heart attack and passed away almost without warning.

There is no one in the service of the Presbyterian Board of National Missions who had so many intimate contacts throughout the length and breadth of the church. He entered the service of the Board of Publication and Sabbath school work while still in his teens and at his death had devoted nearly forty-four years of consecrated and unremitting effort to the advancement of this work. There are many throughout the country to whom his passing means the loss of an intimate, personal friend.

Moving Pictures Of Germany Shown Club

Thursday evening the German club met in the chemistry lecture room for a program of moving pictures. Before the pictures, President Ivan Blake led a short business meeting during which a motion was passed to decorate the dining hall Monday evening for the formal dinner, and a committee consisting of Warren Culver and Edith Gillette was appointed.

The main feature of the program was two films, which were preceeded by several introductory remarks by Dr. R. S. Collins. The first picture, "A Trip through Germany", took the audience on a colorful trip through the Fatherland. The second dealt with a more specific part of Germany, the Palantinate. Between the pictures Dr. Collins led the group in German songs.

Swing School

The Prof. Mayo and his "Swing School" program that we witnessed last Saturday evening at the chapel was extraordinary. Seldom before has Maryville had such a sophisticated, humorous, and thoroughly interesting evening. We are living in a modern age—jazz included. There is no sense in being old fogyish and condemning popular music; it has its points and it serves its purpose. In an evolving world everything must need revolve and evolve, and last Saturday's program was certainly one of the most evolving.

The hour was clever—unusually so. The Reed skit; the Nellie episode; the quiz section; the musical arrangements; the lighting, sound, and stage effects. A mass of talent yet not presented in the periennel Maryville manner. Something new!

The students enjoyed it. They took part in it; even though, perhaps, only silently from their seats. They thought the quiz contest gave them something to do, some small connection with the program.

Congratulations, Athenian!

Spring

The official entrance this week of Spring was accompanied by genuine spring weather. There was felt more than the usual temptation to put aside studies for the much more pleasant occupation of enjoying the out-of-doors.

You've noticed the bare patches on the campus lawns. For some time now the campus workers have been attempting to improve the appearance of the grounds by planting grass seed where the grass has been worn away.

At best, it's a difficult task to keep lawns looking green and attractive; but it's much more difficult when large numbers of people wear paths through the grass in taking short-cuts from one walk to another. Many such unsightly paths have been made in this way.

By observing the policy of always keeping to the cinder paths and paved walks, we can all help very much in improving the general apearance of the campus grounds.

UP OUR HALL

By GEORGE L. HUNT

Our school, like most older colleges, is replete in tradition. We know that Anderson, Memorial, and Baldwin are its three oldest buildings and that Isaac Anderson founded the school in 1819. But one of the traditions about which not many people know is the story of the college YMCA.

One evening in 1877 a small group of men met in a room in Memorial hall, which was then a men's dormitory. Among theme was Samuel Wilson, students named Porter and Silsby, and several others. It wasn't a bull session, though perhaps it grew out of one. The men were meeting there that night to form a Young Men's Christian Association at Maryville college. Temporary officers were elected, the proposal was suggested, and in a short time the motion for the organization of the association had passed. Thus was born the group which is this year celebrating its sixty-second anniversary. Samuel Wlson graduated from the college and went to Mexico as a missionary. In a few years he returned to Maryville, and shortly afterwards he became president of the college. Others of that original small group went out as preachers and as missionaries. A big year in its history is 1901. In that year a young Japanese student at the college, Kin Takahashi, began a drive to build a Y building. The fellows made the bricks themselves from clay on the campus, and with help from the college authorities and other friends, Bartlett hall was built.

The Y has had a glorious past made vivid by the men who have been its leaders. Many of them have gone out to other leading positions, several have returned to be on the Maryville faculty. Dr. Orr, Dr. Hunter, Professor Queener, President-Emeritus Wilson have all been officers in its administration. Today it is one of the largest student YMCA's in the South, affecting in one way or another every one of the men on the campus.

There used to be a country on the other side of the water called Czechoslovakia. I heard this week about a summer conference held there last July. The scene was an old castle near Praha, the delegates slept on straw ticking thrown on the floor, and the program was much like the program of any Christian summer conferences. There were devotions, panel discussions, and afternoon sports—all this done while the air around them was tense with expectancy as to the future

Look across the Pacific. Bombs were falling on Hunan university in China. In the midst of the catastrophe, the students organized a Student Christian Asociation, one of the first acts of which was to write to the Christian students of Japan and reaffirm their common loyalties.

Also from China comes announcement that the Chinese National Library of Peiping has moved, to Kumming, Yu-nnan. The move was only a matter of about 1300 miles, over rough ground on oxcart.

Following is the program of this week's Sunday evening hour. The symphony orchestra will be conducted by Franco Ghione, at present the conductor of the Detroit symphony orchestra. Richard Tauber, tenor, is the soloist. Mr. Tauber, a German by birth, now lives in England. He made his American debut in 1931.

Donizetti Overture to "Don Pasquale" orchestra
Wagner Siegmund's Love Song from "Die Walkure" Mr. Tauber and orchestra
Verdi Prelude to Act III from "La Traviata" orchestra
Bizet Danse Bohemienne from "Carmen" orchestra
Offenbach Legend of Kleinzach from "Tales of Hoffman"
Strauss Barinkay's Song from "The Gypsy Baron" Mr. Tauber, chorus, and orchestra
Catalini Dance of Undine from "Lorelei" orchestra
Strauss Rises of the South from "The Queen's Lace Handkerchif" Mr. Tauber and orchestra von Weber "Jubilee" Overture orchestra

TWENTY-FIVE CENTS A DANCE MACABRE

(NEWS ITEM: Local motion picture house advertises midnight ghost show, guaranteed to scare!)

• • • •

In these days sophisticated,
We regard as antiquated,
Ghosts who haunt grave-yards to have a spookish spree;
Maybe in the long ago,
Spirits lived that acted so....
But in our day a Spook won't spook without a fee!

If what Shakespeare says is fact,
Banquo's shade put on his act,
But didn't charge a penny for the show he gave.
And Caesar's specter haunted Brutus,
(If the words of Shakespeare suit us)
But never sent a bill for speaking from the grave.

Those out-moded apparitions
Never thought to charge admissions;
Scaring people silly was just a lot of fun.
Times have really changed since then:
Now our ghosts are businessmen.....
The cash receipts are figured 'fore the show's begun.

• • • •

Twentieth-century spooks, it seems,
Guarantee to pro-duce screams....
Your money back if creepy creeps don't freeze you cold!
The specters have a union code,
And union ghosts work a-la-mode;
(They're at their scariest best when all the seats are sold).

• • • •

We pay for laughs, we pay for tears, ...
And now we pay for eerie fears;
A person can't be frightened free of charge these days.
A quarter to be terror-stricken,
Two-bits to have blood chill and thicken
The spirit world has found that advertising pays.

Orr Speaks At YMCA On Marriage And Family

Continuing the series of meetings begun last week at the YMCA on "Marriage and the Home," Dr. Horace E. Orr will lead a discussion on such topics as the program of married living, the financial aspects of marriage, the relations of parents to the couple, at the Sunday meeting of the Y tomorrow afternoon at 4 p.m. in the Bartlett hall auditorium.

An important meeting of the student council will be held at 6:45 Monday evening in Room 54, Thaw hall. All members are requested to be present.

Mrs. Kathryn McMurray, who recently spoke at the Christian Endeavor at New Providence Presbyterian church, will speak to the YWCA Sunday afternoon at 1:15. An open forum will follow her talk.

Theta Epsilon will meet in the Fine Arts studio Saturday evening at 6:45 in an open program. The program, which is to center around semi-classical composers, will present selections of Johann Strauss, Victor Herbert, and Fritz Kreisler. Strauss will be presented in "Tales of Vienna Woods", "Dance of the Hours", and "L'Amour Toujours L'Amour"; Herbert, in "Tales from Hoffman." Tom Shaffer will act as commentator.

SCOTTY SIDE SLANTS

By the
Sports Editor

TONIGHT!

They say that there has been hesitation among the amateur wrestlers about appearing before the admiring public tonight in the finals in the big gym. In fact a few of them wanted to go so far as to forfeit their matches. What's the trouble you big brutes, afraid to show your chest? You should be glad to wrestle the finals. After all, a lot of us never even got past the first round. Did we Steve?

"TOOTS"

"Toots" Blazer, who is bringing a team to play Coach Honaker's greenhorns an exhibition baseball game Thursday, is a former Maryville baseball star. Toots played third base, and they tell me he was hot stuff on the corner. He modestly claims that the only reason that Coach Honaker kept him on the squad, however, was due to his ability to voice his respects to the ump in no uncertain terms when a decision went against him or his teammates. Toots has one of those voices, or rather fog horns, that just won't stop.

TENNIS "RACKETS"!

Coach Fishbach is here this week end on a visit, I'll bet he is glad that he doesn't have the tennis team worry hanging over his head .... With the tournament well under way among the tennis squad members, a few upsets have been recorded. McKinnon whipped Stevenson, in one of the first surprises of the tournament. Gastrock has been looking good, and will probably be one of the squad members if he keeps up the pace he has been setting. His last victory was over Van Blarcom.

Seven Finalists Wrestle Tonight

The finals of the YMCA intramural wrestling tournament will be held tonight in the big gym, with Coach R. C. Thrower as referee. The matches tonight will bring together the cream of the amateur wrestling crop at Maryville. And with the exception of the 128 lb. class, all the final matches will be tonight.

The 121 lb. division wil bring together Lovingood and Brown, neither of which has had to do much wrestling due to lack of opponents in the lightweight class. The 128 lb. clas was won by J. N. Badgett, who wrestled last night and defeated Fred Rhody for the crown. In their place, an exhibition match has been arranged between Phil Evaul and Fred Rhody. The 136 lb. class will bring two of the mat's best performers together, Mooney vs. Nicely. Mooney was a varsity 128 lb. man last year but due to an injury suffered early in the year, he was unable to come out for the '39 team. Nicely is one of the best prospects to enter the tournament. This should be a real match and it will probably go into overtime.

Theron Etheredge vs. the third floor flash, Chalmers Stroup, will be the 145 lb. drawing card. Etheredge vs. Stroup, a real battle in store for the fans here. In the 155 lb. division we find J. D. "High School" Hughes, erstwhile football player, vs. Loololian, one of the fourth floor hoodlums, who upset tournament dope in the semi-finals by winning a decision over Harold Burns. Tommy Taylor and Joe Etheredge, two ends on the football team, will be facing each other in the 165 lb. match. Taylor is the varsity left end on the football team, while Joe is the right end. Etheredge is also captain of the '39 football team which is going to win the Smoky Mountain conference crown.

Weldon Baird and Bill Napier will put on a show in the 175 lb. class. Napier, it seems, has everyone afraid of him and has reached the finals without wrestling once. Everyone so far has forfeited to him. Weldon, track team captain, has had it a little tougher, however, and had to wrestle Bob Puncheon to reach the finals.

Swimming Club Interest Grows!

By FRANK CROSS

Wandering around the Athletic department, hunting for something I could put some of the Sport's page ink on, the sight of the big tin fire door to the swimming pool gave me an idea. I'd go in and ask Coach Gillingham what the tennis prospects were for the spring season with Morrow gone; he should have some very explosive feelings on the subject. I wandered on into the pool and found some boys enjoying themselves as they swam up and down, lap after lap! This obviously wasn't a swimming class; maybe it would bear an investigation. Coach Gillingham wasn't around, and the assistant, Gord Findlay, was directing things from the life-guard stand, so I boldly waded up to him, and asked him to explain what was happening.

At the shallow end of the pool beginners were splashing furiously through kicking and breathing exercises. They swallowed plenty of water but were well on their way to challenging the varsity. Gordon explained that when most of them started earlier in the year, they wouldn't do much more than stand in the water and shiver. Now they have a start on actually learning to swim.

Near by some foolish young man was backing up a few yards from the wall and charging through the water head on into the side. Mr. Findlay called him out and instead of chiding him for trying to knock a hole in the side of the pool, showed him how to run into it with good form. Wth a glance at my questioning face, he explained that the lad was working on his racing turn tests.

Smack! Some rotund gentleman demanded by attention very forcibly at the end of the pool where the diving board was located. He hadn't, it seemed, followed instructions on the fine points of a swan dive, and the crease of my trousers were paying for it.

I was then taken behind a more protected position and shown the swimming club charts by one of the members. The charts were so much Greek to me (why did I ever take Greek), but I gathered that they were divided into junior and senior divisions and carried the records of the tests that the club members passed. Another interesting point was that there was also a Girl's club. I decided that this would make even better research. Gordon graciously invited me to return the next afternoon to visit the Girls' club.

When time for the meeting came around, I saw some of the best girl swimmers I've ever seen. They were participating in various activities, form swimming, fancy diving, and best of all (I thought) life ring throwing. They were hitting all around a target in the center of the pool, so I ambled over and began to kibitz. That's one thing a male can outdo a female on—throwing. After a bit they decided to let me demonstrate. I had the target moved up to the extreme end of the pool, seized the ring like a discus and heaved it high in the air. The thing finally ended up in the bleachers.

This girl swimming club I found is composed of very excellent swimmers who like to swim as a hobby. They also help the swimming team put on the Carnival each year. Any student boy or girl can join; and you are more than welcome, so come around and sign up today.

Tournament Shows No Stars As Yet

Coach Gillingham's varsity tennis tournament goes into the semi-finals today. The quarter finals were played off yesterday with the exception of the Akana-Whittaker match which was postponed because of the illness of Whittaker. The tournament will help decide the starting lineup against Wayne university in the first match scarcely two weeks off.

The tournament has the following men remaining to fight for the top berths: Gastrock, Morgan, McKinnon, and Akana or Whittaker. The playing has been hard, three set matches prevalent in the play. The only upset, in the seeded first five, knocked Stevenson out of the tournament in an early match against McKinnon. McKinnon won by the unusual score of 6-1, 1-6, 6-2. McKinnon moreover has followed up with a string of victories, standing out among the dark-horses. In last week's play, outstanding matches included a hard fought match between Gastrock and Van Blarcom, Gastrock winning 10-8, 1-6, 6-3, earlier in the week Morgan beat Kidder 9-11, 6-3, 8-6, in one of the longest matches of the tournament. McKinnon polished off Webster, and Akana remained favorite over Whittaker to complete the slate. In the semi-finals Morgan is matched against McKinnon and Akana or Whittaker against Gastrock.

The tournament merely places the players tentatively. The lower positions will be fought out all season. The tournament will cut the squad in little better than in half however. The finals of the tournament will be finished up early next week.

The schedule for the year has been made out. On the sixth of April Maryville plays Wayne here, followed up by Carson-Newman the next week and Mars Hill on the 13th. The complete list is as follows:

J. D. Hughes, Wilburn, And Honaker Only Three Certain Men

Coach Honaker's own phrase, "They are rotten!" was referring to the baseball prospects for his 1939 team. Perhaps they aren't quite that bad, but with only three lettermen back, Hughes, Wilburn and Honaker, the prospects to say the least are pretty weak.

A prospective linup could hardly be picked due to the number of inexperienced men. As it is, J. D. Hughes will be covering the "hot corner", and that is about the only definite infield position decided upon. Coach Honaker will probably use Wilburn in the outfield when he isn's carrying out his duties on the mound, and Scot Honaker at second base. McGaha, freshman, has a chance to play some ball on shortstop, along with Nuschke, another freshman. First base is another problem. Russell and McCaskie are the two likely prospects around the initial sack, however, Russell, who was not in school last semester due to an illness, may be ineligible to play, depending upon Commissioner Lowe's ruling which will be made soon.

The only definite position in the outfield is centerfield, covered by "Nig" Wilburn. The other two places will have to be filled from recruits, second string men from last year, and freshmen. Chuck Kindred and Shelfer will do most of the receiving this year. Pitchers, plenty of prospects but nothing definite. However, Short, Honaker, and Wilburn, will do most of the hurling, with freshmen filling in the gaps.

The first real game of the season will be on April 1, against Hiwassee, although two games have been planned for this week against local talent. The first exhibition being against a team picked up by "Toots" Blazer, former third sacker for the Scotties. This game will be on Wednesday or Thursday. Coach also plans to play an independent team in an exhibition game at the end of the week. As far as a starting lineup goes, you have about as good a guess as we have.

Fashion Note

Saddle shoes are now the esablished footwear for college women. The problem has arisen at Oberlin college as to whether or not cleaning is the proper thing for them. The Oberlin co-eds have decided to leave their shoes a dirty white on gloomy and rainy days, and polish them up to fit in with the bright sunshiny days. Girls here on our campus don't bother about the bright days. The shoes tell their own story. (Last statement comes from a Ward-Belmont co-ed, but it could go here too. No?)

Mouse Tray a la Alarm Clock

"At the next sound of the mouse trap it will be time to arise!" Inventors Bertrand Farrell and Don Parro of the University of Detroit have a new getter-upper that works something like this: When the alarm goes off, a string, attached to the buzzer, allows a weight to fall on a mouse trap. This springs a trap, which pulls two strings. One string jerks the stopper of the alarm clock, shutting off the din, and the other perks open a switch on the radio. The radio, of course, has already been tuned in on a station that broadcasts dance music at the students' rising hour. Their only trouble now, it seems, is to develop a gadget that will keep them from being lulled back to sleep by the music. A round-about way of doing it, but it works.

The epidemic of influenza has greatly decreased this week. Those who are still confined in the hospital are Samuel Watson, David Butler, Olivia Latoff, and Jane Corbet. "The other patients, Ivan Elder and Lois Thorson are doing very nicely," Mrs. Hall stated.

(Cont. From Page Three)

S. K. Taylor, two brutes if there ever were any, will close the finals of the tournament. However, there are a couple of exhibition matches planned. The first being Evaul vs. Rhody, another being Akana vs. Stevenson, who have labeled themselves "the clowns of the mat." Ritzman and Al Moore have a grudge battle to decide, so they have elected to battle it out on the mat. Just what their grudge is, no one knows, and they probably don't either.

All in all, a pleasant evening of wrestling is planned, and after that games and etc., will be held in the gym, so if you are able be sure to come to the Alumni gym tonight.

Dr. John A. Silsby Buried On Tuesday

Dr. John A. Silsby, retired missionary to China and a former instructor at Maryville college, was buried in the college cemetery Tuesday afternoon.

Dr. Silsby attended Maryville college between 1875 and 1881, and after graduated from a theological seminary. He served as a Presbyterian missionary to China for forty-one years. After his retirement ten years ago he and his wife lived in California near their daughter, Mrs. Robert C. Cross, where Dr. Silsby died at the age of 81. The funeral service was held in the First Presbyterian church of Berkley, and his body was sent to Maryville for burial.

Dr. Silsby's sister, Mrs. Sara Silsby Tedford, a former missionary to India, is a resident of Maryville; another sister, Mrs. Samuel Tyndale Wilson died in 1937.

GIESEKING

he mastered so well the fundamentals of music during his years of training that he finds little need for practice. Such an emphasis on ear training, memory, concentraton and practice methods is the basis of the Leimer-Gieseking Method which he perfected in collaboration with his former teacher.

His amazing repertoire includes at all times twenty four concertos for orchestra, several hundred sonatas and nearly a thousand short pieces.

When not on tour, Mr. Gieseking becomes father, gardener and butterfly collector at his home in Wiesbaden, Germany, where he lives with his wife and two small daughters, Jutta and Freie. He is an expert entomologist, having in his collection some 8000 butterfly specimens, a greater portion of which he has gathered himself. The collection is one of the most valuable in the world.

Gieseking finds American audiences eager, friendly and enthusiastic, but more conservative in their judgments than European audiences. "Music here it not taken for granted; it is a fresh and delightful experience for the listener; not merely a ceremony of familiar routine as it is so often in our ancient Europe."

Disc Club To Present Jan Sibeluis Recordings

Miss Dorothy Horne will be the commentator at the next regular meeting of the Disc club, which will present the Fourth Symphony of the modern Finnish composer, Jan Sibelius. College Plans For Special Activities During Holy Week

Groups Will Conduct Series Of Noon Meditations In YWCA Rooms

EASTER MORN SERVICE

Choir Offers Special Music At Chapel Services And Vespers

Holy Week will be observed tomorrow and through next week by special chapel services and special activities sponsored by the religious organizations on the hill. Beginning at the vesper service tomorrow night in the chapel and coming to a climax with an outdoor sunrise service in the amphitheatre Easter morning, the programs will include special music and talks by members of the faculty and students.

Palm Sunday vespers tomorrow evening will open with the vesper choir singing Faure's "The Palms" as the call to worship. Dr. William P. Stevenson will speak on "The Unknown and the Unnamed Seventy," and the anthem will be "Send Forth Thy Spirit" by Schuetky.

At the regular chapel services Tuesday through Saturday special music will be sung each morning. Numbers being prepared by the vesper choir for these services are "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross," Mason; "In Joseph's Lovely Garden," Dickinson; "Jesu, Word of God Incarnate," Mozart; "Into the Woods My Master Went," Lutkin; "Were You There," Burleigh; and "In The Hour of Trial," Lane. The long chapel service will be held on Good Friday morning, and A period classes will meet at 8:30 on Monday and Wednesday.

Three members of the college faculty and administration will lead the Good Friday service, speaking on the seven last words of Christ from the cross. Dr. William P. Stevenson, Miss Clemmie J. Henry, and Prof. Verton M. Queener will be the leaders, and the choir will sing the seven last words responsively.

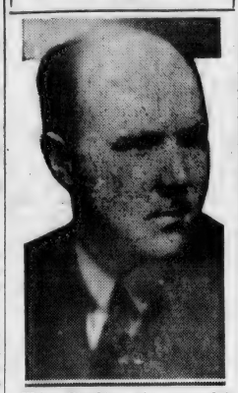
Hunter Reads Paper At Folklore Society

The Southeastern Folklore society met at the University of Tennessee this Friday and Saturday with Dr. Edwin R. Hunter and Dr. Hill Shine attending from Maryville. Dr. Hunter is the secretary and editor of the "Bulletin" for the Tennessee society.

Dr. Hunter and Ralph S. Walker, an alumnus of Maryville, were speakers on the program today. Dr. Hunter's address, "Studying Proverbs" was given this morning after Mr. Walker's address on "A Mountaineer Looks at His Own Speech." Mr. Walker has taught at Everett and Townsend high schools in Blount County since his graduation here. He is now principal at Townsend high. The monthly "Bulletin" of the Tennessee Folklore society carries this comment on Mr. Walker's article in the February issue upon which his address was based: "We are glad to have this article for our "Bulletin" and are particularly pleased to have the careful phonetic transcription from a qualified observer."

NOTICES



The A classes will meet next week on Monday and Wednesday to permit the long chapel service to be held on Good Friday.

Spring tryouts for freshmen for positions on the Highland Echo staff will be held during the next two weeks. Anyone interested in entering these tryouts may do so by asking George Felknor for information or leaving an application in the Echo office.

The YMCA election will be held in Bartlett auditorium the afternoon and evening of April 4. The annual business meeting of the association will be held in the auditorium at 7 p.m. on the same day.

Manuscripts for the Bates Oratorical contest must be in to Miss Jessie Johnson by Tuesday, April 4, for the first judging.

CONCERT PIANIST

Pearsons To Hold Picnic Breakfast

Third Social Event Of Year Planned For April 3rd In College Woods

The women of Pearsons will have a picnic breakfast in the woods Monday morning, April 3, at 7:00. The plans for the breakfast are being made by Charlotte Moughton, vice president of the dormitory, and chairman of social activities of Pearsons.

Those helping Miss Moughton with planning the breakfast are Harriet Barber, Jane Corry, Catherine Pond, Jessie Curtis, and Margaret Knox. Helen Ridenhour, Edith Evans, Ruth Abercrombie, Ruth Mack, and Marjorie Orcutt are on the cooks' committee.

The breakfast is the third of the social activities planned by Pearsons this year. A tea for the transfers was given at the first of the year, and Pearsons sponsored the dateless masquerade. Virginia Boys, president, and Harriet Barber, treasurer, are the other officers.

Jung, German Student, To Visit Canada For Easter Sunday Meeting

Inge Jung, German exchange student, left yesterday morning for Toronto, Canada, to attend the Easter meeting of the German exchange students in America. She will join friends in Cincinnati, where they will take cars to Toronto.

The German consulate and ambassadors in Canada have invited the students to be their guests at the meeting, which will last about a week. The objective is to become acquainted with Canadian customs and family life, and the students will stay in Canadian homes.

Two meetings of the exchange students in America are held each year, at Christmas and at Easter. Miss Jung attended the Christmas meeting in Naples, Florida. French exchange students are to be the guests of the Germans at this meeting.

NYA Cut Necessitated By Increased Payroll Over Annual Allotment

The government has allotted to Maryville college an appropriation of $1095 a month for the present school year. This assignment was made by the government last fall and was an increase over the allotment for last year. However, the amount of student earnings has gradually increased and the payrolls have been overdrawn since last September.

The February payroll was $1350. This increase over the monthly appropriation each month has been due largely to the fact that students' earnings are determined by their needs, and as each student adds a dollar or so to his monthly earnings, the payroll goes up and is overdrawn. The payroll should be $1095 a month and since it has been so overdrawn, there is only $900 a month for the next three months. This necessitates having everybody on NYA taking a cut in their work. Miss Clemmie J. Henry, supervisor of Student-Help, wishes to express appreciation for the cooperation of the students in this matter.

YWCA President Elect Announces Cabinet Members

Recent Appointees To Have First Meeting Sunday

Helen Bewley, newly-elected president of the YWCA, announced her cabinet for the coming year today. On the program committee, which plans the Sunday services of the organization, will be Sara Lee Hellums and Margaret Knox. Ruth Andrews will be devotional chairman.

The athletic program will be in charge of Harriet Miller and Jessie Curtis. Librarians will be Katherine Ogilvie and Betty Seel. Bernice Smith and Sue Stevenson will serve on the "M" book staff, Joy Corrigan and Mary Alice Minear will be the representatives at the mission while Mary Darden and Mary Clarke Caldwell will visit the orphanage, music will be in charge of Ruth Mack, and Ruth Abercrombie will be in charge of the YW store. Other appointments are Eleanor Long and Barbara Ann Swift to the publicity-lyceum committee, Charlotte Moughton and Jane Law to the social committee of the YW, and Genevieve McCalmont to world fellowship.

Faculty Members Attend Meeting

President Ralph W. Lloyd, Dr. and Mrs. Frank D. McClelland, and Miss Katharine Davies returned today from Memphis, Tennessee, where for the past two days they have been attending the annual meeting of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, held at the Peabody Hotel. This association is the accrediting body for the eleven southern states.

The theme for this year's meeting was "Education as an Instrument of Social Progress in the South." "The South has been referred to as the number one economic problem of the nation," said the Southern Association Journal in reference to the meeting; "this may be a matter for debate. But there is no debating the question that the south does have serious economic problems. Wasted lands will be redeemed, forests replanted, natural resources will be developed, political and economic rights will be secured and abject poverty will be eliminated only after we have educated a generation in the wise use of weapons that will conquer these economic ills that affect our region today. It is the purpose of this program to teach us how to use this instrument more effectively in attaining the more abundant life for our people."

Highlights of the program were two addresses Thursday; one by Dr. Edwin Mims, professor of English, Vanderbilt university on the subject, "The Humanities, Past and Present"; and the other by Dr. G. W. Carver, distinguished scientist and the Director of Agricultural Research and Experiment Station, Tuskegee Institute on the "Contribution of Science to the New South." The annual banquet for the meeting was held on Thursday evening.

Daily broadcasts from stations WMC and WREC, Memphis, were held throughout the week in connection with the meeting and featured speakers representing the different divisions of the Association.

Tapp Named Head Of "M" Book Staff By YM President

Bird, Smith And Stevenson Complete Staff Of '39-'40 Volume

Roland W. Tapp, of Chattanooga, has been appointed editor-in-chief of the 34th volume of the "M" book, announced Weldon Baird, president of the YM CA today. Stanley L. Bird will be business manager of the '39-'40 book. Associate editors, appointed by Helen Bewley, newly-elected president of the YWCA, are Bernice Smith and Sue Stevenson.

The "M" book, published each year by the YMCA and YWCA, contains information about the social activities on the Hill, and describes the several offerings of the athletic department with a short resume of past performances in inter-scholastic sports. This book, financed by advertisements solicited from local merchants, is mailed to all new students.

The staff of the 38-39 "M" book consisted of William Alston, editor-in-chief, Mary Chambers and Charlotte Moughton, associate editors, and William Felknor, business manager.

Rich Lectures On Movement Of Art

An illustrated lecture on contemporary art was given by Miss Frances Rich of the Art department in the Elizabeth Gowdy Baker art gallery, Tuesday evening. The movement of painting during the last twenty years was discussed, for with the changes in the world, art has naturally changed. Much ugliness has come to us with modern art, but also much good, and eventually something great will evolve from our present developments, according to Miss Rich.

Pictures were shown of Duveneck's "Whistling Boy" illustrating the influence of the Munich school; of Hunt's "Bather," which shows French influence; George de Forest Brush, who was influenced by the Italian masters. These all lead up to the art of today, which, however, was influenced by several other schools and artists.

Gauguin was a prosperous Frenchman, but because he was unsatisfied with his present life, he left for the South Seas, where he painted. His work shows a certain naiveness and reversion to a savage type of painting; through these he was influential on modern art. Then followed a series of artists who added their bit to art: Sargent, Cecelia Bow, Benson Frank, Henright, Bellows, who associated art with everyday actions and thereby took it out of the studio; Davies, who shows a link between classic and modern art.

Freshman Class Elects Hilton Wick Treasurer

Members of the freshman class elected Hilton Wick treasurer for the rest of the year in the election held after chapel Friday morning. Wick succeeds Troy Hunt who resigned when he did not return to school in the middle of the year. Wick is a member of the freshman debate squad.

All freshmen are urged to pay their dues as soon as possible to any of the class officers.

Debaters Return From Tournament

Maryville Takes Part In Pi Kappa Delta Provincial In Kentucky

Members of Maryville's varsity debate team will return this evening from Lexington, Ky., where they have been taking part in the provincial forensic tournament for the past three days. Those making the trip are George Webster, Otto Pflanze, Vernon Lloyd, Harriet Miller, and Arda Walker.

The tournament was held by the 13 provinces of Pi Kappa Delta, and takes place every other year. The province to which Tennessee belongs includes also the states of Indiana and Kentucky.

Maryville was represented in the men's division of debate by George Webster and Otto Pflanze, and Arda Walker and Harriet Miller, in the women's division.

Besides the debate tournaments Maryville also had representatives in various other speech contests. Lloyd entered oratory and after-dinner speaking; Pflanze, extempore; Walker, extempore; Miller, after-dinner speaking. Coach V. M. Queener made the trip with the squad.

Students Of Central High Tour College For Material On Project

On Wednesday, March 29, there were on the campus as visitors, five students of the Central high school of Knoxville. These students, high school sophomores, are working under state supervision on a project or unit of work entitled "Serving through our Churches," and are visiting denominational colleges in this vicinity. They went to chapel and then Miss Clemmie J. Henry took them around the campus. They attended various classes and ate lunch in Pearsons. Before and after lunch, some of the Maryville college students showed these five visitors some of the places of interest on the campus. This group will visit other church related colleges, observing them for this unit of work which they are doing.

Sibelius Symphony Is Heard At Disc Club

The Disc club met Thursday afternoon in the Fine Arts studio to hear a new recording of Jean Sibelius' Fourth symphony. It is a short symphony in four movements, and is a good representative of modern symphonic music.

The club is planning a special meeting next week on Good Friday when Stainer's "Crucifixion" will be heard.

Haynes Takes Sales Position

Anderson Haynes this week was added to the sales personnel of the men's clothing department at the Chandler-Singleton Co.

Haynes is an experienced salesman, having held similar positions in Meridian, Miss., and at Maryville.

Joint Recital By Carlsson And Milanov Also Scheduled

KIPNIS OPENS NOV. 9

Myra Hess Called Greatest Contemporary Woman Pianist

Myra Hess, outstanding English pianist, Alexander Kipnis, Russian-American basso, and a joint recital by Zinka Malanov and Carin Carlsson will be featured on the 1939-40 Maryville college Artist Series program, Professor George D. Howell, manager of the series, revealed this week.

Alexander Kipnis will appear at Maryville November 9. Kipnis was born in Ukrania, South Russia, and studied to be a conductor at the Conservatoire in Warsaw. After graduating with honors from this institution, he decided to make singing his profession, and went to study voice at Berlin. He began his career with the Hamburg Opera, and has appeared in every major opera house in the world.

Kipnis came to the United States early in the 1920's with the German Opera company, and was soon engaged by the Chicago Opera where he became the principal basso. He has just concluded a coast-to-coast tour of the country, and after spending his vacation in France, plans to return to America in November.

The second number on the artist series program for the next season will be a joint recital presented here Jan. 22, by Zinka Milanov, Metropolitan Opera soprano, and Carin Carlsson, alto. Miss Milanov, who is well known in both European and American musical circles, sang the leading roles of "Aida" and "Il Trovatore" in her recent European tour.

Carin Carlsson, already prominent among European concert singers, comes to America next year for the first time to make an extensive tour of concert, radio, and opera appearances. Miss Carlsson was born in Torshalla, a small town near Stockholm, Sweden, and received her early musical training at the Royal Conservatory of Stockholm. She later studied under

Tickets For "Quality Street" On Sale On Wednesday Afternoon

With only two weeks left, rehearsals for "Quality Street," Alpha Sigma-Theta Epsilon's mid-winter, are shaping up in excellent style, and the last contribution to the mid-winters promises to be an outstanding contestant for the Theta Alpha Phi dramatic award, according to Wm. Felknor, business manager of the production.

Tickets for "Quality Street", which will be presented in Voorhees chapel the evening of Friday, April 14, will be placed on sale for the first time next Wednesday afternoon at 3:00 in the lobby of Pearsons hall.

Costumes for the play are of the Napoleonic period and are very colorful and picturesque. Because of the unusual style and cut, it has been necessary to order many of the costumes. Others, for the feminine leads, are being made by members of the production staff under the direction of Elizabeth Stone, costume manager, and Nina Clark, assistant costume manager.

"Quality Street" requires three interior settings, and work on these is well under way according to Tom Stahl, stage manager.

Williams Reads Paper Before Faculty Club Fri.

The Faculty club will have its regular monthly meeting on Monday evening, April 3. Dinner will be planned, prepared and served by students in the home economics department, under the supervision of Miss Gertrude Meiselwitz.

As the feature of the evening Prof. L. L. Williams will read a paper which he has prepared on genetics. Prof. Williams has titled the paper "Heredity Through the Microscope." He will illustrate with charts certain phases of his paper as he reads.

Gieseking, Poet-Pianist and Amateur Biologist

Upon meeting him, one could hardly imagine Walter Gieseking as one of the foremost pianists of the world. His quiet friendly manner is a striking and rather startling contrast to the temperamental personality usually associated with great artists. His voice is soft and well modulated, while his slight German accent only adds to its charm.

His manner is more that of a doctor or scientist than of a concert pianist. His conversation invariably turns to botany and entomology, he being an expert in both fields. He has shown especial interest in this part of the country as a possible source of wild flowers to add to his collection. During his stay he made two trips into the mountains, on one of which he was accompanied by Philip Evaul, a biology major, in search of flowers. He was especially anxious to obtain a specimen of the dog-tooth violet. Collecting wild flowers from every section of the country, Mr. Gieseking pots them in paper drinking cups, carrying them in a specially packed hand bag.

He is an ardent gardener, although climatic conditions of his home do not lend themselves to his hobby. Wiesbaden lies in the Rhine valley and while kept temperate by thermal waters underground, it lies far north—comparable in latitude to Laborador—at which point the summers are too short and the rays of the sun too long to allow vegetables full growth. He is, however, a persistant worker, once having awaited three years for an Arizona cactus to bloom. He has never been able to grow tomatoes of any great size and the one green pepper that he was able to raise last summer was such a luxury that it was placed on the mantle piece, where they forgot to eat it.

Gieseking is an authority on butterflies, constantly adding to his valuable collection of over 8000 specimens, while on tour. He has been successful in hatching butterflies from caterpillars taken from America. He notes, "The only way to scientifically collect butterflies is to study the soil, vegetation and climate of the area in which you are working." Once, having made an out of the way trip to Florida for butterflies, he was asked why he did not want those of California where he had several engagements. He replied that due to a calamity millions of years ago which started migration of wild life in Central Asia to the East, and America, by way of Alaska, the butterflies of California are similar to those of Europe while those of Florida are entirely different, being of South American origin. He speaks of one speciman in his collection which measures only two

Reorganization

The problem of extra-curricular activities is not a new one. But it is to Athenian's credit that a constructive plan is offered to deal with the situation rather than taking the usual Maryville viewpoint, "we can't do anything about it."

Athenian's reorganization proposal, although begun with the idea of regenerating the society itself, is one for integration of the social program of the college by establishing a governing board, to which all social functions would be referred, and to which the social committee would be responsible. In order to maintain co-ordination of activities it is proposed that this governing board be composed of one member from each class and the heads of the various leading organizations on the hill. Such a plan would bring about a much-needed change, that of the reorganization of the Student Council, which now exists only as an intermediary between students and the faculty. Its importance and value in the eyes of the students would be increased by added duties and governing powers.

The plan is a step in the right direction, but it does not go far enough. Literary societies, which are not meeting the needs of students, should be replaced by a combined organization. The organization of Pearsons has begun a movement which may well lead to the combining of all the women of the college into one club. The need for constructive entertainment would be met by the division of the larger group into "interest" or "hobby" clubs.

It remains to the students as to the results of these reorganization plans. The faculty is always appreciative of progressive thinking and willingness to accept increased responsibility by the students. Recognition of the problem must be followed by constructive action.

Don't Take It To Heart

We can save ourselves a lot of unnecessary uphappiness in life if we can learn not to take as bearing on us personally, as individuals, everything that other people say or do.

The other day we smiled and spoke when we chanced to meet, during the change of classes, a friend whom we like very much. Without a sign of recognition (although we passed within a foot of him), he brushed by and continued on his way. We were well on our way to spending the odd moments of the rest of that day worrying about our friend's attitude toward us; but we learned that his strange behavior was not connected with us in any way, but was the result of a letter he had received from home, bearing bad news.

So it is in many instances. A teacher does not bear a personal grudge against a student whom he fails. The coach means nothing personal when he criticizes some one's batting stance. Your room mate doesn't really think what he's saying when he calls you a "fussy grouch." That other member of your committee wasn't trying to make you appear small when he suggested arguments against your proposed plan. We are too thin-skinned in many respects, most of us! If we would stop thinking of ourselves, at every turn, we'd be a much happier and saner group of people.

NEWS ITEM: Long Island college of medicine reports discovery of a new drink (dry gelatine dissolved in ½ cup orange or lemon juice, taken daily), which, in actual experiments, doubled muscular strength and endurance of men, but had no effect on women. (March 21 issue of a Pittsburgh paper.)

• • • •

What an advertising bombardment the gelatine people could fire, with the ammunition supplied by the Long Island findings! "Are you puny? Do people laugh at your feeble physique? Increase your biceps an inch a week, pleasantly and effortlessly, by asking at your nearest fountain for Yell-oh, the Pause that Refleshes!"

There's a danger, though, that the new miracle drink may bring back the pocket flask. Imagine the convenience of having a supply of this wonder-worker along when you're on your way to ask the boss for a raise, or when you're walking alone at night through the tough section of the city!

No doubt we'll hear any day, now, that "Two-Ton" Tony Galento has changed his training habits, and is now getting away with half a barrel of gelatine orange juice daily.

• • • •

We're sort of skeptical, though, about this whole idea. The L.I.C. of M.'s "strength potion" smacks a little too strongly of a certain well-known sailor-slugger's muscle-building spinach juice. Perhaps the Long Island people take their "funnies" just a bit too seriously.

One Stephen Franklin Amos (than whom there is no more scholarly gentleman on the campus) came to your columnist this week with the request that he include in this week's column a few verses from the pen of said Scholar (and Poet) Amos. Poet Amos, it appears, resents certain inferences which have been aimed at him in this column of a well-known Echo sports editor. Among other scandalous and preposterous innuendoes, the sports editor suggests rather plainly that Mr. Amos is not quite what one would call "World's Series" baseball material. Now, Mr. Amos is not only a Scholar and a Poet, but is likewise an Athlete. Here is his masterful, yet dignified, way of dealing with Mr. Sports Editor and all other calumniators:

"Far away from combat's terrors,
Worried only by typist's error,
Peter Pan with his flute of ink
Learned to write but not to think.
"Sound the trumpets in a hurry,
Something black and white and furry,
Has just dashed into our port,
Bearing on him the mark of "sport."
"Though we like your kind attention,
We find no reason for such mention.
So please omit; we say "no thanks,"
For future record of our pranks.
"Baseball trouble offers chance
For our sports' writers' song-and-dance;
We really hope we have no reason,
For shooting this tribe out of season.
"Now with regret we leave the fight,
To hope that time can make things right.
A word to the wise should be enough—
And we've run out of rimes for descriptive stuff!"

Miss Ruth K. Thompson, instructor in music in our Fine Arts department, has been kind enough to write a review of Walter Gieseking's concert in Voorhees chapel Monday night. I am glad to make this column available to one as competent as Miss Thompson.

• • • •

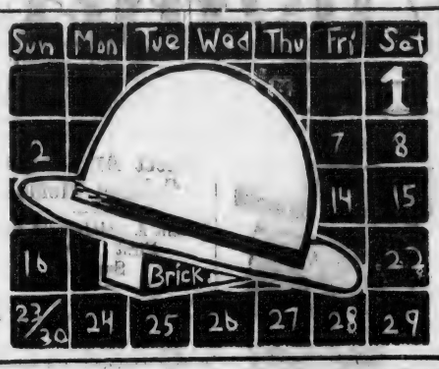
On Monday night, Maryville college and vicinity were privileged to hear Walter Gieseking, a pianist whose performance places him among the top-ranking artists of the present day. From the first notes of the Bach until the final bombastic chords of the Liszt encore, the audience was keenly aware that the artist was filled with a desire to present the best in music rather than to make a personal show of his pianistic skill.

The first group began with the Bach "Italian Concerto", which Gieseking performed with great ease and with a keen appreciation for the polyphonic style. One could easily have been led to believe that the instrument being played was not a pianoforte but rather its more delicate predecessor known as the harpsichord—the instrument for which Bach composed. Mozart's "Sonata in A Major" which came as the second number, proved to be one of the high spots of the evening. In this sonata, technic was forgotten and made subservient to delicate nuances, rhythmic precision, and artistically molded phrases, all of which were combined with perfect balance to produce an artistic effect which left the listener desiring nothing.

The Schumann "Fantasie in C Major" is a gigantic work from the standpoint both of performance and of appreciation. No one but a master of the piano could even so much as begin to comprehend this number. Again Gieseking showed his genius by the masterly way in which he scaled the technical difficulties and at the same time produced a tone colored with a Schumanesque atmosphere seldom if ever so much as approached by an amateur.

In the closing group as in all the preceding ones, the artist presented the varying schools of music in their true vein and spirit without an undue amount of harsh pianism being flaunted at the audience. The Debussy "Reflections in the Water" was another highpoint of the evening. One could sense the clear dazzling water and the rippling waves in the artistic rapid arpeggios and scales and also in the ringing harplike tone of certain octaves. From the impressionistic beauty of the Debussy group, Gieseking continued to the concluding group of Lisztian compositions with their beautiful melodies and dazzling brilliance. These works he executed with a striking bravura effect to end the program at a peak of pianistic and technical mastery.

The persistent demands of the audience finally produced three encores quite varied in mood and style: the first one— Schubert's "Moment Musical in F Minor"—a charming and refreshing touch; the second—the humorous and naive Golliwog's Cake Walk, by Debussy, and as a climax Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsody No. 8.



It is a privilege to hear such a truly great artist. As a result it behooves every college student to avail himself of the opportunity to become schooled in this branch of art. Perhaps more frequent attendance at such concerts with a mental set for interested and careful listening might eliminate some of the present lack of knowledge of the ethics of a music layman.

Lawrence Tibbett is the featured artist on the Sunday evening hour this week. Mr. Tibbett is one of the best known of our modern baritones, and is including on his program this week, because it is Palm Sunday, the familiar "The Palms" by Faure. This will come after the talk by W. J. Cameron. He will also sing Cortigiani, from "Rigoletto," Verdi; the Pilgrim's Song, Tschaikowsky; the Lent Lily, Wilson; Boots, Felman. The symphony orchestra, under the baton of Franco Ghione, the present conductor of the Detroit symphony orchestra, will open the program with the Overture to "Il Matrimonio Segreto," by Cimarosa, and will include on its program the Dance of the Hours, by Ponchielli; Gagliarda from "Ancient Dances", Respighi; and the Prelude to "Die Meistersinger," Wagner.

Various Forms Of April Fool Jokes Still Eligible For Experimentation

By DON KENT

You can fool some of the people all of the time and all of the people today; April first makes it legal. April Fool's day has been giving mankind an excuse to pull practical jokes for years and years.

Back in the dark ages (any time before you were born), All Fool's Day was celebrated even as it is today for some reason. The reason is immaterial. We have it and might just as well put up with it the best we can, and the best way is to learn its various forms so that we might cope better with it.

There is, first, the "joke naive." It is usually a poor imitation of the "hey, your shoe-lace is untied—April Fool" joke. This type may be discarded as being harmless to everyone concerned.

A more popular type is the "annoyance personal." It is performed with a "will he be mad" air. Consequences are forgotten and caution is cast aside as these April fools start their rush. Perhaps, in anticipation of April showers, water is often the means used to bring about the discomfiture on the part of the party of the second part. Other measures include nailing slippers to the floor, sewing sleeves or trouser legs shut, or throwing stink bombs.

The second form might accidentally become the third type of April fool joke, the "trick hateful." This is the joke that turns around and bites the hand that fed it. Associate professor Kiger recalls a good example of a boomerang trick from his own Maryville college days. One of the freshmen back in those days received a basket of apples for his birthday, March 31st. The next day, April Fool's day, while he was at breakfast, some of his friends managed to get into his room. They were just starting out with the basket when whom should they bump into but the even then omnipresent Mr. Mac.

"April Fool, gentlemen," he said. 'Even a basket of apples a day won't keep me away."

But there is a bright side to these April fool jokes. A prank in this class might be called the "prank gladsome"; everyone lives happily ever after. Mr. Kiger also tells this one.

One pre-war Romeo had a Juliet living in town whom he visited every evening far into the night. April first found him as usual in town, but after his extended visit he opened the door and there on the porch were his trunk, suitcase, and all his belongings, and, of course, an "April Fool" sign.

"Well," Mr. Kiger says, "I'm not sure but what they did him a good turn, for I think he married the girl a few weeks later, and that gave him a chance to pop the question."

Now you have the inside on all April fool jokes. So keep your eyes open today and remember, April firsts may come and April firsts may go, but April fools go on forever.

Gieseking

millimeters in width, or about a twelfth of an inch.

The simplicity of the life of Gieseking and his innate love of the beautiful, manifests itself in his music. There is nothing of the spectacular in his nature, for which reasons he advertises himself very little. So evident is his mastery of the instrument that he needs no dramatic gymnastics as proof of it. He long ago passed the stage where remarkable finger technique is an end in itself. Instead he uses it as a means to a touch which surmounts technical difficulties in a quest for music. Melodies which are often lost beneath a bombardment of firey gymnastics, he is able to bring out in the true beauty intended them by their composers. Such earnest desire for music and delicacy of touch have well won for him the laurels of poet-pianist of the world.

New Artist Series

Professor Louis Bachner of Berlin. Miss Carlsson is the first winner of the award created by the American manufacturer, Edwin Ruud, for the young Scandinavian singer who possesses talent considered by the award committee to be the most worthy of cultivation. She made her first appearance in opera in 1932 when she sang Waltruate in a performance of "Die Walkurie" at Essen. Since that time she has sung thirty-four major roles, and has also become famous throughout Europe as a radio and concert singer.

Myra Hess, who will appear here Feb. 22, is regarded by many prominent musical critics as the greatest living woman pianist. Miss Hess has recently scored a great success at a Town Hall concert in New York.

In commenting on the reasons for choosing these artists to appear in the Maryville college series, Professor Howell said that an effort was made to make the program as distinctive as possible ,and that the artists were chosen with more regard for ability and background than for the advertising they have received.

Debate But Not Debate

The University of Chicago's Student Debate union has had a membership increase of 250 percent within the last year, making it the second largest student organization on the University of Chicago quadrangles.

The cause: It abandoned debating, as an outmoded form of expression, for radio "bull sessions" and open forum discussions.

SCOTTY SIDE SLANTS

TRAINING TABLE

Last spring when the track team requested a training table for the squad it was given to them without too much argument and discussion. There seems to be, however, a little more difficulty in obtaining one for the team this year. The need for a training table for runners is easily seen. A different sort of food once in a while would improve their running 100 percent. Perhaps the necessity for one in track is even greater than that in any other sport due to the fact that the stomach muscles and the general physical condition must be in very good order to run very much. We hope that the one or ones who has charge of this matter will consider giving the track team a training table in the near future. Because the first meet is at the end of this week, and the season lasts only about a month and a half, this would not cause too great an extra expense.

WHO WAS LOST?

The umpire pulled the best one at the ball game yesterday when, after a passed ball, Boydson Baird came home from third base, and the ump waved him back to third. After the protests of the coaches on the sidelines, the umpire explained that the ball was lost in the crowd. It seemed that some little boy had innocently walked up, picked the ball up and had handed it to the catcher, who incidently was Shelfer.

TROPHY CASE

The YMCA athletic department has purchased a new trophy case for the interclass cups and et., to be placed in. The case will be put downstairs for display, and it is quite the nuts. Gene Orr, head of the athletic department, said that it was bought because of the fact that many of the students didn't know that each year the interclass champions in varied sports are presented with cups which go in the collection. There is quite a bunch of them, and some of them are pretty nice too.

BASEBALL DEBUT

Through some lucky whimsy of the baseball fates Theron Etheredge did his two-inning turn at second yesterday in the Scot diamond debut without being forced to handle a single chance.

Seems our pitchers are aware of the limitations of the support behind them, doesn't it? Think of the inevitable havoc that would have flourished in the field if our pitchers should let the opposition poke one down T's way. He might get out of the way. He could duck. But then he might get hit, too.

You be careful, Little Rock.

WRESTLING

The wrestling finals in the gym last Saturday evening climaxed a week of very good wrestling. Battling all the way the finals contained the cream of a very good and abundant crop. The way they look to me is:

121 lbs.—Al Brown put up a nice battle but finally had to bow to Lovingood, who turned in some nice wrestling.

128 lbs.—Badgett decisioned Rhody in a match which was closed to the public. I can't explain just why this match wasn't held with the others in the big gym. Your scribe, fearing some dirty work, watched the match very closely but could see nothing (that's strange isn't it?). The only explanation I can find is that the match must have been framed—after all, Badgett beating Rhody!

135 lbs.—Nicely apparently has been holding out on us. He turned in a very neat bit of wrestling. There is a very likely prospect for Coach Thrower, as if he didn't know it. Mooney gave him plenty of competition and he didn't fail to really give out.

145 lbs.—I still can't understand this match—T. Etheredge beating Stroup. There must have been a slip somewhere, because Stroup showed his superiority practically all the way. Tough break.

155 lbs.—It seems that things were just repeating themselves because Hughes came right along to win in a decided upset over Lulu. The thing that rather impressed me is the cocky manner in which Hughes walked off the mat after the match. Lulu attempted to shake hands with him as any good sportsman would, but Hughes ignored the outstretched hand of good sportsmanship and walked off the mat.

165 lbs.—Well this one went just about as your scribe had it figured. I thought that Taylor would take Daisy Rock Etheredge over in about two minutes, but he was probably just playing with him as a cat would with a rat 175 lbs.—Baird did some very fine wrestling in pinning Bill Napier. It was Baird all the way, although it was plenty close a time or two. Nice wrestling, Baird; and a nice smile in defeat, Napier.

Heavyweght—Taylor seemed to have his hands full and was rather mystified by the strength and ability of Dysart. Dysart was rather surprising to me. Where did he get that build—I'd like to have seen him out for football. Taylor did a very good job against a worthy opponent.

Successful YMCA Wrestling Meet Crowns Champs

The finals of the interclass wrestling matches, which were held last Saturday night, found a member of all the classes represented in the champions.

The first match of the evening, the 121 lb. class, Lovingood vs. Brown, was won by Lovingood on a decision after an overtime period. The 128 grapplers, Rhody vs. Badgett, was run off the night before, and John Newman Badgett, Jr., of Maryville, was the final winner of that division by stint of a decision over Fred Rhody.

Julius Nicely vs. Bill Mooney, 136 lb. class, was one of the feature attractions of the evening, with Nicely getting the decision after remaining on top of Mooney practically the whole six minutes. T. Etheredge, second floor Carnegie from Town Creek, Ala., defeated Chalmers Stroup, the pride of Bedford, Pa., on a near fall in the first two minutes of wrestling.

John David Hughes, commonly known as "High School," from Guntersville, Ala., won the 155 lb. classic by pinning the fourth floor flash, Wilbert Looloian. The 165 lb. class saw fast and furious action when football players Tommy Taylor and James Howard Etheredge, also of Town Creek, Ala., clashed for five furious minutes of grappling. Tommy Taylor pulled a Frank Merriwell finish to come out from several of Joe's pinning holds and finally put the bee on Mr. Etheredge.

Weldon Baird pinned Bill Napier in the 175 class. Baird had the advantage all the way after dazing Napier with a body slam to the mat early in the match. "Farmers" Dysart and S. K. Taylor put on a good show in the workhorse class (heavyweight) division. S. K. Taylor finally winning the decision after six minutes of hard work.

The interclass wrestling show was highly successful and promises to be an annual affair of importance as far a sinterclass athletics go. A great deal of credit goes to the ones who did most of the work in getting the matches going and seeing that everything went under way smoothly. Mr. Clem Hahn and Mr. Phil Evaul, both members of the varsity wrestling squad were the promoters of this affair.

Mr. George Theuer To Speak At Volunteers

Mr. George Theuer, secretary of the national Student Volunteer group movement, will be the guest speaker at the meeting of the Student Volunteer group of the college on Sunday evening. Mr. Theuer, who has his headquarters in New York City, will arrive on the campus Saturday evening, and will remain here until after the Sunday evening meeting.

Track Tryouts Show Strength Of Scotty Running Speedsters

Coach Thrower's track squad is hard at work this week as the time-trials and try-outs are run-off. None of the times so far have been exceptional, but several have been good. Coach Thrower seems to have a well-rounded team to take to Davidson.

The two-mile trial run on Friday afternoon was won by Alf Davis in the very good time of 11:16, with Floyd Green and Gray close on his heels. That is better time than any turned in last year. The team seems to have a full quota of distance runners. The mile will be run early this week. In the dashes Sutton, the freshman attempting to fill Talmages spikes, beat out Gene Orr in the time of 10.5. Gene Orr ran the high hurdles in 17.1 Thursday with Husk placing second. In the 16 lb. shot put, McCurry led the field with a toss of 35 feet 7 inches followed by Bill Baird at 34, 10 1-2, and Morton 33 feet 3 inches. In one of the best races of the trials so far in the 440, Weldon Baird edged Doug Steakley and Charley Fish finishing in that order. Their time was 54.5.

The mile ,the discus, the javelin, the low hurdles, the broad jump, and the 220 are yet to be run and are undecided. The high jump and the pole vault seems to be definitely decided. "Joe" Etheredge has been consistently clearing the bar around six feet and ought to raise the college record this year. Jimmy Rae holds the same position in the pole vault, he is clearing the high bar for 11 feet and better. The squad will be in good shape for its first test against Davidson next Saturday.

Former Registrar To Speak In Nashville

President Clinton Gillingham of Tennent college of Christian education in Philadelphia will be one of the speakers at the annual meeting of the Tennessee college association to be held April 5 and 6 in Nashville. President Gillingham is a former registrar of Maryville college and is the father of Coach Gillingham. He is expected to visit here while he is in the south.

President Ralph W. Lloyd, Dr. David H. Briggs, and other members of the faculty expect to attend the meetings of the association. A representative of each college present will give a brief talk before the association.

Baseball Team Opens Season With 7-4 Win Over Blazer All Stars

Prospects Still In Unstable Condition As Coach Honaker Plans For Smoky Mt. Conference Race

Scoring all its runs in one big fourth inning, the Maryville baseball team defeated "Toots" Blazer's All-Stars team in a six inning game, which was played yesterday afternoon on the home diamond. The score of the game was 7 to 5.

Trailing their opponents by one run, which had been scored in the first half of the first inning, the college nine came to bat in the second half of the fourth with Nig Wilburn leading off. Nig walked. McGaha singled, and the bases were filled when McCaskie's batted ball was bobled by Earl Blazer, the All-Star's pitcher. Sammy Pickens, who was sent into the game to pinch-hit for Russell, was hit by a pitched ball, forcing Wilburn across the plate for the first Maryville run. Kindred walked, and McGaha came in for the second Maryville tally. Ed Wiezalis, who had replaced Bob Short on the mound earlier in the game, then leaned on the second ball pitched to him, and scored three men, while he pulled up at second base. Ed stole two bases to score, and Scott Honaker, who took his base on four balls, stole one base and scored on a passed ball.

The All-Stars came back to score two runs in their half of the fourth, and one run in both the fifth and sixth innings. "Toots" scored two of the All-Star's five runs by getting two hits out of three trips to the plate. He stole three bases in the sixth inning to score the final run of the game.

The lineups for the teams were as follows:

Maryville	All-Stars
Cragan lf	Cross ss
Honaker 2 b.	McCall 3b
Hughes 3b	E. Blazer p
Wilburn cf	Delaney 1 b
McGaha ss	T. Blazer 2b
McCaskie rf	Clemens c
Russell 1b	Frtuin rf
Kindred c	Hodges lf
Short p	Baird B. cf
Wiezalis p	Johnson lf
Etheredge 2b
Headrick rf
Picken lf
Nusche lf

The Maryville baseball team will be host to two rival nines this week. Games will be played with the Hiwassee team on Monday, April 3, and with Franklin on Tuesday, April 4.

Interclass Swim Meet To Be Big Event Tonight

Tonight in Bartlett pool, the annual interclass swimming meet will be un off. The meet is scheduled to start at 7:00 under the direction of Coach Gillingham and Gordon Findlay. The meet will stage both swimming events between the girls and the boys. The feature of the evening will be a relay between the stars of the girls team and those of the boys team.

Last year the class of '40 swept the meet in both divisions. The girls of the class were also victors in their freshman year. The juniors again promise to have the strongest team in the school. However, the freshmen, always un unknown quantity, are reputedly strong.

A large loving cup will be given to the winning team. There will also be a short open swim after the meet. All students are eligible for the meet, except the varsity swimming team. Anyone interested can see the director of athletics of his class.

The events are as follows:

Easter Sunday services will include the sunrise service in the amphitheatre at 5:30 a.m. based on the twentieth chapter of John, and on Sunday evening a vespers candlelight service at which special vocal and instrumental music will be played.

The Disc club is contributing to the observance of Good Friday with a special program in the Fine Arts studio at 4:30. Recordings of Sir John Stainer's "Crucifixion" will be played, and the program will be conducted as a religious service.

The worship committee of the YMCA is issuing a devotional booklet for Passion week which is to be distributed in the men's dormitories this afternoon.

The second annual series of Holy Week meditations will be held from April 3 to 8, inclusive, at 12:40 p.m. to 1 p.m. in the YW rooms.

The theme of this year's series is "Looking Unto Jesus," and the theme verse is Hebrews 12:2.

The speakers and their subjects are listed as follows:

Monday—Behold the King of Kings—Howard Davis.

Tuesday—Behold the Lord of Righteousness—Ernest Enslin.

Wednesday—Behold the Man of Prayer—Bill Rich.

Thursday—Behold the Author of Our Faith—Paul Brown.

Friday—Behold the Lamb of God—Russell Stevenson.

Saturday—Behold the Resurrection and the Life—Frank Cross.

Erwin Ritzman will be the chorister throughout the series, which is sponsored by the YMCA, YWCA, Student Volunteers, and Ministerial association.

Gillingham Features Chemical Magic For Nature Club Thursday

A program of chemical magic was given at the meeting of the Nature club last Thursday evening by Coach E. C. Gillingham. Special features of the exhibition were the making of chemical smoke bubbles, a chemical rainbow, chemical flowers, and demonstration of a chemical kiss tester.

A bit of excitement was caused by the dropping of a bottle bearing a nitro gycerine label. Fortunately, the bottle was mis-labeled, and Fayerweather hall still stands in one piece on the campus.

A bird hike is being planned for Saturday, April 15, at 5:30 a.m. Dr. G. A. Knapp, one of the foremost ornithologists of this section, will accompany the group.

Open Forum At Law Club

The Law club held its regular meeting in Athenian hall last Wednesday evening. The meeting was called to order by president Hugh L. Smith and a round table disclussion was held on current law topics. Those taking part in the discussion were Gordon Findley, James Rich, Robert Wilcox, and Prof. Claude A. Campbell.

The next meeting of the Law club will be held on April 12, at which time Dean Earl C. Arnold of the University of Vanderbilt law school will speak.

Art Lecture

Post impressionism came from France, and was led by Cezanne, who painted atmosphere in his pictures, and Van Gogh, whose painting showed fanatical passivism and unrest. Cubism came from England, and was represented chiefly by Braque and Picasso; such pictures consist wholly of geometric colored forms which technically are executed with a fine sense of color and form-relationships.

This lecture was circulated by the American Federation of Art in Washington, D.C., to which the art department is a member. Another exhibition from the federation will be shown from April 15-30, and will be of French peasant costumes.

An exhibition of contemporary painting which has been done in the past few years by the students and associates of the Art Students League of New York City, will be shown in the gallery beginning April 17.

Poetry And Music At YM Devotions Sunday

A program of poetry, read by Curtmarie Brown, and music by Dave Kidder, Carl Walton, and Mary Alice Minear, Helen Bewley and Ruth Andrews, built around the arrest, trial, and death of Jesus will feature the regular Sunday worship program of the YMCA in the Bartlett hall auditorium, tomorrow afternoon at 5:00.

Miss Brown will read most of her poetry from a recent addition to the college library, "Christ and the Fine Arts," by Cynthia P. Maus. The women's trio will sing Gounod's "For God So Loved the World"; Dave Kidder will play a piano solo; and Carl Walton will play a violin solo.

Three hours before and one hour after the annual business meeting of the association next Tuesday evening, April 4, at 7:00, the polls will be open for the election of next year's officers of the YMCA. The candidates up for election include: president, Phil Evaul and Russ Stevenson; vice president, Clem Hahn and Erwin Ritzman; secretary, Paul Brown, George Hunt, and Ed Thomas; treasurer, Bill Baird, Charles Baldwin, and Arthur Peterson; and representative to the advisory board from the class of '42, Hilton Wick and Charles Orr.

Training School For Bible School Workers

There will be a training school for vacation Bible school workers at Maryville college, May 5-6. The purpose of this program is to prepare leaders to assist with the Vacation Bible schools, particularly in the rural areas adjacent to Maryville, during the coming summer. The program is designed especially for the Presbyterian and Mission Sunday Schools of the area. However, interested parties from any of the churches will be welcome to attend, according to the Rev. F. K. Watt, Sunday school missionary.

The first session will begin Friday afternoon, May 5, and the closing session will be Saturday afternoon. Board and lodging will be provided for the out-of-town delegates.

A Rime From Theta

You'll laugh, you'll cry, you'll scream with fear,
At all the poems you're going to hear;
Some are so funny you'll like to die,
And others so sad you'll cry and cry;
Some so weird you'll freeze with fright—
At a quarter to seven at Theta tonight.

Wintermute Directs Everett Senior Play

John Wintermute, Maryville junior, is directing the senior class play at Everett high school. It is a three act comedy, a modern version of Robinson Crusoe, and will be presented April 21. Wintermute was recommended for the position by Mrs. Nita E. West. He is a dramatic arts major, a member of Theta Alpha Phi, and an active member of the acting and stage crews of many Maryville college productions.

Bethany College, Alma Mater Of Miss Horne To Give Messiah Friday

Bethany college, alma mater of Miss Dorothy Horne, instructor in music, will present the fifty-eighth annual rendition of Handel's "Messiah" over a nation wide radio hook-up on Good Friday evening, April 17.

For the past few years 550 Swedes from the little town of Lindsborg, Kan., and students of the college have been practicing with four New York soloists and a symphony orchestra for the traditional two performances of the oratorio, begun in 1882 by Mrs. Alma Swenson, who this year is still singing strong as a member of the chorus. Music lovers from at least eighteen states are expected to travel to the "Oberammergau of the Plains" just to hear one of the most interesting and finished performances of the famous oratorio in the country.

Four Students Speak Before Relations Club

Four student speeches, centered around the topic "Which Way is America Headed?" will feature the regular semi-monthly meeting of the International Relations club next Friday evening, April 7 at 6:45 in Thaw hall.

The four speakers will discuss: "The Foreign Policy of the Present Administration," "The Defense Policy", "Isolation vs. Internationalism," and "Our Future Foreign Policy". Between each speech there will be opportunity for discussion by the members of the club.

Honaker Speaks To Athenian Soc.

Coach Lombe S. Honaker will be the guest of Athenian literary society this evening. He will discuss the baseball prospects for the coming season. Before his talk a short business meeting will be held.

Last week in a debate on the question on skunk protection, Critic John Wintermute awarded the decision to the affirmative team of Proctor and Brown. An excellent defense was made, however, by the freshmen on the negative team, Hilton and Henry Wick.

Confab Club Features Debates At Its Meeting

Debate featured the program presented to the Confab club Friday evening in the Fine Arts studio. Linda Robinson and Betty Jean Felix debated the question, "Resolved: That Banana Oil is of More Use to Civilization than Apple Sauce." Johnnie Childers and Arthur Peterson debated the question, "Resolved: That Dandruff is More of a Menace to our Country than Halitosis."

Carl Walton played a violin solo with Leah Voight accompanying.

Theta Epsilon and Alpha Sigma Give Barrie's Quality Street Fri. Evening, April 14, At 8:15

Heydinger, Mann, Brown Have Important Roles In Production

WEST DIRECTS PLAY

Three Act Drama Completes Societies Dramatic Presentations

Maryville college's dramatic season will close next Friday evening at eight fifteen o'clock when Theta Epsilon and Alpha Sigma societies present J. M. Barrie's drama, "Quality Street," starring Muriel . Mann and Curtmarie Brown as the old maid sisters, Phoebe and Susan Throssel, and David Heydinger as Valentine Brown.

Muriel Mann in the role of Phoebe Throssel will appear on the Maryville college stage for the last time. Muriel's lead in "Quality Street" climaxes a long record of excellent performances on the Maryville stage, the most recent of which was the part of the Russian princess, Tatiana, in "Tovarich".

Curtmarie Brown, also a senior, takes the other feminine lead as Susan Throssel. Curtmarie has taken an active part in Maryville dramatics for the past four years and will be appearing for the last time in "Quality Street."

David Heydinger, who plays opposite Muriel as Valentine Brown, the dashing young valiant who goes off to war and comes back to find Quality Street much changed, is a newcomer to Maryville. David, a junior, is no newcomer to the stage, however, and is expected to give an outstanding performance in the leading masculine role.

Varsity Debaters Will Leave Thurs. For South Carolina

Maryville Students Are To Compete In Grand Eastern Tourney

The Maryville varsity debate team which participated in the provincial forensic tournament in Lexington, Ky., on March 30, placed first in the women. Arda Walker and Harriet Miller met Transylvania college in the finals to win the coveted first place in debate, and Harriet Miller was the winning representative in after-dinner speaking.

George Webster and Otto Pflanze, representing the men's division of debate, succeeded in bringing Maryville to tie for second place with East Tennessee Teachers and Transylvania, while Georgetown, Kentucky, winning its entire four rounds of debate, placed first. In after-dinner speaking for men, Vernon Lloyd placed second.

Eight schools, representing the strongest debate squads in Tennessee, Kentucky, and Indiana, participated in the contest. This tournament, which is held by the thirteen provinces of Pi Kappa Delta every other year, lasted for three days, and is judged to be the most difficult one in which the varsity team has taken part this year.

Coming Recitals For Musical Art Students Announced By Davies

The high school students of the college music department will be heard in recital next Friday, April 14, in the Fine Arts studio at 4:00 p.m., according to an announcement by Miss Katherine Davies, head of the Fine Arts department.

All of the April concerts are preliminary to and will be climaxed by the observance of Music Week from May 9-14. The program planned for that week includes: two senior recitals, by Harriet Barber, contralto, accompanied by Anne Abel; and by Zula Vance, pianist; and orchestra concert by the Maryville College Symphony orchestra; a program of chamber music, by Misses Dorothy Horne and Ruth Thompson, instructors in the music department; a musical vespers; and an organ recital, by Frank Nelson, Knoxville organist.

Besides the program presented by the high school students on April 14, five other recitals are planned for the month of April. The annual Chilhowee club recital will be Tuesday, the 18th, in Voorhees chapel at 4:00. Following this, on Friday of the same week will be a recital by three of the juniors in the music department: Bernice Cathcart, soprano; Ruth Mack, pianist; and Ralph Reed, baritone. On Saturday afternoon the children taking work in the department will give their recital in the Fine Arts studio.

The final week in April the freshmen and sophomores will be heard in a recital on Wednesday in the Fine Arts studio; and on Friday, April 28, a second recital by junior students will be presented in the chapel: Ruth Woods, soprano; Mary Elizabeth Gillespie, violinist; Dick Woodring, tenor; and Bernice Smith, accompanist, include those on the program.

After the program of Music Week in May there will be three recitals left to complete the plans of the Music department for the present academic year. On Friday, May 19, Ed Goddard, tenor, accompanied by Louise Felknor, will be presented in a third senior recital. For Saturday evening, May 20, the annual Glee club concert, under the direcion of Ralph Colbert, is being planned. And on Friday, May 26, senior students in the Fine Arts department will give their final individual performances at Maryville college.

Special music will also be planned by the department for Commencement week exercises.

Disc Club Has Special Prog.

Friday afternoon the Disc club presented a special Good Friday program. Stainer's "Crucifixion" was played and the commentator was Tom Schaeffer.

First May Queen Election Will Be On Wed. Morning

Nominations Made For Seniors, Sophomores This Week

Nominations for the 1939 May Queen were made Thursday evening by the seniors. Those nominated were Harriet Barber, Lois Barnwell, Helen Bobo, Virginia Boys, Marguerite Justus, Genevieve Metcalf, Virginia Lee Schaeffer, and Zula Vance. Two nominations may be made from the floor at the first election to be held Wednesday after chapel. The three receiving the highest number of votes will be voted on the following Saturday in the final election.

The nominating committee asked that it be explained that having been a May Day attendant does not exclude anyone from being a nominee for Queen.

Seniors serving on the nominating committee are Edwin Goddard, chairman; Mary Jo Husk, Hazel Eddins, Bill Alston, and Lawrence Lowe.

The sophomore class is the only one which has already made nominations for attendants to the Queen. Nominees for the girl attendant are Ruth Andrews, Mary Orr, and Helen Warwick. Warren Van Blarcom, Tommy Cragan, and Dale Russell were nominated for the other attendant. Nominations for each may be made from the floor Wednesday, when the election is held. Those on the committee were Warren Corbett, chairman, Arthur Peterson, Marianna Allen, Aline Campbell, Margaret Lodwick, and Bill Gehres. Elections for the attendants from the freshman and junior classes will also be held Wednesday after chapel.

Arnold To Speak Before Law Club

Dr. E. C. Arnold, dean of the University of Vanderbilt Law school, will address members of the Law club at their regular bi-monthly meeting next Wednesday evening at 6:45 in Athenian hall.

Dean Arnold's address will center around the requirements of the modern lawyer and the necessary training and ability essential today in this field. After his address, Dean Arnold will hold an open forum discussion at which time he will discuss with the club any questions concerning the profession.

Members of the Law club who heard Dean Arnold last year were much impressed with the sincerity and frankness with which he explained the possibilities and probabilities of the law profession," stated Hugh L. Smith, president of the club. All students who are considering law as a profession are invited to attend as well as members of the club.

Y.M.C.A. Elects Officers For '39-'40 Business Year

Ritzman To Be V. Pres., Baldwin Treasurer, Thomas Secretary

Russell Stevenson was elected president of the YMCA for the year 1939-40 by the members of the association at the annual election last Tuesday, April 4. Other officers elected at the same time include: Erwin Ritzman, vice president; Edward Thomas, secretary; Charles Baldwin, treasurer; and Charles Orr, representative to the advisory board from the class of '42.

The president-elect, from Pittsburgh, Pa., is also president of the junior class, a member of the swimming and tennis teams, vice president of the ministerial association, athletic director of the junior class, a member of Athenian literary society, and is sports editor of the 1939 Chilhowean. Stevenson has been active on the association's cabinet for the past two years, having been manager of the Y store.

YWCA Plans Hike To Laurel Falls, Saturday

The YWCA is planning a hike for the women Saturday, April 15 to Laurel Falls and Cove Mountain. This is an attempt to provide the girls with some sort of annual mountain hiking, and has been planned by the old YW cabinet, and executed by the new; Jessie Curtis is chairman of the committee.

The bus will leave the campus about 7:30 a.m. Upon arrival at Fighting Creek Gap on the Gatlinburg road, the group will leave the bus and hike up to Laurel Falls which is about 1 1-2 miles climb. Those desiring may hike to the top of Cove Mountain, altitude 4091 feet, a 4 mile climb. Upon descending the group will go to a picnic ground about a mile from the base, and there eat a hot supper. They will then return to the campus in the bus.

Dramatic Arts Dept. Presents Three Plays At Monthly Studio Tea

The Dramatic Art Department has presented several programs recently in connection with the Easter season and as the work of various classes. On Saturday evening, April 1, students of the Dramatic Art department presented three one-act plays at a studio tea held in the Fine Arts studio. The plays were "Smoke Screen", directed by Mrs. Edward Hamilton, with Carol Ward, Barbara Anderson, Muriel Mann, and Esther McCollum as characters; "Three is a Crowd", coached by Ruth West with Dorothy Harned, Sara Bolton, Bill Gehres, and Jimmie Rich in the cast; "He Said and She Said", coached by Mary Frances Spurlock, using a cast composed of Louise Allen, Linda Robinson, Betty Felix, and Quentin Myers.

Studio teas are a monthly affair, and participation in them is required of Dramatic Art students. Invitations to the teas are made to those outside the department who are interested in attending.

On Wednesday afternoon, April 5, students of the Dramatic Art department went to Knoxville to present a one-act play before the PTA of the McCampbell school. The play was entitled "Unicorn and Fish." The cast consisted of Muriel Mann, Quentin Myers, Louise Allen, William Gehres, and Melvin Johnson.

Sunday evening the Religious Drama class of the Fine Arts department will have charge of an Easter service at the M.E. Church, North, in Maryville. Carol Ward will read Easter poetry. The scripture lessons will be read by Mary Frances Spurlock and John Wintermute. A one-act play, "At the Gate Beautiful" will be presented by Gordon Bennett, Muriel Mann, Sara Bolton, Carol Ward, Arthur Peterson, and John Wintermute.

Easter Sunrise Worship Service To be Held at 5:30 A.M. Sunday At Open Amphitheatre in Woods

Band To Open Day At 4:30 With Music At Center Of Campus

STEVENSON IN CHARGE

New Robes Will Be Worn For First Time At Vesper Service

The annual Easter sunrise worship service, an outstanding event in the religious life of Maryville college, will be held tomorrow morning at 5:30 in the open air amphitheatre of the college woods. The day will be heralded with music by the college band from the center of the campus, beginning at 4:30 and continuing until 4:50 a.m. The processional of students will begin at 5 o'clock, accompanied by antiphonal music by the band, stationed at three different intervals along the path to the amphitheatre.

Dr. William P. Stevenson, college pastor, will be in charge of the program. The combined glee clubs and a capella choir will open the service with Lowery's "Low in the Grave He Lay," followed by the Apostles Creed by the audience with the "Lord's Prayer" response. Other choral music will consist of the hymn "Fairest Lord Jesus" and Bartnainsky's "Like a Choir of Mighty Angels." The music will be under the direction of Ralph R. Colbert instructor in music. The scripture lesson will be taken from John, Chapter 20, with responsive readings led by Dr. Stevenson.

This program is similar in many respects to that observed by the Moravians of Old Salem, N. C., for the past three centuries. So famous has their

Debaters Win In Kentucky Tourney

Maryville Is First In The Women's Division

Four members of Maryville's varsity debate squad will leave Thursday morning to attend the Grand Eastern Forensic tournament at Winthrop college, Rock Hill, South Carolina, April 13-15.

Those representing the squad are Harriet Miller, Arda Walker, Clifford Proctor, and Arnold Kramer. Besides debating, tentative plans for entering the other contests include Walker in oratory and extempore; Miller in harangue and impromptu; Proctor in harangue and impromptu, and Kramer in oratory and extempore.

The Grand Eastern tournament is a series of forensic contests held at Winthrop every year early in April. Schools from anywhere east of the Mississippi attend the contests. A women's team from Arkansas State Teachers college and a men's team from Louisana State were the winners of the 1938 tournament.

Nu Gamma Leaders For Fall Selected

Girls To Acquaint Freshmen With Campus Activities And YW Work

Ruth Crawford, newly elected Nu Gamma chairman for the YWCA has announced this week that the Nu Gamma group leaders who will serve next fall have been selected and approved. Those who were selected to serve in this capacity are Avis Ensminger, Marion Northup, Doris M. Smith, Miriam Nethery, Barbara Anderson, Cecilia Jones, Elizabeth Pascoe, Ann Gammon, Jean Stringham, Ruth Wynn, Catherine Walters, Ruth Duggan, Margaret Lodwick, Louise Darden.

Each of these girls will be given a group of from ten to twelve new women students next fall. On four successive Sunday afternoons at the beginning of school they will meet with their various groups and discuss campus affairs, and give the new students a chance to become acquainted with each other and with the traditions, ideals, rules, and regulations of the college; and with the work of the YW CA.

Bates Orators To Meet

Orations for the annual Bates Oratorical contest have been turned in by Warren Ashby, George Hunt, John Magill, James Jarrell, Roland Tapp, and Arnold Kramer. The contestants will meet Wednesday at the A period in Miss Johnson's classroom to decide on a definite date for the contest, which will take place during the first two weeks in May.

Oratorical Contest To Be Held During Chapel Service, Wed.

Three women contestants will compete Wednesday morning for the T. T. Alexander oratorical contest during the chapel service. Arda Walker, junior from Maryville; Marianna Allen, sophomore from Knoxville, and Jean Naberhuis, freshman from Miami will give the orations. These three, because of a tie for second place, will compete for the first and second prizes of the $80 fund.

Of the four possible subjects—The Deity of Jesus Christ, Christ's atonement for Sin, The Resurrection, and Salvation Through Faith—Miss Walker and Miss Allen chose Christ's Atonement for Sin and Miss Naberhuis, the Deity of Jesus Christ.

The T. T. Alexander contest is sponsored annually by the department of Bible and Religious Education, men and women competing in alternating years. This prize fund was established by a generous, unknown friend acquainted with the college who named it in honor of one of Maryville's foreign missionaries. Ralph Reed was winner last year.

Robes Laid Aside After 22 Years

By DORIS SMITH

Some people may think that the life of a choir robe is very dull, but this is not at all true. From the day I was cut and sewed together my life has been full of very interesting experiences.

Twenty-two years ago, when I emerged from Albany N. Y., as a gift from the Stevensons to the college, I looked forward with great anticipation to my first public appearance. From that day on the diary of my life has been faithfully kept in each crease and sign of wear on my surface.

I have been interested in seeing the college grow and develop along with the world. I remember that the rebuilding of Carnegie hall had just been completed when I began my career. Since then a number of buildings have been constructed and remodeled. I was about three years old when Thaw hall and the gymnasium were built, and it wasn't very long ago that Pearsons dining hall was remodeled. I can't be absolutely sure of everything that happened very long ago, because a portion of my diary was destroyed about ten years ago when I was remodeled. Up until that time I was patterned after the customary academic robe, but even a choir robe must keep up with the world. It was when I emerged from the Maid Shop for the first time that I left part of my diary there. I had, however, an unlimited space in the new white cotta, that was now a part of me, on which I could record my new experiences.

I see that one of the first things I recorded was the appointment of Dr. Lloyd as president of the college after the retirement of Dr. Wilson. Again I see where our choir director, Miss Frances Henry was succeeded by Mr. Colbert. It makes one feel older to see people come and go. Why right now I know of one past choir member who is now a professor in the Bible department here at the college. I have no record that I was his robe, but that record may have been destroyed; so I really can't be sure.

Superstitions Sadden Sandy McKent

By DON KENT

"Amonst us there be manie women and effeminat men that make great divinations upon the shedding of salt, wine, etc. For if one chance to take a fall from a horse, either in a slipperie or stumbling waie, he will note the dai and houre, and count that time unluckie for a journie. Otherwise, he that receiveth a mischance, will consider whether he met not a cat, or a hare, when he went first out of his doores in the morning; or put on his shirt the wrong side outwards; or his left shoo on his right foote, which Augustus Caesar reputed for the woorst lucke that might befall.

"Many will go to bed againe, if they sneeze before their shooes be on their feet; some will hold fast their left thombe in their right hand when they hickot; or else will hold their chinne with their right hand when a gospell is soong. It is thought verie eill lucke of some, that a child, or anyie other living creature, should passe betweene two friends as they walke together; for they say it portendeth a divishion of freendship. Among the papists themselves, if any hunters, as they were hunting, chanced to meet a frier or a preest; they thought it so ill lucke, as they would couple up their hounds, and go home, being in despaire of any further sport that daie.

"Some sticke a needle or a buckle into a certaine tree, neere to the cathedrall church of S. Christopher, or of some other saint; hoping thereby to be delivered that yeare from the headach. Some maids forsooth hang some of their haire before the image of S. Urbane, bicause they would have the rest of their haire grow long and be yellow."—Sir Walter Scott, 1835.

And if youu thinke that aull the superstitious peoplle hae disappeared, yere carazy! Even now there be some Maryyville Colleege volks who believe in suche things as goode lucke charmes. Recreation Room

The mountain hike for girls scheduled for next Saturday and sponsored by the YWCA might be the initiation of a more extensive program for the women of the college. Point system serves its purpose capably for those girls who are able to spend the time each week at the classes, and the Saturday afternoon sports period instituted this year by the M club for those girls who wanted to play basketball or other games has been one step in such a direction. But there seems to be a need for a recreation center for women especially, but also for men and women.

If there were some place available to women where they might read, play pingpong or even more active games, and listen to the radio, that would fill the need. The YW rooms have in a small way attempted to aid such a situation, but they are not adequate enough at present. The girls who work cannot often find time for competitive sports and tournaments even though they may be interested in such. They would, however, appreciate a place where they could spend their leisure time for recreation that would benefit them and also give them enjoyment.

A recreation room which could be used by both the men and the women of the college would certainly help to solve the problem of many daters who want "something to do" on an afternoon. Especially on winter and rainy afternoons and possibly even after meals such a room would provide one way of spending that time in a pleasant manner.

These rooms would provide places where students could find recreation for ten minutes, half an hour, or even longer periods. Such a plan could be begun in a humble fashion with one room, several tables, games, and a radio, and could be extended to suit the increased need of the students as soon as that was determined.

Consider Well

This particular time of the college year is the general period in which elections are held for just about every student office on the campus.

There are a number of reasons why it is important that care and thought should be exercised in this matter of elections. Of course, there's the matter of getting the best people for the right positions, but there is much more to it than that.

Persons who have the responsibility of making nominations for offices should try to find capable individuals other than those few who are already over-burdened with tasks and honors. And these over-burdened few should think twice before accepting any additional extra-curricular work for next year. It's a shame that so many students go through college without doing anything outside of their regular work, and that so few students do so very many extra things. Is this a necessary state of affairs, or is it not?

Another matter in connection with elections is this; somebody must lose. Defeat is often a bitter pill to swallow, but practically every one of us must take it at one time or another. We usually get over an occasional setback with no trouble, but sometimes it seems that everything we have a try at ends in defeat for us. If we are not careful, such an experience will give us a warped outlook on life, and an injurious feeling of inferiority. Let's look at both our victories and our defeats objectively! If we win, it isn't because we are super-men; it's merely because some other people happened to think that we probably fit this position better than anyone else under consideration. If we lose, it isn't because we are disliked, or secretly plotted against, or failures in life; it's merely because some other people happened to think that some one else is a little better qualified to hold this job than we are.

Sometimes, it is true, factors enter into an election which should have no place in it; but even in such cases, maintaining an objective view of the whole thing will be the best attitude for us to have.

UP OUR HALL

By GEORGE L. HUNT

The name "Easter" comes from the Teutonic goddess of fertility, Eostre. It is associated with spring, the season when nature is bursting into new bloom and represents in connection with the religious festival the idea of new life. The egg came to be associated with Easter partly because of its connection with birth, but also because it was part of the Catholic custom to forbid the eating of eggs during Lent and on Easter Sunday they were served as an important part of the meal. Coloring the eggs is likewise an old custom going back to the spring festivals of the Egyptians, Persians, Greeks, and Romans, but in connection with the religious significance it is belived that red eggs were to represent the blood of Christ. Easter egg rolling contests were a custom in Europe before they were introduced in this country by Dolly Madison. Each year since her time, except during the Civil and World Wars, egg rolling contests for children have been held on the White House lawn in Washington. No adults may be admitted to the festivities unless accompanied by a child, and a few years ago some enterprising boys were charging fifteen cents to accompany adults through the gates.

The Sunday Evening Hour

Because of its appropriate selections this week, it would probably be well to devote more space than usual to the program of the Sunday evening hour tomorrow night at 8 p.m. Most of the music is Easter music, beginning with the overture, La Pasqua from "Siberia," by Giordano; this represents the Easter music of this composer. Prayer from "Cavalleria Rusticana" by Mascagni—The scene of this one-act opera is a Sicilian village square on Easter morning. From the church overcrowded for the Easter service the choir is heard singing "Queen of Heaven" and the peasants in the square sing the Alleluias in response. Then, kneeling, they sing the Resurrection Hymn. Miss Helen Hadley will be the soloist for this number by the orchestra and chorus.

The Three Lilies, an old Breton Easter Carol—
In the fishing village of Brittany on the coast of France the townspeople greet the Easter morn with the singing of carols. Many of these have been discovered by Harvey Gaul, the Pittsburgh organist. This one, "The Three Lilies", has as its recurring refrain the stanza

Three Lilies blossomed from the ground
Where blood drops fell from Jesus' wound,
One for each Mary burst into bloom
When they sought Jesus at the tomb.

The Overture to Tannhauser, by Richard Wagner—
The legendary story of Tannhauser concerns a knight who has wandered from the earth into the abode of the gods, the Venusberg, but returns to the earth after a while to his sweetheart Elizabeth. For his relationships with Venus he must seek pardon from the Pope, and it is the music of the pilgrims returning from Rome that provides the familiar "Pilgrim's Chorus." While not Easter music, the Overture depicts a story of redemption as it begins with the Pilgrim's Chorus, continues with the seductive beckonings of Venus, and concludes with the Pilgrim's Chorus again showing the triumph of the true God over the legendary figures.

Franco Ghione will again conduct the symphony orchestra tomorrow evening, and the soloist will be the famous pianist and conductor, Jose Iturbi. Mr. Iturbi will play the Hungarian Fantasie by Liszt, and Chopin's Scherzo in B Minor.

Merry-Ville Go Round

By FRED RHODY

We're tempted to hang out a sign: "This column postponed on account of rain!"

• • • •

Oh-h-h! In seven more weeks and two more days we'll be out of the calaboose;
In seven more weeks and two more days they're going to turn us loose!

Ten years ago we used to feel that way as the summer vacation approached. Guess maybe we still do. Funny.

• • • •

Our fellow-calumnist, G. L. Hunt, just stopped in our office (and bed room, living room, kitchennette, etc.) to ask about quaint Easter customs in our native country of Philadelphia, Pa. He's doing a column on strange, foreign Easter customs.

• • • •

Come to think of it, we have some peculiar customs here in America, at the Easter season. There's that curious rite which many Easterners religiously observe of turning out on the Atlantic City board-walk on Easter Day, in their new Spring feathers, to parade before one another, and before the eyes and ears of the newspapers.

And the strange mania which Americans have for making bigger things than anybody else ever made has brought forth an annual crop of fifty-pound chocolate Easter eggs, which won't do anyone much good (least of all the U.S. president, in whose mail-box most of these monstrosities end up.)

• • • •

Another old practice is the quaint custom we've heard prevails at some colleges of giving the students a day or two vacation from classes at Easter.

• • • •

There is at least one commercial practice which we feel has no place in the true Easter observation. That is the practice of selling over the counters of our stores tiny live chicks and rabbits, to be used as playthings by small children. Dyeing the chicks Easter-egg hues does not improve the situation any, either, in our opinion.

• • • •

One of the Easter customs which has been growing greatly in popularity in our country is that of attending Easter morning sunrise services, often held out-doors. Many of these services are attracting thousands of people each year. In spite of the apparent danger of such services having more spectacular than spiritual appeal, there seems to be no question about their worthwhileness. The very fact that so many people are willing to get up so early on Easter morning to attend a service commemorating the resurrection of Jesus, is a good sign, regardless of such other factors as love of spectacle.

TALK OF THE WEEK . By Arlene Phelps

Quality Street

Other members of the cast include Jean Hutchison as Miss Willoughby, Kitty Bennett as Miss Fanny, Frank Hunter as the sergeant, Esther McCollum as Patty, Mary Clark Caldwell as Henrietta, Dot Depue as Isabella, Betty Wield as Tompson, Melvin Johnson as Ensign Blades, Linda Robinson as Charlotte, Betty Felix as Harriet, J. Holman as Spicer, John Ballinger as an old soldier, All Rosser as Callant, and also Dot Firth, Jane Robinson, Glenn McAfee, Peggy Carter, and Bill Walker.

"Quality Street" is a drama based on the courtship of Valentine Brown of Miss Phoebe Throssel. Miss Phoebe has a great dread of being an old maid and as a result almost changes the dictates of polite society by pursuing Valentine Brown. Miss Susan, Phoebe's old maid sister, further complicated things by her forwardness in trying to better her sister's cause. The humor and drama of the play combine to make it one of James M. Barrie's most successful productions.

The play is being staged by Tommy Stahl. Stone Norton and Dot Quass are in charge of the advertising and are being assisted by John Ballinger. Costume manager is Elizabeth Stone, who is assisted by Nina Clark and William Felknor is business manager and Harriet Barber and Jean McCammon are assistant business managers.

Tickets for the play are on sale every afternoon in the lobby of Thaw hall at 3:00 and also in the lobby of Pearsons hall each evening after dinner. Tickets will be on sale after Monday in the YWCA store.

Easter Services

service become that people come from great distances to take part in it, oftentimes waiting all night to secure seats.

In case of rain, the service will be held in Voohees chapel at the same time.

Vesper services in the evening will also be in charge of Dr. Stevenson. At this service, new robes for the A Capella choir will be worn for the first time. The vestments are Coblin Blue Burton's Irish Poplin with highest grade broadcloth collars. Women will wear egg shell cottas with blue velvet four-cornered hats. Men's vestments will be bound at the waist with girdles. The director's robe is of blue velvet.

Special music will be furnished by a violin group playing the Bach-Gounod Ave Maria. The choir will sing two numbers, the first, Mozart's Alleluia in F., the second, "Alleluia Christ is Risen." A candle light processional and recessional will open and close the service.

Oregon Style Debate Against Waynesburg

Monday evening at seven o'clock in the philosophy classroom a debate team from Waynesburg, Indiana, will meet three Maryville debaters in a humorous debate. The subject will be on swing music.

The debaters from Waynesburg visit Maryville nearly every year and hold a humorous debate. The last time they were here two years ago, they met a women's tea mon the subject of Dutch dating. Oregon stayle will be used with three debaters on each side and cross-questioning.

The Waynesburg team is on its way south to the Grand Eastern tournament.

Solos At Triangle Club

Triangle club members are promised an outstanding program Tuesday evening at Bartlett hall when a Little Artist Series will be presented featuring students of the Fine Arts departments. Eloise McNeilly and Helen Rose McWilliams have signed contracts to sing; Margaret Halsey and Louise Marshall are billed as pianists. No formal dinner will be held. The meeting is scheduled for 6:45.

Play At French Club

At the French club meeting, Wednesday evening, April 12, a play entitled "Nicette" will be presented. Ruth Moore is directing the play, and David Kidder, Margaret Hodges, Mark Davis, and Stanley Bird are to take part in the entertainment which was planned by the program committee composed of Louise Curtis and Irma Sue Pate. The meeting will be held in Alpha Sigma hall at 6:45.

SPRING FANTASY

Ah! The sunshine, the flowers peeping their lofely little heads from amidst the dew . . . bliss. . . yes, just quietly.

Unable to sleep on such a day throbbing with the sap of sweet springtime as it were, we seek refuse in the arms of our poetic bent.

You too shall share our revels among the little metres and trochees:

DIAMOND IN THE ROUGH

I, for one, refuse to become too downcast over the not-so-torrid showing of the current Highlander baseball team. On every hand one hears that Maryville hasn't a chance this year with the team's present personnel. Maybe that's right.

But some of those who are howling loudest are those who either forget the lousy start we made two years ago, or they weren't here then. I mean the season when the Honakermen started off with the momentum of a stricken Stepinfetchit, losing about seven of their first ten games, then perked up in the heat of the conference race to take the title going away.

Not that they should be expected to do the same thing this year. I doubt it. But give them a chance to prove they can't. They're under the tutelage of a coach who has been confronted by the same problem every spring for about a fifth of a century. And only two or three times in that stretch has a team of his finished out of the money.

It's true Coach Honaker hasn't as many ball players this year as he has had at various times in the past. Some of those he does have should be guarded when they are sent into the field. But they'll get over it. That is, with a minimum of griping and a little more encouragement behind them, they will.

"Quality Street"—April 14

HOW DID IT HAPPEN?

There comes, via chapel announcement, the gladsome news that Bob Thrower's track crew ran neck and neck with the potent Davidson Wildcats yesterday, 62-62.

We don't know as yet just how it happened. Somebody must have run, jumped, or slid a little farther than he ever did before. At least none of us was aware of the fact we had a team capable of challenging one of the South's topnotch outfits so early in the season.

Regardless of how it happened yesterday's result is a noisy challenge to the supremacy of Tennessee's Vols in state collegiate cinder competition.

Maryville Nine To Play Alcoa Team

Lumber Workers Team Is Given High Rating In Amateur Circles

The Bond-Woolf baseball team of the Bond-Woolf Lumber company in Alcoa will furnish the opposition in today's game against the Maryville Scots. Managed by B. B. Woolf, the Alcoans are one of the entries this year in the Knoxville Manufacturers League, rated one of the strongest amateur circuits in East Tennessee.

The team is composed of Blount County boys who have starred in local college or other amateur competition. The personnel, according to a Maryville paper, is as follows:

Catchers: Wade Headrick, Hal Huffaker, and Clyde Crouse.

Pitchers: Marvie Myers, Quentin Hill, and Lefty McPherson.

Infielders: Lefty Byerly, J. D. Davis, John Henry, Earl Kennedy, Arch Lee, and Rual Nichols.

Outfields: Labe Gregory, Ed Evans, Esrom Lee, Sutton, and Stewart.

The Scot lineup will be about the same as that which downed Franklin. At least it will suffer only minor variations, since the reserves are somewhat less than plentiful.

It will be the fourth start of the season for the Scotties, who have a tie and two wins to their credit so far in games of dubious significance.

French Costumes To Be Shown April 15-19

An exhibition of French peasant costumes, facsimiles of water colors of French regional costumes, will be shown from April 15-19 in the art studio, third floor Anderson annex. These reproductions have been secured thru the cooperation of the Regasus Press of New York City, and are circulated by the American Federation of Arts.

There are 16 reproductions in color from the original water colors, which were done by Gratione de Gardilanne and Elizabeth W. Moffat, who searched through France, visiting small villages, and observing the peasant costumes of all occasions. "The drawings were presented to the Metropolitan Museum, to establish an authentic reference collection for the benefit of artists, designers, costumers, theatrical producers and students."

These maquettes are from many French provinces: L'Alsace, L'Auvergue, La Bourgogne, La Brefagne, La Guyenne, La Saintonge, La Vavoire. Some are from French museums.

An exhibition of contemporary American painting from the Students Art League of New York city will be exhibited in the art gallery soon, and will include work done by students and associates of the league.

Scotties Trounce Franklin 9 To 8

Honaker Pitches Five Hit Game As Team Makes Twelve Errors

The Maryville college baseball nine defeated Franklin college of Indiana's "Grizzlies" of the diamond by the score of 9-8 last Tuesday afternoon.

Scott Honaker pitched the entire game allowing only 5 hits and 2 walks. The Maryville moundsman struck out eight Franklin batters, which might be considered a pretty good record for his first game on the mound this season.

The home team showed an inkling of punch at the plate, and if it be fighting spirit, which is found in most Honaker coached teams grows in this one, in all probability the 1939 Maryville nine will be a winning one.

However, before any team can win many ball games, a better showing at field than that displayed by the Highlanders is necessary. In the Franklin game 12 errors were chalked up against the Scotties. Also several batted balls which might have become outs went for hits because infielders and outfielders were not on their toes. Considerable improvement over the team's showing at field of last Tuesday must be made before games will be won in the future. Perhaps this poor showing was due to the cold weather, or because it is still early in the season; but whatever the cause may be we know, the coach knows, and the team knows something must be done about it.

Juniors-Seniors Baseball Champs

The junior-senior baseball team of the women's point system defeated the freshmen last Thursday afternoon 18-12, thus winning the tournament for the baseball season. The sophomores were subdued by the junior-seniors the week before in an eight inning game, 11-8.

On Tuesday the sophomores won over the freshmen 8-7. All three games were well played, and the game between the freshmen and junior-seniors was tied at the end of the fifth inning. Three extra innings were played before the tie was broken.

Junior Class Swimming Team Scores Easy Win In Big Interclass Swim Meet

Barbara McCutcheon And Tom Taylor Star For Juniors; Dot Quass And S. K. Taylor Take Diving Honors; Bill Hedrick, Scores Lone Frosh Win

Last Saturday evening the swimming team of the Class of '40 overwhelmed the teams of the other classes by making a clean sweep in all events of the Interclass Swim Meet except three. McCutcheon of the girls' team, and Tom Taylor of the boys' team proved outstanding for the juniors by placing first in two and three events respectively.

The first event of the evening was the 75 yd. girls' medley relay, and it was won by the girls of the junior-senior team. The 150 yd. medley relay for boys was won by the members of the junior class, with the freshman team's entries taking second. Palmer Mayo stopped the win streak of the juniors with his splendid performance in the 50 yd. dash for boys. Mayo is a member of the senior class.

The juniors swam back into the win column in the next event when McCutcheon took first place in the 50 yd. backstroke event for girls. Tommy Taylor then displayed remarkable endurance in the 200 yd. freestyle event by trailing Jack Burns, the freshman entry, until the last two laps, at which time Taylor spurted to a win.

The next event, diving, was won by Quass of the junior girls' team, and S. K. Taylor of the class of '39. Except for the performances of the two winners, this event might well have been listed as the novelty event of the event. Such grace, such rare form, such splendid coordination of body in air has never been witnessed before by Maryville spectators. We also might add that such landings never before have been made on the surface of the Maryville pool (if one can make landings on water.)

Knighton of the junior girls' team splashed off with the honors in the 50 yd. breastroke event, and to cease the monotony of the junior wins Bill Hedrick of the freshmen pulled a win over brother Gail in the 50 yd. backstroke event. Quass and Taylor, both of the junior class, then took the 50 yd. girls' freestyle and 50 yd. boys' breastroke events respectively. A win by the boys over the girls in the 100 yd. relay concluded the meet.

The swimming meet was sponsored by the swimming team, and was under the direction of Coach Gillingham and Gordon Findlay.

Highlanders Tie Hiwassee Tigers

'Neath a bleak sky, and with a chilling breeze blowing across the diamond, the Maryville baseballers played a seven inning tied score game with Hiwassee college last Monday afternoon. The score was 14-14, and as it suggests the game was filled with errors by both teams.

Nig Wilburn and Wiezalis, moundsmen of Maryville, were batted over the field. Errors were marked alongside the names of every man in the infield of the Scotty nine, and were it not for the same poor showing on the mound and afield by the Hiwassee team there might have been a different outcome to the game.

Weather conditions might have been blamed for the pitching difficulties and also for the poor fielding, but this excuse won't hold water much longer. Let's hope excuses will be unnecessary by the time the first conference game rolls around.

YM Elections

terman in swimming, vice president of Alpha Sigma society.

The new secretary, Thomas, is a junior from Carbondale, Pa., and has been treasurer of the YMCA for the past year, as well as president of the Student Volunteer group, a member of Athenian literary society, the ministerial association, and he has had important parts in several of the college plays.

Baldwin, from Petersburg, Va., is the new treasurer. He is a member of Athenian literary society, student assistant in the college book store, and was treasurer of his freshman class.

Advisory board member from the class of '42, Orr is from Nashville, Tenn. He is an apprentice on the Highland Echo staff and is a member of the vesper choir.

At the annual business meeting of the association a motion was passed to refer to the new administration the question of the nominating and electing of officers for the Y. All amendments to the constitution, printed on the ballots, were passed.

The next year's administration will be installed on Sunday evening, May 7, in Voorhees chapel.

Major Cards And Guide Sheets Given Freshmen

Major cards were given to the freshmen Wednesday morning after chapel. Guide sheets on "Choosing a Major" were also given to the students. Arrangements have been made for consultations at the personnel and curriculum offices and the heads of the twenty-one departments. The major card must be signed by the major professor and filed at the personnel office by May 1. All freshmen are asked to sign cards even though they do not expect to return next year. The results of the vocational interest tests are being compiled and will be given soon.

Choir Robes

affairs today reminds me of another experience. I was alive when the Armistice was signed. Perhaps I could even help some history student with my store of knowledge.

But enough of world affairs. What seems important to me now is Easter. Last Friday, I sat up in the choir loft for the last time as a choir member's robe. Somehow this time of the year will always stand out in my memory. I'm looking forward to the Sunrise Service tomorrow morning, and will be waiting to get up bright and early. I hope I will not undergo a drenching like I did last Easter, but it was worth it even then. I always have enjoyed the music of Eastertime.

Yes, as I look back over my life, it is without regret. I've had my fun along with the more serious things in life. I took quite a bit of pleasure in tripping people once in a while and turning wrong side out when someone was in a hurry to put me on. Sometimes I even managed to make my snaps and hooks elusive to the fingers of the choir members to whom I have belonged. It has all been in fun, however, and I have tried to serve my best in the last twenty-two years, and I will be willing to serve as long as my seams hold together. It is without selfishness, although with a little regret, that I give up my duties to the new choir robes, which I hear are going to replace me tomorrow night, and I hope they will enjoy life as much as I have.

"Which Way, America" Will Be Theme Of IRC

"Which Way, America" will be the theme of the International Relations club meeting next Thursday evening at 6:45 in Thaw hall.

Talks of the evening will center around the modern American trend in government in relation with the other countries of the world. Etta Culbertson will speak on the "Foreign Policy of the Present Administration"; Marianna Allen will discuss "The Defence Policy"; John Thompson, "Isolation vs. Internationalism"; and Hilton Wick, "Our Future Foreign Policy."

YWCA To Hold Candle Light Installation Sun.

On Sunday evening after the vesper service the YWCA will have a candle light installation service for the new officers and cabinet. The service will be held in the chapel. Both the old and the new cabinets and members of the organization will participate.

There will be no YWCA meeting Sunday afternoon.

Musical Program at Bain.

On Saturday night Bainonian will present a "Song Lyric Detective" program. Helen Rose Mac Williams will sing, accompanied by Frances Stewart on the piano. Lucette de Barrett will play a piano solo and Elizabeth Moore will be the commentator for the evening.

Russell Stevenson To Address YMCA

Russell Stevenson, newly elected president of the YMCA, will address the group at the organization's regular weekly meeting tomorrow afternoon. Taking as his text, Philippians 3:21. Stevenson will build his brief discussion around the words, "He is Able," which he takes as his topic for the occasion.

Those in charge of the society's programs are planning to have Dr. Clifford Barber as a speaker at one of the April meetings. Dr. Barber, leader of the 1938 February Meetings, is a most effective speaker, and the meeting at which he may take part should prove to be one of unusual interest.

Another tentative program being anticipated for one of the April meetings is an all musical program to be arranged by Erwin Ritzman and Vernon Lloyd, musical directors of the association.

Three German Teachers Visit Campus Wednesday

Three professors of German were visitors on our campus Wednesday. One of them was Dr. William Rodemann of Knoxville college. He is an instructor of German and Latin in that institution. He is a linguist of distinct ability because he has a speaking and writing knowledge of five languages and a reading knowledge of ten languages. Dr. Rodemann has done a large amount of translation for textbooks. He was accompanied by Mrs. Rodemann. The other two gentlemen are professors of German at Albright college in Reading, Pa. One of the ladies of the group has been in America for only six months. She is delighted with America and Americans. The visitors seemed to enjoy their brief visit. They were especially impressed by the beauty of the college woods. It was a real pleasure to have such interesting guests on the Hill.

Heater Causes Minor Fire In Baldwin Hall

A minor fire occurred in Baldwin hall Tuesday evening when the window curtains in Katherine Ogilvie and Betsy Gaultney's room ignited from an alcohol heater. Ralph Irwin, college night watchman, Gordon Findlay, and Lamar Russell rushed to the hall when they saw the flare of light in the third floor window. Findlay and Russell went up the fire escape and threw the curtains from the window.

The city fire department was called but the fire had been extinguished by the time the engines arrived. Little damage was done by the flames.

Maryville Debates B-S

Tommy Woolf and Robert Lamont, members of the Maryville debate team, took part in a non-decision debate held here Monday evening with a negative team from Birmingham-Southern university of Birmingham, Ala.

The visiting team, which went from here to Emory-Henry for their next debate are on a tour that will take them as far as Washington. The debate here was the first on their trip. George Webster presided at the meeting.

"Don Quixote", Eight-Reel Moving Picture To Be Shown Here April 5

On Saturday evening, April 15, a new type of campus entertainment is to be sponsored by the social committee. An eight-reel movie entitled "Don Quixote" will be shown. The characterization of the deluded idealist of Cervantes' great classic is so succesfully portrayed in this film that it is considered one of the year's best productions. Comedy, tragedy, and satire are intermingled in this tale of the mad cavalier who threw himself headlong into revolving windmill blades, who sought knightly commissions from a group of actors whom he believed to be royalty, and who tried tragically to remain dignified under humiliating circumstances. Don Quixote sings very beautifully the aria, "Sierra Nevada."

In addition to this feature two short films will be shown. "Down in Dixie" is a comedy which has won popular approval at previous showings, and "Brahm's Waltz in A Flat" is a musical interlude which will win the approval of all. Such a varied program has the prospects of being one of our most entertaining Saturday evenings this year. An admission fee of only five cents is to be charged.

"Unicorn and the Fish" At Athenian Tonight

"Unicorn and Fish," a one-act comedy play starring Muriel Mann, William Gehres, Louise Allen, Melvin Johnson and Quentin Myers will be the feature of the Athenian literary society program tonight at 6:45 in the Athenian hall. "Unicorn and Fish" is the story of the troubles of an adolescent girl who falls in love with an important young man of the hour. It is one of the best of the season.

Eugene Reid will give the invocation to the program and Clifford Proctor will act as critic. John Thompson will deliver the benediction. Athenian urges all members to be present.

Skit And Swing Band At Theta-Alpha Sigma

Alpha Sigma will be host to Theta Epsilon this evening at 6:45 in the philosophy classroom. A melodramatic skit, part of "The Drunkard," will be presented by Jimmy Rich, Art Byrne, Gordon Bennett, George Tibbetts, and Gordon Findlay. Jimmy Rich will take the part of the Mama; George Tibbetts, the Papa. Art Byrne, president of Alpha Sig, will play "Little Julia," while Gordon Bennett will be the villain.

The "Swingsters", a six piece orchestra, will play novelty numbers on the program and after the skit.

Play Given At Evening Meeting Of Ed. Class

The History of Education class, 203 bx, taught by Dr. Newell T. Preston, held a night meeting Tuesday evening in the philosophy classroom. The board of playwrights, composed of members of the class, has been writing and producing plays in class depicting education in different periods of history. The play presented Tuesday evening, entitled "Paradise Tavern", gave a view of education in the Renaissance period.

The members of the board include Steve Amos, Helen Bewley, Anne Biggs, Aline Campbell, and Carol Dawn Ward. Following the play refreshments were served in the Y rooms.

Cast Gives Fine Performance In "Quality Street"

Alpha Sigma-Theta Epsilon Bid For Dramatic Cup Well Received

A large audience assembled in Voorhees chapel last night to witness the performance of the Theta Epsilon-Alpha Sigma midwinter play, James M. Barrie's "Quality Street."

As the curtain was drawn much of what was to be the epitome of the play was immediately revealed. The blue and white room in the house on Quality street in an English country town, and the two sisters who are its inhabitants, are emblematic of the types which Barrie seems to have wished to portray. Almost as much as Sinclair Lewis' characters in "Main Street" fulfill their title, do these proper, conventionalized ladies of quality embody the name of their environment. This is felt throughout the play. From the time when we hear Muriel Mann, in the role of the young and beautiful sister, Miss Phoebe Throssel, divulge the horrible secret that she has been kissed, and when we are startled to hear her old maid sister, Miss Susan, exclaim in joyful curiosity at the exposure, we can see that innate in the play is the struggle between propriety and the desires for what these ladies would think to be uninhibited and natural action.

David Heydinger, in his debut in Maryville dramatics, gave an exceedingly distinctive and graceful interpretation of the role of the large but gentle gentleman-turned-soldier, Valentine Brown, who, if he were not so thoroughly grounded on valid worth, would like to be a swashbuckling hero. Heydinger was particularly successful in this combination of the characteristics of virtue, gentleness and the desire for virile military heroism.

Muriel Mann gave a veteran's performance in the part of the spirited, gay, and charming younger sister, Phoebe. The role employs a well-known device, that of being oneself and of impersonating another and imaginary character, and is thus rendered particularly difficult. Miss Mann's interpretation was best suited to the lighter and more vivacious phases of the character.

Results Released On Questionnaire

The results of the social committee questionnaire which was distributed to the students several weeks ago in an effort to obtain student reaction and opinion on the social program of the campus have been tabulated for reference by the committee.

Erwin Ritzman, chairman of the committee, released the facts that student opinion favors the same number of formal dinners and approves more than one formal dinner in the same month if more than one special occasion should arise. Popular and semi-classical music was the choice for background music with no exception made as to what type of program follows. As to a program in addition to the background music there was little difference one way or the other. The score on this question tied.

An almost unanimous decision was given to the idea of special table decorations at the Christmas season.

Concerning social functions a large majority desired some function planned every Saturday night, and there did not appear to be any feeling on the part of the students that the present social program interfered at all with the societies.

The questions on various games which the social committee might purchase, suggestions of types of entertainment that would be feasible for general college affairs, and criticisms of the whole social program produced many helpful aids which the committee can use and pass on to future committees.

Two Pianos Purchased

Two pianos were ordered from Krakauer Brothers, piano manufacturers in New York city, last Wednesday for immediate delivery. The pianos are upright models of colonial design and are finished in mahogany. They will be used for practice by the Fine arts department.

Stevenson Names His YM Cabinet For Coming Year

Stanley Bird Appointed As Manager Of Y Store For '39-'40

Russell Stevenson, newly-elected YM CA president, announced the organization's cabinet for the coming year, following the meeting of the advisory board which approved the appointments Wednesday evening.

Stevenson announced that Stanley Bird had been chosen manager of the YMCA store for the 1939-40 school year, the appointment being subject to approval by the faculty student-help committee. Allan Moore was chosen for the lyceum position on the cabinet. His duties will consist of acting as the Y's representative on the artist series staff. Frank Brink, this year's publicity director was re-appointed to this post, where he is in charge of publicity for the routine activities of the Y and of the makeup of the Y's page in the Chilhowean. Arthur Peterson was announced as the new maintenance director, in which capacity he supervises all the organization's property and is in charge of the game and reading rooms. Bill Baird and Vernon Lloyd have been assigned to the fellowship committee which is in charge of the annual opening-week pow-wow, the annual Y hikes, and special men's banquets through the year.

The Community work committee is composed of Stanley Menning and David Kidder, whose duties will consist of weekly visits to the orphanage, special activities for the children at the orphanage, and work with the Hi-Y clubs in the local high schools. George Hunt, Paul Brown, Sam Cornelius and Charles Orr will make up the important Worship committee which plans the regular weekly meetings and various special activities during the year. Because of the increased size and importance of the YMCA sports program, the Athletic committee, formerly composed of only two men, has been augmented to three, Phil Evaul, Clem Hahan, and Gillis McKinnon.

Dr. Collins Invited To Read Original Paper At Teachers' Association

Dr. Ralph S. Collins, associate professor of French and German, went to Nashville last Saturday, where, at the annual luncheon meeting of the Tennessee Chapter of the American Association of Teachers of German, he read his original paper, "Hermann Bahr—Die Mutter, a play of the Decadence."

The invitation to read his paper before the association in Nashville was a distinctive honor to Dr. Collins, since it it the second time he has read it before an association devoted to the advancement of languages. Its first reading was before the fifty-fifth annual meeting of the Modern Language association, held in New York City, Dec. 28-30, 1939.

"Hermann Bahr—Die Mutter, a play of the Decadence" discusses the play as a definite part of the Decadence movement in Germany—a movement which Dr. Collins defines as "a negative evaluation of the forces of civilization and culture, in which the progressive differentiation and refinement of man's soul and feelings are considered signs of decay."

Tracing the Decadence from its early background, mentioning Rousseau, Montesquieu, and Gibbon of the eighteenth century, and Byron, Heine, and Nietzche of the early nineteenth, the paper brings the movement like an ever-increasing mountain stream down through Schopenhauer's pessimistic philosophy and the positive expression of the French poet, Baudeliaire, to the momentous currents of the present day status of the movement.

Debaters Leave For Eastern Tournament At Winthrop College

Two women and three men debaters left Thursday morning for Winthrop college, Rock Hill, N. C., to attend the Grand Eastern Forensic tournament. Representing the women for Maryville are Harriet Miller and Arda Walker; the men are Otto Pflanze, Clifford Proctor, and Arnold Kramer. The tournament lasted from Thursday noon through today, and the debaters plan to return late this evening.

Although the primary purpose of the trip was training in debate, the Maryville team entered other contests including Walker and Kramer in oratory; Pflanze in extempore and harangue; Proctor in harangue; Walker in harangue; and Miller and Proctor in after-dinner speaking. The three men alternated in debating.

Any team east of the Mississippi was eligible to enter this tournament. The champion debaters for the women in last year's contest from Arkansas State Teachers college were visitors on the campus last week. Louisiana state men debaters won first in the '38 tournament.

"Don Quixote", Feature Length Film, And Two "Shorts" Shown Tonight

This evening at 8:15 in the chapel the social committee will sponsor an eight reel movie, "Don Quixote," and two short films. "Don Quixote" is the story of a mad cavalier whose many adventures introduce comedy, tragedy, and satire into the tale. He is the prominent character of Cervantes' great classic, and the film is considered one of the best productions of the year. The hero sings the aria "Sierra Nevada", and seeks knightly commissions from a group of actors whom he believes to be royalty. He is brought into humiliating circumstances in his headlong adventures.

"Brahm's Waltz in A Flat" and "Down in Dixie" are the two short films which will be shown. The first is a musical interlude which is very popular; "Down in Dixie", the second short, is a comedy.

In bringing this new type of entertainment to the campus, the social committee is considerably broadening its program, and if this proves successful, it will be probably followed by more.

THERE—AND HERE?

AN EDITORIAL

Last week THE DAVIDSONIAN, newspaper of an outstanding denominational college, carried the story of the investigation of a secret political combine, whose purpose was to swing elections and manage affairs in general on the campus. It is an incontestable fact that the college mentioned above is not alone in having its illegal political combine. A school is not to be scorned for possessing such a group of students who, under cover of their hyprocritical pretensions, dictate to campus organizations and produce miraculous results through despicable methods; such students exist in every college, in varying degrees of organization. However, any school which would complacently sit back and allow such an organization to continue, to grow, and to flourish—in spite of repeated suspicions, rumors, and evidences of its existence—must be judged as lacking the initiative and fortitude necessary to expose it.

Now let us take a case in point. With no great imagination let us examine how such an organization, working secretly and insidiously, might function here at Maryville college. Of course in the absence of recognized social fraternities at Maryville, such a combine here would be forced to take the form of a single composite organization. For instance, the organization might be composed of about twenty members—the usual proportion of such groups. Then, let us assume that these twenty men might control through obvious means the attitudes of as many women, and many other friends. There we see that we have a significant proportion of the student body, who, because of their allegiance to the organization first, and the unbiased good of the students last, will vote solidly on any issue.

What about the rest of the students? They, shall we say, are entirely unconscious of the secret society. Strange things happen, but cleancut students regard them as inexplicable phenomena. The society grows for many years—let us say fifteen—having by that time a powerful alumni body. It is fed during all these years at the expense of unwitting students, who only remark that, "You just never can tell about elections—they're funny things." If a rank outsider is elected to an important office, the society hastens to bring him into the fold; he is approached with the laudable aims, attractive activities, great alumni and good football players of the society, with perhaps a passing hint of possible political advantages which might accrue. Most men, being human, succumb. And so another is added to the uncongenial crew whose common bond is group self-advancement.

Now let us glance at the effects which such an organization could have here at Maryville. You can readily see. May Queen elections, Barnwarming elections, class elections, athletic contests, Athletic Board, journalistic setups, Student Council, lucrative committees—all these and many minor issues could definitely be controlled, year after year, ever increasingly, by this society. It is a tribute to the very nature of the Y's, the Student Volunteers, and the Ministerial association, that they would remain untouched.

Although we are shocked, we suddenly realize that even here at Maryville, when we think about it, we can see evidences of the possibilities of just such an organization.

We salute the spirit of the students of Davidson college in their repudiation of such an incubus. And we are sure that we may compliment the Maryville student body to this extent: that if they were ever warned of the existence of such a group here on this campus, they would repudiate it in just as decisive manner. It would always be too bad for the few who were exposed, but an entire student body can not sit back with the tolerant, helplessly do-nothing-about-it attitude which some might have, and let it add more years and more power to its cumulative control.

Dr. Campbell Reads On Pre-Civil War Banking At Historical Society

Dr. Claude A. Campbell read a paper entitled "Branch Banking in Tennessee Prior to the Civil War" at a meeting of the Tennessee Historical society held April 7, at the Andrew Johnson hotel in Knoxville.

Dr. Campbell pointed out that the economic principles involved in branch banking were often pushed aside in the period before the war to give place to the political issues attending the banking system. Prior to the Civil War there were seven branch banks in this state. The state was in partial stockholder in three of these banks and the sole stockholder in two.

Dr. Campbell said that branch banking was at its height in Tennessee in the decade between 1820 and 1830, and again between 1838 and 1860. The facilities of the system provided adequate currency for carrying on agriculture, industry, and government, during the period of its existence.

Allen Places First And Arda Walker Second In Oration Competition

Marianna Allen, sophomore from Knoxville, and a religious education major, was the winner of the first prize of $43.00 in the T. T. Alexander contest held in chapel last Wednesday morning. The subject of her winning oration was "The Atonement for Sin."

Second prize of $27.00 was won by Arda Walker, a local junior, who has been prominent in forensic activities during her college career. Her subject was also atonement. Jean Naberhuis, freshman from Florida, won the third prize of $10.00, with her oration of "The Diety of Jesus Christ."

Judges of the oratorical contest were Superintendent Brewer of Maryville public schools; Rev. C. V. Marley, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Greenback, Tenn.; and Rev. Paul Dickerson, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Fort Sanders, Knoxville.

Athenians Plan Complete Social Reorganization

Change Of Constitution To Be Discussed Tonight At Meeting

A report of the committee for reorganizing Athenian literary society and redecorating Athenian hall was presented at last week's meeting and will be discussed at the meeting tonight. In brief the new reports of the committee embrace the following proposals: that the purpose of the society be changed from a literary to a social one; in keeping with this, that the name be changed from "Athenian Literary Society" to "Athenian"; that the society should adopt a more formal plan for admission and initiation of new members into the society; that the organization be put on a sound financial basis with an annual budget and restrictions against incurrance of debts; and that the constitution be brought up to date in content and wording. Proposals for remodeling of Athenian hall included; new curtains for the windows; cleaning of the wall paper by members of the society; the moving of the rostrum to the opposite end of the hall to eliminate disturbance caused by the arrival of late comers; removal of the present carpet and finishing of the floors during the summer; new picture frames; a new portrait of Athena; and replacing of the present window above the door by one reading Athenian." It was suggested that Athenian ask a standard rent fee from groups meeting in Athenian hall to meet expenses in upkeep. A copy of the new constitution was also read.

Tonight's meeting will be one of the most important since the organization of the society in 1868, and will be for the purpose of discussion and possible

Scholastic Honor Society To Hear Tennessee Dean

Alpha Gamma Sigma Holds Annual Recognition Day Exercises

Alpha Gamma Sigma, the Maryville college honorary scholastic society, will hold its annual recognition ceremonies in chapel on Tuesday morning. The society recently elected eleven members of the senior class to membership. The recognition day speaker this year will be Dean Fred Smith of the University of Tennessee and of the university graduate school. Dean Smith came to Tennessee two years ago from Harvard, where he was active in work along the lines of vocational guidance. His particular interest is in this field and he is often speaker at various vocational guidance groups throughout the country. The speaker has been at Maryville before, having addressed the faculty club last year.

This is the second year that the society has secured the services of a nationally known speaker, since Dean Mims of Vanderbilt university addressed the group in the ceremonies last year.

Students Attend Concert

Forty-four Maryville students went to Knoxville in two buses last Thursday evening to attend the concert of Lily Pons, famous Metropolitan coloratura soprano, given in the University of Tennessee gymnasium. A number of other students, and members of the faculty went by automobile.

Miss Pons was accompanied by the well known American pianist and composer, Frank LaForge.

Justus Selected Queen Of Annual May Day Fete

Miss Ruth Thompson Added To Directors With West, Queener

At a meeting of the senior class in the chapel yesterday morning, Marguerite Justus, a senior from Knoxville, was chosen Queen of the annual May Day exercises, to be held in the amphitheatre in the college woods. She was elected over the opposition of Virginia Lee Shaeffer and Lois Barnwell, this year's Barnwarming queen and Band Sponsor, respectively, who according to custom will serve as personal attendants to the queen.

The junior class, meeting in the chapel Wednesday morning, elected James Etheredge and Barbara Anderson as their representatives in the fete. Although no other members of the royal court have been selected, the sophomore and freshman classes will choose their attendants during the first part of the week. The nominees of the sophomore class are Mary Orr, Helen Warwick, Ruth Andrews, Dale Russell, Tom Cragan, and Warren Van Blarcom. The freshman class has nominated Linda Robinson, Marian Northup, Marion Birmingham, and Tom Whittaker.

May Day this year, as in years past, will be under the experienced direction of Mrs. Nita E. West, assisted by Mrs. Evelyn Queener, with the added assistance of a new member of the directorial staff, Miss Ruth Thompson. The pageant will depict the Forest of Arden as portrayed by Shakespeare in "As You Like It." The queen and her retinue will visit the forest and will meet there the well known characters of Touchstone, Orlando, Rosalind, and Jaques, who will act as guides and entertainers to the royal party during its sojourn in the forest. The dances this year will be elaborate and interpretive of fantasy. They will conclude with the traditional may pole ceremony.

Unusual Exhibits At Baker Gallery

Two art exhibits of an unusual nature will be shown at the Baker art gallery and at the art studio from April 15-29. One will show French peasant costumes; the other, original contemporary painting.

The French peasant costumes are reproductions of water colors which were made for the Metropolitan Museum in New York city. Their purpose was to record the now almost extinct provincial peasant costumes of past times, to be used for reference by theatre producers, artists, students and other interested persons. These costumes are all highly colored in their original colors, care having been taken for exactness. This exhibition has been lent to the art department by the American Federation of Arts in Washington, D. C.

The second exhibition is of work done by students and associates of the Art Student League of New York city, one of the foremost art schools in the country. The pictures include water colors, etchings, engravings, woodcuts, lithographs, all executed by future artists, and are not reproductions. Dehn, a well-known water-colorist and an associate of the league, has one of his pictures exhibited. There are other pictures by well known artists who are also associates of the league. The work of many students also will be exhibited, showing their various abilities and accomplishments. This is one of the traveling exhibitions of the league, the pictures of which are offered for sale at a nominal price.

YWCA Program Sunday Based On Club's Name

The new YWCA program chairmen, Sara Lee Hellums and Margaret Knox, have planned for the regular Sunday meeting a program which is centered on the four words of the organization's title, Young Women's Christian Association.

The newly-elected treasurer, Edith Evans, will discuss the first word, "Young." The second will be discussed by Mary Orr, vice president; the third, by Jean White, secretary; and the fourth, by Ruth Crawford, Nu Gamma chairman. Alice Prime will sing "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say."

Choir Robes

The new choir robes, worn publicly for the first time during vespers last Sunday, helped greatly in making the candle-light service a most impressive occasion, and added much to the entire vesper program.

Those individuals who made it possible for the choir to be provided with such beautiful robes should have the gratitude of each of us. Incidentally, we should congratulate the choir itself, for its particularly good work during the Easter season. We have become so accustomed to hearing excellent performances by the choir that we seldom think to tell Mr. Colbert and his singers how much we appreciate their efforts.

"Don Quixote"

A few weeks ago the social committee presented to the students a questionnaire designed to provide the committee with information for better regulating the campus social program. Such attempts of the committee should be keenly appreciated by the student body. Before this committee began to function actively the social program was very limited, particularly in the case of Saturday evening entertainment. The way in which the committee has filled this rare period of freedom is a credit to its capabilities. Special formal dinner programs are also products of its activity. Last fall the committee, while raising its own expenses, presented under its auspices a most interesting dramatic performance, a duo-drama of Tudor England.

This evening the committee is sponsoring an eight reel moving picture adaptation of Cervantes' "Don Quixote", along with a musical and a comedy short. Besides the novelty of the program and its genuinely worthwhile character, this is also a move in the direction of group entertainment which lasts throughout an entire social period. Athenian's recent Kay Kyser musical quiz program is a notable example of this type of program. It seems that this kind of easy group entertainment is that which is best suited to our facilities and to the general student temperament. We hope that we shall have more of such programs in the immediate future, and we know that if we do, we may add this to our debt of gratitude to the social committee.

UP OUR HALL

By GEORGE L. HUNT

For over a month the Athenian society has had a committee working on the re-organization of its program and functions. Last week the chairman, Paul Brown, reported on the work that had been done, and the plans call for a new constitution, redecoration of the hall, and revitalized activity. The plan is to have a discussion of the proposals at tonight's meeting, dispensing with the usual program. To be worthwhile, however, the discussion will have to come from a large and representative part of the membership, so President McGill hopes that the lack of formal entertainment will not keep the members away.

Viewed in its larger sense, the plans to re-organize this one society can very well have an important effect on all four of the societies, for there is no doubting the fact that all need some change in their program as badly as does Athenian. There are many who sincerely feel that the societies should be abolished, with the rapid rise of the state, professional, and language clubs this year having absorbed many of the functions of the social fraternity. But there are many who do not want to see one year's apathy become the cause of abolishing a fine part of Maryville tradition. When the writer came here as a freshman, the society was a big thing in his introduction to college life. During the past two years it has declined in interest for him and for many others. Now that an attempt is being made to reform the organization, he is ready to climb on the bandwagon and do all he can to help the reformation along.

Activity must increase instead of decrease, especially when the new students come here in September. There have been rumors that the women's societies may abandon the rush week program; it is hoped they will not. Viewed from an upper classman's angle they are nothing but a lot of work, but viewed from the standpoint of a new student they mean a lot in getting adjusted to a college program. The men's societies would do well to have some such activity, making membership mean more than standing in front of the desk and being sworn in with no attempt at discrimination in membership. Some sort of initiation, some more binding terms of membership, and an active, well-planned year-round program are what are needed. It is hoped tonight's meeting of Athenian will produce some results in all the societies, or else we may have to conclude that those who propose dispensing with these organizations have the right idea.

There was a feature in the Sunday News-Sentinel on Mrs. John Walker, friend and benefactor of the college who lives at "Morningside" in the woods. It neglected to mention that she has but recently returned from California where a successful operation was performed on her eyes. In her late eighties, this fine friend and inspiring personality can now see, after having been partially blind for several years. She was at church on Good Friday evening and at the sunrise service Sunday morning.

Spring fever operates in much the same manner as the love potion Shakespeare was wont to use in his plays, for complication or uncomplication, as needed. The drinker of the potent potion fell madly in love with the first person he saw after drinking. Being stricken with spring fever has a similar effect: the sufferer is likely to fall in love with most anyone who happens along at the opportune time. Hence, for self-protection, men who feel the first twinges of spring fever should prevail upon loyal friends to keep them incarcerated until the crisis has passed.

Student Help Program Has Been Under "Miss Clemmie" For 21 Years

By ANNE GAMMON

Probably the first faculty member to be described in freshman letters sent home full of "impressions" is Miss Clemmie J. Henry. A large portion of each student generation has contact of some kind with Miss Henry. These newcomers are quickly impressed by the quiet helpfulness which she so readily offers. As the Director of the Student-Help department, she is able to provide the practical aid that many Maryvillians seek.

Miss Henry was born and reared in Maryville and has spent the greater part of her life in Blount County. After attending Maryville college for several years, she was employed as a teacher in Blount county, and later in the school system of Maryville. When she entered business, she spent her nights studying cost accounting and auditing. This knowledge was of practical use later in her career.

Miss Margaret Henry, a cousin of our Miss Henry, was the founder of the Student-Help department and gave herself to its work unreservedly. After her death in 1916, Dr. Samuel T. Wilson, then the college president, asked Miss Clemmie Henry to accept the position. At first she refused so great a responsibility. Later, in 1918, she decided to accept the position with the desire to consecrate herself to it as her predecessor had done. To this work Miss Henry brought all the capabilities of a winning personality.

Her new responsibilities included finding employment for students, raising funds for the department, and disposing loans and credit to students. Some recent statistics show the wide scope of the work of Miss Henry and her department. In 1937-38, 325 students received loans, and 527 students were employed by the college. The amount loaned was $39,000, and the amount paid to students employed on the campus totaled $30,700. An interesting fact is that of $29,000 loaned last year, all but $5000 had been paid back to the college by September, 1938.

In a survey made of the scholastic standing of employed students, it was discovered that in the past 3 years, 414 students were on the honor roll. Of these 414 students, 319 participated in the Student-Help program. Another important phase of Miss Henry's work is field work. Six to eight weeks are spent yearly in visiting people who might be interested in aiding the college financially. The realization of the responsibility of this position serves to deepen our respect for Miss Henry.

Miss Henry holds some sentiments that are very encouraging to the younger generation. She says, "Today's youth are more mature in business judgment. Students now take greater interest in planning their work and in using a budget than was done by former students. We are especially appreciative of the ready cooperation of the students." This cooperation is largly due to the fact that Miss Henry makes cooperation very pleasant.

This sympathetic attitude is easily understood when one understands that Miss Henry has daily contact with students and their problems.

"Quality Street"

In the role of Susan Throssel, Katherine Warren gave a performance which was outstanding. Due to the unexpected absence of Curtmarie Brown, to whom the part had been assigned originally, Miss Warren took over the role only a week ago. The characterization was full of possibilities and Miss Warren made the most of her diverse opportunities. As the timid, sheltered and retiring old maid who could arise to palpitating courageousness at the opening of a crisis, only to flee with the onrush of circumstances, her interpretation was notable.

Among the other characters, the work of the three gossiping "maiden ladies" of Quality street, was successfully characterized by Jean Hutchinson Katherine Bennett, and Mary Clarke Caldwell. In the part of Patty, the superannuated but still hopeful maid, Esther McCollum stood out among the minor characters. Melvin Johnson portrayed well the foppish upstart, Ensign Blades, and Franklin Hunter was well-bearded as the blustering recruiting sergeant. William Homan as Lieutenant Spicer, another fop, and Linda Robinson as the mouthing Harriet gave adequate performances.

Realistic staging and careful costuming, very necessary in the costume play, were helpful in making for a successful performance. This presentation, along with Bainonian-Athenian's earlier midwinter, "You Can't Take It With You," enter into competition for the annual award of the Theta Alpha Phi cup.

Miss Clemmie J. Henry Leaves For Washington To Attend DAR Meeting

Miss Clemmie J. Henry, director of the college student-help program, will leave tomorrow for Washington, D. C., where she will attend the annual Continental Congress of the D.A.R. Along with Mrs. Joe Edmondson and Mrs. Larry Rockfield, she will represent the Mary Blount chapter of the D.A.R. at the congress. On Thursday Robert Lindsay and Ruth Lloyd will go to Washington to attend the meetings of the C.A.R., which are held in conjunction with those of the women's group. Miss Lloyd will act as a page at the sessions of the organization and Lindsay will have the distinction of acting as the single color-bearer during the group's meetings. The Maryville representatives will return from Washington on the following Tuesday.

Athenian Reorganizes

acceptance of the new plans and constitution of the organization.

It is thought that in recent years, the expression of literary and forensic ability is found in groups organized for that purpose and that the Literary society is little needed in this capacity. It is for this reason that it was suggested that it's stated purpose be changed.

The first meeting for the reorganization of the society was held on March 15, at which time it was decided to call together the heads of the four societies, the YMCA, YWCA, and Student Council, as well as faculty representative, appointed by Dr. Lloyd, for discussion of the need for a readjustment in the whole social activity of the campus. Such a meeting was held on March 23 with Helen Bobo, president of YWCA, Weldon Baird, president of YMCA; Robert Martin, president of the Student Council; Mary Jo Husk, president of Bainonian; Bill Alston, president of Alpha Sigma; and Dr. E. R. Hunter, faculty advisor, present. At this meeting it was decided that a real problem exisits; that societies for the past few years have been on the decline; that social organizations often work in conflict with one another, events being scheduled for identical hours on the same night. It was decided that social calendars in the offices of Dr. Hunter, Dr. McClelland, Coach Honaker, and Mrs. Snyder were too many and should be limited to one authentic calendar. This has since been done. Another suggestion dealt with the work of the student council, the suggestion being that it should be empowered to intergrate extra-curricular activities. This was done with the possibility of the student council's being reorganized to be made up of less representatives from each class, with the presidents of each of the important campus organization automatically becoming members of this new student council. It would have authority to shape the policies of extra-curricular activities so that there would be less friction and conflict among them. Those present were asked to place the plans before their respective groups, at a meeting on April 3. Reports of the presidents showed the plan to have been well accepted.

SCOTTY SIDE SLANTS

By the
Sports Editor

VOLS Vs. SCOTS—

This afternoon, the Maryville thinly-clads are visiting the University of Tennessee in hopes of upsetting the dope and knocking the Tennessee Vols off the vaunted position they have held over the Highlanders for the past few years. The track team, coached by R. C. Thrower, was barely nosed out by one of the strongest teams in North Carolina, Davidson, last Friday. All indications point out that the Scotties have one of the strongest, if not the strongest track teams in many years.

Maryville is strongest in her runs, however, being weak in the field events, and it is here that the Vols will probably pick up quite a few points. Coach Thrower is depending upon Bob Sutton, a newcomer to Maryville this year, to pull a surprise and ease out a win over Bob Andridge in the 100 yard dash. To do this, Sutton will have to do some fancy steppin', for Andridge is reported to have run the century in 9.8 sec. in prep school. If Maryville can win over Tennessee (there goes that big if) it will be the first victory they have ever had over the Volunteers in track. This would also mean that the Scots will be a definite threat to cop the state title at the state meet, which will be held at Cookeville this year.

A REAL TEST

Next week the baseball team, which so far this year has come through in fine shape, faces its real test when Carson-Newman and Emory-Henry play two games each with the Honakermen. Monday Carson-Newman plays here and Wednesday and Thursday the Emory and Henry nine visits us for a two game series.

Saturday the Scots again go to Carson-Newman to even up the series with them. These games should give an indication of Maryville's strength and the possibility of their winning the SMC championship again.

INTERCLASS SPORTS

Interclass softball sponsored by the YMCA Athletic department, will officially begin Tuesday, April 18, announced Gene Orr. The games are to be played either on the fifth green of the golf course or the football practice field. Bats and balls may be obtained at the YMCA office and must be returned.

The schedule is as follows:

April 18 Seniors vs Frosh
April 21 Juniors vs. Sophs
April 22 Seniors vs Sophs
April 25 Juniors vs. Frosh
April 29 Seniors vs Juniors
May 6 Sophomores vs. Frosh
May 8 Seniors vs. Frosh
May9 Seniors vs. Sophs
May 10 Juniors vs Sophs
May 11 Juniors vs. Frosh
May 13 Seniors vs Juniors
May 15 Sohps vs. Frosh

If any of these games is rained out it is to be played the next day, if possible.

Scot Cindermen Face Vols Today

In an effort to give the track team of the University of Tennessee her first defeat by a Maryville squad, Coach R. C. Thrower is taking every available man to the Volunteers track this afternoon. Last week, the lack of conditioned men spelled one of the reasons for the Highlander's defeat at the hands of the Davidson Wildcats.

In an attempt to allay Maryville's weakness in the mile run, Coach Thrower is putting Capt. Weldon Baird in that event, shifting him from the 440 yd. dash. Also the two mile run will be strengthened by the addition of Gray to the ranks of distance men.

Maryville is pinning her hopes on Bob Sutton, freshman, to come through in the dashes against Tennessee's star, Bob Andridge, who is reported to have run the century in 9.8 sec. In addition to the dashes, Sutton is expected to drag down some points in the broad jump.

One of the best races of the afternoon will probably be between Lloyd of Maryville and Plunkett, Tennessee's quarter miler. Plunkett is one of the best quarter milers around here right now, and Vernon Lloyd has been burning in some fine times in the same distance. Another interesting race should be the mile relay. Maryville is always noted for her crack relay team, but she will probably have plenty of trouble with Tennessee in that event.

Jimmie Rae, Scot pole vaulter, has been sick the past week and may not be able to participate in the meet today. If he isn't, Frank Cross, frosh swimming star, will be depended upon for a place in the vaulting. In the high jump, Etheredge is expected to come through in fine form to win the event in and around six feet.

Gene Orr and Harland Husk will be the tall timber toppers in the 120 yard high hurdles, and Orr and Steakley will attempt to take two places in the 220 yd. low hurdles. Orr ran the second to the Davidson high hurdler last week in the time of 15.9 sec. If Gene wins today in anywhere as good a time as that, he will probably come home with a new college record which is now 16.1 sec. Orr may also be able to shave a few tenths of a second off the low hurdle record today.

Maryville stands to give Tennessee one of the closest meets they have ever had, and may possibly come through to beat the larger school's team. Tennessee, who was state champ last year, will be pinning hopes on winning plenty of points in the field events, while Maryville will be strongest in the runs.

Davidson Track-Men Squeeze Out Highlanders 68-62

An early lead piled up by the Davidson Wildcats in the field events enabled them to stave off a determined threat by the Highlanders 68-62(in the Scotties' first track meet of the year held at Davidson, N. C., last Friday afternoon. Davidson's superiority in the field events, in which they won first and second in every one, overshadowed the Scots' strength in the runs.

Bob Sutton, Maryville freshman dash man, was high point man of the meet, winning three first places and running number one man on the winning relay team. Sutton won the 100 yard dash in the good time of 10.1 sec, the 220 yd. dash, and the broad jump. The most thrilling race of the afternoon was the half mile which was won by Bob Walker of Davidson, who nosed out Weldon Baird by inches to win the race in 2 min. 5.4 sec.

Maryville was much stronger in the running events than the Wildcats, winning three places in the 440 yd. dash, first in the 100 yd. dash, first in the 220 yd. dash, first and second in the low hurdles, second and third in the half mile, second and third in the two mile, and third in the mile.

Joe Etheredge, who is making a determined bid for the college high jump record this year, tied for first at 5 ft. 10 in. This was the closest Maryville cindermen have come to beating their stronger rivals since the two have been participating in dual meets. The good showing made by the Maryville squad is an indication that they will be out to give Tennessee, last year's state champs, a none too pleasant afternoon today.

Mars Hill Netters Blast Scots 6-1

Mars Hill college met the Scottie netmen Thursday afternoon in Maryville's first match of the season, and carried away the honors by a score of 6-1. Maryville showed the potentialities of a good team and at the same time showed their greenness. The veterans Akana and Stevenson showed the value of experience by taking the first doubles in the only match won by Maryville.

Mars Hill brought to Maryville a squad which lost very few matches last year and which was intact this year. This team has another set of victories to its credit during the early season.

In the singles matches Akana lost a well played match to Johnson who outsteadied him, 7-5 8-6. Gastrock lost another good match 8-6, 6-3 to Griffin. The Hubbard boys of Mars Hill took Morgan and McKinnon and Evans beat Kidder of Maryville. In the doubles, Akana and Stevenson outplayed Hubbard and Johnson 6-4, 4-6, 7-5. The second doubles were won by Evans and Hubbard over McKinnon and Morgan 6-3, 8-2.

Maryville goes away to play a series of matches next week.

10 Tough Matches On Schedule For Maryville Netmen

Ten scheduled matches face the Maryville tennis squad for the next two weeks. Five of the matches are to be played this coming week with two of them on the home courts. The first home match is with Tennessee, who always provides strong opposition for the Scottie netters. Tennessee has defeated Carson-Newman six to one this year and will probably continue its winning streak against the weak Highlanders.

The other home match is with Carson-Newman. This is the match that was postponed last week because of rain.

Maryville's number one doubles team is composed of Akana and Stevenson. Morgan and McKinnon make up the No. 2 squad.

In the singles Akana, last year's No. 5 man, is playing number one position. McKinnon, Morgan, Gaserack, and Kidder fill out the balance of the singles department.

Next week's schedule is as follows:

April 17—Tennessee (here)
April 18—East Tenn. Teachers (there)
April 20—Birmingham South. (there)
April 21—U. of Chattanooga (there)
April 22—Carson-Newman (here)

Carson-Newman Hands Highlander Nine First Conference Defeat 5-3

Maryville's Big Bats Whitewash Hiwassee 17-7

The Maryville baseball team continued to win games, despite the preseason forecasts. Last Monday afternoon, by hitting the offerings of five Hiwassee moundsmen for eleven hits, they trounced the Tigers 17 to 8 in a practice game played at Hiwassee.

The Scots must be given credit for their showing at the plate. Center fielder Wilburn got two hits out of four trips to bat; one of his hits being a home run. And J. D. Hughes, Maryville third sacker, also slammed his first homer of the season in the last inning.

The Maryville nine played a trifle better brand of ball than they have been playing, although they did have six errors chalked up against it.

Maryville Rallies To Tie B-W 10-10

A big eighth inning rally pulled the baseball game with the Bond-Woolf nine out of the lose column and gave the Maryville diamonders a 10-10 tie in last Saturday's game. The game had been scheduled to go entire nine innings, but due to the cold weather it had to be called after the eighth.

The Scotties were trailing their opponents by seven runs when they came to bat in their half of the eighth inning. Nig Wilburn, Maryville center fielder led off with a Texas Leaguer single and after Hill, the Alcoa pitcher, had walked three men and had given hits to two others, thereby allowing seven runners to cross home plate, the game was stopped. After the bases were loaded twice in succession, doubles by Baird and Etheredge cleaned them.

The Maryville team made 8 errors, while their opponents were credited with only two for the game.

Wilburn Issues Only 7 Hits But Three Errors Cost Scots First Loss

Behind the six-hit pitching of Ramsey, the Carson-Newman Eagles held Maryville's batters to six hits, and beat the Scots 5-3 in the first conference game of the seoson played at Carson-Newman yesterday afternoon.

The game was the first the home nine has lost this season, and strangely enough it was the best the team has played. "Nig" Wilburn, the Highlander's southpaw flinger, held the Eagles to 7 hits, and struck out seven batters. There were but three errors made by the Scotties, but unfortunately two of them were made in the sixth inning when Carson-Newman combined these errors with three hits and two walks to collect all of their five runs in this one inning.

The Maryville diamonders also scored their three runs in the sixth when Honaker singled, Wilburn got on first by Cattet's error, Kindred doubled scoring Honaker, Shelfer singled scoring "Nig," and Kindred crossed the plate on a wild pitch.

Scotty Nine Has Easy Time With Bible College 17-8

The Maryville Highlanders continued their season in great style up at the Johnson Bible college Wednesday by outscoring the Ministerials 14-7. It chalked up their fourth win of the season, keeping the books free of any losses.

Maryville won behind the fast ball of Paul Sieber, who held Johnson to three hits and no runs until he was jerked in the seventh in favor of "High School" Hughes. The afternoon featured the Scotties blasting the ball all over the park. Wilburn got a homer and a hit out of four, Hughes hit a homer, Etheredge got three for five, Kindred got a double and two singles, out of six trips to the plate, McGaha got a double.

Johnson Bible college scored their few runs in a big eighth inning with two hits, and four errors by Maryville. None of the Bible boys stood out in this game; McDonald played good ball behind the Highlanders resounding bat; Pitman clouted their sole extra base hit in the eighth, scoring a run.

Maryville started off in the third inning scoring four runs. Sieber walked, Etheredge walked, Honaker walked, Hughes was safe on a fielder's choice, and "Nig" Wilburn connected for four. In the fifth inning Wilburn and Kindred stretched two hits into runs by their fancy base running. The Scotties finished the day off with four more tallies in the seventh and four in the ninth. In the ninth, Hughes four-bagger came with the bases loaded.

Fine Arts Department Announces Students' Recital Friday Evening

Junior students of the college fine arts department will be heard in recital April 21 in Voorhees chapel. The voice students, pupils of Ralph R. Colbert, will be accompanied by Miss Ruth Thompson and Bernice Smith.

Louise Allen, soprano, will open the program with two numbers, Solvejg's Song, by Grieg, and Schubert's Ave Maria. She will be followed by Ralph Reed, bass, singing two German art songs, Du bist wie eine blume, by Liszt; and Ich grolle nicht, by Schumann.

A violin intermission will be furnished by Mary Elizabeth Gillespie, playing the Largo-Concerto in A Minor of Vivaldi. Miss Allen will then return to sing the Lullaby from "Jocelyn," by Codard; Clouds, and A Wish, both by Charles.

Miss Gillespie's second group of numbers will include the Canto Amoroso from Sammartini, by Elman; Guiterrero, by Divola; and Mazurka, by Meynarski. Reed will conclude the program with Vinen! la mia vendetta, from "Lucrezia Borgia," Donizetti; Hills of Home, by Fox; and Into the Night, by Edwards.

New Power Plant Will Be Connected In Near Future

The first smoke went up the new MC chimney last Wednesday, but it was merely a small pine-log fire, made to aid in drying the brickwork. The new plant is of interest for those with mechanical inclinations and a source of curiosity for those who don't have them. A large part of the new equipment is automatically controlled, and the plant will require a smaller force than the present station. One man will be able to keep check on the numerous guages and keep the stoker hoppers filled. The engineer will be aided by a great many modern conveniences, which include a spotlight suspended from the ceiling to illuminate the large brass steam clocks on the front of the furnaces and a modern shower room in one corner of the boiler room. The drafts and the stokers are all automatic and it will only be necessary to dump wheelbarrows of coal into one end and remove the clinkers from the other.

The plant is not completed. Yet to be ordered are the pumps and a water softener. It is not definite whether the softener will be installed now or not. Another major job is the connecting of the new plant with the old lines. The new line will come under the railroad to the back of the chapel.

Visiting Debate Teams Stop Here Enroute To Winthrop Tourney

Two teams, en route to the Grand Eastern tournament to be held at Winthrop, N. C., stopped in Maryville last week for debates with the varsity squad.

A team from Waynesburg, Pa., arrived last Saturday and remained until Wednesday. A debate was held Monday evening in the philosophy classroom on the subject, "Resolved, that swing music is detrimental to American culture," or, as restated by the members of the affirmative, "Resolved, that all jitterbugs should be exterminated." Collins, Blaney, and Blarkley of Waynesburg, upheld the negative against Clifford Proctor, Harriet Miller, and Arnold Kramer, on the affirmative side for Maryville.

Arkansas State Teachers college debaters arrived Wednesday for a debate that evening on the Pi Kappa Delta question, "Resolved, that the U. S. should cease the use of public funds, including credits, for business stimulation." Pitella and Cox, of Arkansas State, upheld the affirmative against Otto Pflanze and George Webster.

Webster and Woolf acted as chairmen at the debates, which were non-decision

All-Musical Program At YM Sunday Service

An all musical program will be presented at the YMCA meeting this Sunday, announced Erwin Ritzman, chairman for this week's program.

In the program there will be a string trio composed of Robert Lucero, Mary Gillespie, and Bernice Smith; a vocal selection by Mr. Ralph Hovel; trumpet trio of Sam Cornelius, Vernon Lloyd, and Ralph Reed; a male quartet composed of Dick Woodring, Roland Anderson, Warren Van Blarcom, and Ed Goddard; and a musical selection by the faculty trio, Miss Dorothy Horne, Miss Ruth Thompson, and Miss Katharine Davies.

The meeting will be held at Bartlett auditorium at 5:00.

East Tenn. Oratorical League Contest Here

The East Tennessee division of the Tennessee Oratorical League will meet here Monday evening at 7:30 in the philosophy classroom. This contest in oratory is held each year by Tennessee colleges in two divisions. First and second places from each division meet in the finals at Nashville. The East Tennessee division was held at Carson-Newman last year.

Maryville's representative is Arnold Kramer, whose oration is called, "It Can't Happen Here." Dr. P. B. Baldridge, Baptist minister; Professor R. L. Brewer, superintendent of the city schools, and the Rev. R. O. Eller of the M. E. Church, South, will judge the orations.

Four Present Foreign Policy Discussions To Group Thursday Night

Marianna Allen, Etta Culbertson, Henry Wick, and Hilton Wick discussed various phases of America's foreign policy at the regular meeting of the International Relations club Thursday evening.

Allen discussed "The Foreign Policy of the Present Administration," and pointed out that trade with the countries which have signed Hull's reciprocal trade agreements has increased 42 percent, while trade with non-treaty countries has increased only 21 per cent. The defense policy of the United States was discussed by Etta Culbertson. Miss Culbertson expressed the opinion that our present defensive measures and our foreign policy are not co-ordinate.

The subject of Henry Wick's talk was "Isolation vs. Internationalism," and it is his belief that under present conditions of transportation and commerce a policy of isolation is almost impossible. In discussing our future foreign policy, Hilton Wick said that America's future policies would be shaped with the intention of achieving security rather than aiding the democracies.

Law Club Addressed By Dean E. S. Arnold

Dean E. C. Arnold, of the University of Vanderbilt Law school, spoke last Wednesday evening to members of the Law club in Athenian hall. The subject of Dean Arnold's speech was "Law as a Profession."

Dean Arnold's address was of particular interest to those members of the club who are going to Law school next year. He emphasized the fact that Law is a difficult profession and that admittance to the bar requires several years of hard and concentrated study.

Mr. R. R. Kramer of the local bar was also a guest of the club. Mr. Kramer was introduced to the club and although he did not make a formal address, pointed out the fact that the field of taxation offers great opportunity for specialization to young lawyers today.

Alpha Sig Host To Heron

Miss Jessie Heron will read one of her original papers at the regular meeting of Alpha Sigma society tonight. The program will also include Miss Helen Wilhoit, a fourteen year old high school girl from Maryville. Miss Wilhoit will entertain with songs and several original dances.

Ministerial Association Plans Annual Banquet For Thursday Evening

The annual banquet of the Ministerial association will be held at 6:30 next Thursday evening in the social room of the First Methodist Episcopal church. The Rev. Earl C. Crawford, pastor of the Kirkwood Memorial Presbyterian church of Knoxville, will speak on the subject, "The World for Christ." Mr. Crawford graduated from Maryville college in 1935, and has been pastor of the Kirkwood church since his graduation from Louisville seminary a year ago.

The banquet will be served by the Ladies Aid society of the Methodist church, and music will be furnished by Ruth Andrews and Mildred Dallas. Faculty guests will be Dr. and Mrs. Edmund W. Davis and Dr. F. A. Griffitts, who will act as toastmaster.

The Ministerial association will have its regular weekly meeting at 6:45 Monday evening. The discussion will center around a chapter in the book "Faith and Life,"

Manufacturers Begin Installation Of Organ

Mr. Louis A. Black, Director of Maintenance, has announced that the Wick Organ company of Highland, Ill., has promised that the organ will arrive Saturday, April 15. Installation will begin at once, and will probably be completed by the first of May.

Additional contributions of faculty, students, and friends of the college have made possible the purchase of a Voix Celeste of forty-nine pipes, and twenty-one one and one quarter inch Dagan chimes, which will be installed with the organ.

Eleven Students Become Members Of Honor Society

Dean Fred Smith of U-T Is Speaker At Ceremony On Wednesday

Eleven seniors, Ernest Crawford, Etta Culbertson, Ivan Elder, George Felknor, Jr., Ernestine Foulke, Ed Goddard, Bruce Morgan, Catharine Pond, Fred Rhody, Virginia Lee Schaeffer, and Sara Elizabeth Taylor, were inducted into Alpha Gamma Sigma, Maryville honor scholarship fraternity, at a recognition service held in Voorhees chapel last Tuesday morning.

The local society, which has standards comparable with those of Phi Beta Kappa, national honor scholarship fraternity, elects only ten percent of the graduating class to its membership. To be eligible a student must have a 6:5 average for all hours completed thru the first semester of the senior year, must be of good moral character, must have completed at least one and one-half hours in cultural subjects, and must be a candidate for the B.A. degree. Election is held at the beginning of the second semester each year, with all members of the fraternity entitled to vote.

At the recognition program in Voorhees chapel Dean Fred Smith, of the Graduate school and University of Tennessee, was the speaker. Dr. Edwin R. Hunter, secretary of the fraternity, read the requirements for membership and the names of those elected this year.

Dean Smith took as his theme a statement made by Louis Pasteur, eminent French scientist of the last century: "Chance favors the prepared mind". He pointed out the need for a well-balanced college diet, and the need for college graduates with scholarship, and that if there is truth in Pasteur's statement there is hope. "It is not more material goods that we need; but those persons who will use what we have sanely, with wisdom. 'Chance does favor the prepared mind!' "

At a meeting of the fraternity on April 4, Ed Goddard was elected president for the coming year; Lois Brown, vice president; and Dr. Edwin R. Hunter was re-elected secretary. Mrs. Dorothy Nethery Crawford, Maryville, is the retiring president.

Dr. Hunter Announces Eleven Students For Honors Work Next Fall

The faculty committee on honors work has approved eleven students for work in the various departments next year, Dr. E. R. Hunter, director of Curriculum, announced this week. Those elected from the English department are Ruth Abercrombie, John Fisher, and Jane Law. Barbara McCutcheon was chosen for work in home economics, Tom Shafer in Bible and religious education, William Mooney in psychology, Otto Pflanze in political science, Dan Magill in economics, John Wintermute in dramatic art, and James Montgomery in sociology.

Dr. Hunter said that the number approved this year was about average since the largest number for any year has been fifteen and the smallest seven.

Ruth Abercrombie Is Elected Editor Of The Highland Echo For Next Year

Publications Committee Picks Members Of Staff For Next Year At Meeting Held Friday Afternoon

Ruth Abercrombie, a junior from Massachusetts, was elected editor of the Highland Echo for next year at a meeting of the staff held Friday evening in the Echo office. Miss Abercrombie is a member of Writer's Workshop and has been a member of the Chilhowean staff for two years. She is a member of the YWCA cabinet and has been a member of the Highland Echo staff for three years. She is planning to do honors work in her major subject, English, next year.

The new staff for the year 1939-40 was chosen at a meeting of the publications committee held Friday afternoon in the chemistry lecture room. Besides Miss Abercrombie, two juniors were re-elected to the staff, Arlene Phelps and George L. Hunt.

Five sophomores will be on the staff next year. They are Lula Wade Diggs,

Abercrombie

Bill Felknor, J. E. Thomas, Douglas Steakley and Jean White. Freshman members remaining on the staff will include Chas. Orr, Don Kent, Doris M. Smith, Dorothy Scholl, Bette Umbach, Frank Cross and A. O. Kressler, Kressler is a newcomer to the staff, having been selected from a group of five applicants in recent tryouts held by the Echo.

Selection of the members of the staff is made by a group composed of the faculty committee on the Highland Echo, the student council publications committee, and the senior members of the Echo staff.

Athenian Adopts New Constitution

Athenian Society Purpose No Longer Literary But Social

At the regular weekly meeting of the Athenian literary society last Saturday evening, a new constitution and accompanying by-laws were adopted with a unanimous vote of the members present; whereby the old organization officially terminated and a new one, with a new purpose, under the name of "Athenian", began.

With the Athenian room filled to capacity for one of the most important meetings of the society since its organization in 1868, the old "Athenian Literary Society" was reverently laid to rest, and a vigorous new organization was born to flourish under the name of "Athenian". The purpose is no longer literary, but social—as stated in the new constitution.

Knox Coit, author of the new statement of the society's purpose included in the newly adopted constitution, made the following remarks when proposing the statement to the society:

"Our old Athenian constitution indicated the purpose of the society as 'the promotion of virtue, philanthropy, literature, etc.' It seems to me that the inclusion of the word 'virtue' in a 1939 constitution of a social society is a very objectionable Victorian expression of pietism, and quite meaningless. Therefore, I propose, instead of the statement: 'The purpose of this society shall be to the end that virtue be cultivated, philanthropy promoted, and literature advanced . . .', the following substitution: 'The purpose of the society shall be for the promotion of a varied social program among its members'."

The statement was accepted and included in the society's new constitution.

"Much of the difficulty, resulting in the sluggishness of the organization," said President Bill Magill, "has not been with the members of the society, but in the inclusion of the word "literary' in both the name and the purpose of the society as stated in the old

Debaters Attend Winthrop Contest

Arda Walker Takes First Place In Women's Oratory

Arda Walker placed first in the women's division of the Grand Eastern forensic tournament held in Winthrop college, Rock Hill, N. C., April 12 to 14, in which 48 colleges and universities participated.

Representatives of Maryville college besides Arda Walker were Harriet Miller, Otto Pflanze, and Arnold Kramer.

In impromptu speaking, Otto Pflanze and Harriet Miller won in their respective divisions, only to be eliminated in the finals. Arnold Kramer also won his first round in the men's oratory, but was defeated in the finals.

Miller and Walker represented Maryville in the women's division of debate and Pflanze and Kramer in the men's tournament. Results of the debate ratings have not been released yet, however.

Committee Announces Rules Governing Event Scheduling For School

Robert Martin, president of the Student council, announces the following principles for scheduling events, as worked out by an informal joint conference of the Faculty committee on scheduling of events, and a group consisting of the presidents of the seven major student organizations.

On Saturday nights, insofar as possible, all college events will not begin until 8:30. This is in the interest of protecting the time of the society meetings.

Effort will be made to confine all state club meetings to some one night in each month (e.g., the first Monday) and all departmental or professional interest groups to no more than two nights each month (e.g., the second and fourth Mondays). In case of conflict with a general college event (Artist series or the like) no postponement or replacement for that one time.

The events which are to be treated as all-college events to be protected from conflict with other activities are: varsity athletic contests; plays (society plays, Maryville players, senior class); Varsity musical events (glee club, orchestra, and two nights of Music Week besides the orchestra concert); Artist's series.

Annual YMCA Banquet Will Be Held Tuesday

A hundred and fifty men have signed to attend the YMCA banquet, to be held on Tuesday evening, April 25, at 6:00 in the Masonic hall. Toastmaster for the program will be Rev. Raymond J. Dollenmayer, associate professor of Bible. Ralph W. Frost, general secretary of the Christian association at the University of Tennessee will be the principal speaker. Entertainment will be furnished by the Back-alley symphony, a harmonic group led by Philip Evaul and William Alston; and David Hall's trio. Sam Cornelius will lead in group singing.

Juniors To Give Recital On Friday

Four Students To Appear In Second Program Of Arts Dept.

The second Fine Arts recital by the junior class will be given on Friday, April 28. The program will be opened by Bernice Cathcart, soprano, who will sing "My Heart Ever Faithful" by Bach and "Ave Maria" by Bach-Gounod. Following this Richard Woodring, tenor, will sing "Passing By" by Purcell and "Where'er You Walk" by Handel. The program will continue with two movements of Beethoven's Sonata, Op. 31, No. 2, Largo and Allegro, played by Ruth Mack. Ruth Wood, soprano, will follow, singing three numbers, "Ich liebe dich" by Grieg, "Were My Songs with Wings Provided" by Hahn, and "Songs My Mother Taught Me" by Dvorak.

For her second group, Bernice Cathcart will sing "Do Not Go My Love," by Hageman, "Allerseelen" by Strauss, and "The Lass With the Delicate Air" by Arne. Ruth Wood returns with two numbers, "Divinities du Styx—Alceste" by Gluck, and "Villannelle" by Dell'-Acqua. Ruth Mack will return, playing Debussy's "La fille aux cheveaux de lin" and MacDowell's "Shadow Dance."

The recital will be brought to a close with three selections, "Widmung" by Franz, "Obstination" by de Fontenailles, and Schubert's "Serenade" sung by Richard Woodring.

Bernice Cathcart will be accompanied by Ruth Mack and Richard Woodring and Ruth Wood, by Berhice Smith.

The first recital by the students of the freshman and sophomore classes will be held in the Fine Arts studio on Wednesday afternoon, April 26, at 4:00. Those participating are John Guinter, Helen Rose MacWilliams, Ruth Wynn, Ruth Duggan, Louise Marshall, Margaret Halsey, Eloise McNeeley, Lynn Birchfiel, Ada Summers, Warren Van Blarcom, Charlotte Colby, Marianna Allen, and Leah Voigt.

Fine Arts Recital Given By Juniors

Big Audience Hears Voice And Violin Selections

A large audience attended the joint recital of Louise Allen, Ralph Reed and Mary Elizabeth Gillespie, junior students of the Fine Arts department, given at 8:00 Friday evening in the Fine Arts studio.

Miss Allen opened the program with Grieg's "Lolvejg's Song" followed by the familiar "Ave Maria" by Schubert. Mr. Reed sang the second group of numbers consisting of two German songs, "Du bist wie eine Blume" by Liszt and Schumann's "Ich grolle nicht."

The third number, "Largo" from Vivaldi's "Concerto in A Minor" for violin was played by Miss Gillespie.

Miss Allen's second group of songs consisted of three number: "Lullaby" by Jocelyn-Goddard and "Clouds" and "A Wish" by Charles. This was followed by a violin group by Miss Gillespie: "Canto Amoros" by Sammartini-Elman, the sparkling "Guiterrero" by Drdla, and Mlynarski's "Mazurka."

Bainonian to Sponsor Program By Faculty

Members of the faculty will present "Babbit's Boy" at an As You Like It sponsored by Bainonian in Bartlett auditorium this evening at 7:30. The Chilhowee trio will sing and the faculty will be presented "as we see them."

Following the program in the chapel there will be ping-pong in Bartlett gym and refreshments will be served on the lawn if the weather permits.

New Organ To Be Completed Soon

To Have Complete Electric Action; 657 Pipes; Two Manuels; Chimes

"Installation of Maryville's new two manuel organ which arrived during the past week will be completed sometime during the first part of May", announced Mr. Joseph Weikhardt, who is superintending its installment.

This two manuel organ contains 657 pipes, 145 of which are wodden and the other 511, of metal. The wooden pipes are made of straight grain spruce, while the larger metal pipes are of annealed zinc. The smaller metal pipes are made of 40 percent block tin and 55 percent lead. The lengths of the pipes range from 16 feet to 1-2 inch, and from 11 inches to one-fourth inch in diameter.

The organ will occupy the space in the alcove from the back drop to the doors, and will have a moveable console. The tones that will soon be coming from this instrument are all controlled by means of electro-magnets. There is a magnet at the base of each pipe which controls that particular pipe and a magnet on the control board of the console to control each key. This system of magnets controls the four equalizers that in turn control the four inch air supply of each of the three chests, swell, grate, and pedal.

There will be no pipes visible from the interior of the chapel, all being covered by a beautiful round arch screen.

Travel Sound Films To Be Shown At German Club Meeting Tuesday

Two travel sound films, revealing the colorful life, customs, and scenery of Germany, will be featured at the meeting of the German club to be held in the chemistry lecture room on Tuesday evening.

Frankfort, a city of great historical significance, was the old imperial city of the once powerful Holy Roman empire, and the city in which Goethe, the immortal German poet and philosopher, was born in 1749.

The Harz Mountains, one of the highest ranges of mountains in Germany, are of particular interest because of Brocken, the highest peak of the range. Each year on "all witches

"As You Like It" Sketches Theme Of May Day Program

The May Queen and her court will visit the Forest of Arden at the annual May Day on Monday, May 1st, in the amphitheatre of the college woods. Touchstone, Rosalind, and Orlando will be at the program as features of the afternoon. Dances and short scenes from "As You Like It" will introduce wood nymphs and fairies.

The May Queen, Marguerite Justus, will be escorted by Gene Orr, president of the senior class. She will wear a gown of white silk marquisette and will be accompanied by two flower girls and a page. Sandra Smith and Barbara Thrower will be the flower girls, and the page, Bobbie Logan.

The two senior attendants of the Queen, Lois Barnwell and Virginia Lee Schaeffer, are to wear aqua dresses with small hoops. They will walk together preceding the queen. Barbara Anderson with Ralph Reed and James Etheredge with Betsy Gaultney will represent the junior class. The girls will wear pink net dresses. The sophomores will have dresses of the same style in blue. Lula Wade Diggs with Douglas Steakley and Dale Russell with Dorothy DePue are the sophomore choices and their partners. Marion Northup with Dudley Moore and Marion Birmingham with Peggy Carter will lead the court procession as the freshmen. The girls will have yellow dresses similar to those of the other classes.

Carol Dawn Ward and Gordon Bennett will appear as the principal characters on the program to be presented for the queen and her court. The scenes from Shakespeare's "As You Like It" are being directed by Mrs. West.

Interpretative dancing will be displayed by a group of ten girls who are being trained by Mrs. Verton M. Queener. They will give several interpretative dances, all in waltz time, representing the bearing of garlands, trays of flowers, and baskets. These will all be in keeping with the theme of the program, the Forest of Arden. The May Pole dance will also be performed by this group of girls.

Miss Ruth Thompson has prepared two choruses as a part of the program.

Charlotte Moughton and Jane Law are the representatives of the YWCA who are helping with the program.

To Hold Bates Contest Next Tuesday Evening

Entries in the Bates oratorical contest to be held Thursday evening at 7:30 in the philosophy classroom are Roland Tapp, George Hunt, Warren Ashby, James Jarrell, John Magill, and Arnold Kramer. Miss Jessie Johnson, who is in charge of the contest, announced that the judges would be chosen early next week from the faculty.

The contest is open to men of the junior and senior classes this year, and will be open to the women of those classes next year. Prizes for first places will be awarded from the thousand-dollar William H. Bates Oratorical prize foundation.

Tapp Elected To YM Advisory Board; Plans For Retreat Started

Roland Tapp, junior from Chattanooga, Tenn., was elected to the advisory board of the YMCA for the year 1939-40 by the association's cabinet. Later in the week the advisory board, composed of student and faculty members, re-elected President R. W. Lloyd; and it was announced that the president would re-appoint Mr. Raymond Dollenmayer, associate professor of Bible, to the board.

Plans for the annual YM-YW retreat, to be held at Line Springs hotel, May 13-15, are now being made by the steering committee, headed by Helen Bobo, former president of the YW, and Weldon Baird, president of the YM. Other members of the committee include Phil Evaul, business manager of retreat, Bernice Smith, secretary, Joy Pinneo and Fred Rhody, cabinet representatives, Helen Bewley, president of the YW, and Russ Stevenson, president-elect of the YM.

There will no issue of the Highland Echo next week.

Letter From Reader Cautions Students Against Harboring Queer Pet Peeves

The following letter was received this week in the "Echo's" mail. We pass it on to you for what it is worth. "Psychopathtic Ward, Maryville Horspital, April 19, 1939. Gentlemen:

If "this weather" worries you; if you "go crazy" when you have to shave in cold water; if you "die" at rising time each morning; don't be alarmed. The same things happen to your friends. They are common pet peeves.

But if you dislike bells, "just any kind of bells", or if you can't bear green toe-nails on girls, or if it drives you frantic to see a man carry an umbrella: be carefull You might become a Fascist, a Donald Duck fan, or even a college professor; for it has been definitely proved that unusual pet peeves may cause the peever to seek such foolish outlets to help him forget them.

To awaken the student body of your noble college to the necessity or recognizing pet peeves and of overcoming them before they overcome him, a survey has been made and the following examples of pet peeves are presented. A brief analysis of several is offered to help you conquer that minor madness in your make-up and to save you from yourself. Consider the following pet peeves: pop quizzes, shedding tooth brushes, borrowing neighbors, church attendance reports, and women smoking in public.

The first gentleman undoubtedly has a point in his favor, but imagine the results that might follow if he continues to abhor such a triviality as a pop quiz. He might develop a chronic case of Quizzitis, whose symptoms include bloodshot eyes, unkept appearance, and a look of fear at the words "who", "what", "where", "when", or "why." He might even go quiz crazy, which is too horrible to talk about. He should do his best to make himself love pop

French Regional Costume Collection To Be Displayed In Anderson Until Apr. 24

The collections of French peasant regional costumes, circulated by the American Federation of Arts, and of contemporary art will continue to be shown in Anderson hall through April 29. The French costumes, water color reproductions, are 16 in number, each of which represents a costume of a certain province of France. There are also 31 swatches of French silk cloth which were used in these costumes.

In regard to the costumes: "While engaged in research work for the design of some French costumes in France, Mlle. de Gardilanne conceived the idea of making a complete and authentic collection of French regional peasant costumes. She wrote to Mrs. Rogerson, an American authority of the subject, asking if she thought America would be interested in such a collection. Mrs. Rogerson encouraged the idea, and Mlle. de Gardilanne and Miss Moffatt, the artist who executed these color costumes, searched throughout France, visiting the smallest villages, coaxing the old peasants to bring forth their treasures, and with the aid of innumerable museum officials, secured the material from which eventually 200 water color drawings of the costumes were made."

The other exhibit, shown in the art gallery every day from 3 to 5 except Sundays, includes works of contemporary artists, those who are associates and students of the Art Student's league in New York city. These pictures include water colors, engravings, lithographs, wood cuts, and etchings. The various pictures are for sale at a nominal price.

Beginning May 1 there will be an exhibition of paintings and drawings by Miss Frances Rich of the art department. These include landscapes, portraits, studies, and represent work done in the past two years.

On This, Our Last Issue

In a year filled with the hurry of writing copy and reading proofs, editing news and making up front pages there is little time for an editor to express his appreciation for all of the time and effort that members of the staff are willing to spend in order for the Highland Echo to come sliding under dormitory doors every Saturday afternoon. The hours that have been spent by staff members in gathering and writing news would doubtless be equal to the amount of time spent in any of the major sports on the Hill and is worthy of as much recognition. In this last edition for the present editorial staff we should like to express our appreciation for the pleasant cooperation received from the members of the staff throughout the year.

To Robert Brandriff goes our thanks for reading and correcting all of the news copy for some twenty-five issues and to Fred Rhody for his valuable contributions to the editorial and feature sections each week. To managing editor George L. Hunt goes the credit for finding and assigning all of the news in the Echo and for supervision of headline writing for the year.

Among the junior members of the staff we wish to express our appreciation to Arlene Phelps for her part in designing the linoleum cuts for the editorial page and to Sara Lee Hellums for writing many of the lead stories of the past year. Pauline Cope has helped with editing the copy each week and Warren Ashby has been one of the most efficient and dependable writers of this year's staff. Space does not permit an expression of thanks to each member of the sophomore and freshman staffs but their work has been quite good and is worthy of commendation.

Perhaps one of the most valuable contributions to the success of the Echo this year, however, has been the cooperation and helpful suggestions of Dr. F. A. Griffitts, faculty advisor. We wish him and editor Ruth Abercrombie, who has done an excellent job as a news writer this year, the best of luck for 1939-40.

Merry-Ville Go Round

By FRED RHODY

After much urging, we have succeeded in getting the real inside story on the Mystery of the Missing Clapper. Howard Davis, one of the official tollers of the bell, wrote the following dirge while mourning the theft of the bell clapper:

• • • •

The Terrible Murder of The College Bell

Listen, my children, and I shall tell
About the murder of the College bell.
How on a dark and windy night
(Oh! It must have been a terrible sight.)
The assassin climbed the squeaky stair,
And jimmied the door with utmost care.
Then cautiously through the dark he groped,
For consciously he must have hoped
Not to awaken the bell while still she lay
Awaiting the dawn of another day.
How far from the dreams of the College bell
Was the thought that someone planned to rebel
Against her loud and early calls
To awaken the students throughout the halls.
As up the tower he made his way,
He came to the place where the still bell lay;
And raising aloft his murderous knife,
She awoke—and engaged in a terrible strife.
But alas, her strength soon faded out,
And she died without making a single shout.
Oh! What a cruel and terrible deed
To murder the bell in her quiet sleep.
The morning came, but the bell was still cold
She did not respond to the sun as of old.
She lay there in death, what a pitiful sight,
And we all bowed our heads in the morning's bright light.

Sleep on, thou weary one, sleep on.
May peace and joy attend thee well,
And may your memory ever dwell
In the hearts of those who care to tell
Of the terrible murder of the College bell.

—Howard Davis.

Not that we want to run in competition to the worthy Exchange column which this paper conducts, but we were looking at the pictures that came in one of the newspapers the office receives and we found some interesting facts. Fact One: There are 10,000 college students in the United States that work on 744 college newspapers. Fact Two: 55 percent of these papers are weeklies, 30 percent less often than weekly, 9 percent semi or tri-weekly, and 5 percent daily. Fact three: For printing alone these newspapers spend between $2,500,000 and $3,000,000 annually. Approximately 60 percent of these are financed by activity fees.

The rage of opinion polls which has swept the country has now reached the junior and senior high school student. The purpose of the questionnaire is to determine what are the likes and dislikes of American boys. In a popular boy's magazine such questions as the following are asked:

How often did you shave in the past 7 days?
In the past 7 days how often did you eat a cold cereal a hot cereal.....
Did you have a date during the past 7 evenings?
How much allowance did you get in March?

• • • •

At the suggestion of a reader, we too succumb to the questioning craze (since it fills space until the May Reader's Digest comes). The following questions are taken from back issues of the Echo:

1. What was the score of the Homecoming game with Lenoir-Rhyne?
2. What was the theme of the formal dinner which preceded the appearance of the Salzburg Trapp choir in Nov.?
3. John S. Sloan is associated with what program given in the chapel during February?
4. What kind of wood has been chosen for the new organ?
5. What University of Tennessee professor spoke at the local I.R.C. on Prime Minister Chamberlain at its meeting on Feb. 23?
6. What was the score of the second Maryville-King basketball game, played Feb. 29?
7. What woman pianist is scheduled to appear on next year's Artist series?
8. What author reviewed her book for one of the campus clubs early in March?
9. What was the name of the lecturer who was on the campus for three days early in October?
10. Who was a distinguished guest at the Maryville-Tennessee Wesleyan football game October 14?

As long as this column has been chiefly journalistic this week,fi we might as well continue with an interesting vignette from the annals of early American magazine writing. The first American magazine was published in 1741 by Thomas Bradford. It appeared on February 14, and was called "The American Magazine." Three days later Benjamin Franklin's "The General Magazine" appeared. Behind this close margin there is the story of a fierce competition. Franklin had conceived the idea of a magazine in 1740, but the man he had chosen for editor went to Ben's rival, Bradford, and disclosed the plan, hoping thereby to get more money than the thrifty Philadelphian would pay. The result was Bradford's announcement in November, 1740 that he would shortly publish a magazine. The next week Franklin announced his plan, and there followed in the newspapers of each journalist an exchange of opinions, the one maintaining himself as the originator of the idea and the other replying to the accusations. The result was that Bradford beat Franklin by three days. Neither attempt was successful, the "American" failing after three issues and the "General" lasting for only six. Perhaps it should be added that the "Saturday Evening Post" founded in 1628, was in those days considered a newspaper, not a magazine.

On the Sunday evening hour this week the soloist is Ezio Pinza, leading basso of the Metropolitan opera company. He was heard in many of the broadcasts of the opera last winter. The conductor of the orchestra is Fritz Reiner, head of the orchestra department at Philadelphia's Curtis Institute of Music.

The program this week opens with Beethoven's "Ridelio" overture, which is followed by Mr. Pinza singing Handel's Largo from "Xerxes." Other notable numbers are the Gypsy Dance and Fandango, from the "Spanish Caprice" of Rimsky-Korsakov; the Valse Triste, by Sibelius; an a capella choir singing Barnby's :'Sweet and Low" and Morley's "Now is the Month of Maying."

TALK OF THE WEEK . By Arlene Phelps

Peace Committee Urged To Unite On Peace Program

The American Student Union tonight urged the United Student Peace committee which has been divided into two groups, to reunite itself by basing the April 20 peace demonstrations on support of President Roosevelt's appeal to Hitler and Mussolini. The resolution of the Student Union declared that the character of Chancellor Hitler's reply would depend upon the response evoked by the President's message among the people's of all nations and that "a united peace action on April 20 with its central theme support of the proposals of President Roosevelt will show that the American student body says 'Yes' to the President's plea for peace and wants the Dictators to do the same."

The resolution of the Student Union which was issued by its National Secretary, Joseph P. Lash, from its National Headquarters, 112 East 19 Street, follows:

WHEREAS: all the constituent organizations of the United Student Peace committee have at various times declared themselves in favor of a supreme peace effort based on disarmament, the lowering of trade barriers and the creation of trade opportunities, and

WHEREAS: the various constitune groups of the United Student Peace committee have at various times petitioned our government to take the initiative in the calling for an international conference to such ends, and

WHEREAS: the President of the United States on Saturday, April 15th addressed an appeal to Hitler and Mussolini to enter into a ten-year peace pact based on a discontinuance of aggression and accompanied by a conference for international disarmament and economic agreement, and

WHEREAS: the success of this appeal will depend upon the response that it can evoke from the peoples of all the nations, and

WHEREAS: Chancellor Hitler has convoked the Reichstag to give his answer on April 28, and

WHEREAS: the character of his answer will in part be determined by the amount of support among the peoples of the world for the President's plea, and

WHEREAS: a united peace action on April 20 with its central theme support of the proposals of President Roosevelt will show that the American student body says "Yes" to the President's plea for peace and wants the dictators to do the same.

BE IT RESOLVED: that the United Peace committee enthusiastically endorses this supreme effort by the government of the United States to help save peace and urges that the student peace demonstrations and actions on April 20 be united actions by making support of the President's appeal central in their program. Such a united action will help speed the President's appeal to success.

Edward H. Hamilton Will Present Operetta "Sweethearts", May 3

On Wednesday evening, May 3, in the U-T auditorium, Mr. Edward H. Hamilton, a graduate of Maryville, will present the operetta "Swethearts" which he has directed. This program will feature ninety voices including both the Knoxville Male chorus and the Civic Opera club. Bob Claflin, who is well known on the Maryville campus for his comedy, will play the principal comedy role.

Mabel Miller Downes will sing the title lead. She is coming from New York where she is a student of Frank LaForge, accompaniest of Lily Pons. Other leading roles will be sung by Knoxville singers.

A twenty-five piece orchestra composed of Knoxville musicians will furnis hthe music.

Mrs. Hamilton, an instructor in dramatic art at Maryville college, has assisted her husband with the production. Parts of the comedy were used in the popular picture "Sweethearts", starring Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy.

Student tickets are thirty-five cents and may be obtained from Mr. Ralph Colbert.

Student Council Holds Picnic This Afternoon

This afternoon the members of the Student council, chaperoned by Professor and Mrs. Verton M. Queener, went to Martins' cabin several miles from Maryville, for a picnic supper. Arrangements for the place of meeting and the transportation were made by Gordon Findlay, Jean McCammon and Neil Rosser. Refreshments were planned by Lynn Tyndall and Hazel Eddins.

THAT NINTH INNING

Maryville's somewhat erratic baseball team proved herself able to hit in the clutches Thursday afternoon when Nig Wilburn came through with a nice hit to win the ball game from Emory-Henry. The only thing is that she should never have gotten herself in that place where she had to jerk on her shoestrings to pull the game out of the fire and put it in the frying pan. Going into the ninth inning with a two run lead apparently doesn't mean a thing to our ball club. They can always manage to boot away that lead in some sort of manner. However, they seem to be able to come back in their half of the final stanza and come through with the ball game under their belt. It would be nice to be able to go through that ninth inning without some sort of worry and be able to make it to dinner on time. Perhaps it is the dinner bell that rings the final inning that gives out ball players that ability to come in and win the game at the last minute. Oh me, what some people won't do for their stomachs.

COACH—THE CONVERTER

One of the problems facing Coach Thrower early in the track season was of finding someone to toss the javelin. Eric Tipton, a freshman and football player, is one of those out for baseball that has a good arm but doesn't, for some unknown reason, get much chance to use it in a game. Well, Coach Thrower, always known as a converter, took Tipton and put him to work on the javelin and in his first competitive meet he threw the thing 157 feet. With a litle pracice he should be able to sail it out 170 or 180 feet with little difficulty.

NO CAPTAIN—NO NEWS—NO NOTHIN'

It used to be the custom that after every season in any sport the lettermen would get together and have a meeting and elect a captain for next year's team. In swimming and basketball this yearly custom didn't take place. What's the matter with you boys? How do you expect us to have any news if you don't elect a captain or something or other once in a while? At least you might elect one in tiddle-de-winks or ping pong; or, I suggest Etheredge in pool playing.

Seriously, though, why not get together swimmers and let the waiting public know who you want to guide and lead you on to success in the tank next winter. That goes for you too, basketball players, after all how can we win the conference without electing a captain?

Fine Arts Recitals

Mr. Reed closed the recital by singing the Lucrezia Borgia—Donizetti "Vieni! la mia vendetta", Fox's well known "Hills of Home," and "Into the Night" by Edwards.

Miss Allen and Mr. Reed were accompanied by Miss Ruth Thompson, instructor in music. Miss Gillespie was accompanied by Bernice Smith.

This was the first in a series of Fine Arts recitals for college students to be given during the next few weeks. The second recital, for junior students will be held next Friday, April 28, and will present Bernice Cathcart, soprano; Richard Woodring, tenor; Ruth Woods, contralto; and Ruth Mack, pianist. These programs are open to the public.

LMU Host To Scot Speedsters Today

This afternoon the Maryville college harriers, under the able tutelage of Coach Robert Thrower, are visiting Lincoln Memorial university in hopes of taking from the Railsplitters their second win of the season. The track squad, which is one of the strongest and best balanced except in the weights, that Maryville has had in a number of years, is expected to have an easy time with the LMU speedsters, after handing the University of Tennessee an 84-47 whipping last week.

Coach Thrower will probably only take a small squad of 12 men with him on the trip. Sutton will attempt to keep his slate clean in the 100 and 220 yard dashes; Etheredge and Nicely in the high jump: Weldon Baird in the mile; Orr and Husk in the 120 yd. hurdles, with Husk doing a little pole vaulting and high jumping on the side; Orr and Steakley will do their best in the 220 yd. low hurdles; While Weldon and Bill Baird will put the shot, throw the discus and run the half mile; Vernon Lloyd and Doug Steakley will jog the quarter mile; and Tipton and Jimmy Rae tossing the javelin; Davies, Gray and Green will run the two mile, and Rae will pole vault. This will about complete the squad, with perhaps a few exceptions.

The week after this, Maryville has her only home meet, that being with the University of Chattanooga. On May 6, the Smoky Mountain Conference meet will be held in Johnson City, with the Scotties the defending champions, the favorites in the meet. On May 13, the Scots will attempt to win the state championship on the track at Cookeville, Tenn., where TPI is located. Advance notices say that Vanderbilt will enter a team this year. If so, Vandy, Tennessee, and the Scots will be the chief contenders for the title.

Cindermen Run Over Tennessee In 84-47 Upset

Thinly Clads Win All Events Except Weights

Maryville's track team brought home its first decision over the Tennessee Vols in seven years last Saturday afternoon. The Scotties not only won, but fairly trounced the large school's aces by a score of 84-47. Maryville won every track event in the meet. Three of the field events, however, Tennessee monopolized; the javelin, shot put, and discus. Coach Thrower's boys looked strong in every event and should come home from the state meet with the championship.

Weldon Baird set the pace for the meet in the first event, pulling out far ahead of the closest opposition in the mile run. Again in the half mile, his strong finish gave him the decision. Besides these two events, the elder Baird took points in the discus, and was a member of the winning mile relay, making him top scorer in the meet. Bobby Sutton, the freshman dash man came through to beat Tennessee's great Bob Andridge in the century. He also took the 220 yd. dash, and second in the broad jump to take his share of the Highlanders points. Joe Etheredge took the jumping events, high and broad; Doug Steakley drove in ahead of the field of quarter milers for first place, with Lloyd a close second.

ORR SETS LOW HURDLE RECORD

Gene Orr monopolized the hurdles in some of the best times of the afternoon. Leading from the first hurdle, the senior star easily outdistanced the field to turn in a record breaking time of 25.3 sec. in the 220 yd. low hurdles. His time was six tenths of a second better than Byars set in '33, at 25.9. In addition to his two firsts in the hurdles, he anchored the relay to push Baird for high point honors.

Cifers of Tennessee won three events: the shot put, the discus throw and the javelin, for the only firsts that Tennessee could manage to score. Tennessee swept the shot put event. Maryville took all three places in the two mile, Davies leading the field. Jimmy Rae looked good in the pole vault for Maryville. He vaulted a foot above his nearest competitor, and looks good for a new record this year. The mile relay, composed of Lloyd, Steakley, Baird and Orr, showed last year's record holding combination in great form again.

Maryville goes against the LMU Railsplitters this afternoon. LMU has several stellar sprinters that will give the Scotties trouble.

Following are the summaries:

Mile run—W. Baird (M), Pedigo (T), Wilson (T). Time 4:55.4

440-yard—Steakley (M), Lloyd (M), Hunter (T). Time 52.6 sec.

Mile relay — Won by Maryville. (Lloyd, W. Baird, Steakley, Orr.) Time 3:31.3

Maryville Netmen Bow To Moccasins

Tennis Team Meets Eagles In Today's Match

The Highlander Tennis team lost a close match to the University of Chattanooga yesterday in Chattanooga by a score of 3-5. Coach Gillingham's squad is showing promise, however, as the greenness wears off.

Playing like old veterans, McKinnon, Kidder, and Gastrock turned in Maryville's victories. McKinnon turned back Thomas of Chattanooga, and Kidder beat Tucker, both matches in straight sets. Gastrock's match showed the best tennis of the afternoon. Rallying in the third set, he won over Leeper, 9-7, 3-6, 6-3.

Against East Tennessee Teachers, the Scottie netmen lost 8-1 last Tuesday. The sole match was won by Russell Stevenson in the singles. Akana played fine tennis against Captain Bullington of Teachers although losing by a score of 10-8, 2-6, 3-6.

This afternoon at 2:00, Maryville encounters Carson-Newman. The Scotties are conceded an excellent chance to defeat their traditional foe. There will be a second match with Carson-Newman on Monday afternoon.

Summaries of the Chattanooga-Scot meet:

Akana—Black, 4-6, 0-6
McKinnon—Thomas, 6-3, 7-5
Morgan—Beene, 3-6, 7-2
Gastrock—Leeper, 1-7, 3-6, 6-3.
Stevenson—Gill, 0-6, 2-6
Kidder—Tucker, 7-5, 6-3
Akana-Stevenson—Black-Thomas 6-3, 0-6, 4-6
McKinnon-Morgan—Beene-Leeper 2-6, 2-6

Wasp's Ninth Inning Rally Falls Short As Scot Nine Evens Series With E-H By Winning 2nd Game 8-7

Wilburn's Single Scoring Hughes Breaks Deadlock In Ninth; Highlanders Drop First Game 5-3 As Errors Account For A Lot Of Wasp Runs

A clean single by Nig Wilburn in the last of the ninth inning drove J. D. Hughes across the plate with the winning run of the baseball game played between Emory and Henry and the Scotties here Tuesday afternoon. The final score being 8-7. This was the final game in a two game series played by the Wasps at Maryville, with the Emory and Henry outfit winning the first game 5-3.

Scot Honaker pitched a fine brand of ball for eight and a half innings for the Highlander club, being removed in the ninth for Wiezalis, who was replaced by Wilburn after having walked two men to fill the bases. Maryville scored the first run of the game in the second inning when Kindred was safe on an error and later scored on Cragan's sacrifice. Emory-Henry came right back in their half of the third inning to score two runs. With Sessons, their second baseman, doing most of the hitting in that inning to score himself and Quillan ahead of him. The Wasps scored two more tallys in the fourth stanza, when Hillman was safe on an error and scored on a hit by Kuhn, their first baseman.

Maryville came back in their half of the fourth to score one run. McGaha getting a hit and scoring on Pickens' fly to the outfield. In the fifth, Sessons scored again for Emory and Henry, being dirven in by a hit from Burchett's bat. The Scotties came back in the fifth inning with three big runs by Honaker, Hughes, and Wilburn, to tie the ball game up 5-5. Maryville, scoring two more in the sixth, took the lead 7-5. Hedrick and Russell both getting safe bingles and scoring in that inning.

The Wasps, in a stinging mood, came into the ninth frame with blood in the eye and bats on their shoulders to score two big runs to tie the game again at 7-7. The inning started out with Baker flying out to the outfield. Pendergraph hitting safely scored on Quillan's single a few minutes later. Sesson then walked, and Wiezalis replaced Honaker on the mound. The next man, Burchett, grounded out. Hymes walked and the bases were loaded. Wilburn then came out of the outfield and replaced Wiezalis on the mound. After working the count to three and two, Hillman walked forcing in Quillan. The next man, Holyfield, fanned to retire the side.

Maryville started off their half of the rally inning with a single by J. D. Hughes, who then stole second. Shelfer walked and the stage was set for a Frank Merriwell finish by Nig Wilburn, who proceeded to come through with a sharp single into centerfield scoring Hughes with the winning run.

E-H Wins First Of Two Game Series From Scots 5-3

The baseball team of Emory and Henry college and the cold weather proved to be too much for the Maryville ball club last Wednesday, and the Scotties were forced to take a 5-3 bow. The Emory-Henry batters got 5 bingles off Lefty Wilburn, and 7 bobbles from the other members of the Maryville team.

The Highlanders gathered 7 hits from Adams, the Wasp moundsman, but failure to bunch these hits resulted in the Maryville defeat. Those who sat shivering in the stands sympathized with the Maryville diamonders who made the seven errors. But there was no sympathy for the Wasp fielders, for sympathy was not needed. Kuhn, E-H first baseman, made the only error for the Blue and Gray.

Russell's snag of Sessoms' line drive and turning the play into a double play by pegging to Hughes on third looked like real ball playing, but except for this play Maryville spectators will agree the cold weather holds no good in store for the Scots.

Grass is beginning to sprout again on the "cow trails" at Texas State college for Women, according to an editorial in the college paper. It seems that editorials, fences, and all other methods did absolutely nothing toward keeping studes off the grass until the student council members appealed to the soft spots in their hearts with such signs as "How would you like to be stepped on?", "Give me a sporting chance to rise in the world!" and other such pleas.

Student Vols To Hold Picnic Next Wednesday

The spring picnic of the Student Volunteer association will be held on Wednesday afternoon, April 26. The group will assemble in front of Pearsons hall and will proceed to the college woods on a "trip to the West Indies."

Stops are planned along the way at Cuba and Porto Rico, where members of the group may participate in games of various kinds before resuming their trip to the Antilles.

Dr. Orr is scheduled to speak at the devotional part of the program, to be given after supper around the campfire.

Triangle Club Picnic Today

Sixty members of the Triangle club met at the book store at 3 this afternoon and proceeded to the college farm for a picnic. Softball in the pasture and other outdoor games were scheduled. Dinner will be served around an open fire. Following the meal, a barn dance will be held and a short program present. Dr. and Mrs. Fred A. Griffitts and Dr. Ralph Collins accompanied the party.

Selections By Victor Herbert At Disc Club

At the meeting of the Disc club last Thursday afternoon selections from the works of Victor Herbert were heard. They were from the record library of Mr. McNaughton, of Knoxville, who commented on them during the program. A few months ago he lent the club his records of the opera "Cavaleria Rusticana." He has over forty volumes of records and is well acquainted with stories and anecdotes behind many of the works of the great masters.

The works heard Thursday included music from "Babes in Toyland", "Kiss Me Again", selections from "Naughty Marietta", and the Dagger Dance from "Natoma".

Fifteen Seniors Plan To Continue Work Next Year

At least fifteen Maryville senior men will continue their work in medical schools or theological seminaries next year, according to reports received recently from various institutions over the country. Word has been sent from Vanderbilt University Medical school that Ivan Elder has been accepted as one of the fifty-two students accepted each year from over eight hundred applicants for entrance. Lynn Curtis has won a teaching fellowship in the Biology department at Vanderbilt. These men will have access to the newly opened million-dollar addition to the Medical school.

Wilbert Looloian and Miles Dills will enter Temple School of Medicine next fall and George Felknor has been accepted at Tulane university.

Nine men will enroll in theological seminaries next year. Bruce Morgan, Howard Davis and Ernest Enslin have recently received acceptances from Princeton seminary; and John Magill, Robert Lucero, and William McGill from the seminary of University of Chicago. Warren Ashby will enter Yale Divinity and Fred Rhody the Drew Theological seminary next year. Carl Seybold will continue his work at Hahnemann. Robert Brandriff will enter Harvard university in the fall to prepare for his Masters in English.

Twilight Concert Given By The Music Students Before Chilhowee Club

On Tuesday afternoon at 4:00, the members and guests of the Chilhowee club heard another of the Twilight concerts presented annually by Maryville college music students. Program notes given by Miss Katharine Davies, head of the music department, and a varied musical program by the students composed of the afternoon's entertainment.

The concert consisted of six parts. Louise Felknor began the program with a piano solo, and was accompanied on the second piano by Miss Davies. John Guinter, accompanied by Louise Marshall, gave three selections of violin music. Elizabeth Ann Huddleston sang two songs and was accompanied at the piano by Miss Ruth Thompson. Piano solos by Bernice Smith and Anne Abel followed. A trio composed of John Guinter, violinist; Erwin Ritzman, cellist; and Zula Vance, pianist, concluded the program with one selection.

Rev. Mark Andrews Speaks

Rev. Mark Andrews, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Harlan, Ky., will address the student body in the chapel on Wednesday morning.

The Rev. Andrews has been a visitor on the campus before, also in chapel, and has a daughter now in the sophomore class as well as two sons who have graduated from Maryville.

Dr. Stevenson Gives Topic

"Need for the Trumpet's Triumphant Tune" will be Dr. William P. Stevenson's topic at the regular Sunday evening vesper service in Voorhees chapel. The choir will sing Noble Cain's arrangement of "Psalm of Life."

quizzes and the teachers who give them.

The second student, the shedding tooth brush hater, has, we must admit, every right to be indignant. Tooth brushes with toupee hair do not belong in modern society, but that is no reason why he should brood over his bristle troubles. He will begin to get that "Is this you at forty" complex and his own hair, perhaps out of sympathy, perhaps from pure worry, will start falling out. Then he WILL worry, and many a man has worried himself into another world. My advice to him is to buy a new tooth brush at the first sign of molting, and thus save his mind and his molars.

Borrowing neighbors—that is something else again. Here the human element enters the picture, or more exactly, the room and helps herself to whatever is handy, with a well-meant promise to "bring it back in a minute." To forget is human; to forgive, humorless; but becoming peeved at the "Lady Next Door" will not return the dozens of your articles that have found their way into her room. We suggest that she start borrowing them back.

Church attendance reports — this young lady claims she despises Tuesday morning chapel because of the color of the reports. She insists, in all seriousness, that if they were emerald green or copenhagen blue, instead of yellow, it would be easier to forget that she did not go to church last Sunday. As it is she must tell the truth or the color of the paper shines before her eyes all day. Such a peeve is indeed pitiful. She seeks a change which would hurt her instead of helping her. Unquestionably, the honor reports would be less accusing if they were emerald green, but who could write "New Providence Presbyterian Sunday School" on such a color and not feel a bit seasick by the time the "1" is reached?

Women smoking in public—This ground is too dangerous; but one friend of mine says, "Is nothing sacred any more?"

There are several other pet peeves worthy of comment here but just listen to a few other annoyances that bother your brothers and sisters: "holding doors for minutes on end while women pass unconcernedly by", "men with bow ties", "breaking shoe laces", "beans", foolish questions", "mailmen who ignore my room", "blondes", "brunettes", "r e d-heads", "dust", and "vitamin advertisements for soaps, soups, and saps."

Mine? Ha! My pet peeve is people with pet peeves. I see red every time somebody says "That's my pet peeve." (signed) Dr. Knott-Allthere.

P.S. We just can't do a thing with him. (signed) The Keeper.

Musical Program in Alpha

The regular weekly meeting of Alpha Sigma will be held in Anderson hall tonight at 6:45. An all-musical program has been planned, including the playing of Carl Wells, Al Seamans, and Robert Paul, and the vocalizing of Margaret Halsey.

Play Will Be Presented At French Club Meeting

At the French club meeting Wednesday evening, April 26, the program originally planned for the last meeting will be given. A play entitled "Nicette" directed by Ruth Moore will be presented by members of the French club. David Kidder, Margaret Hodges, Mark Davis, and Stanley Bird are to take part in the entertainment which was planned by the program committee composed of Louise Curtis and Irma Sue Pate. The meeting will be held in Alpha Sigma hall at 6:45.

Members Of Law Club Hold Annual Election

Members of the Law club will meet in Athenian hall next Wednesday evening at 6:45 to elect officers for next year.

Hugh L. Smith, president of the club, stated that all members of the club should make a special effort to be present, as the meeting is one of the most important business meetings of the year. Besides the election of officers for next year, there are several amendments to the constitution to be considered, and arrangements for the banquet are to be discussed.

The German club heartily invites all who are interested to join them in enjoying these pictures. The travelogues are in English, so that they can be readily understood by students not studying the German language. Several German songs will be sung at the gatherings, and a brief business meeting will be led by Ivan Blake, president of the club.

constitution. We are now away from that....

"The problem," he continued, "which we now face is to permanently improve the program of the society—to get away from some of the formality. We want the program to be vital, progressive, and informal without being shoddy. Our purpose it to develop variety."

When asked about the plans of the society, President Magill replied that "if it is to be a social organization, it follows that much of its activity shall come from the members themselves. It's the object of the new society to do what they want done, and in the manner in which they want it done."

Theta Alpha Phi Names Winner Of Dramatics Award

Athenian-Bainonian Play Chosen Outstanding Production

"You Can't Take It With You", presentation of Athenian and Bainonian societies, has been awarded the Theta Alpha Phi cup for the outstanding midwinter of the year, announced Sara Bolton, president of the Maryville chapter, today. This is the second consecutive year that the midwinter of these societies has won the cup, last year's production of "Night Must Fall" having been so honored.

"You Can't Take It With You" was selected over the Alpha Sigma-Theta Epsilon bid, "Quality Street." The judges also commended this play as an outstanding production. The judges were Dr. Edwin R. Hunter, Miss Gertrule Meiselwitz, and Robert Brandriff of the college, and Miss Ellen Hitch and Mrs. Kenneth Martin of the town.

Presented on February 24, the winning play was a comedy portraying the life in the scatter-brained Sycamore family, who lived in New York, "just around the corner from Columbia university." It is from the pens of George Kaufman and Moss Hart, outstanding Broadway playwrights, and has enjoyed a successful run as a stage production and as a motion picture.

The leading roles in the Maryville production were taken by Sara Bolton as Penelope Sycamore, and John Wintermute as Grandpa Vanderhof. Mrs. Nita Eckles West directed the play, and a production staff headed by William McGill and Glenn Young managed what was an outstanding thing about the play, an extensive advertising campagin and a clever and artful stage.

Theta Alpha Phi at its last meeting elected two new members. Louise Allen and Edward Thomas. They will be initiated at a meeting on May 10.

Arnold Kramer Wins First Place In Yearly Oratorical Contest

Arnold Kramer a junior from Maryville, Tennessee, was named the winner of the William H. Bates Oratorical Prize Foundation contest held in the philosophy classroom last week. Kramer is well known in Tennessee scholastic circles for his oratorical and debating ability and is a member of Pi Kappa Delta, national debating fraternity. His subject title was "Democracy a Dream?". The prize, amounting to about forty dollars, interest on the thousand dollar fund established several years ago, will be presented at the commencement exercises in June.

Judges were associate professors L. L. Williams and J. H. Kiger, Dr. E. R. Hunter, Dr. George Allen Knapp, and Dr. Edmund W. Davis. Mr. R. J. Dollenmayer acted as chairman; Miss Jessie K. Johnson was in general charge of the contest.

Other participants were Warren Ashby, George Hunt, Roland Tapp, John Magill, and James Jarrell. The contest is open to men of the junior and senior classes one year, and to the women of the same classes the next.

Dr. Campbell To Read Paper At Faculty Club

Dr. Claude A. Campbell, associate professor of economics, will read a paper on "Public Finance in Tennessee" at the faculty dinner to be held on the third floor of Fayerweather hall next Monday evening at 6:30.

Dr. Campbell's paper is a special study of the financial conditions of the various governmental divisions in the state of Tennessee. The first section of the paper deals with the revenue (taxes and other sources), expenditures and indebtedness of the state. The second division deals with revenue, expenditures, and indebtedness of the county and city governments of the state.

This paper is a special study prepared for the occasion by Dr. Campbell and is expected to give a very interesting and educational account of the financial affairs of the state.

NOTICE

Due to the organ recital, which will be held at 10 o'clock, the class schedule for Wednesday morning will be altered as follows: B period classes will meet at 8:10; C classes at 9:05; and D classes at 11:15.

Wilburn Elected As President Of Athletic Board

Heron, Griffitts, Chosen To Represent Faculty By College

"Nig" Wilburn, a junior from Loudon, Tennessee, was elected president of the Maryville Athletic Board of Control, at the annual election held after the morning service in the college chapel yesterday morning. Other officers elected at the same time include: J. D. Hughes, vice president; Douglas Steakley, secretary; Lyn Tyndall, Gordon Findlay, Jimmy Rae, Ada Summers, and Hal Henschen as class representatives; and Miss Jessie Heron and Dr. Fred Griffitts as faculty representatives.

"Nig", an all 'round athlete and student, is a protege of one of Maryville's outstanding athletes of former years, "Shorty" McCall. McCall, a three-letter graduate of Maryville in 1929, and now principal of Loudon high school, has contributed much to Wilburn's success as an athlete. Wilburn has lettered in both football and baseball, and is a member of Alpha Sigma society.

Hughes, a sophomore from Guntersville, Ala., is also a two-letter man, of football and baseball, and is a member of Alpha Sigma.

Steakley, a sophomore from Jefferson,

Class Of 1940 Nominate Officers

Otto Pflanze and Erwin Ritzman are presented as candidates for the presidency of the class of 1940 and will be voted on next Wednesday at the class meeting immediately following chapel announced the nominating committee today.

Pflanze is editor of the 1939 Chilhowean and a member of the debate squad; and Ritzman is chairman of the social committee and vice president of the YMCA for next year.

Other candidates presented by the nominating committee are Ruth Crawford and Joy Corrigan for vice president, Ruth Mack and Barbara McCutcheon for secretary; James Etheredge and Ralph Reed for treasurer.

Nominations may be made from the floor at the meeting Wednesday.

Those serving on the nominating committee are Tommy Schafer, Arda Walker, Harold Austin, Edith Evans, and Tommy Taylor.

Student Council Elects Ruth Woods

Ruth Woods, a junior from Greenback, Tenn., was elected president, pro tem., of the Student Council, at a meeting of the council held on Monday evening.

Miss Woods is a member of the college choir, a member of the glee club, a member of the Bainonian society, and is a student-assistant in the college library. She is an accomplished soloist, and took one of the leading solo parts in Handel's oratorio, "The Messiah" presented at Christmas time under the auspices of the college department of fine arts; she also took a leading solo part in the recently produced comic opera, "The Sorcerer."

Movie In Chapel Tonight At 8:30

This evening at 8:30 in the chapel, the social committee will present a feature picture, "The Hoosier Schoolmaster," and two short subjects.

The movie will be free, and will be a great improvement over a former presentation, the committee states.

College To Hold Music Week With Special Programs

The Music Department Will Present Barber, Vance In Recitals

Music week, an annual affair in the college, will be celebrated during the week beginning May 7, with the organ dedication and senior recitals. On May 10 at 10:00, Mr. Frank Nelson, who is organist and choir director at the St. John's Episcopal church of Knoxville, will dedicate the organ in a recital.

Harriet Barber, contralto, assisted by Anne Abel, will be presented in a senior recital on the evening of May 9, in Voorhees chapel. She will sing from the works of Hadyn, Handel, LaForge, Schubert, Bohn, Brahms, Verdi, Golard, Ganz, Mednikoff and Charles. Miss Abel will, besides accompanying Miss Barber, play three numbers, two of Debussy and one of Ravel.

Wednesday afternoon at 4 in the Fine Arts studio, Dorothy Horne, violinist, and Ruth Thompson, pianist, will present a sonata recital, playing three sonatas. The first: Sonata in A major Op. 30, No. 1, by Beethoven. This belongs to the second period of the composer's development, and shows his growth as a harmonist, while still adhering to the classic sonata form. The second; Sonata in F major, Op. 8

Law Club Elects Webster As President For Coming Year

George Webster was elected president of the Law club for the coming year at the last meeting of the club held last Wednesday evening, April 23, in Athenian hall. He succeeds Hugh L. Smith, who has served during the past year.

Robert Wilcox was elected vice president; Barbara Anderson, secretary; John Ballenger, treasurer; Hilton Wick, sergeant-at-arms; and William Felknor, reporter.

Next Wednesday evening at 6:45 in Athenian hall the club will have its third mock-trial of the year with the newly elected president presiding as judge. Otto Pflanze, Hugh Smith and Arthur Byrne will represent the prosecution in the trial and Horace Brown, James Rich and Frank Montgomery will serve as defense counsel. Other court officers are Hilton Wick, courtcrier and William Felknor, sheriff.

The prosecution has not yet secured a warrent from the sheriff; so the exact nature of the trial is not as yet known. With the array of legal talent displayed on both sides, however, the case is sure to excite as much public interest as the previous trials.

Sophomores Name Baird President For Coming Year

Popular Athlete Elected To Position With Pinneo As Secretary

The class of 1941 elected William Baird president for the coming year at a class meeting held last Wednesday morning after chapel by a majority of the votes cast on the first ballot. Lilly Pinneo was elected secretary at the same time also by a majority of the votes cast.

Dorothy DePue was elected vice-president and Gordon Findlay, treasurer in the second primary held Friday afternoon.

William Baird, who comes from Kilbourne, Ohio, was representative to the student council from his class last year, athletic director of the YMCA, and Athenian program secretary. Baird has also taken a very active part in athletics, having made letters in football for two years, track for two years, and in basketball this year.

Baird first enrolled at Maryville in 1937, but due to injuries sustained in an accident, he was compelled to leave school for a year. He enrolled again with the class of '41 last year.

M Club Members Leave For Twelve Mile Mt. Hike

This noon at 12:30, twenty-five old and new members of the M club left the campus on a twelve mile hike to Gamble's cabin where they plan to spend the week end. The group was accompanied by Mrs. Verton M. Queener and Mary Gamble. They will return to the campus late Sunday afternoon.

The eleven new members of the club have just been admitted, and this is the first year that the new members have gone on the annual spring trip with the group. Those members are: L. Allen, Cruze, McCutcheon, Jenkins, Jensen, Persing, Stone, Summers, Tontz, Wynn, and Naberhuis. They were given membership in the club after having earned 400 or more points in the women's point system during the past season.

Lyn Tyndall is the program chairman and is being assisted by Jane Corry. Ruth Crawford is in charge of assigning the duties, and Virginia Partridge has charge of the food.

This is the second trip of the M club during the year, the first being to Look Rock last fall.

Ministerial Elects Lyons As President

Monday evening, members of the Ministerial association elected E. Vaughn Lyons president for the coming year and William Lewis and John H. Thompson, first and second vice presidents respectively. Other officers chosen were secretary-treasurer, Arthur Peterson, and custodian, Charles Fish.

A candle-light inauguration service will be held Monday evening at which retiring president Howard Davis will give a farewell address and the newly-elected president will present his inaugural address. The service will start at 6:45 in Athenian hall.

Formal Dedication Of Organ With Recital By Nelson At Special Service Wednesday

Organist To Present Nine Numbers Of Famous Composers

MID-MORNING SERVICE

Program One Of Series To Celebrate Music Week At Maryville

Frank Nelson, organist and choir master for the St. John's Episcopal church of Knoxville, will be presented in recital at the program for the dedication of the new college organ on Wednesday morning May 10, at 10:00 in the chapel.

Mr. Nelson will play three groups of numbers: the first, the "Allegro" from the "Concerto in D Minor" by Handel; "Adagio" from "Toccato in C", and "Andante Nobile' by Bach.

For his second group, Mr. Nelson has chosen Arcadelt's "Ave Maria"; "All Souls" by Schubert; and Schumann's "Evening Song". He will close the program with the "Prelude" from "Lohengrin," "Rhinejourney" from "Goetterdaemmerung", and "Prelude" from "Tristan and Isolde" by Wagner. This will be one in a series of programs in celebration of Music Week.

B and C period classes will meet at 8:10 and 9:05 a.m., respectively Wednesday and D period classes at 11:15.

This will be the first formal dedication of the new organ, completed only last Saturday. It was played for the first time in public at the Tuesday morning chapel service. The organ was built by the Wick Organ Co., of Highland, Ill., and was shipped here on April 19. Installation of the organ was in charge of Joseph Weickhardt, organ builder, with the aid of college help, and was completed in a little more than two weeks.

Cost of the organ was approximately $4,000, all but $125 of which has been met. The organ was purchased by the combination of several large gifts from benefactors outside the college and contributions from college students and members of the faculty. As the result of an Organ Fund drive made early this year under the direction of the senior class, two parts of the organ, chimes and the Voce Celestial stop, not in the original plans, were able to be purchased.

The organ has two manuals and occupies the space of the former alcove with the console on the main floor to the right of the stage. It contains 657 pipes, 145 of which are of wood and 511 metal. The wooden pipes are built of straight grain spruce and the larger metal pipes of annealed zinc. Smaller metal pipes are made of an alloy of

May Day Court Visits Arden In Annual Pageant

The Queen And Her Court See Scenes From "As You Like It"

Monday afternoon, May 1, the College amphitheatre was the scene of the annual May Day pageant. The Queen and her Court visited the Forest of Arden in which characters and scenes from "As You Like It" were presented.

The May Queen, Marguerite Justus, wearing a gown of white silk marquisette appeared from the right meeting the King, Gene Orr, at the bridge in the immediate foreground. Then the two proceeded across the green to the throne where the attendants were waiting.

The senior attendants of the Queen, Virginia Lee Schaeffer and Lois Barnwell, wore aqua dresses with small hoop skirts and immediately preceded the King and Queen. The junior attendants were Barbara Anderson, escorted by Ralph Reed, and James Etheredge with Betsy Gaultney. The two girls wore pink net dresses while the sophomore girls wore blue of the same style. The sophomore choices and their partners were Lula Wade Diggs with Douglas Steakley and Dale Russell with Dorothy DePue. Marion Northup with Dudley Moore and Marion Birmingham with Peggy Carter were the freshman representatives. The freshman girls had yellow dresses of the same style and material as the girls of the other classes and all carried bouquets of various flowers and colors. Jean Stringham and Anita Rayburn led the procession as pages one carrying

Evaul Is Elected By Student Vols

Philip Evaul, sophomore from Hadden Heights, New Jersey, was elected president of the Student Volunteers at the election held last Tuesday night in Bainonian hall. During the first semester, he led the Triangulars as their president, and fulfilled the duties of secretary-treasurer for the Ministerial association. Next year will be his second year on the Y cabinet.

Other officers elected were Suzanne Fickes, vice president; Lily Pinneo, corresponding secretary; John Thompson, recording secretary; Vaughn Lyons, treasurer; and Elsie Klingman and Arthur Peterson program secretaries.

The program tomorrow night will consist of music by the choir from the colored Methodist church in Maryville.

Y. W. C. A. Dedicates New Grand Piano

On Sunday, April 30, the YWCA held a short dedication service of their new baby grand piano. The piano, a Hamilton, which is a Baldwin make, was made possible through the building fund in connection with the Y Shoppe. The plans have been in progress for two years and were completed by this year's cabinet during the last month.

The meeting opened with a piano prelude by Zula Vance. Following the reading of the scripture, Miss Ruth Thompson played a piano solo, "Poeme" by Scriabine. A flute solo, "Serenade" by Tith was played by Thelma Ritzman, accompanied by Anne Abel. After a brief explanation of "The Swan" by Palmgren, Miss Katharine Davies concluded the service with the musical interpretation of this composition.

Echo Manager Chosen

Dale Mathias, a junior, was elected business manager of the Highland Echo for the next year. He was a member of the business staff this year, being advertising manager. Mathias will begin his duties this week.

J. Edward Thomas will be managing editor, and Douglas Steakley, sports editor on the new Echo staff.

Workshop Chooses Seven New Members For Coming Year

Seven new members were elected to the Writer's Workshop last Monday afternoon in Dr. Hunter's classroom: Charlotte Moughton, Paul Akana, Aline Campbell, Mary Orr, Howard Dizney, Isabelle Jay, and Charles Baldwin. Mignonne Myers and Harold Copeland will resume their membership when they return next fall. George Hunt, Miss Johnson, John Fisher, and Ruth Abercrombie will act as the governing board for the coming year; and Jane Law, Roland Tapp, Dr. Hunter, and Miss Heron will serve as the membership committee. Initiation of the new members will take place at the annual picnic next Tuesday in the picnic grounds behind Dr. Stevenson's home.

The six best compositions selected each semester by the group, were chosen as follows; Little Matt, a short story by Arthur Byrne; Anatomy of Doubt, a poem by Bruce Morgan; Switch Engine, short story by Roland Tapp; The Thousandth and One Night, a short story by John Fisher; A Chat With Anderson's Ghost, essay by Bill Alston; and Illusion, a short story by Helen Bewley.

At the meetings each Monday afternoon, members of either the society or the faculty read original pieces. The Workshop requires one paper a semester of any sort of creative writing from each member. Each must also lead the criticism once a semester, a rule new this year.

Joe Has Spent 27 Years Building Organs

By CHARLES ORR

Everyone knows Joe. At least, everyone who has had enough curiosity during the past two weeks to wander into the chapel and try to fathom the mysteries of an organ, knows Joe. Joe was the quiet friendly little man who so quickly erected an organ from the chaos of lumber and metal tubes that was planted on the chapel stage three weeks ago. Joe is the organ builder.

Joseph Weickhardt was born of German parents at Lake Constance in the southern part of Germany, where, just across the lake, the recent Graf Zeppelin was built. His father was an organ builder and the head of an organ company. When Joe was eight years old he came with his parents to America. They made their home in Milwaukee, Wisconsin and his father, continuing in his trade, organized the Weickhardt Organ Co. While he was in school Joe worked about the factory and it was natural for him to follow his father's work when he finished. He first took courses in mechanical and architectural drawing and then went into his father's business, later taking it over entirely. Those were the days before organs were built by machinery and had to be built by hand. This was delicate and exacting work, but many of the Weickhardt organs in Milwaukee and Chicago are still in good shape and use. His experience is wide and he has handled nearly every machine in the organ factory.

Before he was of age his father received his citizenship, automatically making Joe a United States citizen.

Mr. Weickhardt has been building and assembling organs for twenty-seven years. For the past four years he has been in his present capacity with the Wick Organ Co., of Highland, Ill., builders of our organ. He travels constantly, his work consisting mostly of assembling and installing organs. However, he does a great deal of work in organ tuning, toning, and designing.

Everyone calls him "Joe"—by his own choice. He is a patient and efficient worker and never lets work, help or the curious ruffle him. He is a small stature and his hair is rather thin on top; but after all—he has built or installed over four hundred different organs during his life! He usually travels alone and takes his help where he can find it. The largest organ he ever installed was one costing $37,000 in the Vibiana Cathedral in Los Angeles, Cal., and took four months to assemble. Our organ cost approximately $4,000 and was two weeks in assembling. He expressed his thanks to Glenn Young and Oliver Williams who did much of the installation, and to all others who helped him in the work.

Mr. Weickhardt owns a beautiful white home in Milwaukee with a large formal garden and ever-flowing fountain, recently built by himself. He

Let's Do It Again

The dedication of the organ on next Wednesday morning should be the realization by the students of the control or power they have in promoting and furthering valuable and worth-while projects for their own and the college's welfare. The organ has been a goal of the college for several years, and a goal that seemed still far from its attainment until the student body became aroused and entered whole-heartedly into the plan to increase the organ fund with their own contributions. The result has already been seen during the past two weeks while the organ was being installed.

Twenty percent of the total amount of money for the organ was furnished by the student body. To receive such a percentage when we consider the small pledges made by each student signifies the cooperation of the entire student body. The organ fund would eventually have grown so that it would have been possible to install the organ, but the energy and enthusiasm with which the students accepted the plan when it was presented by Weldon Baird, is the thing which we applaud. And the whole plan was carried to completion, not laid aside as so many such things are accustomed to be!

There is not one of those students who contributed toward the organ who does not feel a personal interest in it. This attitude is a common one. When a person has aided in any way a project for the improvement and appreciation of himself and others, he cannot help but feel that he is responsible for it.

This cooperation of the students is often what is called "college spirit." Whatever it may be called, we could use more of it on our campus. There are other projects which, if the student body would bind itself together as a whole, could be achieved. These wouldn't necessarily involve pledges for something obtainable by money, but there are things which could be furthered and made more successful if the students did get behind them. Only a small amount of success can be procured by a project if one faction wins slightly over the opposition of another faction. There must, of course, be a certain amount of friendly opposition to every plan, but we believe that the greatest success can be obtained by aiming at the highest ideals and the best plans for the welfare of the college and the students. However, we must have the cooperation of the whole student body as was witnessed in the final realization of an organ for the enjoyment of the entire college!

May Day

For one of the most successful May Days in years the Echo extends congratulations and gratitude to those who were in charge of last Monday's festivities. Each year the YWCA sponsors the spring festival and receives the cooperation of the pageantry class and the glee clubs from the fine arts department and the women's interpretative dancing class of the physical education department. This year those who were responsible for the program were Jane Law and Charlotte Moughton from the YWCA, Mrs. Nita E. West and Miss Ruth Thompson from the fine arts department, and Mrs. Evelyn Queener from the physical education department. Our thanks are extended to these people and to the many others who contributed to the pageant, from a charming May Queen and her attendants to the committee that provided the amplifier.

UP OUR HALL

By GEORGE L. HUNT

The highlights of our three years at Maryville have been the programs on the artist series. Such artists as Josef Hoffman, John Charles Thomas, Moriz Rosenthal, Anna Kaskas, Jussi Bjoerling, have been brought to our college by an active committee headed by Professor Howell. A fine program is planned for next year. From an inconspicuous beginning the artist series has grown to be a recognized cultural feature of East Tennessee. Add to the musical artists such speakers as Dean Mims of Vanderbilt and former Ambassador Dodd and we have a picture of what has been provided by the college from the country's outstanding personalities. Impressive but doesn't it look a little out of balance? Could we not obtain some of the nation's outstanding speakers as well as its musical artists? We hear some of the best ministers every week but after nine months the diet gets rather tiresome and it is hardly fair to the recent speakers to look into the uninspiring faces of eight hundred students who have been hearing the same thing for about thirty-five weeks (although last week's guest was a welcome exception.) At the moment we have no suggestions but it is an idea there are many political, philosophic literary figures who would be valuable assets to our program.

When the National Geographic landed in the mailbox early this week we hurriedly scanned the first article, which was on Tennessee, to find some pictures of Maryville or the Great Smokies (to us Yankees the two are practically synonymous.) There were none of Maryville, but the mountains had their share. Maryville was mentioned in the article as being near the aluminum plant. 'Tis a crying shame, not even a line of type on our institution when Sewanee University of the South had a colored picture of its library.

• • • •

With daylight saving time all programs from the north are on an hour earlier. Since this puts the Sunday Evening Hour on at 7 p.m. and this makes a conflict with our vespers service, we have felt it best to discontinue publishing the program.

• • • •

Today is the day of the big classic, the Lawyers-Teachers softball game. All sorts of possibilities present themselves—a hymn between innings, a prayer with each pitch, saving the soul of the umpire, using the book of Hezakiah for a rule book, amen and hallaya for each point, and a sermon from the pitcher (Brother Heydinger, I believe.) On the liars side we could hace reference to the cases Batt vs. Bawl, State of Franklin, 1782, appealing the decision, cross-examining the umpire, and so forth. Sorry these suggestions did not come out sooner, but maybe you could repeat the game at the next As You Like It.

Merry-Dille Go Round

By FRED RHODY

Two things we're not going to even mention in this column: senior comprehensives and secret organizations. We're tired of hearing about both of them.

• • • •

While we're on the subject of comprehensives, we're reminded how shocked a person would be if he discovered that he did as poorly on an exam as he had been telling everyone he did.

• • •

This "secret frat" talk has everyone so disconcerted that a man's afraid to vote even for himself in an election. Nope, can't trust nobudy these days!

• • • •

We don't like to say this, but we were sort of disillusioned Thursday afternoon. Somehow or other the seniors got the idea that it's a custom for the faculty to buy the toiling students ice-cream cones, cold drinks, and the like, to help beguile away the tedious hours of comprehensives. The thing didn't pan out. (This is being written Thursday night. The teachers may redeem themselves tomorrow).

• • • •

About this secret society which, according to rumor, has a way of getting people elected to things: if several hundred students will allow a few dozen other students to pull the wool over their eyes, then more power to the few dozen wide-awake ones!

• • • •

With all its modern miracles of science, the present age has yet to bring forth a machine which will photograph the content's of a senior's brain, and so do away with the necessity of measuring the brain-content by examinations.

• • • •

Isn't it almost true that one of the principal objections we have to the reputedly politically-active secret organization is that we were never asked to join? (It follows that the organization can get rid of all opposition by asking everyone to join.)

• • • •

Dr. Orr did his part toward rescuing the seniors taking Bible comprehensives Thursday: he passed around a package of Life Savers.

From secret sources the theme song of the much-publicized secret society has been learned: "You win the one next to you, and I'll win the one next to me." But since the results of the past few elections have been tabulated, there has been talk of changing the song to: "Wasn't It Wonderful, Dear, While It Lasted?"

• • • •

There are two things we've heard too much about recently: senior comprehensives and secret societies. That's why we haven't mentioned them in this column.

TALK OF THE WEEK . By Arlene Phelps

Organ Recital

(Cont. From Page One)

40 percent block tin and 55 percent lead. Lengths of the pipes range from 16 feet to 1-2 inch and from 11 inches to one-fourth inch in diameter. The front of the organ is covered by a large oak screen, beautifully designed to harmonize with the architecture of the interior of the chapel. The console is also of polished stained oak, and is movable. It has complete electric action and is controlled by means of electric magnets. Magnets at the base of each pipe and on the control board for each key operate four equalizers which control four inch air supply tubes to chests of the Swell Grate and Pedal organs.

The organ narrowly missed being demolished in an accident in transit, but escaped with only minor injuries.

Miss Katharine Davies, head of the department of Fine Arts, will have charge of the organ and act as organist. Plans are now in progress to offer a limited number of students organ lessons during the next semester.

Athletic Board

Ohio, has lettered in both cross-country and track, is a trainer for football, and a member of Alpha Sigma.

Both Miss Heron and Dr. Griffitts have been actively engaged in the athletic activities of the hill for several years and are both popular with all the members of the various athletic teams of the college.

The Board is elected each year in the week following the first Monday in May. Among its duties are the awarding of letters and monograms, the election of managers, the awarding of prizes for the breaking of records, the conducting of all athletic business, and the controlling of all athletic activities of the school.

Alpha Sig To Hear Debate In Meeting

A debate on the question, "Resolved: That the Alpha Sigma society offers better advantages to prospective members than the Athenian," will be featured at the regular weekly meeting of the Alpha Sigma society tonight at 7:00. John Ballenger will discuss the affirmative, and George Webster, an Athenian, will take the negative.

Special music has been planned for the meeting, and "Mr. Surprise" will feature his "Wonder Men" in a group of impromptu speeches. A brief business meeting will be led by the president of the society, Arthur Byrne.

Bainonian Views Fair

Bainonian will present an unofficial review of the high spots of the New York World's Fair, which opened officially May 3, at 6:45 Saturday evening in Bainonian hall. Grover Whalen will be the star of the program.

French Club To Hold Banquet On Wednesday

Wednesday evening, May 10, at 6:30, the French club will have their annual banquet at the Southern Methodist church. The banquet will be formal and is closed. The decorations are to be in blue, white and red, while the menus and place cards are to be combined in the form of a fleur-de-lis.

During and after the banquet there will be entertainment provided by various members of the club. Stanley Bird and David Kidder will play the piano, Arlene Barrett will give a reading, Mr. Ralph Hovel will sing, Etta Culbertson will give an after-dinner speech.

Dr. E. W. Davis is to be toastmaster for the occasion. Dr. and Mrs. Lloyd and faculty members of the foreign language department and their wives will be guests.

May Day

the Queen's crown on a pillow and the other a trumpet under her arm.

The King having crowned the Queen with a crown of gardenias, wood-nymphs appeared from the forest, bearing garlands and flowers. With Hettiebelle Whitehill and Carol Dawn Ward as the central figures, two groups of nymphs did special dancing. Then Sara Bolton as Rosalind, disguised as a man, and David Hall of Touchstone of Shakespeare's "As You Like It" appeared. The two had recently been banished from court and were then discussing verses which they found on the trees. At this time all the fair ladies of Arden entered and danced and sang together in the Forest of Arden. Jacques, John Wintermute, entered laughing at Touchstone. Charlotte Colby as a water-nymph appeared in a special dance and was followed by singers. Frank Brink as Orlando, also banished from court, tacked his verses on the trees; he met Rosalind but did not recognize her. The Maypole was then brought in and the familiar Maypole dance with several variations took place.

In the final scene Orlando was seen with Rosalind being married by Jacques with the help of Touchstone and a huge ring. At this final ceremony the wood-nymphs re-appeared.

The program was sponsored by the YWCA and directed by the Pageantry class. Mrs. Nita Eckles West was general director, Mrs. Verton Queener, dance director, and Miss Ruth K. Thompson, music director. Pageant directors were Carol Dawn Ward, Mary Frances Spurlock, John Wintermute, Sara Bolton, and Gordon Bennett. The YWCA committee helping with the program were Charlotte Moughton and Jane Law.

SCOTTY SIDE SLANTS

By the
Sports Editor

LOTS OF NOISE

Enthusiasm is running a new high at the baseball games played at Maryville. Despite the fact that the Highlanders have dropped a few games this season, the crowd has always been appreciative and has shown their approval of the Scot nine with plenty of vocal support. In the last Lincoln Memorial game when "Casey" was at bat in the ninth inning and the Honakermen needed but one run to tie the score and the tying and winning runs were on third and second, the crowd fairly groaned on each pitch that was called a strike. This enthusiasm goes a long way towards helping any team out. The baseball team has been doing right well by themselves this season, and the continued support of you fans might help them win the conference crown despite pre-season indications.

SHINY NEW PANTS

The football team has nice new pants, satin, and old gold in color. They say that under the floodlights they will really shine. Well, the pants aren't the only things that we are hoping will shine. Maryville should have one of the strongest football teams that she has had in a number of years. Perhaps she can win the elusive conference championship that slipped so neatly out of her grasp last fall. Oh well, maybe its too early to be talking about football anyhow.

TRACK NOTES

It would be kind of nice to win the state track meet this year. Anyway the thinly clads from the highlands are really pointing for that meet next week. All possible effort is being made to get all the invalids in shape for the meet, they are mainly our distance men, Al Davies, Everett Gray, and perhaps Floyd Green. It is probable, however, that Green will be unable to participate at all in the two mile run. Green has had plenty of tough luck this year and last, lets hope everything goes more smoothly for him next spring.

Sutton, our dash man, has been anxiously awaiting the state meet in order to go up against Bob Andridge of Tennessee again. Sutton won the century at Knoxville in the dual meet in 10.1 sec. Andridge a week later ran the same race in 10.1 sec. Now everyone wants to know just who is the best dash man in the state. According to the Knoxville papers, both of which seemed to be well informed, Andridge hasn't been in shape this year yet. According to our predictions, Sutton will take over "Breezer" Andridge in the state meet whether he is in shape or not.

Hedrick Leads Batting Attack As Teachers Fall 8-3

The Maryville baseball club outhit East Tennessee Teachers college on May Day, finishing with a margin of 8-5. Both teams were hitting well, but Sieber scattered the Teachers hits to hold them to only five runs. Both teams scoring evenly, with no inning seeing over two runs. This was the third conference win for the Scotties.

Honaker and Hedrick did the hitting and scoring. Little Scot led off the first inning on a walk and scored before Hughes, the next man up, touched the ball. Hedrick knocked out 3 for three, two of them good for two bags. White at second starred for the Teachers, playing faultless ball, and hitting three singles. Costing the Maryville team several runs, were the six errors that were committed in the infield.

Scot Nine Clips Eagles' Wings 15-3

The Maryville baseball nine lambasted Carson-Newman here last Saturday, collecting 15 runs to the Eagles' 3. The Scotties showed batting power again in their second conference win, knocking out five extra base hits among their total of 13.

The Maryville boys had two big innings, the sixth and seventh. In the sixth inning, Wilburn walked; McGaha was safe on a fielder's choice; Shelfer got a hit scoring Mac; Cragan slammed out a double scoring Shelfer; Etheredge knocked in Cragan; Honaker was safe on a mishandled grounder; Hughes walked, and Kindred finished the scoring with a clean single, pushing Honaker and Hughes across the plate. The total for the inning was seven runs. In the seventh it was the same heavy end beginning the spree of scoring, for six tallies. Honaker and Cragan contributing doubles, and Hughes slamming a four bagger. In the fourth Wilburn hit a long one for two bags; Carson-Newman was unable to get an extra base hit off Wilburn's pitching. The Scottie sluggers used three pitchers and held their errors to two.

U-T, Milligan And Chattanooga On Netter's Schedule

Evening the series with Carson-Newman, the Scottie tennis team smashed through to win their return match 4-3. In winning this match on Monday of last week, the homelings won three singles and the second doubles after the 7-0 defeat two days before by the Eagles.

Akana took a three set match from Walton 1-6, 6-4, 6-2 in the first singles. Gastrock won his match from Figg of the Eagles 6-2, 3-6, 6-2. In the second singles, McKinnon won Maryville's only two set victory, 6-3, 6-2. The combination of McKinnon and Gastrock cinched Maryville's outcome by beating Bowen and Figg.

On May first, Maryville met the Vol tennis team and came home the losers of a very well played match. The final score was 6-1. Maryville taking only the second doubles. However, the Scotties squad has a return match on Monday and hopes to tie up the series.

Gastrock and McKinnon won their doubles match over Tennessee's combination, 9-7, 6-4. Freshman Dave Kidder gave his opponent the most trouble in the other matches, being nosed out 6-2, 2-6, 4-6.

The Highland Netmen rolled over Lincoln Memorial Tuesday, by the lop-sided margin of 7-0. Maryville's team made it a field day swamping the unfortunate Railsplitters on the court and diamond on the same afternoon. On the LMU courts the Scotties were held to three sets in only one match. Maryville won four love sets during the afternoon's tennis.

Akana set the pace, downing the number one Isbell of LMU in straight sets, 6-4, 6-0. McKinnon won the second singles 6-2, 6-0. Gastrock had a little trouble in winning his match over Ockerman 8-6, 6-4. Kidder blasted Whittaker off the court losing only one game; Stevenson beat Merrill almost as badly, 6-2, 6-0. In the doubles matches Maryville's Akana and Stevenson won over Isbell and Ockerman in the best contested play, 3-6, 6-4, 8-6. McKinnon and Gastrock again took their doubles, this time over Mars and Whittaker by a final score of 6-4, 6-3.

The tennis team stays home for its next three matches, meeting the University of Tennessee here on Monday, Milligan on Tuesday, and Chattanooga on Thursday.

SMC Meet Draws Scot Thinly Clads To Johnson City

Records Due To Fall As Old Track Found To Be 54 Feet Short

Today the Maryville track squad, which is one of the strongest in the state, is at Johnson City attempting to defend her title of Smoky Mountain Conference champs. The Highlanders are heavy favorites, having already won victories over the University of Tennessee, and Lincoln Memorial university.

The teams that will be in the conference meet are East Tennessee Teachers college, Milligan college, Lincoln Memorial university, and Maryville college. The Conference meet, which was organized only a few years ago, has been won every time but once by the Scot thinly clads, being nosed out by Milligan college two years ago.

The track at Johnson City where the meet is held, was measured this spring and found to be 54 feet short of a quarter mile; consequently the records set on that track in the past two years are null and void. The records that are official will have to go back to when the meet was held here three years ago and four years ago. A complete list of the official records of the Smoky Mountain conference have been assembled and will be found below.

Many of these records are in danger of falling this year, and the Scotties are the ones to bring home the bacon. For example, the times in the 220 yd. dash, the 440 yd. dash, the relay and the 220 yard low hurdles have all been bettered by Maryville men this year. In addition to the running events, the javelin, the discus, and the high jump are all in danger of falling this afternoon.

Next week, the Scots are pointing to the biggest meet of the year, the state meet which will be held in Cookeville. The Highlanders are possible favorites to win the meet for the first time in history, a lot depends on the showing they make this afternoon in regard to their strength against tougher competition.

Honakermen Split Two Game Series With Railsplitters

The Maryville college baseball nine outhit but lost their second game of the series with Lincoln Memorial by a score of 8-7 on Wednesday. The day before, the Scotties gave the Railsplitters their first shelacking of the season, 14-4. Maryville has another crack at the conference leaders next week.

SECOND GAME

Wilburn again led the Scots knocking out three hits out of five bats, of which two were home runs. McGaha pulled out of his slump and got three for five, too. Little Scot Honaker got two hits. In the final inning of the game with the score 8-6 the Maryville lads started a rally with the LMU boys quaking; they fell short, however, managing to push only one man over the payoff plate, leaving a man perched on third when the game ended.

Both pitching staffs were pretty well riddled, LMU using two pitchers and Maryville three. For LMU, Walker at first base did most of the heavy hitting on Wednesday, placing three clean singles over the heads of the Scot infield.

Maryville plays Lincoln Memorial on Wednesday and Thursday at LMU.

Scot Trackmen Add Chattanooga To List Of Wins

The Maryville track team added another scalp to its list of victories last Saturday afternoon when they outran the University of Chattanooga 96 1-3 to 29 2-3. This was the only home meet for the Scotties this year and was run on a wet track which slowed up some of the times in the events considerably.

The Highlanders practically swept the entire meet, Chattanooga being able to take only two first places, the shot put and the broad jump. Weldon Baird, Maryville's ace track man and captain of the squad, was high point man of the meet, winning the mile run, the half mile run, and placing second in the discus and javelin, thus accounting for six points.

Bob Sutton, who Coach Thrower is hoping will cop the dashes in the conference and state meets, easily won both of his races, the 100 yd. dash and the 220 yd. dash. Gene Orr, senior hurdler for the Scotsmen, also won two first places in the high hurdles and the low hurdles.

For Chattanooga, Barbee won the broad jump and Gregory outdistanced the Maryville men with the shot.

Today the Scot thinlies are defending their title of conference champs at Johnson City. Maryville is the favorite in the conference meet, although they expect to have a little trouble with their opponents from LMU, Milligan, and Teachers college. Next week, the Scots will attempt to win for the first time the TIAA meet which will be held at Cookeville. The University of Tennessee is the defending champion in this meet.

The Industrial Collegian South Dakota State college paper, in an editorial favoring a more liberal cut system there, says that the registrar's office last quarter was unable, because of a shortage of funds and workers, to keep up with the recordings, posting, and excusing of absences. As a result there were no red negative credits or grade points on registration day. A more liberal cut system, the paper believes, would save the college both time and money.

Griffitts, faculty adviser of the Highland Echo, and Mrs. Griffitts entertained the new members of the Highland Echo staff and the retiring senior members at a picnic supper in the College Woods last Tuesday evening. Miss Viola Lightfoot and Miss Phyllis Dexter aided Mrs. Griffitts in the preparation of the steak supper.

Those present were Dr. and Mrs. Griffitts, Miss Lightfoot, Miss Dexter, Ruth Abercrombie, Lula Wade Diggs, Jean White, Dorothy Smith Dorothy Scholl, Bette Umbach, Don Kent, George Felknor, William Felknor, George Hunt, Harry Wilson, A. O. Kressler, Charles Orr, Arthur Byrne, Douglas Steakley, J. Edward Thomas, and Frank Cross.

Choir To Give Special Anthems This Week

Sunday night vespers will begin this week at 6:30 with a brief period of organ prelude. The choir will sing two anthems, "O Thou in Whose Presence" by Lewis-Cain, and "Haleluya" as arranged by Sergei. The theme of Dr. Stevenson's sermon will be "A Bad Beginning May Make a Good Ending."

On Monday night, May 8, the choir will sing the above mentioned anthems at the May Music Festival in Knoxvile. The program will be held in the auditorium of Church Street M.E. Church at 8:00.

Athenians To Choose Officers This Evening

Election of officers of the newly reorganized Athenian society will be held at the regular meeting of the society at 6:45 tonight at Athenian hall. Candidates for the offices as announced by the nominating committee today are: for president, Russell Stevenson and Glenn Young; vice president, Charles Baldwin and Philip Evaul; secretary, George Webster and John Wintermute; treasurer, Thomas Schafer and Paul Brown. Other nominations may be made from the floor.

On the program for the evening will be two vocal selections by Miss Ruth Thompson, instructor in music and readings by Dr. E. R. Hunter, head of the department of English. All members are urged to be present.

Members of the nominating committee were Knox Coit, chairman; Clifford Proctor, Charles Fish, Robert Lamont, and Robert Fisher.

German Songs At Theta

Theta Epsilon urges all members to be present at 6:45 Saturday evening at the meeting in the Alumni gymnasium. Professor Hovel, Mrs. Hovel, and Inge Jung will be present to direct the group in learning German games, and to lead in singing a number of German songs.

Miss Rich Exihibts Painting And Drawing In Baker Art Gallery

An exhibition of drawings and paintings by Miss Frances Rich of the art department are being shown at the Baker art gallery for two weeks ending May 13. The gallery is open from three to five every afternoon except Sunday.

Miss Rich received her B.A. degree from Iowa Wesleyan college, and graduated from the School of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston. In Boston her teacher was the late Alexander Jacovliff, a man who is considered by many critics to be the greatest draftsman of the past few centuries, some rating his draftsmanship better than Michelangelo's. Miss Rich won, while in Boston, a first prize of the year for excellence in draftsmanship. She has been on the Maryville faculty for two years.

This exhibition includes 19 works: still life, sketches, portraits, studies, done in the following mediums: oil, and cunte crayon, a material somewhat like charcoal only more durable and presenting wider possibilities.

There are portraits of Mrs. Ray Dollenmayer, Mr. George Fischbach, and Mr. Joe C. Gamble. There are studies of negro heads, Chinese woman, crow, drapery, hands, and head. In addition to these there are several landscapes, done in New Hampshire and in East Tennessee. This exhibition represents some of the work done by Miss Rich during the past few years.

YM To Install Officers

Sunday evening after the vespers service the newly-elected officers and cabinet members of the YMCA will be installed at a brief service in the chapel. President Weldon Baird will give the charge and the YMCA Bible to his successor, Russell Stevenson, who will accept the charge on behalf of his cabinet. The benediction will be pronounced by Dr. H. E. Orr, chairman of the organization's Advisory Board.

by Grieg. The third; Sonata in G major by Albert Stoessel. This was written in 1921 and was among the first of Stoessel's work to be acclaimed by the critics.

Concluding music week, Zula Vance, pianist, will give a senior recital on May 12, at 8:00 in the chapel. She will be assisted by John Guinter, violin, and Erwin Ritzman, cello. The program will include works of Bach, Hess, Beethoven, Schumann, Leschetizky, Albeniz, and Dvorak.

Mrs. McMurray At YW

Mrs. Kathryn McMurray will speak to the YWCA on Sunday afternoon at 1:15 on the subject, "Marriage Relations." Mrs. McMurray spoke to this group earlier in the year on a similar subject and she has also addressed the C. S. of the Presbyterian church on marriage.

Ruth Duggan will give a piano solo for the special music, and Kathleen Cissna will play several selections before the program.

Sophomore Election

After completion of his B.A. degree at Maryville, Baird expects to take up aviation in one of the branches of government service.

Dorothy DePue, of Bangor, Pa., is a sociology major and a member of Theta Epsilon society. She was one of the sophomore May Day attendants this year and a member of the cast of Theta Epsilon-Alpha Sigma's midwinter, "Quality Street." She also holds an office in Theta Epsilon society.

Lily Pinneo, of Newark, New Jersey, has also taken a very active part in campus activities. Lily is a member of the Glee club, Nature club, Triangle club, Bainonian society, and the M club. During the past year she served on the cabinet of the Student Volunteer group, as Nu Gamma leader, biology assistant, and also as vice president of the class of '41.

After graduating from Maryville, Lily hopes to become a medical missionary.

Gordon Findlay, treasurer of the class, comes from Springfield, Pa. He is a major in political science and has held offices in the Law club and also in Alpha Sigma society. During the past year he served as representative from his class to the student council. Findlay has also taken an active part in athletics, having lettered for the past two years in swimming and having served as captain of the team during this past season.

Seventy Attend Annual Retreat At Line Springs

Three Day Conference Of YM And YW Cabinets To Plan Work

Approximately 70 students, members of the YMCA-YWCA cabinets and women Nu Gamma leaders, left this afternoon for the annual Retreat of the two Christian associations at Line Springs hotel in the Great Smoky mountains. The group will return late Monday afternoon. They are accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Raymond J. Dollenmayer as chaperons.

The Retreat is held every year about this time for the purpose of planning the work of the two associations for the coming year. Cabinet meetings, worship services, a banquet Saturday night, and group hikes into the mountains are included in the program.

The banquet Saturday night, which is being planned by Marguerite Justus and Mary Jo Husk, will feature music by John Magill and the principal speech by Dr. John A. McAfee, pastor of the New Providence Presbyterian church of Maryville. Sara Lee Hellums is toastmaster for the banquet.

The principal worship service will be held at 5 p.m. Sunday afternoon and has as its speaker the Rev. Earle W. Crawford. Mr. Crawford, now pastor of the Kirkwood Presbyterian church in Knoxville, is a former president of the Maryville YMCA.

There are five other worship services planned for the three day conference. Speakers at these services are delgates to the Retreat, and include Paul Brown, Curtmarie Brown, Mrs. R. J. Dollenmayer, William Alston, and Warren Ashby. The worship directors, George Hunt and Charles Orr, have planned the services to be based on the theme "Companionship with Christ as We

Sullivan, Findlay, Pyle Elected As Alpha Sig Officers Next Year

Charles Aubrey Sullivan was elected president of Alpha Sigma society for the 1939 fall term by receiving a majority of the votes cast in the election held yesterday evening after dinner in the lobby of Pearsons hall.

Gordon Findlay was elected vice president; Hershel Pyle, secretary; and Dudley Moore, treasurer. The two critics selected were Gene McCurry and Joe Etheredge; program secretaries are Joe Swift, Douglas Steakley, Jimmy Lee and Charlie Lovette; Mel Johnson, sergeant-at-arms.

Sullivan, of Palestine, Texas, will be a senior next year and is a major in the department of political science. He also takes a prominent part in the Law club and expects to become a member of the legal profession some day. Sullivan is probably best known for his hobby of photography.

Findlay is treasurer of the junior class for next year and a member of the athletic board of control. He also is a prominent member of the Law club and is a major in political science. Findlay comes from Springfield, Pa.

New officers of the society will be installed at the next regular meeting of the society and will take charge of the meetings when school opens next September.

Group Attends Series Of Bible Conferences Conducted On Campus

Bible conferences were held last Friday and Saturday, May 5 and 6 in the philosophy classroom, by Mr. Watt, director of the college parish, in connection with his Bible 212F class. Representatives were sent from all the parish churches to receive instructions on how to conduct a summer Bible school. This is a new project and will give members of the class practical experience.

The Friday meetings were opened by a worship service conducted by Mr. Watt, after which a schedule for one day at Bible school was made. Mr. Venton, head of Sunday school missions for this part of the country, and Mr. Cathey, chairman of the Sunday school missions committee on the Board of National Missions, addressed the group. Both men were sent by the state board of Religious Education to assist in the conferences. After the evening meal, Miss Grace Proffitt from the Presbyterian church in Maryville

Alpha Sig Presents Pirates' Holiday Tonight In Gym

Alpha Sigma invites the student body to the Alumni gym this evening at 8:30 to a Pirates' Holiday.

The program will open with a basketball game with all members of Alpha Sig taking part. The basketball game will be followed by an obstacle race and a mystery play. Following the mystery play there will be several contests in which members of the society will attempt to break some well known collegiate records.

Production Date Nears For Play

"Hamlet" Stage Effects Will Picture Theatre As In Elizabethan Era

The senior class production of Shakespeare's tragedy, "Hamlet" is rapidly taking shape toward presentation May 27, Bill McGill, production manager, said this week.

The play will be presented without curtains and with few stage decorations in an effort to portray the scenes as they were produced in the Elizabethan theater. Costumes for all the actors were made by students after careful research and planning by Ellen Sauer, costume director.

Gordon Bennett, Sara Bolton, and Muriel Mann, the first students to graduate with a major in dramatic art, will interpret some of the most difficult roles in the play. Bennett will appear as Hamlet, Sara Bolton as the Queen, and Muriel Mann as one of the grave-diggers. Katherine Warren, who will take the part of Ophelia, and who will be remembered for her part in "Quality Street" which she took on a week's notice, will also appear for the last time on the Maryville stage.

According to Hugh Smith, business manager for the play, a large out of town audience is expected to attend the performance. The advertising campaign will begin tonight with a preview at the weekly meeting of the Athenian society. The ticket sale will begin Monday.

Nature Club Names Menning President

Stan Menning, a freshman from Neenah, Wisconsin, was elected president of the Nature club, at its regular bi-weekly meeting held in the chemistry lecture room on Thursday evening. Other officers elected include: Marian Garwood, vice president; Stanley Bird, secretary-treasurer; Larry Ketchum and Elva Moore, program secretaries.

An enthusiastic discussion on photography was lead by Menning, during which many interesting and helpful suggestions were made to the members of the club. The meeting was in charge of Emma Probasco, the retiring president.

Juniors Elect Etheredge, Mack, Corrigan, Reed

Second Election For Senior Officers Held This Morning

James Etheredge, popular athlete, was elected to the presidency of next year's senior class this morning in a second election. Joy Corrigan was elected vice president yesterday morning by a majority vote, the rest of the officers being tied and necessitating a run-off this morning. Ruth Mack was elected secretary and Ralph Reed, treasurer.

"Joe" Etheredge is an economics major from Town Creek, Ala. "Joe" is is a prominent athlete on the campus, being captain of next season's football team and a first string letterman in both basketball and track. He is the outgoing president of the Athletic Board of Control. He is a member of the High Trail and a program secretary of Alpha Sig.

Joy Corrigan, vice president, is a Bible major from Toronto, Canada. Joy is a Bainonian and a member of the YWCA cabinet. She is also an assistant in the psychology department.

Ruth Mack, secretary, from Orlando, Fla., is a music major and was vice president of Bainonian this semester. Ruth is also on the YWCA cabinet having served as music director for the past two years. She is a member of the vesper choir.

Ralph Reed, treasurer, is a music major from Milford, Delaware. Ralph is a member of the vesper choir and of the college band. He is at present a music director at Everett high school. He has been a soloist in the Messiah for the past two years.

Registration To Begin On Tuesday

Schedule Cards To Be Made Out And Approved

Registration, according to Dr. Frank D. McClelland, will begin Tuesday and continue throughout the week. Tuesday morning freshmen, sophomores, and juniors will be given tentative schedule cards and subject cards and they will be asked to make out their schedules for next year in conference with the professors at the head of their major departments. These schedule cards will be approved by the professors and signed in order that the students may return them to the Personnel office some time that week.

Dr. McClelland urges that students register next week in order to avoid the rush of fall registration and also the $2.50 late registration fee.

The whole idea of the spring registration is to give the students more time to think out and plan carefully their schedule and course of study.

Catalogs and schedules will be at the Personnel office by Monday morning and students who wish to have them, may call for them. Schedules will also be posted on the bulletin boards.

Chilhowean Manager Distributes 440 Copies Of Official Yearbook

Staff Of Fourteen Headed By Pflanze Compile Annual Dedicated To Miss Susan Green

Four hundred and forty copies of the 1939 Chilhowean, official yearbook of Maryville college, have been sold and distributed during the past week, according to a statement issued today by Clifford Proctor, business manager. Any copies which may be left will be placed on sale during the next week at $4.00 each. Copies were sold to the students in advance this year by regular payments, with a final payment when distributed.

The Chilhowean is published annually by members of the junior class and was compiled this year by a staff of fourteen, under the direction of Otto Pflanze, editor, and Dr. F. A. Griffitts, faculty advisor, at a cost of nearly $2300.

The cover of the book is grey, embossed with the name "The Chilhowean" at the bottom, and centered by a circular design in keeping with the theme of the book. The prologue compares the past of Maryville college with the medieval age, the theme of the annual, in that "it was an age which saw the beginning of much of our science, art, and philosophy; its contributions form the basis for much that we like to designate as modern" and looks forward "toward an even greater Maryville." The designs for each section portray a phase of medieval life represented by the section.

The Chilhowean is dedicated to "Miss Susan Allen Green, who for thirty-two years has headed the department of biology, in appreciatiative recognition of her efficient administration, masterful teaching, and perennial youthfulness." At the front of the book are four full page engravings of Pearsons hall, Voorhees chapel, Anderson hall, and Fayerweather hall.

Following the pictures of President Lloyd and President Emeritus Wilson are pictures of the staff, department heads, and members of the faculty, in individual pictures, with information as to the name, degrees and position on the faculty with each picture. This is followed by pictures of the twenty members of the Student Council, with names grouped according to the classes they represent.

Names of the class sponsors, elected early in the school year and not released until publication of the Chilhowean are: senior class, Marguerite Justus; junior class, Mary Louise Proffitt; sophomore class, Elizabeth Ann Huddleston; and freshman class, Marion Northup.

Senior pictures are 1 and 3-4 inch cuts with the name, home, major, society, and extra-curricular activities of each student. Junior class pictures are 1 and 1-2 inches square with the name, home and major of the students, on the opposite page. Sophomore pictures give only the name and home of students and freshman pictures only the name.

The title page for the Department of Fine Arts pictures the head and five instructors in the department and in-

Noted Educator To Give Address At Commencement

Dr. William Wade Haggard Is Head of Large Junior College In North

The commencement speaker this year will be Dr. William Wade Haggard, of Joliet, Illinois, a graduate of Maryville college in the class of 1917, announced President R. W. Lloyd today.

Dr. Haggard is Superintendent of the Joliet Township high school and Junior college, a position which he has held for the past eleven years. He has become one of the most prominent of all the men in the junior college field of America. The institution of which he is head is one of the largest, enrolling about three thousand students.

Dr. Haggard received his B.A. degree from Maryville college in 1917, his M. A. degree from the University of Michigan in 1927, and the Ph.D. degree from the University of Chicago in 1937. He has held various honors in recognition of his leadership in the field of education and in the junior college field. He was president of the Michigan high school principals' association in 1923, being at that time a high school principal in that state. He was president of the Department of Secondary School Principals of the National Education association in 1932-33; was president of the American Association of Junior colleges in 1936-36; and has held other important offices in educational associations. One of the most important of these offices is that of secretary of the North Central Association, the accrediting body for the central part of the United States, a position to which he was elected last year.

Goddard Appears In Senior Recital

Popular Soloist Presented In Program Friday

Edwin Goddard will be presented by the fine arts department in his senior recital, next Friday evening, May 19, in the college chapel, at 8:00. He will be assisted at the piano by Louise Felknor.

The program will include:

"Honor and Arms"—Handel

"Fur Musik"—Franz

"Wie bist du, meine Konign"—Brahms

"Aus der Jugendzeit"—Radecke

"Prologue to Pagliacci"—Leoncavalli

"Life"—Curran

"Go Down Moses"—Arr. by Burleigh

"Debbil Foot"—Wolfe

"Chanson du Toreandor"—Bizet

Miss Felknor will play the following two numbers on the piano:

"Rhapsody Op. 79, No. 2"—Brahms

"Au Couvent"—Borodin

Mr. Goddard, a senior from Maryville, has been a member of the college choir for four years, has had solo parts in the last three Gilbert and Sullivan operas presented by the college glee clubs, and solo parts in the last two productions of the Messiah.

Vance Recital Ends Music Week

Music Majors Contribute To Celebration

The events of Music week were brought to a close on this past Friday evening with a piano recital by Zula Vance. Miss Vance, who is from Rainella, W. Va., is one of the first two students graduating from Maryville college with a music major. The other of the two is Harriet Barber, who gave her voice recital on the preceding Tuesday. Both of these students gave an exceptionally fine presentation of their work. In their recitals Harriet Barber was assisted by Anne Abel, and Zula Vance, by John Guinter and Erwin Ritzman.

At Wednesday morning chapel Mr. Frank Nelson of Knoxville, assisted in the dedication of the organ with a recital. He played three groups of numbers consisting of the works of Handel, Schumann, and Wagner. On Wednesday afternoon Miss Dorothy Horne and Miss Ruth Thompson presented a violin and piano sonata recital in the fine arts studio.

The other event of Music week was the last meeting of the Disc club for this year. The meeting, which consisted of Franck's D Minor symphony, was in charge of Ivan Elder. A group of girl scouts from the Junior high school were present at the meeting. Their attendance was a part in the earning of their merit badge for the appreciation of music.

On Sunday, May 14, the special music at vespers will be Schubert's "Ave Maria", which will be played by John Guinter.

Atlantic Highlanders Alumni Group, Meets

The ninth annual meeting of the Atlantic Highlanders, the alumni of Maryville college living in the Philadelphia area, was held on Saturday evening, April 29, at the Central YMCA in Philadelphia. Seventy-eight persons from four states and the District of Columbia attended the dinner and the meeting that followed.

Several of the alumni presented a varied and interesting entertainment. Dr. Charles McCracken, head of the Department of Colleges of the Presbyterian Board of Christian Education, gave the address of the evening.

The following were elected as officers for the coming year; president, Rev. Ingram Fell, '29; vice president, Miss Kathryn Adams, '38; secretary-treasurer, Mr. Harold Holman, '29.

Glee Clubs To Present Concert

Program Will Include Semi-Classical And Modern Pieces

The Maryville college glee clubs will present their annual spring concert in the college chapel, on Saturday evening, May 20, at 8:00 p.m.

Included on the program will be both semi-classical and modern pieces by the glee clubs. Elizabeth Ann Huddleston, Louise Felknor, Zillah McKenzie, and a quartet will present several special numbers.

The college glee clubs for men and women were reorganized three years ago by Professor Ralph Colbert, instructor in music, and since that time have been quite prominent in the life of the college. Each year a Gilbert and Sullivan opera is presented by the clubs, and each spring a concert is presented in the college chapel. These concerts have each year been extraordinarily well attended. Helen Bewley is president of the girl's glee club, and Edwin Goddard is president of the men's glee club, known as the Glee Singers.

An admission charge of twenty-five cents will be made, and announcement will be made in chapel as to the exact day on which tickets will be put on sale.

Bainonian Nominates Officers This Week

The Bainonian nominating committee has finished their list of nominees for next year's officers of Bainonian. They are as follows: for president, Mary Darden and Jane Law; vice president, Emma Cassada and Mary Mildred Hatcher; secretary, Edith Evans and Anne Gammon; treasurer, Marion Northup and Beth Pascoe. For program chairmen, Marianna Allen, Doris Smith, Ruth Andrews, and Ruth Woods were nominated; for poster chairman, Marie Jenson and Barbara Swift; for house chairman Lily Pinneo and Jean Stringham, and Mary Gillespie and Suzanne Fickes; sergeant-at-arms, Margaret Lodwick and Helen McKay; for pianist, Ruth Duggan and Janice Graybeal.

The election of these officers will be held by ballot all day Tuesday, May 16, in Pearsons' lobby. The nominating committee, consisting of this semester's officers, were Mary Jo Husk, Ruth Mack, Marguerite Justus, Harriet Walkup, Betty Moore, Joy Pinneo, Ruth West, Marion Garwood, Eleanor Long, Louise Darden and Paula Martin.

Reporter Describes Ceremonies Used In Producing Freshmen Literary Classics

By BETTY UMBACH

Newly supplied with a box of red pencil-leads, Miss Jessie Heron feels sufficiently equipped to red-letter the remaining themes of this term, and the fifteen hundred she will receive from next year's frosh. Grading the themes includes a great deal more than making colorful marginal notations telling of a squinting modifier or a dread comma fault, and it means more than gently persuading the students that Malachite green on Chinese red is hardly the proper shade of ink to use in preserving the modesty of a freshman theme. It includes collecting and preserving various bits of priceless information concerning past private lives, or concerning ways of avoiding dormitory restrictions; it includes the selection of the most interesting themes to be read before a class composed of admiring, contemptuous, and indifferent students; and it includes changing freshman ideas of the blessing and convenience of plagiarism. An occasional drawing or snap-shot is a relief from pages and pages of written and typed words, but even they, no matter how accomplished the artist or photographer, may become tiresome.

The student behind the theme, however, has an entirely different outlook on the way things should be done. The very idea of the theme, itself, is terrifying and heart-sinking. Perhaps the topic given come nowhere near any conception he might have on life and things in general, or, worse still, he might be left to write on a topic of his own choosing; it is then that he is struck with the realization of how little he really knows about the few subjects within his comprehension that might possibly be accepted for a theme. In most cases, the student has selected the topic of the theme definitely, if not satisfactorily, as early as the day before the theme is due; then he is confronted with the difficulties of compiling his knowledge, his room-mate's knowledge, his best friend's knowledge, his best friend's room-mate's knowledge, the Encyclopedia Britannica's knowledge, and the Reader's Digest's knowledge on the favored subject. That done, he utters a brief exclamation as the lights go out, lights a candle, thumb-tacks towels over the transom and begins the concrete production of the theme. His literary employment may last until he has satisfactorily explored and written all the possibilities of the subject, until the candles burn out, or until he runs out of paper; but whatever he has composed by that time becomes his finished theme without benefit of revision of any kind.

Copying the theme would be so much more interesting if he could use his latest awe-inspiring colored ink, but having been warned against that, he sets his literary soul's expression down in the more conventional black. The pages might look drab enough when handed in, but when handed back, the inevitable flashing comments in the margin add more brilliance than seemed necessary. Yet even the painful corrections cannot remove from him the relief that it would be some time until such an ordeal must be again undergone—relief that lives only until a glance at the board reveals the startling news that next Saturday is the day set for another theme. Perhaps

Why Not Us?

Since there has been so much discussion of reorganization during the past few months, we would like to suggest a plan for a Women's League which might take a prominent place on the campus among the women of the college.

Such a plan is now working very successfully in the University of Illinois, Illinois Wesleyan, Wooster college, and many other co-ed and women's colleges. The purposes of the organizations which we have investigated have coincided in nearly every detail. At Illinois Wesleyan the constitution provides that the league should promote a "greater spirit of unity among campus women, a greater spread of influence toward the finest standards of womanhood, and an intelligent cooperative regard for the privileges of campus citizenship." Other constitutions embody the idea that the association should cooperate with the administration of all matters pertaining to the student life of the women.

Membership in these women's leagues is given all the women students upon registration. Both town and dormitory students are included in the plan.

There is here at Maryville a need for just such an organization in which all women are united. Dormitory organization is on the first step toward such an undertaking. Careful thought would be necessary to bring the plan to a climax and to make it successful, and the enthusiasm and cooperation of every girl would bring this about quicker.

The league would be established to contact those girls whom the YWCA does not reach, but who are interested in the activities of the college as they might effect their own college life. Under this head the societies might still exist, but they would have to concentrate their aims more and interest or hobby groups might be added. There are women who need to be encouraged to have a hobby and to use it, and who would enjoy working in a small group, all of which had the same interest.

We find this plan as it would be used at Maryville in a very primitive state as yet, but that does not mean it should not be considered very carefully and seriously. Other colleges and many, many of them have worked it out so that it serves an indispensable function on the campus. Why can't we do the same thing?

Music Appreciation Needed

In the midst of war scares, comprehensive examinations, political mixups, and social conflicts some power has seen fit to ordain the first week in May as National Music Week. It could hardly come at a more appropriate time, especially for examination-bound college students, for to sit quietly and hear well-performed programs by musical artists is the best way to relax and try to forget the unmelodious things the next day will bring.

So far asmusic is concerned (and in regards to college students so far as almost anything is concerned) the majority of us are the most unschooled laymen. But all of us have something in us that responds to beautiful melodies expertly performed; and though we may not know the title of the work or its underlying meaning, we know what we like (although it is a sign of education if we can say that our tastes are subject to change without notice, like the figures on the expense page of a college catalogue). We are jealous of those whose appreciation of the beautiful are more highly developed than our own, yet all of us breathe a silent prayer of thanks that in our ignorance we can still say sincerely, "There, that was beautiful!"

The recital by the first student to graduate in music from this college gave the initial impetus to this thought. A more charming person have we not seen on the Maryville stage, and her recital was as much a triumph for her friends as for herself. That is again tribute to the liberal arts college which cultivates and in many cases fosters an appreciation of the best in minds saturated with anything but the best.

Merry-Ville Go Round

By FRED RHODY

Question: What have we here?

Answer: Here we have a book.

Question: A text-book, perhaps, that everyone carries about with him, a thirst for knowledge?

Answer; Oh, no, this is a 1939 Chilhowean.

Question: Just what is a Chilhowean?

Answer: A Chilhowean is a yearly publication designed to make a fellow feel pretty well pleased with himself, his profile, and the fact that he was third vice president of the Poonkydunk club in his sophomore year; and to call the attention of the world to his handsome looks, pleasing smile, formidable list of attainments and miscellaneous virtues.

Question: Then the book contains pictures of attractive persons only?

Answer: We-l-l-l-l-, the faculty have their pictures in it, too.

Question: What is it that a person likes best about the Chilhowean?

Answer: His own picture, and the oftener the better.

Question: Would Philbert Q. Jones raise a fuss if the Chilhowean staff sold him a copy that was all ink-blotted and scribbled on every page?

Answer: You bet your life he'd raise a fuss.

Question: Then why does Philbert actually go out of his way to induce people to scribble stuff in his book, and drop ink blots on every other page?

Answer: Because Philbert hopes that some complimentary things will be written about him in his book, to be preserved for the edification of posterity, and Philbert's own inspiration.

Question: When one is asked to write something in the book of a person whose name one does not even know, what does one write in the book?

Answer: One gets the name by looking on the outside of the book; then one writes in the book; "Dear So-and-So, it's been great being here at Maryville with you; hope the memory of our good times together lasts forever, your pal, So-and-So."

Question: Why are the pictures of the seniors so much larger than the pictures of the students in other classes?

Answer: Merely compare the extremely attractive appearance of the typical senior with the seedy looks of any junior, sophomore, or freshman, and the reason is evident.

Question: What will one remember longest and most vividly about the 1939 Chilhowean?

Answer: While Earth and Heaven endure one will remember that the Chilhowean cost him four dollars.

Question: Does Philbert think it is worth the price?

Answer: Oh, yes. You see, his picture is in it.

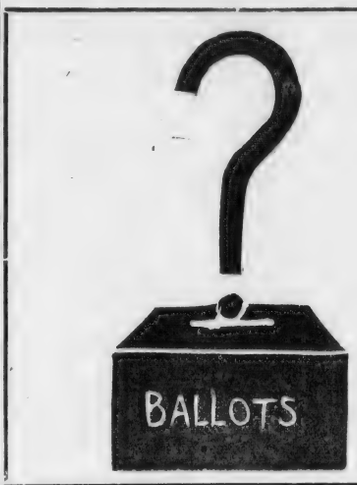
UP OUR HALL

By GEORGE L. HUNT

Our social committee no longer sponsors a dating bureau, but there are two courses provided by the college which make up for that lack, the bride's course and the groom's course. The first one meets the first semester and the candidates for domestic degrees wear blue and red flowered smocks. The second one is just going into its final stages, and the optimistic males wear white aprons fancy suspenders, and no sweaters (because the greasy smell is hard to get out of wool—Lecture One.) For the benefit of the students next year who wish to study these candidates, the women cook at e period and the men at a period.

Miss Meiselwitz, who teaches both courses, calls the groom's course, with which we have been rather intimately associated for the past few months, the only one in which she could flunk a person with thanks. There have been many requests to repeat the course by the chefs, but she cannot comply with them. This semester, in addition to the present writer, there have been enrolled Erwin Ritzman (his partner), Phillippe Evaul (accent on the last syllable), Edward Morris Thomas, Chef Eugene Orr, Horace of the Brown, Charles Baldwin, Gordon Findlay (of Howard Johnson's), William Osko McGill, Lawyer Hugh L. Smythe, Vaughn Lyons, John Stevenson Shultz (German cooking a speciality, also peanut butter candy), Don Calhoun, Edwin Goddard, Ernest (Alpha Gamma Sigma) Crawford and William the Mooney.

Every Monday morning at 8 a.m., these sixteen smiling faces appeared in the Home Ec lab and donned white aprons. At 9:25 Osko the McGill was still washing his dishes, partner Ritzman was liberally tasting the products of his colleagues, and three students were perennially late to the course on the Family which followed at b period. As one of the seasoned wits remarked, all they needed was a course in Child Care to make it complete. Between 8 and 9:25 what went on was wondrous to behold. Miss Meiselwitz read the day's lab work, then the fun began. The first week was tame, fruits and fruit juices. Anybody with a can opener could do that work. But things progressed. On February 27, we were cooking eggs and sampling rare cheeses; that was the day anybody who had eaten limburger had to keep his mouth closed for the morning. April 10 was salad and sandwiches, but that's skipping the days of the great slaughter, March 27 and April 3. On these Mondays what to our wondering eyes should appear but steaks and chicken, done up brown for the benefit of the class as it studied carving. Lawyer Smythe must never have taken biology, for he really committed homicide on the animals these days. Once he got his finger, but no damage was done and the meat was just a little redder than usual.



Last week we made candy, at least the rest of the class did. There must be something wrong with Erwin's conscience, for our divinity fudge was anything but divine. Some of it went into the garbage can (situated conveniently close to our desk) and the rest of it went to Erwin's room. A really successful concoction was the fudge a la soap, the creation of Horace the Brown. You take a piece of soap, 3-4 by 2" and cover it with the fudge of Evaul and Thomas which didn't turn out, then place it on the table and wait for the first person to bite. Singer Goddard was susceptible, and it left him foaming at the mouth.

On Fridays at a period the class met for lecture by Miss Meiselwitz. This too had a definite schedule, beginning with the need of the human body for food and ending yesterday with some recent news on the shelter problem. In between we learned about etiquette at the wedding, who stands next to who, who says what, what the best man does, and how much to pay the preacher (we must admit that to many of us this item was of great interest). A harmless book with a dangerous title "Let the Women Do the Work" told how to manage the family income and advised leaving that to the wife. Another little book was "Marrying On A Small Income."

The final feature of the course was serving at the faculty banquets. A few of us poured water at one banquet, but last Monday's was in the entire charge of the groom's course. Twelve of us served, however, we didn't prepare the food and we didn't have to wash the dishes. That was a job for the freshmen.

Here endeth the account of the groom's course for 1939. It has been great fun, and to Barbara McCutcheon, the student assistant, and Miss Meiselwitz we owe our thanks. And, though it probably doesn't mean anything, to them we dedicate this column this week. Long may they rescue burning cakes and overly-browned cocoanut from the oven.

TALK OF THE WEEK . By Arlene Phelps

Athenians Name Young, Baldwin, Wintermute, Brown, Next Officers

Athenians chose their first officers last Saturday evening under the newly adopted constitution. Glenn Young was elected to succeed Bill McGill as president with Charles Baldwin as vice president of the society. Others chosen were John Wintermute, secretary, and Paul Brown, treasurer. The new officers will be installed in September.

Members of the Athenian society will be treated this evening to a Preview of Hamlet program featuring three scenes from the coming senior production presented by eight of the cast. "Hamlet as Reported by a Guy from the Bronx", a humorous poem, will be read by John Wintermute, and Bill McGill will discuss the Maryville production of Shakespeare's well known tragedy. Appearing in the "trailer" performance will be Katherine Warren, Bill McGill, Carl Wells, John Magill, Sara Bolton, Gordon Bennett, Harriet Barber, and Pat Mann.

The whole Retreat has been planned by a steering committee headed by Weldon Baird and Helen Bobo, retiring presidents of the Christian associations. Other members of the committee are the new presidents, Russell Stevenson and Helen Bewley, and two representatives from each cabinet, Fred Rhody, Philip Evaul, Bernice Smith, and Joy Pinneo. Sub-committees are publicity—Sara Lee Hellums and Bruce Morgan; recreation—Robert Martin and Stanley Bird; and photographer—William Alston.

ANOTHER IDEA

No afternoon lectures is the policy suggested in an editorial in the Lass-O, Texas State college for Women. Afternoon lectures, the editorial contends, interrupt an afternoon, preventing the spending of an uninterrupted afternoon of study, library research work, or recreation. Furthermore, students do not give their best attention to afternoon lectures. It would be mathematically possible ,the writer says, to schedule all classes for the morning hours, only laboratory classes being scheduled for the afternoons.

TOO CLOSE FOR COMFORT—

In case any of you have the mistaken idea that Maryville is going to sweep the state meet this afternoon, I thought I had better list a few of the facts for you so you can see that the meet will practically be a toss-up between Vandy, Maryville and Tennessee. Early this week it was thought that Vandy wouldn't enter the meet due to the fact that she was sending several men to the Cotton Carnival in Memphis, on the same week end. The latest news came, however, from Chattanooga, who incidentally was defeated 10 points in a dual meet by TPI, that the Commodores were definitely entering the meet full force.

Figuring it out on paper the night before, which never works by the way, we find that Vandy will win five first places, U-T two first places, Maryville five first places, Teachers one, TPI one, and LMU one. Maryville will win nine second places, Vandy about five, and Tennessee three. Now that is considering all factors except a little matter of luck or better condition and everything else that goes in to make a track meet. We hate to predict that Maryville will win, but we surely do hope that the runners will back us up as well as the facts and figures do. Anyway you look at it, this year's TIAA meet will be about as close as anyone will want it.

LAST CHANCE!—

This meet today marks the end of three senior's careers at Maryville as far as track is concerned. Weldon Baird will be running his last race for the Highlanders today. Baird, an Ohio product, is one of the best all-round athletes to be on the track squad. Weldon can do practically any event in both the runs and the field events. Gene Orr also will run his last flight of hurdles today. Orr holds the college record in the 220 yd low hurdles, and has threatened several times to break the record in the high hurdles. Everett Gray is the other senior. Gray, who ran for the first time last year, is a two miler and has won his share of points in the past two years. Everett has had tough luck this year, developing a bad case of shin splints and not being able to get rid of them. He will run today, however, and let's hope he can shake the jinx that has been dogging his footsteps all season.

Maryville Tennis Team Loses Twice

In the week's early tennis matches. Milligan defeated the Highland team 5-2. The match was close, Maryville losing out in the top singles matches. Some of the most interesting matches of the season were played, however.

In the number five singles, freshman Kidder won a three set match 6-3, 3-6, 6-3. In a very irratic doubles match McKinnon and Gastrock of Maryville edged Cochran and Perkins 0-6, 6-4, 6-4. Gastrock played a good singles match also, losing however, to Painter 6-1, 4-6, 7-9.

The Scotties again lost to U-T, this time by a score of 5-2. The winning matches were the fifth singles and the second doubles, as against Milligan. Kidder defeated Armitage 6-3, 6-3 to even their personal rivalry; and McKinnon and Gastrock whipped Lee and Broughton in a match which was not completed. Akana was up to his best form, going down, however in a hard fought match against Slattery of U-T.

Complete results:

MILLIGAN—MARYVILLE (5-2)

Akana—Hyder 1-6, 4-6
McKinnon—Davis 4-6, 3-6
Morgan—Cochran 1-6, 3-6
Gastrock—Painter 6-1, 4-6, 7-9
Kidder—Payne 6-3, 3-6, 6-3
Akana-Stevenson—Hyder-Davis 3-6, 2-6
McKinnon-Gastrock—Cochran-Perkins 0-6, 6-4, 6-4

MARYVILLE—TENN. (5-2)

Akana—Slattery 6-1, 2-6, 6-8
McKinnon—Gillespie 6-8, 1-6
Morgan—Lee 4-6, 3-7
Gastrock—Broughton 2-6, 6-3, 6-8
Kidder—Armitage 6-3, 6-3
Akana-Stevenson — Slattery-Gillespie 3-6, 4-6
Gastrock-McKinnon — Lee-Broughton 8-6

Highlanders Lose To Moccasins 6-1

The Chattanooga Moccasins scored a 6-1 victory over the Maryville netmen, Thursday afternoon on the Maryville courts. The play featured several good matches. Chattanooga boasts one of the strongest teams in Tennessee, however, and were too much for the homelings to handle.

Paul Akana in the first singles, gave Block of Chattanooga plenty to think about for a set or two. Block won by the slim margin of 1-6, 6-3, 6-1. Block is rated as the number two singles player in the state. Akana played beautiful tennis in the first set to out place him. In Maryville's single win during the afternoon, David Kidder made it three straight this week in taking Coplan with a hard driving game. Kidder won in a two set match 7-5, 7-5. The Scotties were handicapped by the loss of number two man McKinnon. "Mack" is out with a wrist injury. The Scot team took only one other set in the match. In the second doubles Morgan and Gastrock won the longest set of the season, 12-10. They were licked in the match however, 4-6, 12-10, 1-6.

In the remaining matches, Beene of the Moccasins beat Morgan 3-6; Leeper defeated Gastrock 1-6, 1-6; Gill defeated Stevenson 2-6, 3-6. Chattanooga's Block and Leeper took Akana and Stevenson in the first doubles to complete the match.

Scots Defeated By Railsplitters Twice In Series

The Railsplitters ball team cut the Scotties down Wednesday and Thursday at LMU by scores of 11-10 and 18-4. LMU showed some of the ball that put them leading the conference this season in rallying late in the first game to come from behind and win. In the second game Midiffer, one of the conferences best pitchers held the Highland club to five hits.

In the 8th, the LMU team collected hits and errors to push over 6 runs, tying the score 10-all. Sieber, relieving, allowed a run in the ninth to lose the game 11-10. Nig Wilburn rapped the only extra base hit for Maryville, when he drove out a double in the second. Walker at first base held the big stick for LMU, knocking a double and two singles out of three trips to the plate.

In the second game the Scottie slugging was done mostly by Wilburn again, who collected a double and two singles. For LMU, Walker starred as a slugger with Welch. Both boys drove out a four bagger and a double. LMU's runs came in the fourth inning.

Scotties Defeat Milligan College Ball Team 5 to 4

Nig Wilburn Allows Only Six Hits—Etheredge Leads Batting

Coach Honaker's Scot ball team advanced their SMC rating yesterday as they defeated the Milligan Buffaloes by a close score of 5-4. Nig Wilburn turned his best ball game of the year in holding the Buffs to six hits, evenly scattered. "Little Rock" Etheredge hit his stride in connecting for two out of three, and one of them good for two extra bags.

Milligan got started in the first inning, scoring two runs on as many hits. In the third Maryville came to bat and took the lead not to be challenged again. With two out, Russell got on, and Honaker scored him on a double, then Hughes continued the rally, placing out a neat single, and stealing second; Shelfer got on as the short stop fumbled his grounder; Hughes scoring. Wilburn was out at first to complete the inning. The Scotties pushed over another in the fourth frame, with hits by Headrick and Etheredge. The final counter came in the sixth on Wilburn's single, and two errors by the Buffs. Milligan scored two again in the 8th attempting a come back, but it failed when the homelings tightened down on their fielding.

Outstanding at the plate and behind it was Lawson of Milligan. He got half of Milligan's hits off Wilburn.

Scot Trackmen After First State Championship Today At Cookeville

Coach Thrower's Highland Harriers Face Stiff Competition From Vandy And Tennessee

This afternoon the Maryville track squad will be facing the cream of the crop, as far as runners and jumpers are concerned, in the state of Tennessee. The Highlanders are at Cookeville, where the TIAA annual meet is being held this year. Some of the teams that will be represented are: Maryville, Milligan, Teachers, LMU, Tennessee, Chattanooga, Tennessee Polytechnical Institute, Sewanee, Vanderbilt, Southwestern, and Murfreesboro Teachers.

Maryville, who has won the Smoky Mountain Conference meet and defeated the universities of Chattanooga, Tennessee, and Lincoln Memorial, stands an even chance to come out on top of the heap. Most of the stiff competition will come from Vanderbilt, who features Captain Noel, who ran the 440 yd. dash this year in 49.4 seconds, and the half mile in 1 min. 58 sec. They also have a javelin tosser who throws the spear around the neighborhood of 189 feet.

The University of Tennessee also has a couple of good men namely Bob Andridge, dash man around 9.9 sec in the hundred, and Warren in the half mile, and Bartholomew in the shot put.

Maryville is depending on Captain Weldon Baird to gather in a few points in the mile and half mile; Sutton to win the 100 yd. dash and the 220 yd. dash; Gene Orr to win the 220 yd. low hurdles, and the rest of the squad to pull down plenty of points in the remaining events.

Coach Thrower left Friday afternoon with a few men and the rest came down this morning. Approximately 14 men made the trip. This is the last meet of the year for the Highlanders and will close one of the most successful seasons ever to be enjoyed by a Maryville track team.

Those men making the trip to Cookeville are: Sutton, Lloyd, Etheredge, Steakley, Weldon Baird, Bill Baird, McDaniels, Husk, Orr, Nicely, Tipton, Rae, Mooney, and Gray.

Today the Highland Harriers are in Cookeville, Tenn., where the annual state meet is being held this year. In addition to Maryville, Tennessee, Milligan, Vanderbilt, Southwestern, LMU, E. Tenn. Teachers, Sewanee, Chattanooga, and Murfreesboro Teachers will be in the meet.

The summary:

100 yd. dash—Sutton (M) first; Etheredge (M); Archer (Mill); Dellinger (Mill.—10.

220 yd. dash—Sutton (M); Lloyd (M) and Whitt (Mill); Halsebeck (Mill)—23 sec.

Cindermen Win SMC Track Title

The Maryville track squad, one of the strongest in the state, practically dominated all the events in the Smoky Mountain Conference meet held at Johnson City by scoring 90 1-2 points to their nearest rival's, Milligan college, 33 1-2 points. Lincoln Memorial was third with 23 1-2 points and East Tennessee Teachers fourth with 15 1-2 points.

Maryville won eleven first places, and eight second places. The Highlanders broke six conference records and tied one. Two other conference records, the shot put and the 120 yd. high hurdles were also broken by Milligan and Teachers.

Jim Etheredge set a new college and conference record in the high jump, clearing the bar at 6 ft. 1-2 in. The old record of 5 ft. 9 in. was held by Toms of Maryville. Etheredge broke his own college record wwhich was 5ft. 11 in. Gene Orr broke his former college record and Wallen of Teachers conference record in the 220 yd. low hurdles Orr clipped the barriers in 25.2 sec. The former record being 25.5 sec.

Bob Sutton, speed merchant for the Scot track squad, tied the college and conference record in the 100 yd. dash, running the distance in 10 seconds flat. He also broke the conference record in the 220 yd. dash, the time being 23 seconds. Doug Steakley, quarter miler, set a new conference record of 52.4 sec. in that run.

One of the best times in the meet was turned in by Jim Wallin of East Tennessee Teachers, who broke his old 120 yd. high hurdle record of 15.3 sec. by running over the tall timbers in the fast time of 14.7. Noel, of Milligan, put the 16 pound shot 42 ft. 1 inch for a new conference record.

The Maryville relay quartet stepped off the mile in 3 min. 38 sec, to set a new conference record. The team was composed of Sutton, Lloyd, Steakley, and Orr.

Reverend Carl Perrin To Speak At Meeting Of Ministerial Society

An installation service for the incoming officers of the Ministerial association was held at the regular meeting of the association last Monday evening at Athenian hall. Howard Davis, retiring president, gave a short talk, which was followed by the installation of the officers and the inaugural address by Vaughn Lyons, new president of the organization.

The Ministerial service will be held this week on Monday afternoon at 4:45 at the picnic grounds in the college woods. The feature of the program will be a campfire service at which time the Reverend Mr. Carl Perrin of Sugar Grove, Pa., will speak. He has chosen for his subject: "Fishers of Men." Mr. Perrin is a Presbyterian minister and is at present visiting his son and daughter, students at Maryville college. The program will include special music and will be followed by light refreshments.

formation as to its activities. In this section are group pictures of the chapel choir, women's glee club, the Glee Singers, the Confab club and Disc club, with pictures of the Messiah and soloists,the Little Symphony orchestra, the band and "Tovarich."

The section on features contains snapshots of informal life about the campus with appropriate captions.

The sport section is opened by a striking picture looking up from the center of a Maryville football huddle with pictures of the football, basketball, track, baseball, wrestling, tennis, swimming and cross country teams; cheerleaders, and "M" club; together with information concerning each, and results of competition.

An interesting feature of this year's Chilhowean is a page honoring Maryvillians newly-elected to the Scholastic Who's Who. It contains pictures and brief sketches of each student. Those honored this year are: Helen Bewley, Louise Proffitt, Curtmarie Brown, Geo. E. Felknor, Jr., and Bruce Morgan, seniors; and Sara Lee Hellums, Arnold Kramer and Clifford Proctor, juniors.

Nominations Made For Election At Pearsons

The women of Pearsons hall will vote for their president for the coming year in an election scheduled to take place all day Monday. Those nominated are Jessie Curtus and Ruth Mack. This will be the first election to take place under the constitution which was drawn up this past winter. According to this, the president is to be elected before the close of college in May; the other officers, vice president and treasurer, are to be elected in September.

Virginia Boys is now president of Pearsons; Charlotte Moughton, vice president; Harriet Barber, treasurer.

YW Hears Mrs. Snyder

Mrs. Snyder will be the speaker at the YW Mother's Day program tomorrow afternoon at 1:15 in the Y rooms. Bernice Cathcart will sing Ava Maria by Bach-Gounod. Mildred Dallas will assist at the piano.

spoke on the story telling the types of teaching and John Magill told of the place of songs in the worship service.

Saturday morning the group attended the college chapel service. Classes on handicraft taught by Marianna Allen, worship and games followed. The meetings were closed by an afternoon consecration service.

During their visit here, the representatives stayed on the campus and in the homes of college professors and friends and ate at Pearsons. The conference was very successful and plans are being made to hold them again next year.

Kramer Places Second In Finals Of State Contest

Arnold Kramer placed second in the finals of the state oratorical contest sponsored by the State Oratorical league which was held at Vanderbilt university on May 5. The subject of Kramer's oration was "It Can't Happen Here."

Cumberland university placed first in the contest, Maryville was second, and Vanderbilt university and East Tennessee Teachers college tied for third place.

Wilburn Pitches Scots To 7-4 Win Over Tennessee

The Maryville baseball team scored three runs in the seventh inning to put the skids on the University of Tennessee's ball club 7-4. Nig Wilburn, on the mound for the Highlanders, pitched a fine brand of ball, allowing 10 hits, but keeping them well scattered. Bob Foxx, football star for the Vols, was on the slab for Tennessee. Foxx allowed but five hits, but Maryville managed to steal enough bases and to capitalize on Vol errors to outscore their opponents.

One of the best plays of the year was made by "T" Etheredge, who made a one hand stab at a liner, snagged the ball and tossed it to second to catch the runner napping for a double play.

This win avenged an earlier defeat at the hands of the Vols for the Scotties. This was the last game this year that the two teams will meet, and it was the second loss for the University.

Senior Actors to Present Hamlet As Annual Dramatic Production in Voorhees Chapel Saturday, May 27

Bennett and Bolton Portray Leads In Performance

RHODY PLAYS HORATIO

Costumes Are Made After Much Research By Sauer

Tickets have been placed on sale during the past week for "Hamlet", the Shapespearean tragedy selected by the senior class for its annual class play. It will be presented in Voorhees chapel Saturday evening, May 27.

The title role of the Danish prince will be portrayed by Gordon Bennett, for the past four years a familiar figure on the Voorhees stage. He has had leading roles in "Peter Ibbetson," "The Purple Mask," "Craig's Wife", and "Tovarich," and is a member of the local chapter of Theta Alpha Phi. Other important roles have been assigned to Sara Bolton, as Gertrude the queen; Katherine Warren, as Ophelia; John Magill as Claudius, king of Denmark; and Carl Wells as Polonius, the lord chamberlain.

The production of "Hamlet" was conceived by the class early last year and work began immediately on a study of the play. Seminars were held at which Dr. Edwin Hunter, Dr. Hill Shine, Miss Gertrude Meiselwitz, Mrs. West and Malcolm Miller, Knoxville dramatic critic, discussed the various aspects of the play and of the Shakespearean theater. It was cast shortly before Christmas and has been in rehearsal most of this year.

A large cast has been selected for the senior play. Besides those already mentioned, Fred Rhody will portray Horatio, Hamlet's philosophical school friend; William McGill will be Laertes; S. K. Taylor will be Rosencrantz; Robert Lucero will be Guildenstern; James Rich will be Osric; Miles Dills will be Marcellus; Edwin Walker will be Bernardo; Eugene Law will be Reynaldo; Curtmarie Brown, Arthur Byrne, Albert Rosser, and William Napier will be the players; Muriel Mann and Harriet Barber will be the grave diggers; and Edwin Goddard will be the ghost.

The stage will be after the Shakespearean manner with no front curtain and a rather permanent set. This set will depict the stone wall of the castle of Elsinore; representing a huge granite wall this set will completely mask the alcove.

A large production staff has been working to establish the authenticity of the costumes and to adapt the play to the Maryville stage. Ellen Sauer has been in charge of costuming and has made the costumes after extensive research. Robert Brandriff made the necessary adaptions to make the play suitable for local presentation.

William McGill is production manager, Mrs. Nita Eckles West is directing the play, Hugh L. Smith is business manager, Glenn Young is electrician, Ruth Moore is in charge of properties, and Edith Gillette and Palmer Mayo are in charge of advertising.

President Speaks At Baccalaureate

Presbyterian Church Joins College In Service

"Look from the Place Where Thou Art" will be the theme of the Baccalaureate address by Dr. Ralph W. Lloyd at Voorhees chapel Sunday morning, May 28.

Following the custom of past years, the graduating class and members of the faculty will march into the chapel together. Music for the service follows:

Processional—How Firm a Foundation
Anthem—Holy Radiant Light—Gretchanioff
Anthem—Father Most Holy—Christiansen
Recessional—The Son of God Goes Forth To War

No service will be held at the New Providence Presbyterian church on that morning but members will unite with Maryville college for the baccalaureate program at 10:30 in the chapel.

McGaha Sets Record In Pop-Drinking Contest

By "INSIDER"

The same day the Maryville track team took the state meet, "Iron-Man" McGaha amazed the collegiate world with his soda-slurping prowess, but Maryvillians took it quite in their stride. We had been expecting great things of "Mac" all along. It is true that we believed his name would be made famous for some exhibition of his athletic ability instead of his carbonated water capacity, but, at any rate, we weren't disappointed.

Now that the ink is dry on the record book (12 bottles in 22 min. 7 sec.) and the book has been closed, it might be well to let the subject rest, but out of fairness to our fellow-man and out of regard for posterity, these few facts about the champ are presented.

He has never been a flag-pole sitter and has never competed in a dance marathon. Evidently he hates notoriety unless it's for a good cause. He was an amateur boxer, a Golden Gloves aspirant. That accounts for the coolness with which he finished off each bottle. He has spent several months as a sailor. No wonder his stomach can take it! And finally, he is a thorough New Dealer. "The pop was free so I just kept taking it," he said the next day.

Where he's from doesn't matter, he said, and where he's going he's not quite sure. But his words at the end of the bottled soda bout will always live in the hearts and minds of Maryvillians driving them on to higher ideals. These immortal words spoken at the moment of his victory at the request of the Master of Ceremonies we all know, and can never forget. "Mac", t you we wish luck, and may you always, as you said that night, "Gurgle, Gurgle, Gurgle, BURP."

115 Graduates To Receive Degrees At Commencement

Alumnus Dr. Wm. Haggard To Speak At Annual Exercises Here

About one hundred and fifteen students will graduate from the college Tuesday, May 30, at the annual commencement exercises in Voorhees chapel. Nine of these will receive the degree of Bachelor of Science in Home Economics, and the rest will be awarded the Bachelor of Arts degree. This is the one hundred and twentieth commencement at Maryville college.

The commencement speaker will be Dr. William Wade Haggard, a graduate of the college in the class of 1917. He is at present superintendent of Joliet high school and Joliet Junior college in Illinois, and has headed the American Association of Junior Colleges and other large educational groups. He received his Ph.D. from the University of Chicago in 1937.

The exercises will begin at 10 a.m., with the procession of the faculty and the members of the senior class eligible to receive the degrees. There will be special music by the choir, and for the first time at a commencement in Maryville there will be the new organ. The choir will sing "O Thou in Whose Presence" by Lewis-Cain and "O Praise the Name of the Lord" by Tschaikowsky.

Commencement will be the culmination of a busy week of activity for the members of the graduating class, beginning with a senior breakfast next Monday morning at the home of President and Mrs. R. W. Lloyd and including the production of the senior play, Baccalaureate, and the alumni dinner.

Fine Arts Seniors Present Program

Music And Dramatics To Be Featured

On Friday evening, May 26, the senior students who are majoring in Dramatics or music are presenting a program of the work in their various fields.

Muriel Mann will give "Guinevere," a portion arranged from Tennyson's "Idylls of the King." Following this Zula Vance will play three piano selections, "Jesu ,Joy of Man's Desiring" byBach-Hess, "Less deux alovettes". Op. 1, No. 1 by Leschetizky, and "Aufschwing," Op. 12, No. 2 by Schumann. Sara Bolton will then give three studies in dialect: the first, in Pennsylvania German, is "Erstwhile Susan" by Marion de Forest; the second, in Irish, is "A Way Out of It" by Samuel Lover; and the third, in English, is "The Importance of Being Earnest" by Oscar Wilde. Following these readings, Harriet Barber will sing "The Spirit Song" by Haydn, "Hills of Gruzia" by Mednikoff, and "When I Have Sung My Songs," by Charles. The program will be concluded with "My Last Duchess." Through this poem by Browning, Gordon Bennett will portray the character of the Duke.

Glee Clubs To Present Annual Spring Concert

Program To Include Several Imported French Selections

The annual spring concert of the combined glee clubs under the direction of Ralph R. Colbert, will be presented in Voorhees chapel this evening at 8:00.

The first group of numbers given by the glee clubs will open with "Prelude" from "Cycle of Life" by Ronald-Cain. Following "Out of the Silence" by Galliraith, and "Hopodi Pomilui (Lord Have Mercy)" by Lvovsky will be sung. The next number, "Three Lovely Birds From Paradise" by Ravel is one that was published in and sent from France. Solo parts will be taken by Louise Allen, Ruth Wood, Richard Woodring, and Edwin Goddard. A folk song, "Czechoslovakian Dance Song" will conclude the first group.

Mendelssohn's Piano Concerto in D minor will be played by Zillah McKenzie, Louise Felknor and Miss Katharine Davies. The glee club will return with Victor Herbert's "Italian Street Song" from "Naughty Marietta." The obligato part will be sung by Elizabeth Ann Huddleston. Following this a quartet, composed of Richard Woodring, Roland Anderson, Edwin Goddard, and Warren van Blarcom, will sing three numbers, "Rangers Song" from Rio Rita by Tierney, "Cornfield Melodies" arranged by Gates, and "De Animals a Comin'" by Bartholomew.

The program will be concluded by the glee clubs with two modern selections, "Night and Day" by Porter and "I'll See You Again", from Noel Coward's "Bittersweet."

Immediately after the program the glee clubs are holding a combined party for their members in the YWCA rooms.

Dr. R. W. Lloyd To Address Commencement Exercises

Dr. R. W. Lloyd has had various speaking engagements outside the college recently and has made plans to speak at several commencements in the next few weeks.

Some of these appointments include: Tennessee College Association, Nashville; Third Church, Chattanooga; and Second Church, Knoxville; Commencements in Tennessee at Dayton, Wheat, Rockwood, Friendsville, Erwin, Dandridge, Alcoa, Mossop School in Harriman and in Lawrenceville, Ill.; Convocation, University of Tennessee; daily vespers at the Southern Presbyterian Young People's Conference.

President Lloyd will spend part of next week at the Presbyterian General Assembly in Cleveland, Ohio, where a Maryville college breakfast will be held Friday morning, May 26.

Curtis Elected President

Last Tuesday an election was held at Pearsons hall to elect the president for the '39-'40 term. Jessie Curtis was elected president, and she will begin her duties next fall. The remaining officers will be chosen at the beginning of the fall term.

Presentations of Prizes, Awards For Acnievements of Year Made This Morning At Chapel Services

Alumni To Attend Special Seminars

Reception And Banquet To Be Given Monday For Association

Alumni Day will begin at 8:10 a.m., Monday with the chapel service, at which time special music will be given by the glee clubs. This will be followed by the Alumni Seminars, beginning at 9:25 and continuing until noon.

Seminars will be conducted under the direction of Dr. Fred A. Griffitts, professor in chemistry; Dr. M. M. Rodgers, professor in Bible; Dr. Claude E. Campbell, associate professor in economics; and Miss Frances Rich, instructor in art. The seminars will be held in two periods, one beginning at 9:25 and the next at 10:20.

At 12:00 the group will retire by classes for luncheon.

A reception for Alumni, parents of students, seniors, and guests will be given from 3:00 to 5:00 in the afternoon by the President and Mrs. Lloyd and Dr. and Mrs. Stevenson at the President's home.

The annual Alumni banquet and business meeting will be held at 7:00 in Pearsons hall. Toastmaster will be Mr. O. L. Duggan, Knoxville Boy Scout Executive and President of the Alumni Association. At this time, a brief business report will be given by Miss Geneva Hutchinson, executive secretary of the Association.

Tickets for the banquet will go on sale Saturday at the Publicity office in Anderson hall. Seniors may obtain tickets free of charge by seeing their class president. Tickets for their family may also be purchased at the regular price at the Alumni office.

Otto Pflanze Elected Pi Kappa Delta Head

Otto Pflanze was elected president of Alpha Chapter of Pi Kappa Delta, national honorary forensic fraternity, for the year 1939-40, at the annual banquet of the fraternity held at Kinzel Springs hotel last evening. Others officers were Arda Walker, vice president; Harriet Miller, secretary-treasurer; and Tommy Woolf, reporter.

The banquet was attended by all members of Pi Kappa Delta and members of the freshman debate squad.

Following the banquet and the program new members were initiated into the fraternity.

NOTICE

Refunds of the deposits will be made at the close of school. Students rooming on the campus will receive tickets when keys are turned in at the dormitories, and all students will receive tickets when textbooks are turned in at the Book Store. These tickets must be presented at the office in order to receive refunds.

Summer Conferences To Be Held On Campus In June By Three Groups

The annual summer conferences sponsored by the various branches and departments of the Presbyterian church will again be held on the college campus during the month of June.

The first of these conferences will be sponsored by the Southern (U. S.) Presbyterian church for young people in the state of Tennessee for the senior age group (not including college age). It will be held June 5-8, and Rev. Carl D. Scheihe, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Chattanooga, will be the principal speaker of the conference. Dr. Ralph W. Lloyd, president of Maryville college will lead the vesper services.

The second conference will begin on June 12, and will continue for a week. This conference is sponsored by the Northern (U. S. A.) Presbyterian church for young people throughout the state of senior high school age. The attendance as this conference usually reaches the figure of about two hundred and fifty or more young people.

The third of the conferences is sponsored jointly by the Synod and Synodical of the U. S. Presbyterian church. It is to be held June 20-23. This conference will be attended by all Presbyterian ministers, and their wives, of the state, and in addition, many lay members. It will include daily classes, both morning and afternoon. In other years this conference was held solely for the purpose of transacting business, but this year there are varied conference classes added to the program for the purpose of furthering the work of the church.

Faculty Tells Truth About Teachers' Pets

By DON KENT

Q. Mr. Queener, do you have any pets?

A. Why? Are you looking for an opening?

Q. No, I mean animal pets. You know, dogs, cats, or the like. The Echo wants to know.

A. Oh, yes, I see. We have a sheep.

Q. A sheep?

A. Yes, a mountain sheep. We call him "Baba". Original, don't you think?

Q. Quite. What does a mountain sheep eat?

A. Well, ours is a civilized mountain sheep. Its favorite green food is young lilac sprouts, but he hasn't had any lately. We pasture him with the cows now.

Q. How does she get along away from home?

A. Very well. His tail has so much wool on it, he has to haul it around on a trundle-wagon.

Q. No!

A. Yes!

Q. Has she always been a sheep since you had her or did you raise her from a kid?

A. Lamb. Yes he was an orphan when we got him—three or four weeks old—came from Miller's Cove out there. Now he's about three months old. He sleeps on the lumber pile and when he walks around it sounds like somebody hammering on the side of the barn. I think if he keeps that up we'll have lamp chops soon. Or mutton.

Q. The students will probably be looking for an invitation to the funeral feast. What do you want to tell them?

A. There's only one sheep. First come, first served.

Q. Um. Thank you. Goodby.

A. Wait! HE! HE!

Q. What are you laughing at?

A. The sheep. HE, not SHE.

Q. Oh yes. Goodby.

(Five minutes pass)

Q. Dr. Lloyd, the Echo wants the low-down on that pony of yours. What's its name?

A. Billy.

Q. Do you spell that with an ie or a y?

A. B-i-l-l-y-e. It's an up to date pony.

Q. How old is he?

A. About nine years old, I think. We've had him about six years. He was a Christmas present to the youngsters.

Q. You didn't grow him from a puppy then?

A. Colt? No. I got him out near Little River. We shoved him into the back of the car and drove here with him. Twenty miles he stood squeezed up in the back.

Q. Poor thing.

A. We have a dog, too, you know. That little spotted fox-terrier. Teddy is his name. You've probably seen him around. I don't know just how old he is but he had a birthday party the other day. And we had a canary last year, but it died.

Q. Horrible.

A. Yes, isn't it?

Q. Thank you, Dr. Lloyd, for your information. Give my regards to Billye and Teddy.

(Five minutes more).

Q. Coach Honaker, do you have any pets?

A. Nope. No livestock at all!

Q. Thank you. I was just wondering.

Experience Teaches—Yes?

The new catalogue contains many fine features, but there is one page that is disappointing to most students. That page is the college calendar for next year. Complaint was made of no spring vacation this year, and it was hoped that the experiment being considered unwise there might be a return to what has been the past custom, a short vacation around Easter time. Not only is this item lacking, but the prospect of an additional week of school in June is made a reality by the finality of the calendar.

Perhaps it was just student sentiment, but early in April this year there was much talk of the effect no vacation was having on the physical and mental morale of the students. It was true that there were many illnesses and the college dispensary was crowded. This could be just a coincidence, and yet almost all of the cases were the result of fatigue in one way or another.

The explanation was made that a vacation would cause students to travel, inadvisable as it would increase expense and would tire students out more than school work would. But all that is asked for the majority is a few days of rest; if a small number want to travel that is an individual matter which young men and young women who have reached college age should be able to decide for themselves.

It is too late in the year to suggest reforms, but these suggestions are made with the sincere hope that they may be considered in the future.

Another Year!

Seniors, exams, commencement, Baccalaureate, farewells—all these will be over in a week and one more year in the history of Maryville colege will be closed. It has been a year that has seen great improvement on the campus, however, and has watched many new plans begun and completed for the betterment of our college life.

Each year there have been many changes in the physical and social appearance of the campus, but we feel that more changes have been instigated during 1939-40 than ever before. The reorganization of activities which has had great consideration, but which, as yet, has shown few results; the obtaining of the organ, which has been a goal for many years; and the increased cooperation of students are merely several of the things which we might mention.

Now there is another year to think about—not for the seniors—who, although they may retain their interest in the college, will not take active part in it another year, but for those of us who do not graduate. We must plan during the long vacation ahead goals which are constructive for the college life and we must strive for these goals.

And for the seniors that are leaving, we feel that this is the most appropriate time to express to them our very sincere hope that they may meet success in their study or work, and that they may accept our appreciation of their spirit and contributions to a fuller and better life on the Maryville campus.

THE YEAR IN REVIEW

The twenty-ninth issue of the twenty-fourth volume of the Highland Echo, and it comes time for the contemporary columnist, whomever he may be, to continue the custom of reviewing the year with the benefit of some past issues of said Echo (maybe as an ad to prove we do get the news, before or after it happens). Nothing strange about it, but the year began, and will end, with a speech. The Convocation in September opened the year with President Lloyd's address "What Is a College?" His seven or more points provoked much thought, and a little later a friend of the college had the address printed and distributed to the students. The speech that will end the year is the commencement address.

Issue of September 24: Lois Barnwell made band sponsor, Fraulein Jung arrived from Germany and said she liked Maryville, the personnel office said seven hundred and seventy-six had registered for the first semester, Edwin Cunningham (former consul general in Shanghai) spoke on the Chinese situation, the proposal for women cheer leaders was advanced, and Friend Rhody had one of his usual good columns (Up Our Hall also ran.)

October broke with big news. The contract for the new heating plant had been signed, Donald Grant began his series of lectures on contemporary international history, the organ fund totalled almost two thousand dollars, Athenian had a weiner roast, and the highest mark on the previous year's honor roll was 9.2 made by John Lancaster. About the middle of the month Governor Gordon Browning attended the Maryville-Tennesse Wesleyan football game on Wilson Field, the Law club elected fourteen new members, Malcolm Miller addressed the group of seniors preparing the senior play "Hamlet," "Tovarich" had gone into rehearsal, and Hunt was not writing a column. At the end of the month Homecoming and Founder's Day was observed honoring Professor Gideon S. W. Crawford, word was received that the Maryville chapter of Pi Kappa Delta ranked tenth in the nation, a local sports writer (really a wit at heart) recommended a CIO for tired sports writers, and the social committee sponsored a cut-up party in the gym. My, what a schedule!

November first was the opening date of the Artist Series and featured the Salzburg Trapp Choir. This large family group of musicians made a good impression on the audience with their program of native Austrian music and special numbers on the rare block flutes. Twelve students were elected by the faculty to the scholastic "Who's Who," and on Armistice Day a peace service was held in chapel.

November 15 and 16 the Rev. L. K. Anderson spoke in chapel in behalf of the Fred Hope fund and at the end of the week the College Players presented "Tovarich," starring Pat Mann and Gordon Bennett. East Tennessee Teachers nosed out a victory over the Scottie football phantoms 20-13, the college bell was ringing late, and we were laughing over a joke in the Exchange column. Ah, the good old days!

The college was saddened early in December by the tragic accident in the pool which resulted in the death of Edward Ciurczak. The glee clubs and the choir presented for the sixth consecutive time Handel's oratorio "The Messiah", the Home Ec department had a tea and open house, and Christmas vacation arrived.

The new year began with the second number of the Artist Series, Jussi Bjoerling. This handsome young tenor came well-recommended after a successful American debut and was very highly thought of by the Maryville audience. At the end of the month a student drive for the organ fund was conducted in chapel resulting in enough contributions to assure the purchase of the instrument so long desired. Hunt had taken up writing a column to the relief of the persons responsible for filling space on page two, and first semester examinations came down like the wolf on the fold.

Second semester opened with the February Meetings led by Dr. Harrison Ray Anderson. The sincerity of his messages and the strength of his own personality endeared him to his listeners, especially after his personal appeal at the last meeting raised four hundred dollars for the organ fund. "You Can't Take It With You" was given Feb. 24 and proved a big success, the Law club planned another mock trial, the Maryville cagers defeated Cumberland in a neck-to-neck battle 42-36, and Dr. Ruth Stephens spoke to the International Relations club on "Can Prime Minister Chamberlain Keep the Peace in Europe?"

Early in March the debate squad won the state meet and the glee clubs presented Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Sorcerer." Dr. John Timothy Stone, president of Chicago Theological seminary, spoke twice at services in the chapel, and Rhody had a poem in his column. Mrs. Elizabeth Bowman reviewed her book "Land of High Horizons" before the Nature club, and Steakley had an editorial on the front page. Quite an eventful month, closing with Miss Frances Rich's lectures on art and the last number of the 1938-39 Artist Series, Walter Gieseking, poet-pianist. Especially well- received were his Debussy numbers.

Then came April. (Are you with me?) Alpha Sigma and Theta Epsilon gave a very fine midwinter, Sir James M. Barrie's "Quality Street" on the fourteenth of the month. The Easter Sunrise service was held and was a big success, and the choir got new robes after twenty-two years (same robes, not same choir). May Queen elections resulted in the selection of a court headed by Marguerite Justus and King Gene Orr. Alpha Gamma Sigma installed its new members and heard an address by Dean Fred Smith of U-T, and installation of the organ was begun. Athenian reorganized and something was done about the social program on the campus although there is still the carrying into action next year the well-laid plans of mice and men which were formulated.

May has thus far been distinguished by May Day, Harriet Barber and Zula Vance (and Ed Goddard last night) in their senior recitals, banquets galore, comprehensives, and the distribution of the Chilhowean.

Such a hasty review of the year makes it seem like nothing really big happened of which we could boast to our fellow collegians from other institutions, and yet it has been a busy year. No one has been able to take part in everything that was offered, but we all feel that the vacation soon to come will be well-earned. There ends school year 1938-39, and it is only one hundred and eighteen days before school year 1939-40 will begin. Pax vobiscum!

The very welcome news has come from Mrs. Fred Proffitt that Louise is making wonderful progress towards recovery from her recent illness. Her many friends will be glad to know that. She has asked us to express her thanks for the many letters, cards, and expressions of thoughtfulness she has received from her college friends. It is expected that she will be back home sometime during the summer.

Student Art Exhibit To Begin On Tuesday

An exhibit of student art work will be held in the art studio, third floor Anderson annex, beginning Tuesday and continuing through graduation. This exhibit represents the work done by art students under the direction of Miss Frances Rich during the past year, and includes studies, drawings, designs, and figures. These are done in either of two mediums: carne crayon, which is a material similar to charcoal only more durable, and water color.

Those exhibiting include Marie Jensen, Arlene Phelps, Evelyn Foster, Chalotte Roehl, Irma Sue Pate, Stone Norton, Eleanor Long, Jean Myers, and Velma Webb.

French Club Names Mary Allen President

Wednesday evening at 6:45 the French club held their last meeting of the year. There was no program, but election of officers for next year was held, the meeting being presided over by Sara Taylor, outgoing president. The new officers elected to serve next fall are as follows: president, Mary Deane Allen; vice president, Phil Ferris; secretary, Frances Stewart; treasurer, Margaret Ash; program chairman, David Kidder and Hal Henschen. The officers for the past year have been: president, Sara Taylor; vice president, David Kidder; secretary, Mary Deane Allen; treasurer, Ruth Moore; program secretaries, Irma Sue Pate and Louise Curtis; critic, Stanley Bird.

Theta Epsilon Officers Installation Tonight

At the last meeting of Theta Epsilon, nominations were made for the officers of the coming year. The election was held at Pearsons hall on Wednesday and Mary Deane Allen was elected president; Dorothy Quass, vice president; Mary Clark Caldwell, secretary; and Linda Robinson, treasurer. Program secretaries are Dorothy DePue and Kitty Bennett.

The installation will be held at the next meeting, Saturday at 6:45 in Theta hall. All Theta's are requested to be present.

GONE, BUT NOT FORGOTTEN—

THIS YEAR as always, Maryville loses a number of good athletes by graduation. Among the men that have made a name for themselves in athletics the past years and are graduating are: Al Burris, captain of the '38 football team, S. K. Taylor, lineman on the football team Bill Napier, another lineman on the football team; Weldon Baird, one of the best all around athletes ever to come to Maryville, played basketball four years and captained the team the past season and has been on the track team for four years, also being captain of the state championship track team; Everett Gray, trackman; Gene Orr, a fine trackman, who this year broke two college records, one in the low hurdles and one in the high hurdles. Gene has lettered three years in track. And as we have been signing yearbooks all week, here's luck to you, seniors.

CONSIDERING all things, the baseball team has done right well by itself this year. Finishing in a tie for second place, or cinching second place as the results may be (this afternoon gam edeciding their exact position) was really an uphill fight fo rthe team. Starting the season out with only three men back from last year's team, Hughes, Honaker and Wilburn, Coach Honaker was faced with about six vacant positions to fill from a none too promising crop of freshmen.

Cindermen Shade Vanderbilt To Capture First State Track Title

The Maryville college track team, coached by R. C. Thrower, closed its most successful season by winning its first state title at Cookeville last Saturday afternoon. The Highlanders barely nosed out the Vanderbilt Commodores by 4½ points. Maryville scoring 40 1-2 points, Vanderbilt 36, Tennessee 32 1-2, Southwestern 28 1-2, LMU 8 1-2, T. P. I. 6, Sewanee 5, E.T.T. 5, and Chattanooga 2.

The meet was close all the way and the title was not cinched by the Scots until the final relay, which was won by Maryville's crack relay team. Several records fell in the course of the afternoon despite the fact that a continual drizzle of rain slowed down the track considerably. Joe Etheredge cracked the former state high jump record of 6 ft. 1-4 in., by clearing the bar at 6 ft. 1 3-4 inches. One of the most sparkling performances turned in was by a Vanderbilt man, Billy Young, who threw the javelin 207 feet 8 in. The night before Young had thrown the spear 197 ft. 11 inches at the Cotton Carnival which was in Memphis.

Another record to fall was the high hurdle record. Jim Wallin of East Tennessee Teachers hitch-hiked up to the meet and set a new state record of 15.3 seconds.

High point men for Maryville were Orr, who won the low hurdles, placed second in the high hurdles, finishing minus a shoe, and ran on the winning relay team; and Weldon Baird, who won the mile run, placed third in the half mile and also formed one quarter of the relay team. Sutton placed second to Slaugenhop in both dash races, and Joe Etheredge won the high jump and placed fourth in the broad jump.

Mile run—W. Baird, Maryville, first; McGinnis, Vanderbilt; Wilson, Tennessee; Johnson, LMU. Time 4.38.6

440-yd. dash—Cornelius, Vanderbilt, first; Steakley, Maryville; Frazier, Sewanee; Lloyd, Maryville. Time 51.7.

100-yd. dash—Slagenhop, Vanderbilt, first; Sutton, Maryville; Andridge, Tennessee; Winokur, Vanderbilt. Time 9.9.

120-yd. high hurdles—Wallin, East Tennessee Teachers, first; Orr, Maryville; Priest, TPI; Hume, Vanderbilt. Time 15.2.

880-yd. run—Stout, Tennessee, first; Warren, Tennessee; W. Baird, Maryville; B. Baird, Maryville. Time 2:01.

Shotput—Winfrey, Southwestern, 1st; Cifers, Tennessee; Reid, Southwestern; Smith, Southwestern. Distance, 46 feet, 3 inches.

220-yd. dash—Slagenhop, Vanderbilt, first; Sutton, Maryville; Duncan, Tennessee; Higgins, Sewanee. Time 22.6.

Pole vault—D. Williams, LMU, first; P. Williams, LMU and Underwood of Southwestern, tied for second; Barnes, Tennessee and Rae, Maryville, tied for third. Height, 11 feet, 3 inches.

220-yd. low hurdles—Orr, Maryville, first; Tucki, Vanderbilt; Steakley, of Maryville; Ross, Southwestern. Time, 25.2.

Mile relay—Maryville, first; Tennessee; Sewanee. Time, 3:32.3.

Broad jump—Foley, Southwestern, first; Thompson, TPI; Barber, U. of C.; Etheredge, Maryville. Distance, 22 ft.

Javelin throw—Young, Vanderbilt, first; Cifers, Tennessee; Settles, Southwestern; Walker, TPI. Distance, 207 feet, 8¾ inches.

Discus—Smith, Southwestern, first; Winfrey, Southwestern; Cifers, Tennessee; D. Smith, Vanderbilt. Distance, 134 feet, 3 inches.

High jump—Etheredge, Maryville, first; Ellenberg, Tennessee; O'Connor, Vanderbilt; Hatfield, Tennessee. Height 6 feet, 1¾ inches.

Two-mile run—Batts, Vanderbilt, 1st; Frazier, Tennessee; Dawson, Southwestern; Mooney, Maryville. Time 10: 37.4.

Findlay Elected Swimming Capt.

Gordon Findlay, junior from Philadelphia, Pa., was selected by his teammates this week to be captain for the second time of the Maryville swimming team. Findlay has been a letterman both years he has been on the team, and swims the dashes and is on the relay team. Findlay was also captain of last year's squad.

The 1939-40 swimming schedule is noe yet completed, but Captain Findlay announced that in addition to the teams that Maryville met this year, Vanderbilt university will be added to their list of opponents. Maryville's swimming schedule will probably contain meets with the University of Tennessee, Chattanooga Y, and Knoxville Y, Auburn, Tusculum, Kentucky, Emory, Eastern Kentucky Teachers, and Vanderbilt university.

Scots Finish In Second Place Tie

Scots 10—Pioneers 3

The Scottie nine pushed themselves up a notch in conference circles as they swung a heavy bat against the Tusculum Pioneers Wednesday, running up a score of 10-3. It was the first game of the final series of the season, to be completed here today. Short and Sieber divided the pitching duties, holding the Pioneers way behind. Hedrick blasted everything thrown to him, for three singles and a four bagger. All of hits scored runs.

Maryville did most of her scoring in the fourth and fifth innings. They gathered three in the fourth on Kindred's double, Hedrick's single and Cragan's double. In the fifth, three runs were pushed over by hits from Sieber, Kindred and Hedrick. Tusculum's runs came in the ninth, earned mainly from walks. No one from Tusculum stood out in field or at at the plate. Of the Pioneer's seven hits, only two came in one inning.

VOLUME 25 MARYVILLE, TENN. SEPTEMBER 16, 1939 NUMBER 1

CIVILIAN PILOT TRAINING PROGRAM IS PROMISED TO MARYVILLE STUDENTS

U. S. Government Invites Participation Of Four Tennessee Institutions

CARSON TO TEACH

7 Month Flying Course For Selected Students Offered At Small Cost

The Civil Aeronautics Authority of the Federal government on August 5, 1939, sent out a communication to colleges and universities located within prescribed distances from standard airports. Maryville college received this and subsequent communications inviting us to make application for participation in the Civilian Pilot Training Program authorized by Congress.

After due inquiry and consideration we forwarded on August 23 our applications and required application from the adjacent airport manager and a licensed flight operator. The Civil Aeronautics Authority notified us on Sept. 11 that Maryville college had been selected as one of the participating institutions. The press states that four institutions in Tennessee (Maryville, U. of Tennessee, University of Chattanooga, and Southwestern in Memphis) have been selected.

The purpose of the program is stated as "the training of civilian pilots through educational institutions sufficient training to prepare a student for a private pilot certificate of competency." This "requires no military or other obligations."

The Civil Aeronautics Authority sets up certain rigid student eligibility requirements and recommends and leaves certain others to the discretion of the participating institution. The following requirements will obtain at Maryville college:

1) Regular college classification above freshman rank; and U.S. citizenship.
2) Age 18 to 24 inclusive.
3) Medical examination approved by C.A.A.
4) Consent of parents or guardians and certificates from them and the student releasing the college, the flight operator, and the Government from liability in case of accident.
5) Selection by Civil Aeronautics Authority, based upon record of the student and recommendation of the college in academic standing, personality, physical qualifications, aptitude, likelihood of profiting by the training, and prospect of continuing active flying.
6) It is understood that a small per cent of women students and another small per cent of persons not enrolled in the college may be selected but information is still uncertain on this point.

A course fee of $35 (to cover insurance and medical examination which will cost $30, and incidentals); also payment of own transportation to and from the airport two or three days a week from November 1 to June. (The fee permitted by the C.A.A. is $40 but Maryville is reducing it as much as possible.)

1. The ground school covering 72 hours instruction, which is equivalent to four hours per week for 18 weeks; beginning not later than October 1 and being completed by the end of the first semester. This will probably be in charge of Miss Louise Carson (M. C. '30) who is beginning service this semester as Instructor in Chemistry and Mathematics and who holds a private pilot's license and is actively engaged in flying.

2. Flight instruction at the airport, beginning not later than Nov. 1 and continuing until June under a flight operator and his staff with whom the C.A.A. will enter into contract, and who will be paid from $270 to $290 per student with money provided by the Government. For the first 12 hours of this part of the course the student is to receive three thirty-minute lessons per week, or a total of one and one-half hours of flying. For the balance of the course until June he is to have two one-hour instruction periods per week. This work will be handled by a flight operator who must furnish one airplane for each ten students, and carry insurance to protect the college, student, and others concerned.

If approved by the C.A.A., the ground school course will be taught by Miss Carson, with the assistance of two or three lecturers on specific phases of the work.

Faculty To Hold Annual Reception As Climax To Opening Week Program

A reception for all the students of Maryville college will be given on Monday evening from eight to ten o'clock, by the members of the faculty in the library. The reception will climax a series of opening week events designed to introduce students and members of the faculty and familiarize new students with their surroundings and the students about them.

The reception line will be headed by Dr. and Mrs. Lloyd and Helen Bewley and Russell Stevenson, presidents of the YWCA and YMCA. Light refreshments will be served following the reception.

Theta Plans Rush Week In Hawaii

New Girls Are Invited To Picnic, Splash Party

The freshman girl rush week program of Theta Epsilon, which is patterned after life in Hawaii, will begin on next Tuesday, Sept. 19, with a picnic in the College woods from 3:00 until 5:30 in the afternoon. Margaret Ash and Irene Hunter will be in charge of the day's activities.

The program for the week will be carried on with a splash party on Thursday night. The evening festivities, in charge of Ruth Bigler and Dorothy Quass, will begin at 8:00 and last until ten. For those who like swimming, water games and races will be held. Entertainment for others will be found in games and a skit.

The glimpse of life in Hawaii will be brought to a close at Theta's formal opening on Saturday night. The program which is being planned by Margaret Halsey and Katherine Bennett, will take place in the gym from 8:00 until 10:00. Hawaii will be there with all its music and gay entertainment.

Theta Epsilon invites all freshmen to attend.

Hunter And Rich Among Number Married During Summer Vacation Season

During the past summer two faculty members, three members of last year's graduating class, and several alumni announced their marriages. The former Miss Dorothy Hunter, instructor in French, was married June 15, to Mr. Thomas Capell Walker of the French department of the University of Tennessee. On July 1, Miss Frances Rich, teacher of art was married to Mr. William Lockett Patterson.

Virginia Lee Schaeffer and William Clay Collins were married in the early summer. Joy Pinneo and Don Rugh who have been doing home missionary work in Middle Tennessee were married June 16.

Everett Gray was married during the summer also. On August 8, Charles Allen and Nancy Lee Whetstone were married. Grace Proffitt and David MacArthur were married June 10 in Voorhees chapel; and Ruth Proffitt and William MacCalmont were married in the chapel on June 24.

Two former students, Helen Chambers and Glover Leitch were married September 5, 1939.

Purdue English Test Given To 260 Freshmen Tuesday

Of the three tests which freshmen are required to take, only one has been given. The Purdue Placement Test was given Tuesday; this is a standard English test that places the students in sections that will give them the type of work they need. It was reported by Dr. E. R. Hunter that approximately 260 students took this test.

The Reading Test, which was to have been given Thursday, has been postponed until a later date. The Psychological Examination, also to be given later, is to be taken by all transferred students, as well as by the freshmen.

College Grieves Death Of Rodgers This Summer

Former Pastor Active In Young People's Work Succumbs After Illness

Students returning to the campus learned of the death of Dr. Morton M. Rodgers, professor of Bible at Maryville for the past thirteen years. He died at his home in Maryville, September 4, after a long illness. The funeral service was conducted from Voorhees chapel and the body was buried in the old home cemetery at Plain Grove, near Newcastle, Pennsylvania.

Dr. Rodgers had taught at Maryville since 1926. Previously he had held pastorates for twenty-three years in Presbyterian churches in Indiana and Pennsylvania. He was ordained into the ministry in 1903. His higher education had been received at Slippery Rock Normal School (Pennsylvania), Grove City college, Western Theological seminary in Pittsburgh, and the University of Chicago. His degrees were Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Education, Master of Education, Master of Sacred Theology, Doctor of Philosophy, and Doctor of Divinity (honorary.)

The late professor was active in church and educational activities holding many important offices. He was frequently a leader in Young People's conferences, was an author, and had travelled in the Holy Land and Europe.

The funeral service was conducted by President Ralph W. Lloyd, Rev. Dr. Horace E. Orr, Rev. Dr. William P. Stevenson, and Rev. Dr. John A. McAfee, pastor of the New Providence Presbyterian church. Dr. Orr accompanied the body and the Rodgers family to the services in the north. Surviving are his wife, a son, Paul Dean Rodgers, '31, of Knoxville; a daughter, Mrs. Margaret Flaugher, of Jerseyville, Illinois; a grandson, two brothers, and one sister.

Temporary arrangements have been made for Dr. Rodgers' classes during the first semester. This has been done by making some rearrangements in the schedules of other teachers and by securing the part-time services of certain others whose names are listed among new teachers and staff printed elsewhere in this issue of the Highland Echo.

There is a junior and a sophomore vacancy to be filled on the Echo staff. Anyone interested in trying out for these vacancies may report to the Echo office Tuesday evening at 6:30.

Road Over Corduroy Planned For College By Mrs. John Walker

Flagstone Walks, Drive Managed And Financed By Interested Donor

One of the striking and extensive improvements made on the campus during the past spring and summer is that connected with the corduroy road, the new gates, and the road and walk up the hill toward Baldwin hall.

All of this project has been planned, managed and financed by Mrs. John Walker, who lives at her home, Morningside, in the College woods. As always she has combined to an unusual degree the practical utility and the artistic appearance of the work. Beginning last spring thousands of loads of dirt were put on the corduroy until it has been built up to a level suitable for driving and has been widened sufficiently to allow a two-way drive, a walk, and border protecting walls. Since it is necessary to allow the dirt to settle before any paving is done the surface has been covered with stone for the present and will be allowed to stand for some months.

The large gateways at the corduroy entrance to the campus are slightly larger than those at the other two entrances but are of the same pattern to match them.

The driveway up the hill has been excellently built of stone and macadam and ties into the main road at the top of the hill, just a little to one side of Baldwin hall. The macadam walk from the gate to the top of the hill like the road follows graceful lines under the trees. Toward the top of the hill this covers the old brick walk but toward the bottom of the hill it takes a different route and the brick walk has been removed or covered by the road.

Mrs. Walker has also had a very attractive and useful flagstone walk laid to the north corner of the chapel, along the end of the chapel building, and then to Carnegie hall, on a pathway that has been worn during the last few years by men using that route. It is expected that the doors toward the town on the music studio floor of the chapel will soon be opened and that the entrances of that part of the chapel will come into common use.

Mrs. Walker also has had a great deal of work done on the bank of the corduroy and between the corduroy and the new heating plant. She has had stones put in such manner as to support the fill, to make possible growth, and provide walks and steps. She has had this sodded and planted and has men watering it as much as possible, although the exceedingly dry weather makes it now impossible to keep this done.

All of this represents not only considerable investment of money but also a great deal of interest and planning by Mrs. Walker.

ECHO-HUMOR

With all the war talk, it might be well for the Personnel office to prepare a pamphlet on "What to Do in Case of Air Attacks."

It might read something like this:

1. If attacked at night, an immediate blackout must follow the ringing of the college bell. (Walk, don't run, to the nearest blond.)

2. If the attack comes while in chapel where gas is most effective, it is suggested that we hold our seats and wait until it is over.

3. If the attack occurs while in classrooms, your teacher will advise you what to do. (If you can find your teacher.)

4. If an attack is made during a football game, seek shelter behind the Scotties' forward wall.

5. In all cases, keep your head; if you don't, you'll probably lose it.

(Note: Don't believe all the propaganda you read in the Echo. The Yanks really aren't half bad folks. Their bombast is worse than their bombshells.)

Tuesday p.m. in Carnegie hall near Mr. Mac's door lingered a long line of, obviously, freshmen. Up the steps sauntered two sophomores, a study in nonchalance.

"Look!" the first pointed to the new full-length mirrors on either side of the hall. "New mirors. They weren't here LAST YEAR."

"No," said Soph Two, in a voice which for all practical purposes might have been a shout, "LAST YEAR, they weren't here, were they?"

Two chests expanded two inches; two pairs of eyes took in the awed stares of the, obviously, freshmen; and two sophs strutted proudly down the old, familiar hall.

Each had made, like every other sophomore, a silent vow to settle down and devote himself to study and hard work this year. Two months from now, each will find himself giving more and more time to Outside Activities, e.g., women.

Thinking it would make him break into a blush, two pretty s"oomph"mores stopped a smaller than usual freshman the other day. Exclaimed the first, "My, but you're a darling!" And the second, "I'd like to toddle you on my knee all day."

Flipped the blushless frosh, "What are we waiting for?" And SHE began to blush!

There's also this to be said in opposition to the paid football player: instead of being on a football team killing others and watching the time, he might rather be on the W.P.A. watching the others killing time.

TEN NEW PROFESSORS JOIN COLLEGE FACULTY AS 121st YEAR OPENS

DR. R. T. CASE

Ralph T. Case To Fill Place On Sociology Staff Formerly Held By McMurray

MATH TEACHER ADDED

Wendt Is Made Professor Of Economics As Campbell Goes To Okla.

Ten new teachers will join the faculty this year to take the places of six former faculty members and to fill four positions created only this year.

President Lloyd has announced the following new appointments to the faculty and staff:

Ralph Thomas Case, A.B., B.D., Ph. D., Associate professor of Sociology, will fill a vacancy caused by the death of Dr. J. H. McMurray more than a year ago. Dr. Case graduated magna cum laude at Parsons college, Iowa, in 1915, and was a high school principal for a year before continuing his preparation; he received the B.D. degree at the Presbyterian Theological seminary, Chicago, in 1919; did extensive graduate work at Northwestern university and the University of Iowa, receiving his Ph.D. degree from the latter in 1929. He has been in college teaching fifteen years and in the pastorate five years. He was a professor and department head in Wabash college, Indiana, for six years (1922-28), and in Lindenwood college, Missouri, for eight years (1929-37). He is an ordained minister of the Presbyterian church in the U.S.A.; for three years (1919-22) he was a pastor in Idaho; for two years (1937-39) he has been pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Blackwell, Okla., from which service he is now coming to Maryville college.

Paul Francis Wendt, B.S., M.A., Assistant Professor of Economics, will fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of Dr. Campbell. Mr. Wendt is a native of New York City. He received his B.S. degree in 1928 from Lafayette college. He spent one year of study in the Graduate School of Finance, New York university; received his M.A. degree in Economics in 1935 from Columbia university, and has completed a considerable part of additional work for the Ph.D. degree. He has been a teacher in the religious education program of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian church, New York, and has been a counsellor and tennis instructor in Eastern summer camps, and has taught economics in the New York Evening high school. His principal professional experience is in the field of business in New York City and includes three years as an investment analysis statistician with Harvey Fisk & Sons, and the past seven years as an investment advisor with Goodbody & Co., from which latter position he comes to Maryville college. He is married and has one child.

Cora Louise Carson, B.A., M.S., Instructor in Chemistry and Mathematics, will fill a new position created this year. Miss Carson, a Tennessean, graduated from Maryville college in 1930, and received her Master's degree from the University of Tennessee in 1934. For the past five years she has taught science at the Park Junior high school, Knoxville. As a student at Maryville college she made a strong record and held a prominent position on the campus. Among other things she was president of the YWCA, was biology assistant one year and chemistry assistant three years. She is now a licensed aviatrix, being one of the few such women in Tennessee; she recently was the Knoxville woman representative in the State flying contests.

Ruth E. Cowdrick, A.B., M.A., Ph. D. (to be conferred), Instructor in French, to fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of Miss Dorothy F. Hunter to be married. Miss Cowdrick received the A.B. degree at Barnard college, New York City, in 1929; the M.A. degree at the University of Pennsylvania in 1930; and the Ph.D. at Columbia university just completed and to be publicly awarded at the next convocation. Miss Cowdrick spent the year of 1932-33 at the University of Paris, France, as a Fellow of the Institute of International Education; and another half year there in 1937-38. She has taught for four years as Elmsford, New York, high school, and at Blackburn college. Her home is at Douglaston, Long Island.

Several Depts. To Offer New Courses

Full Major In Art Is Available This Year

Several new courses have been added that should be of interest to all students. The mathematics department is adding two new courses. An advanced calculus course and a methods class in teaching mathematics are to be offered. The art department is offering a full major. Three-year courses in theory are to be given for the first time. New courses include The History of Sculpture and Modern Painting.

In the biology department cat anatomy is combined with invertebrate zoology to form a course in comparative anatomy. A year course in accounting is being offered by the economics department. Rennaissance drama, exclusive of Shakespeare, is a new course in the English dept. As a result of reorganization of the German department 19th century drama of Germany is given. A new course in Greek mythology will interest language students.

A study of the history of South American countries will be offered for students. A course in dietetics is offered for those who are interested in hospital nutrition. Studies of the British and American constitutions are new courses in the political science department. Political Philosophy is the history of political theories. An interesting arrangement has been made for choir members. A class will be formed of choir members which will meet twice a week. Credit will be given at the end of a year's apprenticeship. Complete arrangements for a course in aeronautics have not been made at present.

Instructional Departments Reduced In Reorganization From Eleven To Six Chairs

A departmental reorganization by which the former eleven instructional departments of the college become six divisions, each with a chairman, has been inaugurated this semester.

The divisions are as follows: 1. Division of Language and Literature; chairman, Edwin Ray Hunter. 2. Division of Bible, Philosophy, and Education; chairman, Horace Eugene Orr. 3. Division of Science; chairman, Susan Allen Green. 4. Division of Social Sciences; chairman, Verton Madison Queener. 5. Division of Fine Arts; chairman, Katherine Currie Davies. 6. Division of Physical Training, Hygiene, and Athletics; chairman, Lombe Scott Honaker.

Former Teacher Returns To Position After Leave

Miss Almira C. Bassett, a former member of the Maryville faculty, is resuming her position this fall after a year's leave of absence, due to illness. Miss Bassett's active interest in the campus program has brought her in contact with those of the student body in her former years. In resuming her work this fall, Miss Bassett will teach several courses in Latin, Greek and History.

Miss Bassett, who has been a member of the faculty since 1926, has again taken up residence at her home just off the northern part of the campus.

Freshman Participation

We have come to college this year from a world teeming with rapid and terrible events of war. It is not, we are sure, the best possible atmosphere in which to begin a new year and for some of us our first year at college. However, we must attempt to make the most of our college year and there is no better time, as the old saying goes, than the present.

For the new students there are probably a thousand little ways in which he has to adjust himself, but surely one of the largest is in his choice of his extra-curricular activities. He must choose from a great number of activities the ones in which he is most interested. He may debate or be dramatically inclined. If so, he'll make his choice easily and try to make himself a part of the club or organization in which he claims membership.

For the old students it is our place to see that these freshmen do make themselves a part of our club. There is always a need for new faces and new ideas and each freshman should be made to feel that there is a particular need for his presence and ideas in our group. We hope that they will consider carefully before they join a group to make certain that it is the group for them. There might be little more discouraging than for a freshman to find he is in the wrong box and then want to get out.

As for the year that we are now beginning we want to make good, strong, practical plans in each club and organization to insure a successful and worthwhile year. And this is the time to make those plans—it will be many months again before we can begin with a new start. So let's plan now for the coming programs. Even if only a tentative plan is drawn up, it will be a beginning and last minutes plans will be somewhat eliminated. Just remember how much better programs can be if they are arranged two weeks ahead of time rather than the day before. Let's work then for better programs and for more freshmen participation in these programs and for the groups they'll represent.

★ The New Name

AS THE ECHO BEGINS another year (a period of time containing 365 days which is one hundred and thirty-five days less than 500 and one-fourth of the time it takes to complete a college course) with a new staff and new ideas, it becomes necessary that columnists should cogitate for a new name for their weekly lines of type. Therefore, what you see here bursting forth under a new title is the "Up Our Hall" of last year (requiscat in pace). However, the column's going to be different this year. We here highly resolve that this year we will be the medium of expression for the many souls who have long wanted to see their efforts in public print, and our purpose is to have guest columnists from among the students and faculty commenting on whatever subjects they so desire. Be on the lookout for the first column and have a subject in your mind, for YOU may be the lucky one to get the first invitation.

★ In Memorium: Dr. Rodgers

ALL OF US WHO KNEW him were saddened at the news when we returned to college that Dr. Rodgers had died just about a week before school began. Very few of us realized in June that he had been ill, although anxiety increased among townspeople as his condition became worse. Those of us who had classes under him will remember the ease with which he controlled his subjects, the gentle humor he scattered through his lectures, and the systematic way in which he conducted all his classes. Those who sought him for advice received the sympathetic and understanding counsel of a kindly friend whose suggestions were tempered with the fine salt of experience; those who sought his companionship were received with friendly good fellowship. Although in his Maryville years a professor, he never deserted the work of a pastor both with his parishioners at a nearby church and with the students of the college. The six degrees he held from outstanding colleges and universities show him to have been an earnest scholar. As a professor and as a friend, the college, individual students as well as the group, have suffered in the loss of this sincere minister of the gospel.

★ For Future Vets

IN THE COURSE OF OUR western trip this summer we passed through Burlington, Iowa. Down by the shores of the Mississippi they have built a large municipal auditorium and given it the name of the Memorial auditorium. As we approached it we asked a workman just going in the door what it was in memory of. With an air of indignation that he should know the answer to such a question, he replied that he did not know. Then as we were walking up the street from the building we passed the office of the Gazette, the newspaper which gave to Iowa its sobriquet of the "Hawkeye State." We decided to ask them if they could answer our question, but the girl behind the desk could only give the lame explanation that it has been built by the W.P.A. Our suggestion is that they decide it is in memory of the Veterans of Future Wars, all those whose destiny is cannon fodder in the wars ahead. They (or we) might as well enjoy our memorials while we live.

CAMPUS CALENDAR

8:00 Theta Epsilon's formal opening in the gym.

800 Students Registered

Registration has been slowed up considerably by several necessary changes in the college schedule that were made during the summer, reports Dr. F. D. McClelland. There has been a good enrollment, approximately 800 students as in previous years; and the majority of the classes are full. Changes in students' schedules will be made Tuesday, Sept. 19; students are urged not to ask for changes unless really necessary and reasonable. No changes will be made after Tuesday.

Student Vols Hear Evaul

Philip Evaul, president of Student Volunteers will give an introductory talk to the organization at the meeting in the YWCA rooms at 8:00 Sunday evening. All are invited to come and learn what the purpose of Student Volunteers is and how it can play a part in their lives at Maryville.

The Student Volunteer movement is an undergraduate organization seeking to further the missionary spirit on the campus.

Pilot's Training Course

(Cont. From Page One)

In accordance with the C.A.A. outline of supervision, we are asking Dr. E. R. Hunter, Dean of Curriculum, to represent the faculty as "Director of Civilian Pilot Training," giving general supervision to the program on the campus and to coordinating relations between the college, the flight operator, and the C.A.A.

The applications thus far made are of a preliminary nature only. Due announcements will be made about regular application and the two medical examinations, one by the college physicians and one by the C.A.A. flight medical examiner.

Thus, it may be seen that this is a selective procedure and that the course will require considerable time. It is not expected that more than two semester hours credit will be given for the course, this being for the ground school. It will be noted, however, that the Government and the College are cooperating to provide a very expensive course at no extra expense to the student except that for necessary insurance, examination, and transportation.

Maryville's quota has not been announced but will doubtless be under 25.

The Navy

OUR FIRST LINE OF DEFENSE...

A powerful Navy, equipped to repel foreign invasion, has been a bulwark for peace and protection down through the history of the United States. It is our first line of defense in maintaining the principles for which every American stands. In similar respects, a sound Banking structure is also a first line of defense in promoting financial progress and safeguarding the easy flow of money to sound business institutions here and in the entire nation.

New Tables And Dishes Bought For Dining Hall

The dining hall is opening the new year with some wonderful additional equipment. Eighty new composition-top tables have been purchased and installed at a total cost of approximately $2000. The tops are of green and will be used without table cloths. Each table is designed to seat eight people.

Also a complete new set of dishes has been purchased and is in use. It is of the noted Syracuse china and is "Sunglow" in color.

Green draperies have been provided for all windows of the dining hall and tan and red draperies at the windows of Pearsons lobby.

Miss Margaret S. Ware continues as manager and Mrs. Emma L. Worley has been engaged as her assistant.

New Equipment Purchased For Advanced Chemistry

The chemistry department has partitioned a part of the hallway of Fayerweather to accomodate six new balances. The addition of a new freshman chemistry section conflicted with the quantitative analysis class because both classes must make use of analytical balances. It was impossible to use the same balances for both classes. It was necessary, therefore, to buy balances of finer quality for use in he advanced course.

The addition of balances represents a decided convenience for advanced students. In the advanced course it is very difficult to keep the fine adjustments on balances in best condition when so many inexperienced people handle them. This additional equipment for the benefit and instruction of approximately 15 students represents an outlay of nearly five hundred dollars.

Dr. McClelland To Address YMCA At Opening Service

Dean Frank D. McClelland will open the year of worship services for college men at the YMCA when he addresses them tomorrow evening at 5 p.m, in Bartlett auditorium. He will deal with the matter of college friendships, bringing the first of three talks on the general topic "Now that You're at College." He will be followed on the two succeeding weeks by Dr. Edwin R. Hunter and Dr. Horace E. Orr, who will speak on other phases of this topic.

The worship services at the Y are planned by a committee of college men from the cabinet of the organization and are the only services for all Maryville men. Miss Ruth K. Thompson, instructor in music, will sing at this Sunday's service.

Wilder's "Our Town" Will Be Given by College Players

The first play to be given this fall as announced by Mrs. Nita E. West, is to be "Our Town", Pulitzer prize play of 1938, which will be presented by the Maryville College Players. Only students of the Dramatic Art department are eligible to try out for parts in this play, unless invitations to try out are extended by Mrs. West to students of experience in Maryville college dramatics.

A Letter From Tessie

Dear Mom and Dad:

I arrived here safely and am I confused. I know now how daddy must have felt when he had to stand in line to get his relief check. All I have seen since I arrived have been long monotonous lines and most of the boys I have met seem to have lines which would compare to the ones which I have had to stand in. They told me that when I came to college I would have to stand on my own feet and I can understand what they meant, but this week there have been two or three people standing on mine, which I hadn't counted on. The old shoes which Aunt Laura gave me are simply a wreck. It is so different here from home. None of the girls take their shoes off till they get to the building where we stay. They laugh at me when I take mine off on the campus, but if their feet felt like mine I know they would do the same. Please send me some of that snake oil that Uncle Zeke uses on his corns.

After I reached the end of those horrible lines, they gave us big cards which we wrote on. I had to sign my name more times than daddy did when we mortgaged the farm. Later they tore them all up into bits just like it didn't matter anyway. I guess they just wanted to see if we could write. But when I think of the money I paid for signing those cards I'm beginning to think that I'm going to need more money. Perhaps we had better sell that other pig. They say that we are going to have to pay for a seat in chapel, but I am planning on getting around that by having you send that little stool that Jim uses when he milks.

They must be going to start planting here soon for the other day I heard a boy say that he had come to college to sow some wild oats. The corn on my foot feels like it might be up any day now. They also must have sowed some benefits here, too, for I hear them talking about reaping them all the time.

The other night they had what they call a student mixer. It was lots of fun. They said they had a blind date for me and I spent most of the evening leading him around. Later I found out he could see as well as I could. He acted funny anyway. I asked him why they told me he was a blind date and he would just look at me and say that he wished he were.

Our classes meet in nice rooms and I have enjoyed them a lot. Everyone I've been to yet there has been someone up front who talks all the time and I can't seem to get much done. It seems to me that they would have a little more respect for the rest of us, but it is probably one of those dumb freshmen that I've heard so much about.

Our room is so nice too. The first night I stayed there I had such a time getting the light out. It didn't take me long to see that you couldn't blow it out and finally I noticed it was tied down with a little string. I took my scissors to cut it loose and I'm telling you I never saw so much fire come from a little string in all my life. We have a bed for each person which certainly seems like a lot of bunk, doesn't it? You will not have to send that bench for there are two chairs. They don't seem to have forgotten a thing for they even have the water piped in from the spring.

They have a golf course here around the campus and I played the other day. It certainly is a funny game. The idea seems to be to knock a little white thing around with some funny looking sticks. They told me I was pretty good but that I stood too close to the ball after I hit it. We played for about ten minutes and then hunted for the ball the rest of the afternoon. It seems to me it would be just as much fun to throw aspirin tablets out on the lawn and hunt for them.

I must close now for I must get orientated. I hope it doesn't hurt much.

Always your'n,

Tessie.

P. S. Please send me my teeth, I've learned to chew gum.

On Eastern Front

Germany formally annexed the Polish Corridor and portions of western Poland which belonged to Reich before 1914. Polish territory in German hands is shaded. Poles, fighting desperately in defense of Warsaw, claimed Nazis were repulsed at Modlin fortress and denied that invaders had crossed Bug River at Wyszkow, 20 miles from the capital.

Program Given For First College Week

The annual convocation at the College was held Friday morning at 8:10. As in former years the convocation address was given by President Ralph W. Lloyd, the choir and other members of the staff participated.

On Saturday night at 8:00 the YMCA and YWCA will conduct social programs for the men and women on different parts of the campus.

On Sunday morning the students who have come from out of town will attend city churches for the first time in the college year. At 7:00 Sunday evening, Dr. William P. Stevenson, College pastor, will hold the first vesper service in the chapel.

On Monday evening at 8:00 the faculty reception for students will be held in the library.

Enrollment has been in process since Tuesday and will continue through Saturday. Physical and medical examinations of all students will be conducted next week.

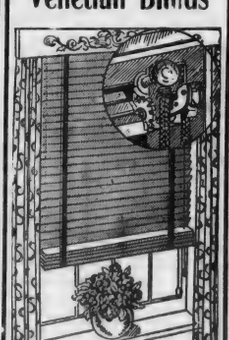
The Erratic Gale

SOMETIMES in Chicago it isn't even necessary to go into a restaurant if you insist upon changing headgear.

This will be understood, as well as the reason Chicago is called the Windy City when it is known what happened during the second Century of Progress to the visitor from Kalispell, Mont.

This gentleman strolled blithely through the fair when a gust of Lake Michigan wind lifted the wide-brimmed stetson from his head, slapped it twice against a flagpole and disappeared with it in the dusk.

The dismayed fair-goer almost swallowed his toothpick in his vexation. He had turned toward a nearby haberdashery store to buy a new headpiece when there came a sudden swirl, another stetson dropped from out the sky and settled on his brow.



The second hat was of fine texture, in good condition, and fitted perfectly, all these details having been carefully attended to by the second errant breeze, which fortunately had decided to befriend the visitor.

As he related the experience that night in a Michigan avenue tavern he was approached by an entire stranger who smilingly returned the lost hat, and retrieved his own.

The second man, it seems, had brought three carloads of cattle to the stock yards. As he was marketing them, he, too, was selected by a playful breeze. The hat of each man had been whisked away to the head of the other, even though they were nine miles apart at the time.

SCOTTY SIDE SLANTS

By the

Sports Editor

★ JUST WAITIN'

When Maryville opens her season next Saturday against Union college the Scotties will be out to avenge one of last year's upsets. When the Highlanders journeyed to the Bulldog's growling place last year they were in a weakened condition, with both Joe Etheredge and George Garner on the sidelines, and in the first quarter, J. D. Hughes received an ankle injury that kept him out of the lineup most of the season.

The Bulldogs, sensing the Maryville condition, poured on the coal and with "Fish" Stafura knocking all kinds of holes in the line and a big lanky end named Ken Farmer booming long punts far into the pockets of the Maryville end of the field, they battered out a 13-7 win over the Highlanders.

Well, the boys are laying for the long and lanky Farmer, and plenty of fireworks are in store for the Bulldogs next Saturday night on Wilson Field.

★ CROSS YOUR FINGERS

The injury jinx that haunted the Maryville squad last season hasn't returned yet this year and so far there have been no injuries that are serious. Arnold Kramer received a cut on the jaw that kept him out of Friday's scrimmage and Chuck Kindred split the end of his finger during the Friday scrimmage. oe Etheredge is in the hospital for three days with a sore foot, but is expected to be ready for Saturday's game.

★ BACK AGAIN

We are glad to welcome back Coach Fischbach and from the looks of things he is going to have one of the best seasons in swimming and tennis that has been at Maryville in the past few years. Lots of prospects in both sports, so here's luck, Coach Fischbach.

14 Lettermen Report, As Squad Of 38 Preps For Opening Game With Union College Next Saturday

With the scrappy Union College Bulldogs but one week off, Coaches Honaker and Thrower have begun serious work-outs with their meagre squad of 38. Although the squad is small, there are fourteen lettermen back to work on for this year's team.

The Scotty line threatens to be one of the strongest in the conference in one respect, and in another, one of the weakest. Coach Thrower reports that the first string line, which is not quite complete as yet, will be strong but will also be lacking in reserves. "There is a definite shortage of ends and centers this year," says Coach Thrower. "With Bill Baird and Tommy Taylor gone from last year's squad there are only two lettermen ends back, Captain Jim Etheredge and Fred Shelfer. We will probably try to shift Tipton, who lettered at tackle last season, to the end position and then also hold him in readiness to go back in at tackle any time."

In the center of the line there is "Nig" Wilburn, who lettered last season, and aside from that there are no experienced centers excepting Hooker, who didn't letter last year, but saw quite a bit of action, and will no doubt see some this year.

The tackle situation looks more promising than any other position on the line. Besides Kramer and Henschen, two 180 pound veterans, hanging on to the number one positions, there is also Gene McCurry, letterman two seasons back who was out last year with a broken ankle, and Cecil Tipton, one of last year's line lettermen.

The guard position depends a great deal upon last year's reserves and this year's freshmen. E. B. Smith is the only veteran guard back, with Duncan, a last season second string man in the position on the other side of the line.

The backfield has plenty of lettermen to choose from, with J. D. Hughes, All-Smoky Mountain Conference halfback, leading the list. In addition to Hughes, there is Scott Honaker to call signals, George Morton, Boydson Baird, and Bob Jackson for halfbacks, and Chuck Kindred in the fullback position.

Union College, who plays here next Saturday night, is reported to have a small but heavy squad this season, and if you will remember they handed Maryville a surprise setback at Union last year.

Cross Country Practice To Start Soon

Cross country practice will start this week as soon as the physical examinations have been given. The cross country team will probably have meets with the University of Tennessee and Georgia Tech and perhaps several other schools this year. Any student wishing to come out for cross country see Coach Thrower any time next week.

Felknor Visits Hill

The opening of school brought an eminent alumnus to Maryville college campus. Mr. George E. Felknor, Jr., who is on his way to study medicine at Tulane university in New Orleans, has been visiting friends on the campus and in Maryville during the past week. During his career at Maryville, Mr. Felknor was outstanding both in activities and as a student, being on the honor roll all four years that he was in college, and being elected to Alpha Gamma Sigma honor society in his senior year. He was editor-in-chief of the Highland Echo last year. While in Maryville, Mr. Felknor served as a student assistant in the chemistry department, was a member of the 1938 Chilhowean staff, and a member of the Writer's Workshop.

New Titles Given To Two Administrative Officers

The titles of two administrative officers have been changed, according to an announcement from the president's office, Dr. E. R. Hunter is to bear the title of Dean of Curriculum and Dr. Frank D. McClelland, the title of Dean of Students. Thus the former titles assigned to Dean Hunter and Dean McClelland are superseded. The general duties of both offices remain unchanged. Dr. Hunter will continue his teaching, will serve as chairman of the Division of Languages and Literature, and give but part of his time to administrative work.

structor in Art will fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of Miss Frances Rich to be married. Miss Dolch, whose teaching has been in Champaign and Elmhurst, Illinois, and in Iowa City, holds two degrees from the University of Illinois: Bachelor of Fine Arts (in Art Education) received in 1936, and Bachelor of Fine Arts (in painting) received in 1939. She was for a year at the St. Louis School of Fine Arts (1934-35); a year at Northwestern university (1936-37) studying Education and Art Education; and two years at the State university of Iowa where in 1939, she received the degree of Master of Arts, with a major in painting and a minor in history of art. Her home is in Urbana, Ill. Some of her painting has been selected as part of a "traveling exhibit" of work from large mid-western universities called "The Big Ten Show."

Archibald Franklin Pieper, B.A., LL. B., Instructor in Political Science and Assistant in Debate, will fill a new position created this year. Mr. Pieper received his B. A. degree from Maryville college in 1936, and his LL.B. degree from the University of Texas School of Law in 1939. During the summer he has been a special agent for the U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation.

William H. Crothers, B.A., D.D., part-time Instructor in Bible, will teach some of the classes left uncared for by the death of Dr. Rodgers. Dr. Crothers has just returned from two years of special teaching in India and the Philippines. For almost twelve years (1924-36) he was pastor of the New Providence Presbyterian church of Maryville. He is a graduate of the College of Wooster, Ohio, and of the Princeton Theological seminary. His ministry has included, in addition to his service in Maryville and abroad, thirteen years in Colorado and Utah, and eleven years as a Secretary of the Presbyterian College Board of Christian Education.

Mrs. Ruth Bristol Dollenmayer, B.A., M.A., part-time Instructor in Religious Education, will teach some of the classes left uncared for by the death of Dr. Rodgers. Mrs. Dollenmayer, whose husband is a member of the faculty, did her college work and graduate work at Jamestown college, North Dakota, Presbyterian College of Christian Education, Chicago, and the University of Minnesota, her degrees being awarded by the first two of these institutions. She has had five years' experience as a high school history teacher and was for three and a half years Director of Religious Education in the First Presbyterian church, Oak Park, Chicago.

Mrs. Virginia Crider King, B.A., part-time Instructor in Home Economics, a new position. Mrs. King whose home is in Maryville, graduated from Maryville college in 1932, with a major in Home Economics.

Mrs. Emma Lee Worley, part-time assistant to the manager of the dining hall, a new position. Mrs. Worley was for thirteen years respectively head of Memorial and Baldwin halls, resigning two years ago because of home duties. She makes her home in Maryville with her sister, Miss Mary E. Caldwell, who retired as Supervisor of Women's Residence three years ago.

Dr. Claude A. Campbell, for the past five years Associate professor of Economics in Maryville college, resigned at the close of the last college year to accept a position on the faculty of the School of Commerce and Business Administration at the University of Oklahoma. Dr. Campbell came to Maryville college from the faculty of the University of Alabama in the fall of 1934. Mrs. Campbell has at various periods served as part-time teacher.

Edward C. Gillingham, who served as Instructor in Physical Training during the last college year as a substitute for George F. Fischbach, who was on leave of absence, is to be at the University of Pennsylvania this year pursuing study toward an advanced degree.

YWCA Begins Season With Party On Pearsons Lawn

On Saturday evening at 8:00 the YWCA begins its activities for the year with a party for all girls who are new students at Maryville this year. The party, which will be held on Pearsons lawn, will be a kindergarten party, and children's group games and nursery rhymes will be the features of the evening. The officers of the YW will be introduced to all the "little sisters." All girls who signed up for "little sisters" last spring will take them to the party. Lily Pinneo and Doris Smith are in charge of all arrangements.

College Elects New Directors In June

In June, the Presbyterian Synod of Tennessee met on the campus of Maryville college and re-elected as directors of Maryville college those who served formerly in the class of 1939, to serve in the class of 1942. They are as follows: Milton Wilbert Brown, M.A., M.S., D.D., of Cincinnati, Ohio; Lauren Edgar Brubaker, D.D., of St. Augustine, Florida; James M. Crawford, Esq., Knoxville; Rev. John Baxter Creswell, B.A., Bearden, Tennessee; Rev. Frank Moore Cross, B.A., Ensley, Birmingham, Ala.; John Samuel Eakin, D.D., Knoxville; Clemmie Jane Henry, Maryville; Judge Samuel O'Grady Houston, B.A., LL.D., Knoxville; Rev. James Lewers Hyde, M.A., Walnut, N.C.; Nellie Pearl McCampbell, B.A., Knoxville J. Willison Smith, LL. D., Philadelphia, Pa.; and Robert M. Stimson, D.D., of Chattanooga.

At the same time they filled a vacancy in the class of 1940 caused by the recent death of the Honorable Lewis Hopkins Spilman of Knoxville. This was done by electing as a director, Mr. Joe Caldwell Gamble, Esq., who graduated from Maryville college in the class of 1926, is a leading attorney in Maryville, and the son of the late Judge Gamble who was long a prominent local leader and director of the College.

On August 13, 1939, the College lost another of its directors by death, Rev. Dr. J. Ross Stevenson. Dr. Stevenson was President Emeritus of Princeton Theological seminary, was formerly pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church of New York City and other churches and for 28 years he was a director of Maryville college.

Williams And Colbert Get Degrees During Summer

On June 6, Lyle Lyndon Williams, Associate professor of Biology at Maryville college during the past three years, was awarded the degree of Ph. D. in the field of Zoology with a minor in Botany, by the University of North Carolina, at which institution he has in recent years completed the doctorate requirements.

Dr. Williams received his Bachelor of Science degree from Guilford college in 1922 and has received three degrees from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. The first of these was that of Master in Education in 1929; the second was that of Master in Zoology in 1931; and now the last is that of Ph. D. in 1939.

Ralph R. Colbert, Assistant Professor of Music, completed his work for the M.A. degree at New York university this summer. The degree will be awarded in October. It is in the field of music education.

George F. Fischbach was on leave of absence from his work at Maryville college during all of the last academic year, which he spent at George Peabody college for Teachers in Nashville. On June 2, he received the degree of M.A. in the field of Health and Physical Education.

War Events
Roosevelt Speech
Premier Assassinated
Subs Sighted

A SUMMARY OF WORLD EVENTS

Monday, Sept. 18—

The British aircraft carrier, Courageous was sunk by a German submarine and an unknown number of her crew lost. The Courageous was a 22,500 ton vessel built in 1917, and at the time she was attacked was carrying a crew of 1100 men and an undisclosed number of fighting planes.

A young South African flier in the Royal Air Force sank a German U-boat in his first military action of the war. The lone attacker reported that he dropped two salvos of bombs on the deck of the Nazi craft and slowly circled overhead as she sank into the Atlantic.

Tuesday, Sept. 19—

Adolf Hitler in an impassionate one hour-and-15 minute speech welcoming Danzig into the German Reich declared that Germany is prepared to wage a seven-year war, and that he, with Russia, would establish "law and order" in eastern Europe. The Fuehrer asserted that he has no war claims again Britain and France, and that he will conduct a humanitarian war if his opponents do likewise, but he warned that for every bomb dropped on German cities he will answer with five or ten.

Thursday, Sept. 21—

President Roosevelt, speaking to the emergency session of Congress called to consider the question of American neutrality, asked that the embargo on munitions of war be lifted, and that the United States revert to the principles of international law in her effort to avoid any part in the European conflict. Mr. Roosevelt also requested power to fix war zones in which American merchant vessels may not enter, and power to place a ban on credits to belligerent nations.

Premier Armand Calinescu, Rumania's anti-Nazi prime minister, was assasinated in Bucharest when six masked men blocked his automobile with a truck and machine-gunned him from the street. Members of the pro-Nazi Iron Guard are believed to have plotted Calinescu's slaying. Eight were arrested and executed on Friday, Sept. 22.

Eight members of the Iron Guard, pro-Nazi organization believed responsible for Calinescu's slaying, were executed by a firing squad in the same spot where the premier was slain, soon after King Carol declared a state of emergency to exist throughout Rumania, and called up the army to maintain order.

Friday, Sept. 22—

President Roosevelt announced that submarines had been sighted off Boston and off Southern Alaska. The nationality of the U-boats was not known.

Two more British merchant vessels, the Arkelside and the Arkenside, were reported sunk by German undersea craft, bringing the total British losses up to 29 ships.

Administration leaders in the Senate decided to write into the new neutrality act a provision preventing American ships from carrying any war materials to belligerent nations. This decision has been regarded by some observers as an effort to win support from senators opposed to granting discretionary power to the president.

Writers' Workshop Meets For First Time Monday

Writers' Workshop will hold its first meeting Monday afternoon at 4 in Dr. Hunter's classroom. At this time original papers will be read by Roland Tapp and Mabel Ennis.

The Workshop is a group of twenty-five students and faculty members interested in creative writing which meets once a week to read and criticize original papers by the members. Only students above the sophomore classification are eligible for membership, and they are selected by the Workshop. It is managed by a Governing Board. This year the board is composed of Miss Jessie Johnson, John Fisher and George Hunt, co-chairmen, and Ruth Abercrombie, secretary.

Ruth Mack Makes Highest Average Of 9.5 As List Of 140 Honor Roll Students Is Made Public Today

The senior class led the rest of the classes in the greatest number of students on the honor roll for the second semester of the 1938-39 term; of the 140 students on the honor roll, 39 were seniors. The junior and freshman classes tied for second place with 35 from each class, and the sophomore class had 31. Ruth Mack, a junior last year, had the highest average in the entire college—9.5; she was followed by Dan McGill, also a junior last year, with an average of 9.1. Bruce Morgan led the senior class with 8.6; Warren Corbett had the highest sophomore average, 8.6; and Marian Jenkins, freshman, 8.1.

Eight Students To Do Honor's Work

Program Begun In 1932 Gives 6 Hours Credit

Eight Maryville students will do honor's work in six different departments of the college this year, Dr. Edwin R. Hunter, head of the committee on honor's work announced today. Those engaging in special study this year are: Dan Magill, James Montgomery, John Wintermute, William Mooney, Barbara McCutcheon, John Fisher, George Hunt, and Mignonne Myers.

Dan Magill, under the direction of Professor R. T. Case, will do honor's work in economics. James Montgomery will do special work in the field of sociology, under Professor Paul F. Wendt.

John Wintermute's work in the department of Dramatic Art will consist of the writing, directing and staging of a play and will be done under the supervision of Mrs. Nita E. West, associate professor of Dramatic Art.

Bill Mooney, under the direction of Dr. D. H. Briggs, head of the department of Psychology, will study the concept of personality and its effects and influences.

In the department of home economics, Barbara McCutcheon, under Miss Gertrude Meiselwitz, head of the department will make a study of the comparison of minimum protective relief diets; State, Municipal, Private, and otherwise.

Three people will do honor's work in the English department. John Fisher, under the direction of Dr. Hunter, head of the department, will study "The Comedy Element in Shakespeare." George Hunt, under Dr. Hill Shine, professor in English, will do special work on the writings of Paul Elmer More. Mignonne Myers, under Miss Katherine Johnson, associate professor in English, will work on the subject, "The Fantastic Elements in Recent British Drama."

Since 1932, superior students, wishing to make special study in their particular field, have been given the opportunity of doing so under Maryville's program of honor's work. Seniors wishing to do honor's work must make application to and be accepted by a faculty committee on honor's work. They must have a B average in the subject in which they work and at the end of the year take an oral examination over the course, in addition to the regular Comprehensive examination. Students are accredited six semester hours for their work and are given special recognition as honor's work students at graduation.

Results of the students' work must be written up in manuscript by the student. This is then bound and placed in the college library.

Mrs. Lloyd Speaks At YW

The YWCA will meet Sunday afternoon in the Y rooms, at 1:15. Mrs. Ralph Waldo Lloyd will speak on "The Captain." As special music, Ralph Reed will play a trumpet solo, "The Perfect Day."

Large Orientation Program Started

Extra English Period Are Used For Meetings

This year's freshman class will enter into the most extensive orientation program ever undertaken at Maryville college. The purpose of the program, as stated in the manual which has been supplied to each member of the class, is "to enable you, as a freshman at Maryville college, to adjust yourself as quickly and as effectively as possible to the program of college life."

English classes for the freshmen have been scheduled in the same way as the laboratory periods in science courses. For the next four weeks there will be two meetings each week of the orientation groups, using the extra English periods as scheduled. During these eight meetings the freshmen will use as the basis of their program the manual, which has been prepared by Dean McClelland, entitled: "Making The Most Out of College". This manual contains eight different discussion topics; each unit consisting of three parts: the discussion proper, a group of thought questions, and a short bibliography for reference work. The topics are arranged in a definite order of progression beginning with the problem of the budgeting of time and including discussions of study habits, personality, social relationships, religion, and manners. At the seventh meeting the groups will discuss questions looking forward to the selection of a vocation; at the final meeting the freshmen will be given suggestions concerning the choice of a major subject.

These orientation groups will be under the guidance of faculty members who have been selected to serve as special advisors throughout the year.

Pflanze, Kramer, Wick Will Discuss Neutrality Law At IRC Monday Evening

The neutrality question will be discussed at the first meeting this year of the International Relations club at 6:15 on Monday evening in Thaw hall auditorium.

Hilton Wick and Otto Pflanze will assume the Republican stand by upholding the existing neutrality law, while Henry Wick and Arnold Kramer will argue for the President's plan as presented in his speech of last Thursday. Each side will contend that his is the only way to keep America out of the present European conflict. Clifford Proctor will give a brief introduction to acquaint the audience with certain essential features of the subject.

The program will primarily be a picture of the proposals and ideas of the present emergency session of Congress. A vote will be taken on the question for discussion both before and after the program to measure the effectiveness of the opposing speakers.

A new shipment of books from the Carnegie Foundation of International Peace is to be received by the Maryville club in the near future and will be placed in the library upon arrival.

Flowers Feature Of Rush Week For Bainonian

Activities Include Tea, Picnic, Opening Night Program For New Girls

Bainonian society begins her rush week for all new girls this year with a tea on Tuesday afternoon at 3:45 in the Alumni gym. The theme for the week's festivities is "flowers", and flowers will be used in the decorations for the tea. As a special feature of interest a style show will be presented while the new girls drink tea. Campus clothes will be modeled by members of Bainonian. Barbara Ann Swift is in charge of arrangements for the tea. Patricia Kennedy and Barbara McCutcheon are directing the style show.

Seven girls, Ruth Crawford, Barbara Anderson, Ruth Woods, Louise Osborne, Charlotte Moughton, and Janice Graybeal will model the clothes, each modeling a complete wardrobe of seven outfits, including school clothes, spectator sports clothes, tea dresses, tennis dresses, bathing suits, pajamas and negligees, and evening clothes. Some of the dresses worn will be styles which are becoming to blonde, brunette, or red-head types. Others will show what girls of short, average, and tall height should wear.

On Thursday afternoon the new girls will be divided into two groups, one group going at 3:15 and another at 3:45 to the college woods for games and a picnic. The games will be led by members of Bainonian. Mary Mildred Hatcher is making arrangements for the picnic.

At 8:00 on Saturday evening, Bainonian will have her formal opening in the Alumni gym. The gym will be decorated to represent a roof garden. Program and favors will carry out the flower motif. Songs and entertainment appropriate to the theme will be featured by members of Bainonian and her brother society, Athenian.

The program will consist of a trio of Charlotte Colby, Roland Anderson, and Louise Allen singing "I Poured My Heart into a Song" and other numbers; Helen Wilhoit and Bob Claflin, popular dance team of Maryville, doing several feature numbers. Also there will be an orchestra led by Bob Paul. The orchestra will play popular songs and do a novelty number. Singing waiters will mingle in the crowd. As a conclusion to the program the officers of the society will be introduced to the new girls.

The officers of Bainonian are: Jane Law, president; Mary Mildred Hatcher, vice president; Anne Gammon, secretary; Marion Northup, treasurer.

Student Vols Hear Case

Dr. R. T. Case, associate professor of sociology, will speak at the regular meeting of the Student Volunteers Sunday evening at 8:00 in the YWCA rooms.

Dr. Case comes to Maryville from Blackwell, Okla., where he served as pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Blackwell during the past two years.

Cheer Leaders Chosen And Election Of Ruth Woods As '39 Band Sponsor Announced At Thursday Pep Meeting

RUTH WOODS

Brink, Tyndall, Carter Cross, Sweeney, And Perry To Lead Cheers

BAND ADDS TWIRLERS

Virginia Sperry, Lyn Bell And Dudley Moore Will Wield Batons For Games

Thursday evening at the pep meeting held on the football field, Ruth Woods, the newly elected band sponsor, was presented and six cheerleaders were elected. Frank Cross, Frank Brink, Lyn Tyndall and Peggy Carter were re-elected and two freshmen, Norma Perry and Bill Sweeney, were chosen to lead the cheering for the 1939 football season.

Miss Wood is a senior from Greenback, Tenn. She is president pro-tem of the student council, a member of the choir and the glee club. She sang leading roles in last year's productions of the "Messiah" and "The Sorcerer."

The announcement of the choice was made at the pep meeting Thursday evening. Drum Major Dick Woodring escorted the newly-elected sponsor to her place with the band while its members stood and applauded them.

The four upperclass cheerleaders elected were on the squad last year. Cross and Carter represented the freshmen and supplemented the experienced squad. This is the part that Perry and Sweeney will take this year.

The band also has three new baton twirlers who will accompany it. They are Virginia Ruth Sperry, Galva, Ill.; Lyn Bell, Central high school, Knoxville; and Dudley Moore, sophomore, from Lorain, Ohio. The twirlers are a new feature of the band and will accompany it when it parades between halves.

The band will march for the first time tonight and Miss Woods will appear with it.

The pep meeting was attended by a large crowd of enthusiastic students who voted for their favorite cheerleaders. James Proffitt, co-captain of the '37 squad, introduced this year's captain and co-captain, "Joe" Etheredge and Arnold Kramer. Both men expressed high hopes as to the game with Union college Saturday night. The pep meeting was closed with the singing of "Alma Mater."

Over 300 New Books Received By Library

Many Best Sellers In Eight Fields Now Here

The library has recently received a shipment of more than 300 new books which will be catalogued and put on the shelves for general use within a few weeks. These books cover many fields of interest, and are among the better known ones in their individual fields.

General books, which include many of the best sellers, include among others: Ormstrong, "When There Is No Peace"; Benson, "Queen Victoria's Daughter"; Duch, "The Patriot"; Douglas, "Disputed Passage"; Farley, "Behind the Ballots"; Phelps, "Autobiography with Letters"; Roosevelt, "This Is My Story"; Wals, "Inside Red China"; Wells, "The Holy Terror"; Aldrich, "Song of the Years"; Doerflinger, "Middle Passage"; Buck, "The Patriot"; Noel Coward, "Present Indicative" (an appealing autobiography of an actor-author-composer); Derleth, "Wind Over Wisconsin"; Dorothea Fisher, "Seasoned Timber"; Lane, "Free Land"; McKenney, "Industrial Valley" (a story of the industrial activity of the state of Ohio); Scacheri, "The Fun of Photography"; Waln, "Reaching for the Stars"; White, "The Sword in the Stone"; Thomas Wolfe, "The Web and the Rock".

Dr. Hunter Will Speak At YMCA Meeting Tomorrow

Continuing the series begun last week, Dr. Edwin R. Hunter, head of the English department, will speak to the members of the YMCA at their meeting tomorrow evening on the subject, "Now that you're at College, What About Culture?" Carl Walton, violinist, will provide the special music.

Last week Dean Frank McClelland, in beginning the series with a talk on college friendships, stressed the importance of friendships of men with men, with women, and with faculty members. He laid down several characteristics as the mark of a friend. Next week, Dr. H. E. Orr will conclude the series.

New Science Instructor Is Licensed Pilot and MC Grad

By BETTY UMBACH

Miss Cora Louise Carson, attractive new addition to the Maryville college faculty, has the distinction of being the first licensed aviatrix to be on Maryville's teaching staff. She remarks that she feels quite at home in her new position here, since she is a graduate of this college, and was a laboratory assistant in the chemistry and botany departments before her graduation. She has had a teaching fellowship in chemistry at the University of Tennessee, and has taught science at the Park Junior high school in Knoxville.

Miss Carson started her flying career on a scholarship. She had never been up before when she took her first flying lesson a year ago last July. The scholarship which she won offered her fifty hours in the air; it was awarded by the state and was given by Tennessee as the first such scholarship in the U. S. Almost a year ago, in last October, Miss Carson received her license; officially known as a Certificate of Competence, but more popularly called a private pilot's license. It licenses her to fly a lightweight plane. She received this license after completing the course at the Knoxville Municipal airport. She enjoys flying more than anything else, and feels safer in a plane than when driving a car; she has never had occasion to use a parachute, and hopes she never will.

Fundamentally, Miss Carson is an athletic type of person. She likes horses next to airplanes, and would rather hike and roast wieners than settle down to the domestic arts of sewing and cooking. She enjoys music and concerts, preferring classical and semi-classical to jazz. In the line of literature, biographies appeal to her much more than novels or short stories; and her alert personality is evident in the fact that she shows a great interest in keeping up with current happenings.

At present Miss Carson is filling a new position at Maryville in which she takes charge of freshman chemistry and math classes; and she will, in all probability, take part in instructing the aviation course offered this year.

All-Steel Bleachers To Be Finished In Time For Game With Union College Tonight

Latest addition to the long list of campus improvements completed during the summer months and the first two weeks of school are the new bleachers on the east side of Wilson field which will be used for the first time this evening.

These bleachers are of all-steel construction with wooden seats. They replace the old wooden bleachers which have been used for the past several years and which were in an advanced state of deterioration. The new bleachers will match the all-steel bleachers on the west side of the field.

During the summer months some work was done in every one of the dormitories, the new heat main installed, and the work on the corduroy completed.

Memorial hall was completely renovated. All rooms were painted and papered, and hardwood floors were laid on the second and third floors. The other dormitories all had work done in them, but on a somewhat smaller scale.

The console of the organ in Voorhees chapel was lowered into the floor and made stationary. Other improvements in the chapel included the addition of new chairs for the choir; and, although they have not been received, a new pulpit and pulpit chairs have been ordered.

Other improvements around the campus include the refinishing of the home economics home management house, and the installation of 1000 feet of new heat main.

The Ministerial Association will hold its first meeting of the new year on Monday evening, Sept. 25, at 6:45 in the YWCA rooms. All new men of the college are cordially invited to attend this meeting. An interesting program has been arranged, and important business will be discussed.

SATURDAY, Sept. 23, 1939

Wanted: Some Pep

Tonight we will see the first football game of the Maryville 1939 football season. We've already had a pep meeting with a fairly good attendance and a fair amount of pep. But what we need are more rooters and more pep to push that team on to victory! Yes, you may say, it's the same old story. It probably is, but it's also the same old people who refuse to lend their support to the cheering section.

Most of us think, perhaps, that if we don't holler and cheer it won't even be noticed, especially, if we think that our neighbors are shouting loud enough for three people. And that is another thing. Why not just yell moderately instead of trying to burst the eardrums of the people within a radius of five feet of you. But if you are one of those former people who sit back and let someone else cheer for you, it certainly doesn't indicate any interest or any school spirit for the team that is providing the game you are enjoying.

So let's have some cheerers this year and let's hear them. What with a new squad of cheer leaders, a new band sponsor, a fine band, and three twirlers, we ought to have something to be proud of! And to have the hope of beating Union uppermost there doesn't seem to be any reason whatever why we all shouldn't turn out and show that fine Maryville spirit!

"Hello There!"

The first few weeks of college are always filled with the voices of the many fellows and girls who want to know, "Did you have a good summer?", "Who do you have for Psych?", "Where's your room?", or "Have you heard what Jack's doing this year?" Or you may hear freshmen who are trying to find a class or who are discussing their first theme. Whatever the subject of conversation it all adds to the cheerful attitude and high spirits of the campus. It shows that at the beginning of the nine months of the college year, there is a harmony and a sense of friendliness that ought to be preserved.

During the last few years we have undoubtedly noticed that there has been a growing intolerance and hostility between classes, races, and nations. It seems to be too great a task for one group to try to understand and study another's views. For this reason it ought to be evident to us that it is most essential to increase our power of reasoning in everyday life. We need to spread our friendships.

We need to spread our friendships now while we are in college and while people are still tolerant. There is no greater handicap than not to be able to speak to this person or that, whether you know them or not. Our college campus does not appear to be unfriendly. In fact, it is not. But there are some people who would probably, if they thought, give a smile or a quick "Hello" where they had disregarded such before.

We have all probably felt at some time or other that we were being ignored or forgotten until someone came along with a "Hi there". So let's not have any people on our campus who feel that they are out of things. Make everyone more friendly by doing the same yourself. Give a heart smile or a gay "Hello" to those you pass!

ECHO-HUMOR

By DON KENT

(Note taken from biographical sketch of J. P. Morgan: Mr. Morgan, like most other people, is none too cheerful until he's had his morning coffee.)

Anatomically speaking,
With organs I's reeking;
They're scattered within me, some thin and some thick.
They work without stopping,
Some jumping, some hopping,
Forsaking their own fun and making me click.
No reason to doubt 'em
'Cause I'M all about 'em.
They're not open today but don't say they're not so.
Though my brain is enveloped,
By a skull that developed,
It's in there, I promise, but where
I don't know.
But when every morning,
That alarm without warning
Starts yelling and shrieking like the swell of a rumor,
Both I and J. P. Morgan
Could use another organ:
We're beaten till we've eaten for we have no "Sensayumor."

• • • • •

With such a spiffy sponsor and a torso-twisting twirler like that, the Highland band should cut quite a few figures on the field this fall. And we mean figures!

Overheard at the Fac. Recep. Refreshment Table:
McGaha—I like those dark cookies.
Sieber—I like the blond ones better.

★ This Week: Yankee Mountaineer

• • • •

IT HAS BEEN A REPEATED COMPLAINT of American writers that visitors to our country return to their homeland and write criticisms of America after the briefest of visits and the most cursory examinations. Especially has this been aimed at the English. On the eve of the War of 1812, a writer in the "American Review' says "English travelers have heaped the most odious calumnies upon the United States they have taken as the ground of general censure, those single instances of turpitude in morals and manners which are to be found in every country." It is undoubtedly true that a person who has visited for two weeks in one spot feels prone to express himself upon the place he visited, even though he is very much incapable of passing judgment.

• • • •

WHEN I RETURNED AFTER A short stay of two weeks among the people of the Tennessee mountains, one of the first things I was asked was "What are the mountaineers like?" I anticipated the question and was more careful than I would ordinarily be about observing the people I visited, but I am guilty of the same fault of which we have accused visitors to our country if I proceed to gleefully go about the task of casting carelessly bouquets and brickbats at the people who do not live so far from our college. I am aware, too, that I could unconsciously be observing everything with a private sneer, a touch of that Northern superiority of which we from beyond the Mason-Dixon line are often accused by our Southern friends. This balloon of pride is often pricked when a sensitive local person takes pains to remind us of the child brides in Pennsylvania.

• • • •

BUT THE NORTHERNER CANNOT BE blamed too much for his impression of the mountaineer. Cartoons in a certain expensive, shiny-paged monthly, comic strips of L'il Abner and his pig Salome, the nasally intoned ballads known as "mountain music", and noontime programs consisting of alleged humor and fierce fiddling have contributed to a great degree to giving the innocent observer a dwarfed opinion of his fellow citizens in the Southern highlands.

• • • •

THE MOUNTAIN PEOPLE ARE RELIGIOUS. family pride. The several homes in which I visited seemed marked for this quality, that even though the family was large, the parents and children were as closely bound as if there had been but three in the family. The parents love their children, all ten of them, equally, and the children have the same love for their parents and for their brothers and sisters. It is not an affection borne of necessity, but one created naturally. It is the thing which makes the mountain family such a strong unit; and if there are such things as mountain feuds, they are engendered in this family pride.

• • • •

THE MOUNTAIN PEOPLE ARE RELIGIUOS. Their conception of divinity may differ from those of educated people, yet it is free from sophistication and treated with respect. With TVA power, civilization is advancing on the mountains, bringing its good and bad qualities. One of the first things that will probably accompany it will be a religious indifference as the modern man characterizes it, and as this replaces a simple satisfying faith it will be an unfortunate adjunct to progress.

• • • •

THESE REMARKS ARE NOT MEANT AS criticism of the fine people in this school who have come from their mountain homes to get a college education. They are written with the confidence that such people are as anxious as anyone to see improvements in the conditions around their homes, and with the hope that they will accept them in the friendly manner in which they are expressed.

It is unfortunate that this Polish war should come at football season. Pity the poor typesetters faced with the dilemma of whether Koshinbashka is the latest Polish town captured or the University of Spodunk's contender for all-American honors.

TALK OF THE WEEK

By Arlene Phelps

Theta Closes Rush Week Friday Evening In Gym

Theta Epsilon brought her rush week for new girls to a close on Friday evening with a formal opening program in the Alumni gym. Throughout the week Theta has entertained the new girls using a Hawaiian theme. On Tuesday afternoon the treasure hunt which was to be in the woods was held in the gym because of rain. Margaret Ash and Irene Hunter were in charge of the activities of the afternoon, and Phyllis Heaton directed the games.

On Thursday afternoon, from 3:30 to 5:00, Theta entertained with a splash party in the college pool. There were water races. Gordon Findlay was in charge of a skit which was presented. Ruth Bigler and Dorothy Quass were in charge of arrangements for the party.

Friday evening at 8:00 all the new girls were invited to the formal opening which consisted of music and drama. Refreshments were served by members of Alpha Sigma, who acted as waiters. The Hawaiian theme was used throughout the program. Peg Halsey was in charge of decorations; Elizabeth Stone and Jayne Carter managed the preparing of the refreshments; and Kitty Bennett supervised the entertainment.

Tryouts For "Our Town" To Begin This Week

Tryouts for "Our Town," the initial dramatic production of the season to be presented by the College Players, will begin Monday, October 2, and continue through Saturday, October 7, Mrs. West announced yesterday morning.

Rehearsals for the play are scheduled to begin on October 9, and the play is to be presented the evening of November 17.

Books for the play have been ordered from the publishers and as soon as they arrive will be placed on reserve in the college library in order that students wishing to try out may familiarize themselves with it. Mrs. West requests that students read the play before trying out and decide what part they wish to try out for in the play.

College Players production is limited this year to those students taking work in the Dramatic Arts department and other students may try out only through invitation.

New Members Received At First French Club Meeting

The French club held its first meeting of the year last Wednesday evening in Anderson hall. New members consisting of Dorothy Smith, Lura Mae Laughmiller, Robert Wilcox, Kathryn Estes, and Bob Moore were elected into the organization. After a brief introductory program, refreshments were served.

A picnic in the college woods is being planned for the next meeting. Mary Deane Allen is the president of the club for this semester, and Miss Wilkinson is the faculty adviser. David Kidder and Hal Henschen are the program secretaries.

Mr. Pieper Will Speak At First Law Club Meeting

Mr. Archibald Pieper will speak at the first meeting of the Law club next Wednesday evening at 6:45 in Athenian hall.

Besides Mr. Pieper's address, plans for the annual fall picnic are to be discussed and the date set for the first moot trial.

All freshmen planning on entering the profession or law are cordially invited to attend.

College Choir To Appear At Conventions Soon

The choir has scheduled two appearances in Knoxville in the near future. These appearances will be before large conventions that will attract large crowds from a broad territory. The first will be on October 26, during the East Tennessee Education Association's meeting at the University of Tennessee. The choir will appear on the program with H. V. Kaltenborn, well known news commentator. The second engagement is at the Daughter's of the American Revolution convention on November 27. Director Ralph R. Colbert said that he still had vacancies for a first tenor, a first bass, a second bass, and a second alto. Thirty-three of the old choir members have returned.

Work Begun On Xmas Play

Mrs. Nita E. West's class in religious drama has begun work on the production of "A Christmas Carol" by Charles Dickens. The play will be given in pantomime, with Mrs. West reading between the scenes, and will be presented on the hill just before the holidays and again at the Christian Endeavor convention which meets in Knoxville during the first week of December.

KICKING THE BALL AROUND

By the SPORTS EDITOR

SPORTS

DON'T START THAT

The Knoxville Journal two days ago published a statement that Arnold Kramer, star lineman would be out of tonight's game with a serious leg injury. The paper also stated that several other stars would also be ou of the game with injuries. Where the Knoxville paper got such information is beyond our, or anyone else's, knowledge. For all of you anxious fans, Kramer will definitely play tonight, and as far as we know, or Arnold knows, he has not had any leg injuries. The same thing holds true in regard to the rest of the story. The season thus far has been exceptionally good in regard to freedom from injuries. If any of you think Arnold has a broken leg just be present tonight when some of the Union Bulldogs attempt to cross his side of the line. And as far as any other injuries, well, J. D. Hughes complains that some freshman gal has been breakin' his heart, but he thinks he'll be able to go tonight.

NO STREET SHOES

Coach Fischbach has requested that all persons who use the tennis courts are to wear tennis shoes and to please not wear street shoes with rubber soles. It seems to me that if any person with a little common sense will stop and think twice he will do as Coach Fischbach asks. And yet every year the same trouble comes up about the wearing of shoes on the tennis courts. Those courts are placed there for your benefit. Help keep them in good shape and you will be doing yourself a favor.

H'RAY

This year the YMCA is again sponsoring a tennis tournament. This is the first time, however, that lettermen on the tennis team have been kept out of the tournament. Congratulations, athletic directors, it's about time that the annual tournament will be something besides a tennis team try-out.

Tusculum First Conference Foe

The Maryville Scotties invade Tusculum next Saturday in their first Conference game. The Scots will be set to repeat last year's win over the Pioneers. In the season-opener, Maryville ran up a 28-0 score, with J. D. Hughes setting the pace. This year, however, the Tusculum boys will be tough and stubborn and pointed for "Schoolboy."

The strong Highlanders are doped to take the first hurdle, in this year's pennant race, though. The game is to be played in Tusculum at night.

Touch Football Season To Start This Afternoon

The traditional football game of the Alpha Sigma and Athenian societies will be fought out on the practice field this afternoon. Originally a genuine slugfest, for the last few years the game has been faster and more skillful touch ball. The Alpha Sigs still hold a slight edge in back scores. Last year, the boys fought back and forth to a 6-6 tie, with the Greeks winning one and Alpha Sig two in previous years.

Art Peterson and "Cagey Cliff" Proctor will manage the Athenian squad; "Sully" Sullivan is whipping an enormous Alpha Sig squad into shape for the fray.

For the Athenian team: Proctor, Stevenson, Peterson, and Woodring will continue stellar intra-mural careers Shorty Etheredge and Flashy Frank Morrow lead the southend backfield, with the Heydinger boys and McGaha pivoting around Jeep Amos at center. The societies' teams will miss last year stars Baird, Kindred, McCaskie and Rhody.

The Society Series is traditionally played in rain, although last year no mud was slung, both teams are hoping for the usual storm this year.

The intra-mural football season opens on the second of October. Class teams will begin practice some time next week. Jeep Amos manages a super-strong senior tea mthis year; Art Peterson heads a new bunch of juniors; Dud Moore is organizing the unknown sophs, and Clem Hahn has taken over the job of starting the freshmen out this year.

The Athletic Committee of the YM CA will announces the schedules later.

Be sure and attend the football game tonight between the Maryville College Highlanders and the Union College Bulldogs.

Highlanders Open Season Tonight Against Union College Bulldogs

Scotties Favored To Win Over Smaller School As Coach Honaker Prepares Team For Revenge Game

The 1939 football season officially opens at Maryville tonight when the Highlanders will put on their new pants and jerseys and go out on Wilson field to tangle with the Union college Bulldogs from Barbourville, Ky.

Not much is known about the Bulldogs' team except that which we all remember from last year. The Union team will probably be small, as it usually it, but will also probably be fast and hard. The Scotties will hold a slight edge over the visitors in that they will be playing with a squad that will be in perfect shape and that she will be playing on her home field. Last season it was mainly due to injuries and a boy named Ken Farmer that the Highlanders fell under by the score of 13-7. This year we are without the injuries, so far at least, but we will still have to contend with the big end, Farmer.

The Scots will probably take to the air early in the game, with either Hughes or Honaker doing most of the tossing and with Captain Etheredge or Fred Shelfer doing what receiving there is to be done.

The Highlanders' offense is fifty per cent better at this time this year than it was at approximately the same time last season. The last week has been devoted to sharpening their offensive attack which is comprised mostly of short passes and fast running plays.

The game will begin tonight at 8:00, and the band with its new edition of majors and majorettes will probably put on its show before the game and at half time.

YMCA Tennis Tournament

The Athletic Committee of the YM CA has completed plans for the annual intramural tennis tournament, it was announced last Thursday.

Registration sheets for both singles and doubles matches were placed on the Carnegie bulletin board last week. Approximately forty men for the singles and eighteen for the doubles signed up before the registration was closed at six o'clock Thursday evening. Drawings were made at that time and the brackets were posted Friday morning. o changes in the pairings are to be made except by authorization of the committee.

In order to keep the tourney moving as rapidly as possible, the committee is asking that all first round matches be played during the week beginning Sept. 25. Second round playing will then be able to get under way by the first week in October. Contestants are asked to keep these dates in mind and to arrange their matches accordingly since both singles and doubles must be played during this period. Players in the preliminary matches have been asked to furnish their own balls; the YMCA will provide balls for the final matches. So that there will be no occasion for misunderstanding, players are asked to turn in their scores to some member of the committee as soon as possible after their matches. (Committee members are Phil Evaul, Clem Hahn, and Roland Tapp). The tourney will be conducted on the best two out of three set basis, except that the finals will be played best three out of five sets.

The winners will be awarded the trophies which are on display in the trophy case at the YMCA. The committee wishes to call attention to the fact that men who received letters in tennis last spring are ineligible for these tournaments.

Last year's winners were Morrow and Van Cise. This year all the old combinations have been broken and no one can be seeded. However, good tennis is showing up on the court as tournament time comes around and several boys should be near the top. Frank Morrow and Copeland look good in the doubles play (Morrow is not playing singles in the tournament); Webster and Proctor are clicking. Some freshmen, Van Cise the younger, and Ted Kidder seem to be threatening their brothers' records. The tournament should feature some of the closest matches in several years.

Frosh Set New Record With Four Sets Of Twins

This year's freshman class has the distinction of being the first in some time to boast of four sets of twins attending Maryville:

Roberta and Ralph Parvin, who are from Bradenton, Florida; Elizabeth and Wilson Garnett, from Rice, Virginia. Misses Jane and Dorothy Mae Wilson, from Salisbury, North Carolina; Misses Willa and Jessie Reed, from Winterthur, Delaware. These last two girls also have a sister, Alice, enrolled as a freshman.

"We, the officers of the Maryville College Young Men's Christian Association, hereby notify all concerned that no one will have the authority to charge goods, service rendered, or the like, to the organization without a written order which must be signed by at least three of the four executive officers; namely, Russell Stevenson, President; Erwin Ritzman, Vice President; Edward M. Thomas, Secretary; Charles E. Baldwin, Treasurer."

Dr. Lloyd Pays Tribute To The Memory Of Dr. M. M. Rodgers

The following tribute was paid to Dr. Rodgers by President Lloyd of the college:

"A good man leaveth an inheritance to his children's children."
—Proverbs 13:22.

This is but one way to say that a good man leaves an inheritance to all who have been touched by his influence in this generation and those who will receive it in generations to come.

Such is the inheritance left by Dr. Rodgers. Some who have entered and will enter into it are of his own blood; others have been his students; yet others have received of his ministry as a pastor.

1. He was a man of good character and faith.

He brought to Maryville a reputation for honor and forthrightness. As he has gone in and out among students and neighbors and church people here for thirteen years he has been counted a good man. Reliability, faithfulness, constructiveness, steadiness, gentlemanliness—such words seem to fit him.

His religious faith has been firm and clear. The religious belief of youth and others has never been weakned by him. His own faith in God, in the Word of God, and in the good purposes of God for mankind, have underguided the faith of those who came to know his mind and spirit.

2. He was a good teacher.

His first academic degree, Bachelor of Education, was received in 1903 when he was but seventeen. He is said to have graduated from the Slippery Rock Normal in Pennsylvania, at an earlier age than has any other person. After his first degree he taught two years in the Soughton, Pa., school, and one year in Rose Point Academy, Pa., and at the age of twenty received the Master of Education degree. He was, during the next four years, first teacher of mathematics and principal at Prospect Academy, Pa., and later principal of St. Petersburg, Pa. high school. During these same years he found time to meet the requirements for the B.A. degree at Grove City college, Pa. The same institution granted him the Ph. D. degree in 1905 and the honorary degree of D.D. in 1929.

From 1900 to 1903 and again in 1909-1910, he studied at Western Theological seminary of Pittsburgh, and received there the degree of S.T.M. During two recent summers, 1927 and 1928 he studied at the Divinity school, University of Chicago.

Of the 45 years since receiving his first degree, he has spent 23 as a pastor, five in further study, and 18 as a teacher. His earliest and his latest service was in teaching and he was a member of the Maryville college faculty during the last 13 years of his life. He completed his work of last semester with great effort. Yet with characteristic courage and unobtrusiveness he concealed his distress from all of us not in his own home.

One of his strong qualities as a college teacher was his belief in teaching as a way of service. To him his office was a ministry and a joy. He was devoted to the college and to his classes.

He planned his work and followed his plan. He knew his goal and his path. Students, especially in their first years, found this most helpful. They knew what he meant in his teaching and his desires; he did not make his classes easy but he did make his material and his method clear, a practice which students sometime claim is less common than generally supposed. The work done in his classes was thorough work.

The firmness and clarity of his own religious belief and his knowledge of the Bible, with the careful, systematic nature of his teaching, did much to increase the knowledge and loyalty of his students to the Bible. They received something definite. His influence was always constructive and it is an inheritance to large numbers of college youth, many of whom have been graduated now for a dozen years and are teaching the Bible in their own homes to children. During his thirteen years at Maryville he conducted approximately 7000 class sessions in each of which there were usually more than 25 college students. The cumulative effect of such service can hardly be understood because it is not in public view.

Dr. Rodgers was a good college teacher. He "leaveth an inheritance to his children's children."

3. He was a good minister of the church.

As a young man in Pennsylvania he heard a call into the ministry; after considerable preparation for teaching he answered the other call, went to the theological seminary for three years and became a pastor.

For thirteen years he served Presbyterian churches in Pennsylvania. At first he was pastor of a group of three churches at Vanport, Industry and Bethlehem, Pa.; after two years he became pastor of the Amity church of Dravosburg, Pa., and remained five years, from 1905 to 1910; then there were six years at North Girard, Pa. In 1916 he was called to the Presbyterian church at Monticello, Ind., and three years of the World War period were in that pastorate. In 1919 he became pastor of the Sunnyside Presbyterian church of South Bend, Ind., where he remained until called to the faculty of Maryville college in 1926.

During his professorship here he has been in constant demand as a preacher and as a supply pastor of churches in this area. He continued to preach until but a few weeks before his death. For a considerable period he was the popular teacher of the New Providence Men's class here.

Dr. Rodgers was a faithful presbyter and served in various offices of Presbytery and Synod. In Union Presbytery of which he has been a member since coming to Tennessee, he has served as Moderator and on important committees and has been a commissioner to the General Assembly. During the past few years he has been a leader in the study and discussion of the religious emphasis week activities among the Presbyterian colleges. He was a loyal friend of the Maryville February Meetings.

He has built himself into the church and has been in it not only a good man but also a good minister.

4. He was a good friend.

He had the spirit of friendliness and took a friendly as well as an effective part in all of the life of the college. It was he who suggested and organized the work of our faculty welcoming committee which meets parents and new students at the opening of each college year.

Faculty, students and neighbors counted him a friend who was unselfishly interested and helpful.

It is our honor to pay tribute to him as a colleague and friend and to have his nearest colleague on the faculty go on the train with his body to Pennsylvania and there assist in his burial in the community of his birth.

We shall miss his service as a man and teacher and minister and friend. But we are grateful for the knowledge that as a good man he "leaveth an inheritance to his children's children," of whom there are hundreds throughout the world.

He has entered into that fuller presence of God about which throughout his life he talked to others.

The Lines Lengthen In 120 Years Of Faculty Receptions at Maryville

In 1819, Dr. Isaac Anderson didn't have much trouble with faculty receptions. All he had to do was shake hands with the two or three boys who enrolled in his first class. Today a receiving line of over a hundred faculty members and their wives or husbands and six hundred students dressed in their formal dresses and Sunday suits (depending on the sex) present a contrast that is in itself a sign of progress.

Circum the Civil War ays, before or after, if there had been a college and if, that hypothesis accepted, there had been a faculty reception, and if, agreeing to that, there had been women in one of the lines either giving or receiving, there would have been hoop skirts. Monday night there passed slowly down the line a white hoop skirt, proving that in eighty years we have completed a vicious circle (no pun intended.)

In 1819 the group probably had its humorists who made assorted remarks from the script to the venerable Dr. Anderson, but never has there shuffled down the floor of Lamar library a pundit, yea, a wit, like the student who wrote on his identification tag "Paul O'Kana, Dublin" with features that definitely belied any impression that he hailed from the green shores of Erin.

And refreshments in those days of the early nineteenth century were probably a cooling and refreshing relief to the parched mouth of the college founder after he had exchanged pleasantries with his pupils, but there was not one, we hope, who, like a visitor to the most recent handshaking harangue, asked if the color of the punch cup had to match her identification tag.

The denouement to the whole affair was that it was another line. After the hectic week of wall-leaning and card-holding that has been the lot of most of us, the crowning glory was that to meet people we had to form orderly lines and pass an orderly line. The unanimous sentiment of all is probably that receptions go on from year to year, but lines go on forever.

173 Rearrange Schedules

The Personnel office reported this week that one hundred and seventy-three students came to their office on Tuesday to change their schedules. Both old and new students made changes in the schedules which they had originally planned to carry this year. It was necessary for a large number of students to make some changes in schedule before registration during the first week. The number of changes made this year was much larger than in former years.

Saturday, Sept. 23

Special precautions were taken to prevent recurrence of the bombing which damaged a part of the Capitol building at Washington in 1915.

The Capitol has been closed to the public on Sundays, and no one except senators and representatives are permitted to enter the offices after midnight.

Premier Benito Mussolini, in a mildly pro-Nazi speech reaffirmed Italy's intention to remain neutral in the European conflict unless attacked. The Italian dictator accused the allies of abandoning their moral justification for the war by neglecting to take steps against Russia for the invasion of Poland.

The speech was made to a Fascist party organization.

Laura Ingalls, Washington aviatrix, has been threatened with the loss of her pilot's license for dropping "peace" pamphlets on the streets of the capitol in a flight which is said to have taken her plane over the White House, an area now included in the restricted airzone.

Miss Ingalls is charged with violating aerial regulations and her case is in the hands of the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

The German high command announced in an official communique the unconditional surrender of Warsaw after 27 days of siege warfare. The Nazi military garrison, now estimated at 100,000 men will take over complete control of the Polish capitol.

Thursday, Sept. 28

Pope Pius XII sent a message to all belligerent and neutral nations advocating a general European peace conference. The pontiff asserted that if Germany would make a proposal to create an independent even though smaller Poland, the Catholic See would advise belligerents to consider the offer.

The message also advised neutral nations to encourage a peaceful settlement before the war takes a greater toll of human life.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted out the Neutrality act by a vote of 16 to 7 in contrast to the decision at the last congressional session which pigeon-holed the measure by a vote of 12 to 11.

The committee added amendments intended to prohibit American merchant vessels from carrying munitions to belligerents and to make illegal all loans to warring nations.

The action of the committee has been severely criticized by American shipping interests since they will lose profit from transporting cargoes to European ports.

Friday, Sept. 29

Germany and Soviet Russia formally partitioned Poland and made a peace gesture toward England and France, indicating that they would be willing to cease hostilities if their action is recognized. This proposal was not official, but press statements indicate that it comes from reliable quarters. Both Britain and France have declared their intention to continue to prosecute the war until Europe is freed from Hitlerism.

Charles Orr To Head Sophomore Class For Year Now Ensuing

Northup, Gammon and Menning Are Elected For Other Offices

Charles Orr, from Nashville, Tenn., was elected president of the sophomore class at an election held Wednesday morning in the philosophy classroom. Marion Northup was also elected vice president at the meeting, and the class chose Anne Gammon to serve as secretary for the coming year, and Stan Menning to serve as treasurer.

The new president is a member of the college choir, a representative on the YMCA cabinet, a member of the Highland Echo staff. He is also one of the workers in the college library.

Marion Northup comes from Lisbon, Ohio. She was the freshman representative in the annual May Day last year. She was also the freshman class sponsor in the 1939 Chilhowean. This year she is serving as one of the Nu Gamma leaders for the YWCA.

Anne Gammon, the new secretary, comes from Perry, Mo. She has been active in class affairs and is secretary of Bainonian this semester. She, too, is a Nu Gamma leader this year.

The new treasurer, from Neenah, Wis., is a member of the YMCA cabinet and is president of the Nature club this semester.

Four members of the Student Council were elected by the class at the same time. The two members receiving the highest number of votes are to serve for two years and the others for one year terms. Jean Stringham was elected for the two year term. There was a tie for the second girl, between Eloise McNeeley and Mary Alice Grubb. Hilton Wick, David Kidder, and Dudley Moore tied for the two positions held by boys. These ties will be voted upon soon.

Little Theatre Opens Season Tuesday Night Presenting "Candlelight"

"Candlelight" is to be presented by the Little Theatre on Tuesday night, Oct. 3, at the Capitol Theatre. This is the first major production of this group this year. The capable cast has been working hard under the direction of Gordon Bennett. Jean Hutchison, Jean Campbell and Jeanette Sloane have the feminine leads. They will all be remembered for their splendid performances in former productions of the Little Theatre. The masculine leads are played by Gordon Bennett, Carl Wells and Robert Claflin.

This year the Little Theatre is following a much larger program. Regular meetings are held in the workshop over the Cate Cafe. One act plays are presented each month for the benefit of members and friends. Last week "Overtones" was presented under the direction of Eleanor Badgett. Judson Murphy is the president of the Little Theatre this year.

271 Students Take New Edition of Iowa Silent Reading Tests This Week

The New Edition of the Iowa Silent Reading Test for High Schools and Colleges was given Wednesday morning to 271 students. This test, by a combination of reading rate and comprehension of what was read, is a determining factor in deciding which students will be allowed to take the remedial reading course; the classes will begin in about two weeks.

Members of Dr. Preston's statistics class helped Dr. Briggs in giving the test, and are also scoring the test. The reading rate, as has been scored, ranged from 148 to 585 words a minute, the average being 285. The girls score, 282 words a minute, is lower than the boys, who averaged 290 words. The comprehension scores have not yet been determined.

There were approximately 20 or 30 students who failed to take this test; as this is required, an announcement will be made later as to when these students will be given a chance to take the test.

Correction

Last week due to an unpreventable mistake the Echo stated that Ruth Mack received a 9.5 average when it was in reality 8.5. This would give Dan McGill the highest average for last semester.

Directions Given For Scheduling Activities With Proper Offices

A word now near the beginning of the school year may prove to be helpful in keeping a clear and an accurate calendar of events, both academic and social. Here are a few simple directions.

1. All affairs of general interest should be scheduled in Dr. Hunter's office. These include all athletic events oratorical contests, debates, Artists Series, and other programs that are for the entire school.

2. All lesser group-activities should be scheduled in Mrs. Snyder's office. These include all parties, picnics, banquets, hikes, special suppers in the YW rooms or in the College Woods, and the like. Also all programs attended by mixed groups should be scheduled. These include the joint meetings of the societies, of the YM and YW and other similar programs.

3. All schedules should be filed five days in advance of the event.

4. All clubs that wish to meet regularly should petition the committee on the scheduling of activities and secure a regular meeting-time and place. All programs, unless special permission has been secured for extension of time, should be over not later than 7:15 except on Saturday evening which is not a study evening.

5. The official register of activities is posted in Anderson hall near Dr. Hunter's office.

Formal Opening In Gym Closes Bainonian Week

Hit Songs And Novelty Dances Are To Be Featured

With her formal opening this evening at 8:00 in the Alumni gym, Bainonian society will close a week of rushing the new girls of the college. Decorations will give the gym the appearance of a roof garden, with skyscrapers in the distance and stars overhead. The program for the evening will continue in the theme of "Flowers" which has been carried throughout the week in programs and decorations. An orchestra led by Bob Paul will play popular songs. Charlotte Colby, Roland Anderson and Louise Allen will sing "Comes Love" and "Baby Me."

One of the high lights of the evening will be two novelty dance numbers by Helen Wilhoit and Bob Claflin, local dance team. Six singing waitresses will sing "I'm Sorry for Myself" and "Flowers for Madame". As a singing waiter Dick Woodring will sing "Moonlove" and Charles Orr, also a singing waiter, will sing "Our Love," and "My Lindy Lou." As a conclusion to the program the officers of the society will be introduced and all old members will sing the Bainonian song. Refreshments and favors will be distributed by the singing waitresses and waiters. Marianna Allen has general

President Lloyd Broadcasts From New York Today

Presbyterian Colleges Honored In Program At N. Y. World's Fair

Today is being observed at the New York World's Fair as "Presbyterian College Day" and President Ralph W. Lloyd is one of several speakers who will make addresses in connection with the celebration. The program is part of the sesquicentennial campaign for Presbyterian colleges which began about a year ago, and will be conducted by Dr. Hugh Thompson Kerr, president of the Board of Christian Education of the Presbyterian church in the U.S.A.

Two programs were presented. The first was a radio broadcast this morning from the New York studios of Station WOR and the Mutual Broadcasting system. It was in the form of symposium on the general subject of "American Colleges and the Crisis." The principal address was made by Dr. John H. Finlay, editor-at-large of the New York Times, and the presidents of Presbyterian colleges spoke. President Lloyd was the second speaker and his subject was "The Church's Ministry of Higher Education." The other college presidents who spoke were Dr. Frank L. McClure of Westminster College, Fulton, Mo., and Dr. John W. Dunning of Alma college, Alma, Michigan. The Rev. John Maxwell Adams, director of university work for the Presbyterian Board, also spoke on the broadcast.

In the afternoon at 2:30 the same addresses were made in the Court of Peace at the World's Fair. This program was preceded by singing and included group singing, special music by a member of the Metropolitan Opera company, and talks by two students at Presbyterian colleges.

Orr Concludes Series Of Addresses At YM

Dr. Horace E. Orr, professor of Bible, concludes the introductory series of addresses at the YMCA on the theme "Now That You're at College" with his talk tomorrow evening at 5 on the subject "What About Conduct?" The other two talks have been received by a large crowd of college men and an equally representative group is expected for the last talk.

The association has purchased 100 new hymn books for use in the worship services and plans to dedicate them with a special program, Oct. 8. The books are edited by Dr. Charles C. Washburn of Scarritt college in Nashville, and it is expected that Dr. Washburn will be present for the dedication service.

Musical Aptitude Tests

The Seashore musical aptitude test will be given next Wednesday evening. The time and place will be announced in chapel. This test is required of all music students and is open to all who are interested in taking it.

Steakley Selected Editor Of 1940 Chilhowean; Evaul Elected Business Manager

Steakley Evaul

BIRD ASSISTS EVAUL

Douglas Steakley of Jefferson, Ohio, was elected editor of the 1940 Chilhowean at a meeting of the junior class held last Wednesday morning after chappel in Bartlett auditorium. At the same time, Philip Evaul of Handon Heights, N. J., was elected business manager.

Steakley, an English major, has been active on the Echo staff for three years, one as reporter and two as the sports editor. Not content with editing sports, he holds the 440 record in track, in which sport he has lettered two years. This year he is in charge of cross country and is publicity manager for athletics.

Evaul, biology major and assistant, is president of Student Volunteers, student manager on the Artist Series and is on the YMCA cabinet. He is also a member of the Triangle club and Athenian. He lettered in wrestling last year.

Although the representatives of the sophomore class to the Chilhowean staff have not yet been elected, Steakley has announced appointments to the main staff positions. J. Edward Thomas is to fill the new position of associate editor; Mary Orr is to be the activities editor; Jean White, fine arts editor; Eleanor Long, art editor; Charles Baldwin, feature editor; and Howard Dizney, sports editor.

The business staff as announced by Evaul will be Paul Brown in the capacity of subscription manager and Stanley Bird, assistant business manager. The remaining position will be filled at a later date.

This year the business staff is going to start a subscription campaign that will, it is hoped, break all preceding subscription records; and last year's 450 subscriptions should be raised to well over 500.

Students Choose Council Members

Six Serve Two Years Under New Regulations

Each of the three upper classes elected representatives to the student council for this school year, last Wednesday morning after chapel in their class meetings.

The eight seniors elected were Jessie Curtis, Pat Kennedy, John Fisher, Phil Ferris, Lynn Tyndall, Ruth Crawford, Frank Morrow, and Dan McGill. Juniors elected were Jean McCammon and William Baird from the old members and Joe Swift, Boydson Baird, Mary Orr, and Mary Darden to serve for two terms.

The sophomore election resulted in a tie in all but one case. Jean Stringham was elected representative for two years. In the election of the two boys for representative of the sophomore class, Hilton Wick, David Kidder and Dudley Moore tied. Mary Alice Grubb and Eloise McNeeley also tied for the other girls' position on the council.

Rules governing the election of student council members have been changed in several ways this year. Each class elects part of its representatives to serve on the council for two years and selects part from the representatives of last year who serve for a period of one year more.

Disc Club Will Hear Fift Symphony Tuesday

The committee in charge of the Disc club met last Tuesday evening and scheduled the activities of the club for entire year. The first meeting will be held next Thursday afternoon at 4:30 in the Fine Arts studio at which time there will be played Tschaikowsky's Fifth Symphony.

The Fifth Symphony has suddenly become popular having been first on the radio hit parade for several weeks under the title "Moon Love." The dance hit is an arrangement of one of the many beautiful themes in the symphony which was a favorite with music lovers long before the radio had the opportunity to co-star symphonies and cigarets.

The Disc club was founded in 1936 when the music department of the college was reorganized and meets twice a month for the purpose of listening to recordings of the best in music. There is no formal membership, the meetings being open to anyone who cares to attend. An attempt is being made to find a more suitable time for the meetings, but the first one will be held next Thursday afternoon.

Pearsons Elect Monday

Elections for vice president and secretary-treasurer for Pearsons hall will be held next week, announced Jessie Curtis, president of the hall this week. The nominations for these offices are Katherine Ogilvie and Thelma Ritzman for vice president; Marjorie Orcutt and Maude Smith for secretary-treasurer.

Elections will be held all day Monday for the women of Pearsons.

Echo Staff Vacancies

There are two vacancies on the business staff of the Highland Echo. These vacancies must be filled by freshmen. All those interested, please see Dale Mathias, 117, Carnegie.

Two more vacancies have been made on the Echo staff by the recent resignations of Doris Smith and Douglas Steakley. Any sophomores or juniors interested in writing sports may report to the Echo office Tuesday evening at 6:30. Others who would like to try out for these vacancies and are not interested in sports may also report at this time.

Dr. Collins To Address Faculty Club Meeting

The Faculty club will have its first meeting of the year next Monday evening, Oct. 2, in the home economics rooms. The meeting will begin at 6:30. The dinner will be followed by an address by Dr. Ralph Collins. His address will be "Schiller on the Esthetic Education of Man." The address will discuss the basis of Schiller's theories and the implications by him on the education of man. The speech will be followed by an open discussion of the relation of esthetics to morality.

The Faculty club was organized eight years ago and has grown rapidly in members and interest among the faculty. The club was organized upon Dr. Ralph W. Lloyd's suggestion in September, 1933. The club held its first meeting on Oct. 13 of the same year. It was formed as a "get-together" to hear papers from representatives of the various departments and to afford fellowship and stimulus among the faculty members.

One Act Plays To Be Given At Studio Tea

The Dramatis Arts students will present their first studio tea next Friday evening after the pep meeting. One act plays are presented at these teas which are held once a month in the Fine Arts studio. Friday night there will be two plays presented.

The first play is a comedy, "Matinata", written by Lawrence Langner. In the cast will be Barbara Anderson as Columbine; Troy Moore as Pierrot; and Ruth West as Harlequin.

The second play is "The Valiant" by Holworthy Hall. The cast includes John Wintermute, Louise Allen, Charles Fish, Frank Brink, and William Gehres. The first play has been coached by Mrs. Hamilton and the second by Carol Dawn Ward.

Admission to these teas is by invitation, but anyone interested may secure an invitation by seeing Mrs. West or Mrs. Hamilton

Reporter Relates Story Of Treasures Found In Library

By CHARLES ORR

Besides being a retreat for those fleeing from the ravages of the dormitory popper-in-and-outers, a rendezvoux for stroll-weary lovers, a social room, and a good excuse for not being somewhere else, the library is essentially a place of study. Yet few who venture within its portals realize that they invade not the sanctorum of the Biblioteck, but that which was originally intended for a dining hall. They sit down at tables that should hold food, and get their books from a well planned kitchen; and the dark rooms hold not meats and vegetables, but the New York Times!

The library passed its infancy in one end of Dr. Davis' classroom. As it grew older and larger, it found its way into Dr. Lloyd's office and remained until 1889. At that time, having outgrown itself, it left Anderson hall and settled in the College post office, then known as the Lamar Memorial library, where it stayed until removed into the newly erected Thaw hall in 1924.

It is, except for an occasional noseblow, followed by many resounding "shh's" from all "Silence"-conscious quarters, an ideal place to study. You may sit at tables equipped with modern indirect lighting lamps, in attractive surroundings, and, if you can't afford your own, read the Knoxville Journal, or other of the six daily papers carried by the library. Your books will be gotten quickly for you by one of the nine assistants employed by the library for your convenience. Books which you take out of the library will soon be filed under a new system which will notify you the day your book is due.

You have practically at your finger tips, accession to any of 45,000 or so volumes contained in the library and covering all the fields from Bible, Biology, Chemistry, English, Fine Arts, Debate and Home Economics; to Mathematics, Physics, Modern Languages, Philosophy, Physical Education, Political Science, Economics, History, Sociology, Psychology, Latin and Greek.

You have at hand some five or six unabridged dictionaries, including the large Oxford dictionary and the large American dictionary soon to be pur-

Can We Improve?

One of the most obvious and appreciated improvements that took place during the summer was the renovation of the dining hall. Begun with new curtains made by the faculty wives, it extended to the purchase of new dishes and new tables. It can even be detected in better menus and more careful preparation of the food, so that a different atmosphere has seemed to be in evidence. For all these things we are grateful.

Perhaps, however, there are ways in which the students who eat in the dining hall could show improvement that would make changes for the better in the atmosphere. Even though the three daily meals provide an excellent opportunity for sociability, an opportunity which should in no way be diminished, quieter conduct might be in order, especially for the evening meal. Too, more dignity and politeness might not be amiss. There are occasions which warrant exceptions, but in general a tone and a degree of good conduct and good manners conducive to the thorough enjoyment of the food would go a long way towards further improving the three meals a day.

Let's See Results!

The elections held this week for the members of the student council bring to our attention one of the organizations on the hill which represents the whole student body and in which the student opinion is voiced.

Last spring the council with the aid of others helped to plan a reorganization program for the societies and social events on the campus. Some of the results of this program can be seen now.

We hope that this year the student council will accept the position that the students expect it to have. We do not mean that they should attempt to bring about radical changes but we do expect that they will be observant enough to notice and to feel student opinion. These matters of student opinion may be small, but they can do much to improve the campus spirit and welfare.

There seems to be no reason why students should not, at least, feel that their ideas and suggestions do receive some consideration. The representatives from the various classes are there for that purpose, and students should address all thoughts of criticism and ways of improvement to them. We cannot expect a student council to function without student support behind it.

We hope to hear about and see more results from the student body this year. But let's be reasonable about the miracles we expect to see performed and lend our support to the plans that the council does produce and help it carry these out successfully!

ECHO-HUMOR

By DON KENT

Monday

Dear Diary:

Tonight I was way behind in my studies and the more I thought of them the sicker I got. So to relax my mind, I went to the movies, and didn't study at all. (The picture was awful. I wish I'd studied.)

Tuesday

Didn't know my French today in class. The teacher isn't very good either. I don't think it would have done me any good to study last night. Hitch-hiked to Knoxville this p.m. and bought some tennis balls.

Wednesday

Had a biology quiz today; the questions were stupid. They didn't seem to have any connection with what I was supposed to study. Played three sets of tennis for the Y match and won. Celebrated tonight at Pop's.

Thursday

It rained hard all morning; so I cut my classes and slept. Wasn't up on my Bible anyway. It seemes rather foolish to study that and go to Sunday school and church, too. Washed my socks this afternoon after I read tomorrow's Economics lesson.

Friday

Had a great idea today! As soon as I get on my feet financially, I'm going to California and get in the movie racket. Anybody can make punk pictures like they show in town. The birds that direct that stuff don't have to be smart. Everybody else does their work for them.

Saturday

Sammy, the bookworn and D.A.R. down our hall, was up tonight until 12:00 studying. We saw him when we got back from the game at Tusculum. How can us common guys get decent grades with guys like him around. The hitch-hiking was bad but it was a good game.

Sunday

I went to Sunday school this morning and Vespers tonight. Nothing exciting happened all day. I'm getting tired of school.

Monday

I have the worst luck in the world. And every teacher is picking on me. I got called on in every class today and it just happened I didn't know the questions they gave me. All this stuff they teach us won't do us any good anyway. Everybody says so.

Tonight I was way behind in my studies; so to relax my mind, I went to the show.

THE COMMENTATOR

Conducted By GEORGE L. HUNT

★ This Week: Mr. Webster Hates War

It is related that some years ago a San Francisco newspaper editor was taken to task by one of his subscribers for reporting a bit of unpleasant news. He was asked if he had to report everything that happened. Surely, said the indignant person, he didn't approve of such things. To this the editor replied, "Neither did I approve of the earthquake, but I had to report it."

Today the situation is similar. Almost without exception every chapel speaker has in one connection or another mentioned the European war. We can anticipate what will be the gist of every devotional thought. As, with a column on the matter of repealing the arms embargo, we join the throng, perhaps we too might be accused of doing our part by placing too much emphasis on unpleasant happenings. But like the San Francisco editor, we feel it is a vital enough issue—perhaps the most vital to come before our Congress since the last war—that it must be reported. The "academic isolation" of which the foregoing column speaks is altogether too prevalent at our Smoky Mountain retreat here on college hill.

The first guest columnist, then, is George D. Webster, chairman of the International Relations club, a debater, and a close student of national affairs. On this matter of the arms embargo he presents the minority opinion. As it happens, this columnist agrees with the majority, but he may very easily be wrong. At any rate, he is pleased to present the comments of Mr. Webster.

• • • •

When our International Relations club met for the first time early this week, the expressed opinion of those attending was that our nation should not sell its arms and implements of war to belligerent nations. The decision, reached after a spirited discussion of the present neutrality fight, is probably a good indication of student and faculty opinion.

Again we find ourselves favoring the belief of the minority of our student body. Yet one of the most interesting things about [illegible] whole discussion is that majority and minority sides [illegible] Here they finally diverge, start from common ground [illegible] too ground implied by President Roosevelt when he [illegible] the emergency session of Congress last week, "Let no group assume the exclusive label of the peace bloc. We all belong to it". That is, both sides, here as in Congress, "hate war", are anxious to do all in their power to keep us out of it this time. The question is, in brief, one of means, not end.

With this basic understanding in mind, let us look into the actual situation as it exists today.

The fact that American goods are now carried to belligerent nations in American boats was pointed out during the course of the discussion last Monday evening. Seemingly, it is the enigma of 1939 that twenty-four assorted congressmen (so-called isolationists) should favor retention of a law which creates a situation coincident with 1914-17 and leading inevitably to war. However, with the adoption of the cash and carry plan as advanced by President Roosevelt, such an unnecessary danger would definitely disappear.

Repeal of the arms embargo is certainly the logical thing to do. Despite the fact that we cannot now send the finished product of war materials to belligerent nations, we can send everything necessary for the manufacture of these same materials. Certainly, if we intend to sell at all, as even Borah and his "kept us out of the League" friends admit we should, American workmen ought to do the manufacturing. Again, theoretically this will put both sides on an equal basis.

But no matter what our opinion on this question, there should be no feeling of animosity. The present situation, as already stated, is obvious—all partisan politics are abandoned, and the goal of both factions is, of course, peace.

Congress, indeed, has a heavy responsibility in deciding this question. Posterity will place blame or credit upon our representatives where either is due.

But there is also a responsibility for the students of Maryville college. Here in the mountains of East Tennessee, we feel as though war and all of its effects are thousands of miles away; in reality such things as the training of pilots is taking place on our own campus—a thing which is of course now entirely unconnected with war preparation, but which, if necessary, could easily be converted into a war measure. Our nation is definitely much nearer war than it was one month ago. These are actual facts, and we, as students, must not approach them with the usual indifference. It is our responsibility to keep apart from this indifference to current affairs, that is, to guard against one of the evils of college life, "academic isolation."

TALK OF THE WEEK . By Arlene Phelps

Miss Green Addresses Nature Club Thursday

Miss Susan A. Green addressed the first meeting of the Nature club last Thursday evening in Fayerweather hall on the subject, "The Important Part That Organisms Play in Everyday Life."

Also included on the program was a short talk by the president, Stanley Menning, in which he outlined the purpose of the organization, and, in addition mentioned several plans which had been made for the year. Included among these were a bird walk and a photography contest.

Other officers for the semester are Marion Garwood, vice president; Stanley Bird, secretary; and Larry Ketchum, program secretary.

Fifty Ministerials Meet

Last Monday evening about fifty prospective and old members of the Ministerial Association met in the YM rooms for a brief business and social meeting, the first of this year.

Robert Lamont opened the meeting with the invocation. Robert Thomson led the devotional service and Alf Davies closed the meeting with the benediction.

Next week, Dr. O. R. Tarwater will speak to the group. The Association meets every Monday evening in the YW rooms.

Triangle Club Elects

The first meeting of the Triangle club was held Tuesday evening, Sept. 26, in the philosophy classroom with about one hundred and fifty attending. Election of new officers was held and for the present year are as follows: president, Roland Anderson; vice president, George Tibbits; secretary, David Ident, George Tibbitts; secretary, David After the business meeting there was a short program during which George Tibbitts read "The Nightmare" by Sir William Gilbert, and David Hall taught new members the theme song of the club.

An invitation is extended to all students from Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York to join the club and enjoy the fellowship of Yankee companions twice a month.

Frosh To Take Course

Registration has been opened to all freshman men who wish to enter the Civil Aeronautics course. It appears that there will not be enough upperclassmen to fill the college quota, which is twenty. The director of curriculum understands that it is necessary to have no less than twenty, of which ten percent, or two may be women. It is now the plan to take a preferred number of freshmen to fill the class.

Don't go with:
Track men—they're too fast;
Football men—they'll tackle anything;
Swimmers—they're all wet;
Tennis players—they're all good rackets and play too many love games;
Baseball players—they're always taking time-outs and getting "out of bounds";
Dramatic students—they're much too showy;
Band players—they toot their horns too often.

KICKING THE BALL AROUND

By Doug Steakley

"Johnny Stone Day"

About the middle of this month, Maryville's claim to athletic fame, Johnny Stone, was honored by the American League ball clubs from Washington and Detroit, and the fans from the respective clubs. A day was set aside called "Johnny Stone Day." The proceeds of the game were presented to John Stone to help him regain his footing after his battle against an illness that kept him out of the major leagues for the past two seasons.

John Stone graduated from Maryville in 1928. When he left here, he was rated as one of the best athletes and best fellows ever to go to Maryville. He was captain of the baseball team, and the football team during his senior year. He had lettered in both sports for four years. He was regarded by coach and fan alike as one of the best boys ever to be a Maryville student.

Johnny was born in Mulberry, Tenn., Oct. 10, 1906. He attended Maryville four years and then started his baseball career by going to Evansville in the Three-I League. He stayed there one year before he went up to Detroit and to the "big leagues." During this time he married a daughter of one of Maryville's faculty, Prof. Ellis' daughter.

During his ten years of major leaguing he had a batting average of .313. He dropped below a .300 average only three times during his big league stay. We are extremely grateful to Prof. Ellis for the use of an official scorecard of "Johnny Stone Day" which he has in his possession, and we are only regretful that we cannot reprint the entire card, but lack of space forbids us to do so.

"In these days of overseas strife and struggle, of domestic unrest and anxiety, it is reassuring to see baseball fans call time from local, national, and international trouble, and from the low to the high, remember one of their "forgotten men." This is what the fans of Washington are doing today... the fans and the Washington and Detroit ball clubs. To stage 'Johnny Stone Day', they exhibited teamwork and this, in itself, fits into the picture today because Johnny would know all about teamwork.

"From the time he first broke into the American League back in 1929 with the Detroit Tigers, he was a team player. When the Tigers finally parted with him in December of 1933 they did so reluctantly. They knew it wasn't eas yto pick up team players of Stone's calibre.

"It was in June, 1938, when Johnny's playing days came to an unexpected close. The physicians discovered that Rocky was a sick man . . had been sick for months prior to the time they blew the whistle. There weren't many people in Griffith Stadium the day Manager Bucky Harris was forced to retire Stone from the line-up, but those who saw are not likely to forget quickly. Shortly before game time Stone was called to home plate and given a modest prize for being the most valuable Washington player the previous month.

"Stone walked back to the bench and sat on it. He never appeared in Harris' line-up again, although at the time nobody knew how ill he was. The fellow had been playing ball on nerve alone and all he had done was to stand out over 24 able-bodied teammates!

"The Nationals have missed Johnny Stone. They had good luck in developing since the time Johnny bowed out. George Case developed into one of the best lead-off hitters in baseball and the champion base stealer. Taft Wright finished 1938 in a blaze of glory, batting .350 for the nominal league leadership and is carrying on this year. But the Nats still miss Stone.

"The tall Tennessean was one of those players who did all things well, and in the pinches. He wasn't the hitter that Foxx is, the thrower that is DiMaggio, the fielder that is Sam West, or the base-stealer that is Case. But he combined all of these arts and the result was one of the best that ever wore Washington flannels.

"Stone's rise was the most rapid of all time. Detroit brought him up after he had batted .345 for Evansville, and Johnny finished the year for the Tigers with the identical average of .345. The Tigers, however, thought he needed a little more seasoning and in 1929 he was with Toronto, where he batted .329 until Detroit called him back later in the season.

"Thereafter Johnny was never out of the major leagues. He spent four years as Detroit's regular right fielder and when he was traded to Washington in the winter of 1933 for Goose Goslin, he was just hitting his peak, as his successive batting averages of .315, .315, .341, and .330 will attest.

"A rangy athlete, Stone stood six feet and weighed 180 pounds. He batted left handed and threw right. He was one of the most popular men on the club and one of the most quiet."

Major league record of John Stone—
Years—10; Games—1143; Runs—714; Hits—1339; Times at Bat—2019; RBI—679; SB—43; Average—.313.

Scot Eleven Favored Over Pioneers In First Conference Game Tonight

In tonight's game, the Highland football machine encounters Tusculum college at Greeneville. It is Maryville's first conference game of the season. Last week Tusculum turned in a poor performance against Mars Hill, losing 21-0, while Maryville chalked up a 7-0 victory over Union.

The Pioneers boast one of the most sought-after linesmen in the South, however, in Jim Britton. Britton is a freshman at Tusculum and will bear a great deal of watching.

Maryville journeys to Greeneville with an uninjured team, somewhat weak in reserves. Tusculum will be set for the "Stellar Scot" Hughes, who scored three touchdowns last season in the Pioneers' 28-0 shellacking.

The game will start at 8:00 at the Greeneville stadium. Maryville then returns home for next week's stand against Milligan.

YM Intra-murals Swing Into Action

Football Tournament Starts As Seniors Stomp Frosh, 37-0

The YMCA Athletic Committee has intra-mural sports in full swing now as the football schedule is posted. The tennis tournament is in its early rounds yet, and the potential winners are still obscure. Clem Hahn held the first meeting of a tumbling squad this week as Maryville's first organized tumbling prepares for exhibition.

In the opening game of this year's intra-mural football season, yesterday, the seniors mowed down the freshmen 37-0. The seniors doped (by themselves) to win the interclass football trophy this year made a powerful start. The Amos and Morrow guided lads scored almost at will, each touchdown by a different player.

"T" Etheredge drew first blood on a pass from Morrow. During the afternoon Woodring, Schreiber, Proctor, Morrow and Stevenson tallied for the graybeards. "Jeep" Amos at center scored the lone extra point. In the game, the senior eleven showed fancy passing and powerful running plays, especially difficult in touch ball.

Going down, the freshmen showed stuff in spots, including a couple of potential all-stars. At guard, Suiter of the frosh, blocked and charged until the seniors really took notice. Sweeny, Slaton, and Scapellati each turned in good games.

The next game in the intra-mural tournament is the soph-junior tilt scheduled for Tuesday.

Seniors Strut Past Laurals On Intra-mural Field

The seniors, dignified champs of the intra-mural athletic field, are talking of another winning season. They seem to have plenty of claim to swell their chests out, too. In the previous three years their class has set up an unprecedented record, and one that will be hard to break.

As mere freshmen way back in '36, the class finished its first season as swimming and track champs. Coming back as sophs, the next year, they swelled their laurels with three more championships, swimming again, baseball, and football (tie). They missed the interclass cup in a volley ball match. Volley ball has since been discontinued as the seniors began to have influence on the "Y".

Last year the class of '40 took all the tournaments except baseball. In the swimming meet they gained complete possession of the swimming cup. In football and basketball they were undisputed champs. With all these to their credit, they took over the interclass cup.

All this together, with additions, the seniors admit modestly, makes a formidable looking record. Participating for years back and again this year are Morrow, Woodring, Theron Etheredge, Herrick, Stevenson, Rae and Taylor. Captaining the seniors through this campaign is Steve Amos, who assures doubters that the seniors are the men with stuff this year, and probably next year.

Alpha Sigma Scores Victory Over Greeks

Last Saturday, the Alpha Sig society-men turned in a 20-0 victory over Athenian. The score is the most lop-sided in the Greek-Alpha Sig series.

The Alpha Sig group sported several intramural stars and a large group of reserves in the rout. Morrow and Etheredge turned in the best games of the afternoon. The scoring was done by Walker, Scapellati, and Howard.

Etheredge Scores On Third Quarter Pass For Lone Tally; Honaker And Hughes Turn In Stellar Games

Taking advantage of the breaks of the game, Coach Honaker's Maryville eleven passed her way to a 7-0 victory over Union college on Wilson field last Saturday night. Maryville scored her lone touchdown in the middle of the third quarter when Scot Honaker looped a 15 yard pass to Captain Joe Etheredge. Eluding the Union defensive end, Etheredge went up in the air to grab the ball on the 18 yard line and sprinted the remaining distance to the goal line untouched.

The set-up for the touchdown play came when Union attempted the old Statue of Liberty play on their 30 yd. line and was thrown for a 27 yard loss, Etheredge making the tackle. Ken Farmer, lanky Union end, then punted to Lloyd Taylor on the 45 yard line, and Taylor brought the ball to the 40 before being stopped. J. D. Hughes in two smashes brought the ball up to the 32 yard line. Honaker then called for a pass to Etheredge, who scored the winning touchdown. Morton missed the first attempt for extra point on a place kick, but Union was offside and on the second kick, Morton placed the ball between the uprights for the score.

The first half of the game saw the ball in Maryville territory most of the time, with Union continually bringing the ball as far as the 20 yard line, but being stopped on each attempt to penetrate further into Maryville territory. Maryville pushed the Bulldogs back on their 2 1-2 yard line in the closing minutes of play, but after two incomplete passes, Farmer ran the ball up to the Union 30 yard line. Frantic attempts to pass were stopped by the gun for the end of the game.

The outstanding stars on the field for Maryville were Honaker, Hughes, Etheredge, and Kramer. Honaker's punts kept the ball out of danger most of the time, and his superb quarter-backing brought the right plays up at the right time. J. D. Hughes played his usual hard driving game in the full back position for Maryville. His line-bucks were always good for five or six yards per thrust. Captain Etheredge showed the ability that made him a unanimous choice for all-conference honors last year. His running catch of the touchdown pass was as nice a bit of end playing you will see this year. Arnold Kramer lived up to his notice of being a one-man line in that he was in the play most of the time, making block after block, and tackle after tackle.

The outstanding player on the field was a Union man, Cartmill, who played center for the Bulldogs. He intercepted four passes out of the six that were thrown by the Scots. He made most of the tackles that were made behind his line. Cartmill lived up to his advance notices of being a choice for all-state in Kentucky.

Next week the Highlanders will go to Greeneville where they will meet Tusculum in the first conference encounter.

Point System Athletics For Girls To Start On October 2, With Soccer

All girls who are interested in the Point System are invited to attend the first meeting, which will be held in Bartlett auditorium, Monday afternoon at 3:00, at which time a full explanation of the System will be given.

The regular program will start Tuesday, Oct. 2, the first sport being soccer. The sports taken up during the year are both individual and team. Individual sports include tennis, swimming, stunts, aerial darts, track and field, and hiking; sports played by teams are soccer, basketball, volley ball, and indoor baseball. The program ends May 1, with track. Points are given not only for sports, but also for health records and scholastic averages. Honors are given in the form of monograms; 300 points, a Maryville college monogram "MC"; 400 points, a Maryville "M"; for 500 points, a Maryville "M" with a sweater.

The teams are made up of girls from each class; not just girls who are in the Point System, but any girls who are interested in the particular sports. To have a team, each class is required to have twice the number there are on the team, or that class loses by default. All games are interclass—freshman, sophomore, junior, and senior. The student body is invited at all announced games.

Elizabeth Ann Stone, a senior from California, is the coach this year, and predicts a good year for girls' sports.

New Faculty Member Is Elected Club Advisor

Mr. Archibald Pieper was elected faculty advisor of the Law club for the coming year at the usual bi-monthly meeting of the club held last Wednesday evening in Alpha Sigma hall. Mr. Pieper succeeds Dr. Claude A. Campbell, who served as faculty advisor up until his acceptance of a position in the department of economics at the University of Oklahoma.

Mr. Pieper received his bachelor of laws degree from the University of Texas and is now teaching in the department of political science here. Both of these factors make him extremely well suited to serve as advisor of the Law club.

Among the other items of business were the acceptance of Jean White, Jack Kramer, Edna Gleaton, and John A. Thompson as members of the club. A committee was appointed to work out details for the first moot trial.

After business was disposed of, Mr. Pieper made a short address on "Why I Want to be a Lawyer." Mr. Robert Gillespie, who holds the rank of sophomore at the University of Wisconsin Law school, also made a few comments on the profession of law.

YW Has Cabinet Dinner

Friday evening, Sept. 29, at 5:30 dinner was served in the YW rooms to the YWCA Advisory Board and the cabinet members. Members of the Advisory Board attending were Mrs. K. R. McMurray, Mrs. R. J. Dollenmayer, and Miss Jessie Johnson.

Carolina Club To Have First Meeting Monday

On Monday evening at 6:45 the Carolina club will have it's first meeting of the year in the philosophy classroom. All students who are from North or South Carolina are invited to attend the meeting. The program of the evening will be composed of get-acquainted games, and general initiation of new members. Margaret Bailey and Ned Sams are in charge of the evening's activities.

Carolina club consists of students whose homes are in North or South Carolina. At the present time there are thirty-five members in the club. The officers of the club are Eloise Zimmerman, president; Ethel Grubbs, vice president; Eleanor Long, secretary; and Earl Tweed, treasurer.

Library

chased, besides six complete sets of encyclopedias. Of special note is the large number of magazines and periodicals subscribed to by the library. This includes sixty-two magazines of general nature and 127 departmental magazines. Last year the library increased its number of books by 1425 and had an expenditure of some $3400 for books, magazines, binding and supplies. Book circulation totaled 72,765.

Patriarch and grand old man of the library is Mr. Horace Lee Ellis, excluding the college pastor, the eldest of the faculty members, and bearing the distinction of having the longest connection with the college—some 25 years. He was a graduate of Maryville college in the class of 1888, and dean and professor of Latin at Carson-Newman college. From 1914 to 1924, he was principal of the Maryville college preparatory school, and when the preparatory department was abandoned, took over his duties as librarian. He knows something of the contents of every book in the library! He is assisted by Miss Anna Lee Fortner.

The reading room also houses the college museum containing many valuable collections, and books of an early date. It has a seating capacity of 200.

French Club To Picnic

Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 4, at 4:15, the French club will have their annual fall picnic in the college woods. Arlene Barrett, Aline Campbell, Ann E. Biggs, and Margaret Peters are in charge of the program and the refreshments.

Also, at this time, the new members will be initiated into the organization. This will bring the total membership of the club up to the maximum limit of thirty students.

Bainonian

supervision of the affairs of the evening.

On Tuesday afternoon from 3:45 to 5:00 Bainonian entertained the new girls at a tea in the gym. Tea tables were covered with white and decorated with ivy, tuberoses and candles. Campus clothes were modeled by eight members of Bainonian as Sara Lee Hellums told where and by what types of girls the various costumes should be worn. Refreshments were served by waitresses wearing flowered dresses and yellow aprons.

As another bid to the new girls a picnic in the college woods was given by Bainonian on Thursday afternoon. After playing games the girls went to the picnic grounds where hot dogs and coffee were served.

"Gateways", YWCA Topic

On Sunday afternoon at 1:15 the YW CA will have its regular meeting in the Y rooms in the rear of Thaw hall. Helen Bewley, president of the organization will lead the thought of the group using as her subject: "Gateways." Miss Ruth Thompson, instructor in music, will sing "How Lovely Is The Hand of God," by Loughborough.

VOLUME 25 — MARYVILLE, TENN. OCTOBER 7, 1939 — NUMBER FOUR

Alexander Kipnis, Basso Will Open Artist Series Evening Of November Ninth

Four of Most Prominent Musicians of Today Will Appear At Maryville

HESS FEATURED LAST

Milanov and Carlsson To Be Presented in Joint Recital on January 22

Maryville college's artist series presents for the 1939-40 season four of the most oustanding musicians of today. The program includes Alexander Kipnis, basso; Zinka Milanov, dramatic soprano, and Carin Carlsson, contralto, in a joint recital; and Myra Hess, pianist.

Alexander Kipnis, famed Metropolitan basso, will open the series of concerts on the evening of Thursday, Nov. 9. Mr. Kipnis was born in Ukrainia, South Russia, and began his singing career as a boy soprano. Since that time he has sung in opera all over Europe and the United States. Prior to his coming to America, Mr. Kipnis was leading member of the famed Vienna Opera company.

Mr. Kipnis was introduced to the United States by the Chicago Civic Opera Co., in the early 1920's. Since coming to America, he has become a United States citizen and has married an American girl.

For the past two seasons, Mr. Kipnis has been heard at the International Music Festival in Lucerne at the invitation of Toscanini. Among his favorite operatic roles are Mephisto in "Faust" and Boris Godounow, Baron Ochs in Richard Strauss' "Rosenkavalier."

The second feature on the series is a joint recital by Zinka Milanov, dramatic soprano, and Carin Carlsson, contralto, which will be presented on the evening of Monday, Jan. 22, 1940.

Zinka Milanov made a sensational hit as soloist in Verdi's "Requiem" under Toscanini which was presented in Carnegie hall last year. She is much in demand as an opera singer and soloist for music festivals as well as in concert work.

Carin Carlsson makes her American debut this fall and has already received quite an ovation for her work in European opera companies. Maryville will be among the first cities in the United States to hear this gifted young contralto.

Charles L. Wagner, who introduced Jussi Bjoerling to America just two years ago, claims that Carin Carlsson has a rich, warm contralto that can only be ranked along with Schumann-Heink and Schalchi. Carin Carlsson signed a contract to come to America as early as 1936, but subsequent European engagements have prevented her from making her debut before 1940.

Myra Hess will be presented in a recital as the closing number of the series on the evening of Thursday, Feb. 22, 1940.

Myra Hess is unquestionably the most accomplished of present day women pianists and her name has become the epitome of finesse and virtuosity to the musician. A piano recital by her is a delightful musical treat that is not soon to be forgotten. She is called the poetess-pianist and technique with her is of importance only as a means of illuminating the ideas of the composer.

Malcolm Miller, music and drama critic for the Knoxville Journal, in commenting on the Maryville Artist series, states that Prof. Howell has booked, with canny selective judgment, an arresting program for the coming year.

Seventeen New Members In College Band This Season

Maryville college band has added seventeen new members this year and several of the old members have changed instruments. The additions are: Flutes—Martha Moore of Columbus, Ohio and Claire Messmer of Tenafly, N. J. Clarinets—Richard Gettys, sophomore of Ravenwood, W. Va. French horn—Robert Hopkins of Ardmore, Pa. Baritone—Ralph Parvin of Bradenton, Fla. Trombones—Floyd Kefauver of Knoxville and Glen Hewins. Drums—Richard Boyd of Trenton, N J., and Vernon Lloyd, junior of Maryville.

Trumpets—William Hargrave of Drexel Hill, Pa.; Robert King of Akron, Ohio; David Hall, sophomore of Hope-

Student Volunteer Group Meets At Maryville

The Council of the Tennessee Student Volunteer Union met on Sept. 30 on the campus of Maryville college. The meeting was called together by the president, John Thompson, who led in prayer for guidance and counsel. In the absence of the secretary, Lily Pinneo was appointed by the president to take the minutes for the meeting.

A communication from the associate secretary of the National Student Volunteer movement relative to the appointment of a member of the General Committee from Tennessee was read, and the Council voted to recommend the appointment of the president to this position.

During a discussion of the possibilities of the International Consultation to be held at Toronto, Dec. 27-Jan. 1, the question was raised as to whether it was advisable to send delegates to a conference held in a country which is at war with other nations. The Council voted to send delegates, and the president was empowered to make the appointments.

Morrow, Baird, Crawford Head Student Council

Frank Morrow, a senior from Anniston, Ala., was elected president of the Student Council at its first meeting of the year held last Tuesday evening in Thaw hall auditorium. At the same time, Boydson Baird of Kilbourne, O., was elected vice president, and Ruth

FRANK MORROW

Crawford of Maryville was selected as secretary of the Council.

Morrow, a biology major and assistant, is a letterman of two years on the tennis squad, playing in the first slot his sophomore year. In addition to this, the president is a member of Hi Trail and Alpha Sigma.

Baird, a junior, is a two letterman of basketball, and has also lettered in football and track. Besides this he is a member of Hi Trail and Athenian.

Ruth Crawford, a senior, the new secretary, is a Nu Gamma leader this year, member of the "M" club and Bainonian. She was a sophomore representative in the annual May Day two years ago.

The newly elected president says that the Student Council this year will seek close cooperation between the faculty and students, in order to maintain the ideals of Maryville college. It was stated also that the Council will adopt a conscientious approach to all problems relating to school activities and affairs.

The publications committee, social committee and the student-faculty committee will be appointed at the next meeting of the Council.

Three New Planes Arrive At Airport For Use By U-T And Maryville C.A.A. Pilots

Three new planes have recently arrived at the airport from Lockhaven, Pa., for use in the civilian pilot training course. There will be nine Cubs for use by about a hundred students at Maryville college and the University of Tennessee.

Forty people have applied here and about thirty of these were allowed to take the physical examination last week. Their cards will be sent to Washington to the Civil Aeronuatics Authority for approval. Upon their return here the applicants will be examined by a flight surgeon who is licensed under the C.A.A. This will include tests for color blindness, vision, depth perception, and coordination of the eyes. Tests for sense of balance are also very important and applicants will be asked to stand on one foot with the eyes closed and many others. They will be given a private or a commercial rating, and it is understood that students here must have a commercial rating to take the course. Miss Louise Carson recently took the test to get her license renewed.

Chapel Speech Nets 425 Subscriptions For 1940 Chilhowean

Philip Evaul Announces Pictorial Cross-Section Of Campus in Yearbook

Four hundred and twenty-five subscription cards for the 1940 Chilhowean were turned in on Thursday morning following a speech in chapel, by Phil Evaul, business manager of the Chilhowean. Those signing subscription cards, distributed among the students before chapel, agreed to buy the Chilhowean and were given the opportunity of paying for it in three installments. The first payment will be due on or before Oct. 14, and will be one dollar. The second payment of two dollars will be due on Feb. 3. These collection dates correspond to dates for payment of board and semester bills and may be made just outside the treasurer's office. The final payment of one dollar will be due upon delivery of the Chilhowean.

An outstanding feature of the 1940 yearbook will be a large pictorial section covering some twenty-five pages and exhibiting a cross-section of Maryville college life from the campus, dormitory and classroom. These informal snapshots, grouped three or four to the page, will be taken by student and professional photographers during the year.

In his talk on Thursday morning, Evaul urged students to order copies

Seniors And Juniors Elect Yearbook Sponsors And Sophs Nominate for Honor

Due to the fact that there was not a quorum present Wednesday morning when the sophomore class met to elect representatives to the Chilhowean staff, class sponsor and student council members, the meeting was adjourned, and the class will meet next Wednesday morning after chapel. The nominations to the Chilhowean staff are: Frank Cross, Charlotte Colby, Ruth Duggan, Anne Gammon, Don Kent, Arling O. Kressler, Marion Jenkins, Eloise McNeeley. Student Council representatives are to be elected from the following nominees: Hilton Wick, David Kidder, Dudley Moore, and Eloise McNeeley, and Mary Alice Grubb. Nominees for sponsor are Peggy Carter, Catherine Walters, Jean Blake, Phyllis Heaton, Mary Elizabeth Karg, and Mary Alice Grubb.

The three upper classes held elections Wednesday morning for the election of the class sponsors for the 1940 Chilhowean. The pictures of these sponsors will appear in the annual and their names will not be disclosed until the annual is distributed.

For the sponsor of the senior class, those nominated by the nominating committee, which consisted of Ruth Crawford, Frank Morrow, and Russell Stevenson, were Charlotte Moughton, Edith Evans, and Paula Martin. At the meeting, Jane Law and Ruth Crawford were nominated from the floor.

The junior class chose their sponsor from the following: Ruth Andrews, Louise Wells, Carmen Archilla, and Anne Abel.

Private Life Of "Tack' Disclosed

By JEAN WHITE

"Where is Tack? Have you seen her? No? Well, neither have I." And at that point this reporter had to go sleuthing to find out what had become of Tack, our veteran college classmate and daily companion.

In a certain city in Indiana in the year 1930, a young lady was instructor of the kindergarten in the city schools. This being one of the earlier and most severe years of the depression, supplies for the department were very limited and sometimes impossible to get. This teacher sent to the superintendent an order for thumb-tacks for her room and received in return, not a carton of boxes of tacks, but one five cent box.

In the same year in the same city was a child, a member of the kindergarten, who possessed a beautiful German Police dog. This dog was the mother of a family of lovely puppies—all lovely except one. Most families (and dog families not excepted) must have either a "black sheep", a "dumb bell" or a "runt", and this family was no exception. One was little, scrawny, and unattractive—the exception that proved the rule. The question arose then as to what should be done with the poor little runt that spoiled the appearance and chances for sale of the litter.

The child had heard his teacher say that she loved dogs, so he took the puppy to her. Next morning there was a new member of the kindergarten family. The newest member entered with a tag bearing the name "Depression," and it was on this same day that the box of tacks arrived. To this teacher of a room full of children and a meager supply of materials, "Depression" and the little box of tacks were synonymous. Thus, the origin and naming of the late Tack, the adorable, much loved nuisance of Maryville college.

Tack never attended the elementary grades nor high school, but in 1936 she entered Maryville college. Not a very regular attendant her freshman year, with each succeeding year she was ever present. Not only did she attend classes with increasing regularity, but

Wintermute, Brink, Allen, Spurlock, Ward, Phelps Take Leads In "Our Town"

Mrs. West Releases Cast For College Players This Morning

STAFF ANNOUNCED

Fisher, Cornelius, Tapp, Young, Berg, Anderson, West Head Production

The cast for "Our Town", the first play of the dramatic season at Maryville, to be presented on the evening of Nov. 17, by college players, was released by Mrs. West this morning. Those taking the leads in the play are John Wintermute, Frank Brink, Louise Allen, Mary Frances Spurlock, Carol Ward, and G. H. Phelps.

The complete cast of the play is: stage manager, John Wintermute; Dr. Gibbs, Frank Brink; Joe Crowell, Richard Boyd; Howie Newsome, David Hall; Mrs. Gibbs, Louise Allen; Mrs. Webb, Mary Frances Spurlock; George Gibbs, William Gehres; Rebecca Biggs, Betty Lee Wilde; Emily Webb, Carol Ward; Prof. Willard, Edward Thomas; Mr. Webb, G. H. Phelps; Woman in the Balcony, Esther McCollum; Lady in the Box, Ruth West; Sam Craig, Maurice Rorex; Joe Stoddard, Erwin Ritzman; Mrs. Soames, Troy Moore; extras, Marianne Coleman, Ruth Cathcart, June Morley, Josephine Farr, Elizabeth Glover, Anita Raeburn, Carlyle Collins, and Betty Clevenger.

There are also several other parts in the play that have not as yet been assigned, but they will probably be filled some time during the next week.

The production staff as announced, is production manager, John Fisher; stage manager, Sam Cornelius; electrician, Roland Tapp; business manager, Glenn Young; sound effects, Virginia Berg; assistant stage manager, Ruth West; and Music director, Barbara Anderson.

"Our Town," by Thornton Wilde, is rated as one of the biggest successes on the stage in several years and is second to none in its uniqueness and originality.

Dr. Chas. Washburn To Dedicate New Song Books at YM

Editor of New YM Song Books Will Conduct Service Here

At its regular worship service tomorrow evening the YMCA will dedicate the hundred new hymn books recently purchased for the use of the organization. The special guest will be Dr. Charles C. Washburn, of Nashville, the editor of the hymnal. He will have complete charge of the service, directing the singing of the hymns, introducing the new ones in the book, and telling how he came to write those hymns of his own composition which are included in the book.

Dr. Washburn is director of music at Scarritt college in Nashville, and an outstanding musical leader in the Methodist church. He was one of the editors of the recently revised Methodist hymnal, and is much in demand as an authority on hymnology. He is coming to Maryville on the invitation of the YMCA especially for this service.

"The New Abingdon Song Book" was issued by the Methodist Book Concern in Cincinnati in 1938. It contains three hundred and seventeen hymns or arrangements of hymns, and is made up of many new and old favorites of the church. A special feature is the section of ten negro spirituals arranged for worship use. In his preface, Dr. Washburn states the purpose of the hymnal as an attempt to emphasize two aspects of worship—"that of worship in the Spirit, and worship in activity, brotherhood, and service." It has been prepared with the thought that it will be used by young people, and is thus well adapted to the use of the YMCA.

Faculty Round Table On American Peace Features I.R.C. Meeting Thursday

Four members of the Maryville college faculty will participate in a round table conference at the International Relations club next Thursday evening at 6:45 in Thaw hall auditorium on the subject, "Will There Be a Blackout of Peace in the United States?" Those engaging in the conference will be Dr. Edwin R. Hunter, Prof. Verton M. Queener, Dr. H. E Orr, and the new assistant professor of economics, Paul F. Wendt. The leader of the discussion is to be Paul Akana, member of Writers' Workshop and close student of international affairs.

The program will be somewhat similar to a radio broadcast on this subject sponsored by the University of Chicago late last month. The purpose of the conference is to present a calm analysis of faculty opinion on current affairs.

After an audience vote at the last meeting to effect that the arms embargo should not be repealed, Prof. R. J. Dollenmayer paid the charges of a telegram to Senator McKellar of Tennessee stating that this was an excellent indication of both student and faculty opinion.

Also, at this same meeting, Archibald Pieper, new instructor in political science and assistant in debate, was appointed the faculty adviser for the year.

Twenty-Eight Report For Debate Try-outs

Twenty-eight debaters, including practically all of last year's championship varsity squad, are meeting twice a week in the philosophy classroom to discuss debating and to give practice speeches. Meanwhile about forty freshmen, under the direction of Mr. Archibald Pieper, are learning the fundamentals of public speaking. Several good prospects have turned out for both the freshman and varsity teams.

It has been reported that the Pi Kappa Delta question will be "Resolved: that the United States should follow a policy of strict (economic and military) isolation toward all nations outside the Western Mehisphere.

Queener Chicks Win Firsts At Fair In Poultry Debates

"Dinner of Champions" may seem a rather aristocratic name for a handful of corn, but that is just what it may be called during the feeding time of Prof. Verton M. Queener's chickens, for it was to his Buff Orpingtons that the Grand Championship Prize was given at the Blount County Fair recently. The poultry division would probably have proved interesting and educational to some who might have had the mistaken idea that only prize-fighters and debate teams could be champions.

At the Fair, Mr. Queener exhibited 21 of his choice chickens, showing them either singly or three in a pen. When the prizes were awarded to the best specimens of each breed, everyone of his pens received a prize. Because there were no other Buff Orpinton chickens at the Fair, the competition was not keen; and his hens received every award given for that particular breed. But these honors were slight, compared with the Grand Championship award the Orpingtons won in competition with all other breeds exhibited at the Fair, among which were such well known champs as the Rhode Island Reds, White Leghorns, Frizzly Bantams, and Plymouth Rocks.

The Buff Orpington is, basically, a large chicken — the hens weighing around seven pounds, and the roosters around eight pounds. It is a two-purpose bird, famous not only for its eggs, but also, and to a greater extent, for its excellent eating possibilities. At heart it is a gentle bird, imbued with all the qualities found in the peace-loving poultry. The Buff Orpinton is one of the best bred in the country, and traces its ancestry back to England; which undoubtedly makes it doubly fascinating to Prof. Queener.

This marks the sixth year Mr. Queener has pursued his hobby of poultry raising, and he considers it one of his most attractive, if most expensive hobbies. He formerly was interested in the Plymouth Rock breed,

Apperceptive Appreciation

"Appreciation," says Irwin Edman, "is the intelligent apprehension of what is significant and meaningful in a picture or poem in pictorial and poetical terms, what emotions are relevant to that aesthetic impression, what light or meaning it throws over other experiences including those not properly regarded as aesthetic."

A college community is a place most conducive to the cultivation of appreciation, and if this faculty is not developed it is in many instances the fault of the person himself. An inherent love for the best in music, poetry, or art is not appreciation until it has been developed to some degree of understanding. The most enraptured person at a symphony concert may not be really appreciating the music. His enjoyment may be only because the selection has a familiar theme or strikes a familiar strain (as, for example, the "Goin' Home" theme of Dvorak's New World Symphony.) It is not appreciation, properly speaking, until he hears the homesickness, longing, plaintivness of the symphony and knows what there is in the music that makes him recognize its deeper aspects. Until he can properly understand music enough to be aware of the depths in it, the critic is in no position to pass judgment. The same thing applies to poetry and art, and perhaps could be carried to any field suggested.

A liberal arts college offers excellent opportunities for the cultivation of appreciation with its courses in music, art, and dramatic art properly labelled appreciation courses. The rewards of this pursuit after knowledge, in addition to higher critical faculties, are a deeper love and fuller understanding of those fields in which the student is trying to broaden himself. It is a pursuit worth the effort.

THINK—

We were much impressed the other day when we visited an insurance office to find on the wall as the only decoration and the most outstanding feature on which our eyes ever focused the one word, "THINK", printed in large letters. We had never been confronted by just such an idea before, and we rather took a fancy to it. Perhaps you, too, would feel the same way if you should walk into your own room someday and be confronted with those five letters, THINK, which seem to convey so much meaning.

To college students as we are, there is little doubt but that such a motto would be a good one. We are often so thoughtless about the things we do ourselves and the things that we do to others. But perhaps some of us do think and therein lies some of our trouble. We think of those things which we wish we had done, the things we didn't try our hand at when we had the opportunity. Upperclassmen wish they were freshmen so that they might do it over again and really think of the benefit they would receive. They are thinking now of the things they wish they had thought about when they were freshmen.

Would we have enjoyed debate, glee club, point system, YWCA, YMCA, or any other clubs if we had thought long enough to join in these activities? We can never know until we have tried these once. It is still not too late for most of us to take our place in some of these activities and many of us have another year or so in which to do this. But don't let these opportunities slip by. THINK, and you will not make such a mistake.

We don't mean to encourage you to join every club possible, but we do think that you ought to show your talents and increase them in every way possible. THINK of the possibilities that various activities afford you and do your best to take advantage of these so that you will not regret your hasty decisions later.

ECHO-HUMOR

By DON KENT

Last week, "Commentator" Hunt had a guest columnist, Mr. Webster, who, according to the headline, hates war. Hoping that Hunt won't mind our borrowing his idea, we, too, have a guest columnist this week, Mr. Akana, roommate of the war-hating Mr. Webster and student of international affairs in his own right. Incidentally, you'll see that ★ ★ ★ Mr. Akana Hates War, Too!

"Produce a man who can twenty miles an hour for any length of time, under any circumstances."

The author failed to suggest just where such a superman could be found, but the possibilities of his idea were so staggering that we immediately began a study of the system. After many weeks of research, therefore, we have finally reached a glorious conclusion.

A man running the 100 in 10 seconds does approximately 20 mph. Now, such a man can be found on almost every track team in the country; and, if he could be induced (the method of inducement has not yet been decided) to continue his running for any length of time, under any circumstances, the worries of the world would be over. For, logically enough, this superman could overcome and destroy any obstacle in his way. Oceans, walls, bullets, men would be nothing to him, and, in a comparatively short time, the enemy would be conquered. (Just who the enemy should be and what the runner is going to do after peace has been established are problems which will take another ten years of research for solution.) We have estimated that, in this manner, the present European catastrophe would be over in two years, were the runner to start his crusade from Knoxville at 5 a.m. tomorrow morning.

For many who read this, the idea will no doubt hold no significance. But let us remember that such a dream as this costs less than the League of Nations or Peace Conferences, and probably has just about as much chance of fulfillment.

Our motto, therefore, is, not "Fifty a week at sixty!" or "Thirty dollars every Thursday!" or "Fifty-four forty or fight!" but "20 mph!".

This is the grave of Isaac Anderson..
I sit on the marble slad that tells his history and contemplate,
In this place of death,
On life.
The stars are one kind of light you have to look up to see.
The lightning bugs another, flickering all around; they do not like
A cemetery.
The only really light thing in a

Are the tombstones.
They stand out starkly.

There is a tree boys will never swing from,
And evergreens that will never have tinsel hanging from

And no one likes to disturb Trees,
In a cemetery.

There are bees and bugs in the bushes
That sound like rushing water in a stream in the Smokies.
The only noise in a Cemetery,
And they have a dulling, droning sound.
Far off some children shout at play,
And a radio blares on Indiana Avenue,
But that doesn't matter, for its quiet
In a cemetery,
I guess noise only matters when it's in yourself.

You would find my friend, Mr. N. A. White, very interesting. He lives now in the Tennessee mountains a few miles above Tellico Plains, in a cabin which he and Mrs. N. A. built, chunking the logs together themselves with mud. He used to live in Chattanooga where he was a carpenter, and during the war he worked in the Philadelphia shipyards. But something irrational and romantic in him, and the arrival of a depressing depression, sent him to the mountains to live happily on what he could get from a small farm and now, in his sixties, on his pension from the government. He spends most of his time writing poetry and being correspondent for the nearby newspaper ("My wife celebrated her birthday the other day with several good ears of boiled corn.") His most interesting hobby was corresponding with people all over the world. In years past when he could afford money for postage, he wrote and heard from people in Scotland, Sweden, Australia, and other lands. He got the keenest enjoyment out of corresponding with young girls who called him "Allen." He sent them pictures of some young friend of his, and then the girls wrote back, "How I'd love to run my fingers through your curly hair!" (And Mr. N. A., with a sheepish, but mischievous grin, runs his fingers over his almost bald head as he tells it.) Finally, when the girls got too enamoured he told them he had been sent to Colorado for his health and would write when he gets a forwarding address. Yes, I think you would like my friend, Mr. N. A. White.

The license afforded me by having my name at the top of this column gave me courage to print the above adventure in free verse. Perhaps it will give you the suggestion that I would like to print your attempts at poetry in the column if they are of high enough caibre to maintain the lofty standard we herein defend.

of the Chilhowean promptly. Only one order will be sent in at the first of the year and after that time no additional copies may be secured. Those wishing to fill out subscription blanks may obtain them from Doug Steakley, Philip Evaul, Paul Brown or any of the members of the Chilhowean staff. Cards may be turned in to staff members or at the Chilhowean office.

The senior section of the yearbook opened last Saturday and will close on Oct. 14. Pictures must be 3½ by 5 in. glossy prints with head measurement of 2 inches. Portarits will not be made this year by any but professional photographers.

Students purchasing a copy of the Chilhowean will be entitled to their picture in the yearbook free of charge. Pictures must be turned in by the individual and if on the files of Webb studio, may be obtained for 35 cents. Those not buying Chilhoweans will have to pay for the space occupied by the picture and printing costs.

A feature of the subscription drive will be the placing of thermometers about the campus to indicate the number of subscriptions turned in.

The opening of the junior section will be announced immediately following the close of the senior section.

one could find her wandering around in the labs just as much at home with her surroundings—and more so—than some of the students. Her favorite haunts seemed to be in Thaw and Fayerweather, but on the whole she divided her time fairly equal between science, languages, and the other classes.

Tack must have had an artistic soul, for many is the time she walked through the half-open door or lay outside to hear the bi-weekly programs presented by the Disc club. And it might be added that Tack, as do many of our students now, did not let her college education interfere with her college life. She liked sports, both indoor and out, and regularly attended basketball games in the gym and eagerly watched tennis matches by the Memorial courts. As another extra-curricular activity, she chaperoned the girls around the loop, five, seven, or eleven miles, whichever it might be, with no complaint as to distance or roughness of the road.

In May, 1939, Tack finished her college course here at Maryville, and went where all good dogs go.

Freshmen Try For Echo

At a meeting held on Wednesday afternoon of this week, thirty-two freshmen, trying out for the Highland Echo staff, were given assignments. The judging of these assignments will be the final step in determining the twelve persons to fill the vacancies.

These thirty-two have been chosen by a committee on a merit basis of their technique and skill on English themes.

Pieper to be YW Speaker

The YWCA will hold its regular weekly meeting Sunday afternoon at 1:15 p.m. in the YW rooms. Mr. Archibald Pieper will discuss "America's Attitude Toward the Present European Situation." Eugene McCurry will sing "In a Monastery Garden" with violin obligato by John Guinter.

Triangle Meets Tuesday

An important meeting of the Triangle club will be held Tuesday evening, 6:45, in the philosophy classroom in Thaw hall. The purpose of the meeting is to discuss plans for the annual Triangle club picnic which in the past has been one of the outstanding club events of the year, and which the Triangulars hope to make even bigger this year.

The club will be entertained at the meeting by the golden-voiced tenor of the college, Dick Woodring, and several impersonations of the more humorous movie stars by Dave Hall and Alfred Davis.

EXTRA POINTS

By Frank Cross, Sports Editor

MORTON HURT . . . .

Coming out of the Tusculum game with flying colors, the Scots had one mishap which will handicap them most of the season. George Morton, steady blocking wingback, got a crack on the ankle which will be slow to mend. The ankle is diagnosed as a severe sprain. In tonight's battle against Milligan, Jackson and Kindred will probably take over Morton's duties.

MILLIGAN ACES . . . .

Looking over the lineup for Milligan, we missed Howington, the Buff's flash at fullback last year. We found him off in a corner with the scrubs. He is one of the finest fullbacks ever to play against Maryville, and will give the boys trouble with his power plays again this year. Another ace, Milligan isn't starting, is Burton, a triple-threat halfback. Steve Lacy seems to have a couple of aces up his sleeve.

TEMPORARY TRACKMEN . . . .

If you see anyone running around in track clothes, who obviously will never burn any cinders off the track, put in down in your little book that its one of Coach Fischbach's mermen. The swimming team has gone modern this year and taken up a system already used by some of the coaches of America's best splash squads. The boys run a mile or so and use special dry land exercises for a month before they even get a try in the water.

SUPERMAN . . . .

Coach Thrower says that 9.6 track men come to a small school very, very seldom, and that he can assure the Maryville track fans that one won't be at Maryville this year. Some rumors to the contrary have been running around about a superman for Maryville, but as far as your scribe can predict, there won't be any man this year who can even fill Sutton's shoes.

CONGRATULATIONS . . . .

The sports staff takes off it's hat to Clemmy Hahn this week. Clemmy is whipping together Maryville's first tumbling team. A public showing will come at the Barnwarming.

TENNIS PROSPECTS . . . .

The Y Tennis Tournament is progressing slowly, but is showing some dandy prospects for the varsity team. We pick Oliver Van Cise, Van's little brother, to carry away the trophy. The finals will probably be between Freshman Kidder and Freshman Van Cise, and that looks plenty good to Coach Fischbach. . . . . .

PEP . . . .

With the Maryville band and pep squad trying to awaken a little spirit in the old alma mater, it's the style this week, to join the Orange and Garnet, twin student rooting sections. There will be new yells and plenty of fun. Let's everybody sit down near the band stand, tonight, and give the team the best support our lungs can muster.

HONAKER To ETHEREDGE . . . .

Maryville sports a pass combination this year, which will be hard to forget. The Honaker to Captain Etheredge touchdown passes have counted for most of Maryville's points this season, as well as providing spectacular play. With both boys in top shape, look out Milligan!

Scot Footballers Romp Over Pioneers By A 26-0 Margin

"Baby" Baird Sprints 80 Yards In Conference Victory; Etheredge Stars

Beautifully executed aerials and spine-tingling land jaunts featured the 26-0 drubbing of Tusculum by Maryville, last Saturday. The game gave the Highlanders a lead in the Smoky Mountain Conference, as they return home this week to meet a strong Milligan team.

The Scotties started fast. After a play and penalty after the kickoff, the boys marched down the field from the 41. Baird, in the best game of his 3 years, took off around tackle for 25 yards to set up the touchdown try. Then the old sleeper play, Honaker to Etheredge, was good for the extra yardage and six points. Hughes converted the point.

The Pioneers received the kickoff and immediately punted. "Baby" Baird at safety kicked up his heels and slung mud for 78 yards for the second touchdown of the first quarter. The Pioneers came back in the second with a touchdown threat against the Scot second team. Cragan, however, arrested the drive when he caught Heinz at the end of a 40 yard run. Tusculum fumbled on the next play.

In the second half of the ball game, Heinz again led the Pioneers deep into Maryville territory. A thirty-five yard pass, Heinz to McClay, put the ball on Maryville's five yard stripe. Their attack bogged down again, however, and Maryville drove back down the field. Later in the quarter, the Honaker-Etheredge combination worked once again, this time from the Tusculum thirty. Etheredge took the ball out of the hands of three defenders and sneaked over.

In the last quarter, the Highlanders finished their night's work. Etheredge intercepted a Pioneer lateral and as he approached the goal line he latereaied to Hughes who trotted across to boost Maryville's final score to 26 points to Tusculum's zero.

For Maryville, Etheredge and Baird turned in top games and points Honaker's toe was accurate and his passes bull's-eyes. The Maryville line mowed down would-be tacklers in far better fashion than they did against Union.

For Tusculum, Heinz tood way out from his team-men. His passing and running kept the game from being a sheer rout. Captain Heyse, at end, looked good on pass receiving, and on defense. Coach Johnny Falls substituted freely and showed some good underclass and freshman material.

GEORGE MORTON, Halfback

Scottie Swimmers Begin Early Training For Biggest Season

Coach Fischbach's 1940 swimming team met this week in their preliminary workouts. Prospects look good as eight lettermen return. Captain Findlay and David Heydinger are helping coach a squad of twenty-five.

The team loses only three lettermen from last year, George Felknor, Birmingham and Stevenson. Returning, are Akana, Ritzman, Findlay, Lee, Wilcox, Heydinger, Cross, and Crane. There is a possibility that both Birmingham and Stevenson will go out later in the season.

The team is better balanced, as prospects go, than it has been for several years. However, no position is by any means taken, and Coach Fischbach is urging all swimmers to report for practice any time next week.

Beginning early, the practices will be out of water this month. This is a new method of swimming training which has been adopted.

With last year's team intact, with a fine group of freshmen swimmers reporting, and with Coach Fischbach at the coaching head again, the Scottie mermen should have their best season in years.

Interclass Football

The seniors made it two straight yesterday, in trimming the sophs 7-0 on the practice field. It gives them the only two victories in the entire tournament.

The lone score was made by Stevenson, who dragged down a looping forty yard pass, from Morrow. The extra point was converted by a pass, Etheredge to Rae.

The game was one of the closest and roughest seen for a long time on the touch field. The seniors scored early and had a battle on their hands from then on. For the seniors, the backfield stood out as usual. Woodring and Rae at the flanks, played fine ball. On the sophomore lineup, Scappellati stayed in every play. In the soph backfield, a new man was uncovered, Alexander, a dandy defensive and blocking half. Goley and Howard also looked good for the losing soph squad.

The Juniors and sophs fought to a 6-6 deadlock last Thursday, killing the chances of both to threaten the senior lead.

The juniors went out ahead in the first half on a pass, Findlay to Hahn. The play was run from deep in soph territory.

In the second half the sophs drove deep into junior territory on passes and penalties, to set up a touchdown try on the one yard line. McGaha came back from tackle, faked a pass and slanted off end for the tying score.

Milligan Buffaloes To Give Maryville First Real Test In Tonight's Game

Scotties In Top Shape For First Conference Game To Be Played Here; Morton Is Out

The Milligan Buffaloes go up against the Orange and Garnet tonight, in the first conference game to be seen at Maryville this year.

The Buffs seek revenge from last year's trampling when the Honakermen set them down by a 15-0 count. Steve Lacey's team has plenty of experience, weight and ability to give Maryville their hardest game of the season. Their reputation, as always being a tough team, has been borne out this year in their first game, in which they took Cumberland U. Last week was an open date at Johnson City, so the team is well rested, and ready to take on the Scotties.

Maryville is a vastly improved team, however, and will go into the game fit as a fiddle. Last year, "Schoolboy" Hughes kept them on their ear for sixty minutes, and Honaker chalked up a big share of the points. This year the Buffaloes will see plenty of this backfield combination again. The Scots have only one regular out of the game, Morton.

Probably the strongest point of the Milligan team is their backfield quartet. Pike at quarter, a veteran and captain of the team will give trouble on the broken field; Burton, the half who made the longest gain made against the Scotties last year, is back; and Howington, probably the best man in the Buff lineup, is trying for all-conference honors at fullback.

Maryville should dominate the line play, and have an edge in the air.

The kickoff is scheduled for 8:00 at Wilson Field.

Seashore Tests For Music Ability Given 50 Students

All students who are taking accredited courses in music were given the Seashore Tests of Musical Ability last Wednesday evening. Other persons interested were also given opportunity to take the test. Approximately fifty persons reported for the examination which was held in the Fine Arts studio.

Six elements of musical ability are measured by laboratory tests which have been developed by Dr. C. E. Seashore of the Iowa State university. These elements are: tonal memory, pitch discrimination, intensity discrimination (degree of loudness), time discrimination, sense of rhythm (rhythm memory), and sense of consonance (judgment of harmony). The examination may be made up of any combination of these six elements—at Maryville all six are used. The time required for the test is about an hour and a half.

Miss Davies and Miss Horne, of the Department of Fine Arts, gave preliminary explanations of the purpose of the tests and John Guinter was in charge of administering the complete examination. Jack Gilmore assisted Guinter in handling the test materials which consisted of six double-faced records carrying the actual musical tones of the tests.

Law Club Hears Debate

A debate on the third term question will be the feature of the bi-monthly meeting of the Maryville college Law club next Wednesday evening in Thaw hall auditorium at 6:45. Arnold Kramer will take the affirmative of the proposition that Roosevelt should have a third term, while John Ballenger will take the negative of the same question. There is to be also an opportunity for other members of the organization to discuss the subject.

During a short introductory business session, definite plans are to be made for the annual fall picnic and, in addition, a moot trial.

well, N. J.; Josephine Gillette of Vineland, N. J.; Margaret McKirdy of Morristown, N. Y.; Kay Davis of Massillon, Ohio; William Pitrvis of Franklin, Pa.; and Edward Kidder of China.

Twirlers—Virginia Beth Sperry of Galva, Ill., Lynn Bell of Powell's Station, Tenn.; and Dudley Moore, sophomore of Lorain, Ohio. Dudley was in the drum section last year.

These additions give the band a membership of fifty, including the drum major and the sponsor, managed by Sam Cornelius, a junior of Pittsburgh, Pa. He was elected to succeed Vernon Lloyd. Nina Margaret Husk was elected secretary-treasurer.

French Club Has Picnic

About thirty members of the French club met in the college woods Wednesday evening for a picnic and social get-together. After supper, four new members, Normia Freas, Mary Alice Grubb, Robert Wilcox and Hilton Wick, elected Wednesday morning into the club, were initiated. Miss Cowdrick, Miss Wilkinson, Mr. and Mrs. Hovel, and Mr. and Mrs. Smith were chaperones.

Main attraction was "devils-on-horseback", apples, pickles, toasted marshmallows, and cocoa.

New Members At Carolina

The Carolina club met on Monday evening in the philosophy classroom. Since this was the first meeting of the new members, a get-acquainted program had been planned. Each member introduced himself to the group and told something about his home town. The meeting was closed with the singing of "Carolina Moon." The next meeting will be held on Monday evening, October 16.

The Gone With the Wind craze has at last hit Maryville! We see now, candy in the form of the famous book is here. For further details see the City Drug Co.'s ad elsewhere in the paper.

this is the first time it has carried off Buff Orpintons. His poultry has been exhibited before at several fairs, but thi sis the first time it has carried off any honors. After inspecting the poultry division, and Orpington breeds in particular, at the Knoxville Fair, Mr. Queener modestly opined that his chickens could retain their Championship title in a match with any of them.

NEWS REVIEW

German Air Force Chamberlain's Speech Intervention Asked

Monday, Oct. 9

The Department of Agriculture has announced that the Commodity Credit Corporation will finance the purchase of 40 million dollars worth of this year's flu-cured tobacco crop.

The program which has received administration approval was designed to meet a market crisis caused by the withdrawal of foreign buyers when the outbreak of war made exchange more difficult.

Wednesday, Oct. 11

The German air force, in what is considered by some observers to be one of the most important German announcements since the fall of Warsaw, was ordered to intensify aerial attacks on British warships in the North Sea. The air force has also been instructed to aid the navy in harassing British vessels.

As a Finnish delegation arrived in Moscow to talk with Russian leaders, Finland called up her army to meet an attack if the Red army should suddenly advance on her borders. Russian troops and war equipment are massed on Finland's frontiers.

The Bezbozhnik, official newspaper of the Russian anti-religious movement, announced that the Red army killed a large number of Roman Catholic and Greek Orthodox priests when Soviet troops invaded the White Russian sector of Poland.

The news report said that church and monastery lands have been divided among workers and peasants in accordance with communistic policy.

Thursday, Oct. 12

Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain bluntly rejected Hitler's peace terms in a speech before the House of Commons, and warned Germany that an end of the Nazi system is the only price of peace the Allies will consider.

Premier Daladier of France rejected the German offer Tuesday.

The British Ministry of Supply and a Soviet delegation concluded a trade agreement by which Britain will exchange rubber and tin for Russian timber. Many observers expect the Anglo-Russian barter agreement to have important political significance.

Friday, Oct. 13

Adolf Hitler indirectly asked President Roosevelt to intervene in the European conflict by urging Britain and France to confer with the German Reich. If there it not early response in this direcetion, the Fuehrer declared that Germany would begin the war in earnest and would fight to the end.

The German dictator indicated that unless something was immediately to end the war, 800 bombers of the air force would begin to attack British shipping in an effort to neutralize the effect of a blockade.

Sea hostilities have been intensified following German threats. The British Admiralty reported the sinking of three Nazi submarines. The Germans were reported to have torpedoed and sunk the British freighter Heronspool and the French oil tanker, Emile Miguet. The Emile Miguet, a 14,115 ton vessel, is the largest merchant ship sunk since the war began, and was one of the largest tankers in the world.

Miss C. J. Henry Addresses Ministerials In Athenian

Last Monday at 6:45, the Ministerial Association met in the philosophy class room for their regular weekly meeting. About 25 members were present to hear Dr. Case, the new sociology professor, make an interesting talk.

Arthur Rowan opened the meeting with the invocation and Dr. Case closed the meeting with the benediction. Robert Watt had charge of the devotional services.

Next week, Miss Clemmie Henry will address the group. In the future, the meetings will be held in the Athenian hall every Monday evening at 6:45. All men studying for the gospel ministry are invited.

Year Book Passes Previous Records For Subscriptions

Over 500 Copies Of Chilhowean Signed For By Faculty and Students

At the end of the first week of a subscription campaign, the editor and business manager of the 1940 Chilhowean have announced that more than five hundred copies of the year book have been signed for by students and faculty members. This figure exceeds the subscriptions of recent years. Subscriptions will be taken up through next week. When all the subscriptions are in, the professional photographer will begin taking pictures of the various clubs and organizations. Also the photographing of scenes from campus life will begin soon.

All seniors who failed to get pictures taken during this week are requested to have them in by Saturday, Oct. 21. The junior section will open immediately upon the closing of the senior section.

Six sophomores have been added to the staff of the Chilhowean and will begin work with the junior staff at once.

Sophomores Choose Sponsor Wednesday

Staff Representatives Selected For Chilhowean

Wednesday morning after chapel the sophomore class met and selected a class sponsor and representatives to the Chilhowean staff.

Those elected to the staff were J. Donald Kent, from Hurley, N. Y.; Charlotte Colby, from Norris, Tenn.; Frank Cross, from Birmingham, Ala.; Anne Gammon, from Perry, Mo.; Charles Lovette, from Greenville, Tenn.; and Eloise McNeeley, from Tazewell, Tenn.

The class sponsor, who will be announced when the Chilhowean is issued next May, was elected from the following nominations: Jean Blake, Peggy Carter, Mary Alice Grubb, Grayce Ridings, Leah Voight, and Catherine Walters.

The subject of class dues was discussed, also. A vote was taken, and it was the consensus of opinion that dues should be 50c with additional assessment made if necessary.

Women of Pearsons Plan Breakfast Hike Monday At 6:15 in College Woods

At 6:15 on Monday morning, Oct. 16, the women of Pearsons hall will leave for a breakfast hike to the college woods. This is the first in a series of social activities which the women of the hall are planning. Thelma Ritzman, vice president of the hall, is in charge of the breakfast.

There will be six or seven fires at which the girls will cook their bacon and eggs. The food committee has planned to have coffee, rolls, cinnamon buns and fruit. The committee in charge of collecting the fifteen cents which the breakfast will cost, are Maude Smith, Paula Martin, and Ruth West.

Assignments of Work Are Now Available For Student Help

If any student has not yet been assigned work, or if he feels he has not been assigned sufficient work, please call at the Student-Help office sometime the first of next week. It takes a while for the assignments to be worked out since there are so many applications, and since it is desired to put people in the positions and work for which they are best fitted. Now, however, all assignments are ready. If you do not call for work at this time, it is understood by the office that you either do not want or need additional work and any work assignments that remain will be assigned to those who do call for more work.

Committees Chosen At Student Council

Baldwin Heads Social, Ferris, The Publication

The members of three committees of the Student Council were appointed at the second meeting of the organization this year held last Tuesday evening in Miss Johnson's classroom.

To the publications committee, the newly-elected president, Frank Morrow, appointed Jean McCammon, Jessie Curtis, Pat Kennedy, and Phil Ferris. Selected for the student-faculty committee were Ruth Crawford, Mary Alice Grubb, Bill Baird, Dan McGill, Mary Darden, and Frank Morrow. The Council's representatives to the social committee are to be Joe Swift, Jean Stringham, and Ruth Woods. Other members of the social committee include Ruth Abercrombie as the representative of the senior class, and Charles Baldwin as the appointee from the junior class.

Other business conducted at this meeting consisted of a decision to the effect that the Council have bi-monthly meetings this semester to be held on Wednesday evenings. At this time a proposed revision of the constitution was also discussed in order to make it ready for publication in the 1940 rule-book.

Alumni Magazine For 1939 Will Be Published Soon

The Alumni magazine for 1939, now in the process of publication, will feature the announcement of homecoming and Founder's day, which will be Oct. 28.

The program this year will open at 9:45, with the annual Founder's day exercises, which will honor Professor Thomas Jefferson Lamar. Prof. Lamar was born in 1826, graduated from Maryville college in 1848, and served as a member of the faculty from 1857 until his death in 1887.

At 5:30 p.m., there will be an alumni barbecue and a program on the baseball field.

At 8:00, there will be the homecoming football game between Maryville and Carson-Newman.

Scotty Band Given Midget Pup Mascot From Kilt Country

Scotty, Jr., Barks With Burr and Feels at Home With Plaid-Skirted Sponsor

By GEORGE WEBSTER

For the second straight week, the Highland Echo goes to the dogs. In the last issue, it was an elegy for a departed friend. This time, it is a welcome to a new arrival. Less imposing in size and bearing than his predecessor, Tack, but with the same friendly, winning ways, our little Scottie, Jr., is rapidly gaining the affection of the entire student body. In case you aren't acquainted with him already. Scottie is the new mascot of the band, the little shadow that will follow Ruth Woods at the Tennessee Wesleyan game tonight.

Coming as a gift of Drs. Hays and Queener, veterinarians of Knoxville, Scottie will attend Maryville college by the subsidation route. It was through the efforts of these two friends that our new mascot was obtained as the property of the students. Having spent the first two of his three and one-half years in the Scottish highlands, our new friend should give a definite touch of Scotch to the campus.

With this background of the new canine in mind, then let us take up his present private life. In his particular case, the common conception of a dog's life does not hold true. In fact, he has certain special privileges which even we students are not permitted. In the first place, one of the ways in which he is subsidized is by being allowed to live at the lovely residence of our president. Then too, Scottie has a standing invitation from Mrs. Snyder to come to the girls' dormitories any time he likes. Along with this, he has become a personal friend of all the matrons, an influence on which he can take a rain check for a later date.

Just before being brought to the campus by Miss Heron, chairman of Pep committee, and the Triangle club president, Roland Anderson, Scottie, Jr. was vaccinated against rabies. This in itself makes for another privilege, for Scottie can now be petted without danger.

Add to these his myriad minor privileges and immunities—unlimited cuts, no honor reports, no Yankee roommate, no Chilhowean to buy—and being in the dog house loses its terrors.

However, as we are told in Thomas Paine's "Rights of Man", with every privilege goes a corresponding duty. So it is with Scottie; there are many duties to go along with his rights. Chief among these is marching with the band, and after several weeks of drill in his "squads right", he will make an excellent mascot. He has already learned another of his duties; he stands when the Alma Mater is played. He is also an experienced wagger, but he can't twirl yet.

So, get acquainted with this interesting new personality, won't you? And some of you Nu Gamma girls, who have surrendered the orientation of your little sisters to social-minded upperclass fellows, might start anew with a little brother, and make him happy in his new home.

"Prelude to Prayer" To Be Topic of Thomas At YMCA

This Sunday evening the YMCA is planning a devotional service on the subject of prayer. It will be led by Edward Thomas, secretary of the Y, and will be based upon the booklet, "Prelude to Prayer."

The Christian association received this week as the gift of Dr. Charles Washburn, last Sunday's speaker, the book "Hymn Interpretations," written by Dr. Washburn himself. It tells the story of many of the favorite hymns of the church and is arranged for use in worship services.

YMCA To Hike to LeConte

The annual YMCA hike, one of the most popular features of the Y program, will be made to Mt. LeConte and Alum Cave in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park. The boys will leave Saturday afternoon, Oct. 21, and return in time for supper Sunday evening.

All boys who desire to make the hike should see Bill Baird or Charles Baldwin before Tuesday, Oct. 17.

Dr. Lloyd Inaugurates International News In Chapel This Week

President Ralph W. Lloyd will inaugurate a news feature in the chapel program next Friday or Saturday morning. The news discussion, called "The Minutes of International News", will be made each week by a member of the social science faculty, and will consist of a brief report on recent national and international events.

President Lloyd said that the purpose of the program is to provide an opportunity for those interested in current news to hear a systematic summary of the week's events.

Disc Club To Hear Perambulator Suite

Carpenter and Smetana Will Be Heard Thursday

At its second meeting next Thursday afternoon at 4:30 in the Fine Arts studio, the Disc club will present two orchestral numbers. They are "The Moldau" of Frederick Smetana, Bohemian composer of the last century, and the suite "Adventures in a Perambulator" by a modern American composer, John Alden Carpenter.

The "Perambulator" suite is one of Carpenter's earliest works, and describes a baby's impressions of life when his nurse wheels him out for his daily airing. The various movements of the suite, as played by Eugene Ormandy and the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra, portray the policeman, the hurdy-gurdy, dogs, the lake, and finally the dreams of the baby as he rests exhausted from his day's exertions.

"The Moldau" is one of a series of symphonic poems written by Smetana to depict various phases and scenes of Bohemian life, and is from the symphonic cycle, "Ma Vlast—My Fatherland." The "Moldau", played for recording by the Berlin State Opera orchestra, portrays pastoral life.

Dr. Arthur Stupka Speaks To Nature Club Thursday

Dr. Arthur Stupka will speak to the Nature club on October 26. Dr. Stupka's lecture on "Through the Seasons in the Smokies" will be illustrated with colored slides. Dr. Stupka is government naturalist for the Smoky Mountains park and conducted nature walks during the past summer.

The Nature club met in Science hall Thursday evening at 6:45. The club voted on the amount of Chilhowean space and heard a very entertaining lecture by Mrs. Brown. Her talk on leaves was illustrated with specimens from the campus and the Great Smoky Mountains National park.

NOTICE

Production of the College Players' play, "Our Town", is about to commence. Any new men interested in the stage, who don't mind late hours, should speak to John Fisher or Sam Cornelius about work in the stage crew.

Metropolitan Opera Star To Appear At Knoxville Concert

Madame Bruna Castagna, Brilliant Contralto, Sings At First Concert Monday

Two bus loads of Maryville students will leave the campus Monday night for Knoxville, where they will hear Madame Bruna Castagna, leading contralto of the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York. This concert will be the first in a series of concerts sponsored by the Knoxville Community Concert Association and made available to Maryville students through the Music department.

Miss Castagna is one of the most brilliant and successful singers on the concert and operatic stage of the day. Born in Bari, in the southern part of Italy, she made her debut at the age of 17, in the role of Marina in "Boris", at the Teatra Sociale of Mantua. Despite her absolute lack of stage exper-

Frosh Apprentices Selected For Echo

Gammon, Wick, Webster, Ross, Orr Also Elected

From the thirty-two freshmen who tried out for positions on the Echo staff, twelve were selected to fill the vacancies. They were judged by the competency with which they covered various assignments that had formerly been given them. The new members are William Hargrave of Dexel Hill, Pa.; Brasher Bailey of Alcoa, Tenn.; Olson Pemberton of Huntsville, Tenn.; Trevor Rees-Jones of Dallas, Texas; Charles Foreman of Tionesta, Pa.; William Sweeney of Norwood, Pa.; Carson Brewer of Mooresburg, Tenn.; Marion Magill of Malden, Mass.; Evelyn Williams of Maryville; Phyllis Ann Cain of Morristown, Tenn.; Jean Barnes of Wilkes-Barre, Pa.; and Jean Patterson of Orangeville, Pa.

Three sophomore vacancies have been filled by Anne Gammon, Hilton Wick and John Ross; and two junior positions were filled by Mary Orr and George Webster.

YWCA Plans Hike to Look Rock On Saturday, Oct. 21; Twenty-Five Can Sign Up

The YWCA is planning an all day trip to Look Rock, Saturday, Oct. 21. A bus will leave shortly after breakfast and will return in the evening. The day will be spent in hiking, mountain climbing, and general exploring. Including the bus fare and eating expenses the trip will probably cost each girl about fifty cents. As the bus holds twenty-five, the first twenty-five girls who sign up for the trip will get to go. If there are enough more who want to go, probably another trip will be made another week end.

It is hoped that this trip will give the new girls an opportunity to go to the mountains and also will create an interest in YW activities. Last year YW had a similar hike; perhaps, as a great many are hoping, the trip will become an annual affair.

Perils and Pitfalls of "Point Systemers" Revealed to Skeptical Non-Participants

By JEAN BARNES

It's about time someone heaped a few well deserved laurels on the heads of certain heroines. The reference is to those noble individuals who are living out their happy lives under the Point System.

A week ago, Monday afternoon, seemed a day of big business for the proprietors of the Maryville confectionary stores. Scattered all over town were groups of girls from the Hill, indulging in a wild splurge of spending and a mad orgy of food. From all appearances, the Pearsons' bill-of-fare for the next two months was to consist of bread and water. At any rate, everywhere, absorbed feminine faces emerged from behind towering concoctions of delicious and indigestible ice cream sodas and sundaes. Incessant talkers seemed momentarily silenced as they stuffed and chewed on delectable chocolates, marshmallows, or peanuts. And back of it all was simply the fact that the Point System was to "start tomorrow." To the uninitiated, such a statement conveys little meaning, but to the "faithful" it signifies a lot.

As the name implies, the Point System is an arrangement whereby certain obligations are performed and certain rules observed, in return for which the performer is rewarded a monogram or possibly a lettered sweater. But it involves much more. It requires the exertion of will-power and rigorous exercise of both body and mind.

Tuesday morning put certain grueling rules into effect. Take the model "Point-Systemer." She must rise at six, and must drink a glass of water before breakfast. Simple enough? (Just try to jump out of bed, waking up your sleepy facial features enough to assume the typical wry grimace and gulp down a glass of the distasteful, lukewarm faucet water, and on an empty stomach at that!) The stomach is nec-

Story of "Rotating Loan Fund" Shows Students' Interest in Financial Program

By JEAN WHITE

A third of a century ago in 1903, Rev. Nathan Bachman became aware of the need that existed here at Maryville for a fund that would enable students to borrow money at various times to finance the last two years of their college life. So, at this time, Dr. Bachman placed in the college a fund, from the interest of which, juniors and seniors could borrow when the need arose. This fund proved popular and was eminently successful; but it was found after a few years that it could not provide loans for all the students that desired the privilege of borrowing. Thus it was that at this time the college authorities decided on a plan that might be worked out, but which must first be experimented with before outsiders could be asked to contribute. It was this plan and experiment that was the beginning of what Maryville students know as "The Rotating Loan Fund."

Beginning in, or about, 1926 it was necessary to take small amounts from the current expense accounts of the college to lend for short periods of time to the students. The experiment was thus started with the final decision or testing left entirely upon the attitude taken by the students toward such a plan. It was a success. At first, doubt was expressed as to whether college young people, inexperienced as they were, could be trained to handle successfully such large amounts of money; but as the experiment progressed, more and more confidence was placed in the working out of some sort of loan system, and it was seen that the loan system would be of value in more ways than one. It would not only give the student experience in making out budgets and keeping accounts, give him a chance to start and continue his education, but it would also contribute to the building of character in habits of industry, promptness, honesty, and thoughtfulness. Contact was made with

Should We Riot?

This week in the papers we read of the riot staged at LSU by the students there because college authorities refused to grant them a holiday after their football victory over Holy Cross. Years ago when football was just beginning and the colleges were taking it up there was some excuse for a grand celebration after a victory over a strong team, but now when football has become an established sport in nearly every college, we do not expect to find students uprising and demanding a holiday after a victory. One of the school authorities commented that LSU may have been a playhouse once, but it's not any more.

Many colleges have been considered playhouses and many students have come to these with the purpose of making their college a playhouse. As the old saying goes "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." We can see many Jacks though who do not seem to realize that there might be an atom of truth in such a statement. Everyday we run across the person who believes that study is for the person who sits next to him in class or it's for the person who does the algebra and lets the rest of the class use his paper. Such people may find themselves staging a riot everyday. You may not observe it always, but there are certain symptoms which are a sure sign.

These students are rioting within themselves when they sit in class for fear they'll be the next one called on. They are always on edge, for they remember the last time they had to answer "I don't know". It's mighty embarassing to do that every day. We can also find them rioting in their particular group of friends about "that terrible prof who expects us to read a book at night" or "that wicked exam we just had". "It's not fair—we didn't come to college to work". And in that sentence we have the whole opinion of the college student who is striving to make his college a playhouse.

Our college isn't a playhouse yet, and if we have any sense of prophesy, it never will be one, no matter how hard and how much these ever-rioting students desire it. But let's watch out and try to eliminate any sounds of rioting that we may happen across. It isn't by making this a playhouse that we'll be happy, but it is by increasing the spirit of good will that we'll make it a happy campus.

Blackout and Whitewash

It may be early to start complimenting a campus organization on its program, but with the hope that such compliments will serve to spur the group on instead of making it satisfied to rest on past laurels, we feel inclined to give credit to the campus organization interested in promoting knowledge of international relations. Its first two meetings have established a high and hopeful standard to be maintained, with first student opinion on neutrality and then faculty comment on basically the same question.

It would be a bit of deplorable irony if the group had continued under the original name of "Peace Forum." To vainly cry peace when there is no peace, to have student discussions on the way to get peace while nations take up swords against one another, to propose idealistic solutions to the world problems at a time when ideals are on the auction block would have been to make the club Cassandras crying in the winds of circumstance. It is to its credit that it has seen fit to avail itself of the turn of existing conditions and promote intelligent discussion of the problems now before the nations of the world.

The most recent meeting was a worthwhile attempt both revealing and helpful. Although Maryville is one of the few places where the question could have, to the surprise of many, resolved itself into the amount of Christianity involved in the world conflict (a discussion we would like to hear continued), it is to the credit of all concerned that the discussion did not lapse into a pedantic or aphoristic preachment.

Finally, we cannot but echo the comment of one of last Thursday's speakers, that if America gets into the war it will be partly because of propaganda. Our chief executive has expressed the conviction that there will be no blackout of peace in our country, but there must be a strong effort against the whitewash of propaganda which in its own insidious way seeps into the fertile minds of an unguarded public.

THIS WEEK: A LETTER FROM ENGLAND

There was brought to the attention of the Echo this week a letter written to one of our freshmen students by a friend in England. This student, Miss Margaret McKirdy of Morristown, N. Y., was kind enough to give us permission to reprint all of this letter because it would be of interest to us to hear how the people are living in England during these times. Without further comment we present this letter in its entirety. There is no date on it, but Miss McKirdy tells us it was written about September 10.

93 Gosberton Road,
Belham

Dear Margaret:

Such a lot of things have happened since I last wrote, I hardly know where to begin.

First, I am still in London and will probably stay here unless my firm moves into the country. All children and mothers with young children have gone and the place seems quite deserted. I can't believe we are at war; it seems so dreadful that we should have been plunged into this, just for one man.

From seven o'clock every night there is a complete blackout, no lights anywhere. We have no pictures or theatres and it is impossible to go out of an evening because it is so dark. Everywhere we go we have to take our gas masks and it looks as if everyone is carrying a camera.

I got so fed up this week with doing nothing that I've joined the W.V.S. (Women's Voluntary Service) as a "Telephonist." I am on duty during the evening as I have to go to business during the day. Owing to the blackouts I have to be at work at 8 a.m. instead of 9 a.m. so that I can leave at 3:30 p.m. It is very nice leaving at this time, but I don't like getting up so early.

Last week we had three air raid warnings, as I expect you have read in the papers. The first one came immediately after the Prime Minister gave out we were at war with Germany but no damage was done. The next was at 3:30 in the morning. We all got up in the house and went downstairs and I have never in all my life been so frightened. It was an awful experience and I was shaking like a leaf all the time. Tuesday morning there was another, which lasted for two hours. It wasn't so bad this time as it was light all the while and we were in the garden. That morning I got to work at 10:30.

Quite a lot of boys I know have been called up and it is terribly worrying, waiting to hear news. I only hope the war doesn't last long.

Before I close, do you think you could send me a weekly paper, (for my dad) to see the American view on the situation and I will send you either a newspaper or weekly magazine in return. Also have you a paper of either the 1st, 2nd, or 3rd of September, to read about the outbreak of the war? I hope you don't mind my asking you this.

I am afraid this letter isn't very newsy or cheerful, but there is nothing else to talk about. We all keep as cheery as possible, although Friday before the declaration of war I had to work until eight in the evening. I came home by train all in the dark and I saw the troops going away. I just cried all the way home; good job it was dark so no one could see me but we all felt like that then as the suspense of waiting was getting on our nerves.

Please keep on writing to me, and I will try to answer immediately.

So far I am quite safe.

Much love,
Barbara.

ience, so successful was she in the role, that she was immediately signed to a three year contract to sing at the Colon Opera House in Buenos Aires.

An audition before the great conductor, Toscannini, rewarded her with a three year contract with La Scala in Milan. There, because of her unusual ability as a coloratura contralto, Rossini's opera "L'Italiana in Algeri", little heard because of its difficulty, was revived for her. Miss Castagna will include two arias from this opera in her program Monday night.

Also included in her program will be an aria from Bizet's opera, "Carmen", her portrayal of which in Barcelona, won her world wide acclaim. She has sung in opera or concert in every leading country of the world. She sings in five different languages and has a repetoire that boasts fifteen operas besides a great number of songs.

The Community Concert Association is a nation-wide organization, bringing before the public at popular prices the leading musicians of the world. It offers tickets to students at reduced prices and is unique in that its tickets admit to any other Community Concert in the country. The 1939-40 Knoxville series includes three other artists besides Miss Castagna. These are: Richard Bonelli, Nov. 21; Simon Barer, Jan. 8; and the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, March 5. Tickets are sold by the season and may be obtained from Clark and Jones, Knoxville.

"THE OLD RELIABLE"

EXTRA POINTS

By Frank Cross, Sports Editor

SORE SCOTTIES

Last week's Milligan game seems to have been quite a rough and tumble slugfest. At least the regulars are all ailin' this week. Missing early scrimmages were Kramer, "Shoe" Hughes, Shelfer, Etheredge, Wilburn, Taylor, and Dizney. Most of these injuries are old ones, brought out by the hard game. Taylor, however, got a gash in his mouth this week, which required several stitches. Captain "Joe" has a game elbow, and a pulled leg muscle, which will handicap him considerably in grabbing passes tonight. All the first team will be able to start, however, although tape will be holding most of them together. The mid-season injury jinx is a us again.

MORTON MENDING

George Morton is still on his crutches, but hopes to get back in the lineup this year. Under the sun lamp this afternoon, he wiggled his toes and counted the days until homecoming. If he can get back, the Scots will be a lot stronger as the season closes and may still have a look-in on the championship.

WESLEYAN HEAVYWEIGHTS

The Wesleyan Giants bring at least four natives back to Maryville tonight. The first team is studded with Maryville and Knoxville boys. Watch Ben Garner at center. He hails from Everett high and tips the scales at 190. Wesleyan draws a great deal of local material to Athens by a little subsidizing, but they'll have to go some if their going to shine on the hill tonight, despite their hulk.

FACULTY ON PARADE

Darkness caught the faculty trailing the varsity tennis team 2-1, in their traditional match played yesterday afternoon. Dr. Lloyd sparked the faculty to their only victory of the afternoon in the doubles set. It's his custom to dust off the youngsters once a year and he's still at it. In the singles play, Akana defeated Wendt 4-6, 8-6, 10-8, in one of the best matches to be seen on the courts this year. In the grudge match of the afternoon, Coach Fischbach and Morrow split at one set apiece. The scores were 11-9, Morrow, and 6-4 Fischbach. Stevenson defeated Professor Case to complete the results. The entire faculty team didn't look as if the cap and gown had slowed them down much. In fact, with Prof. Smith and a second doubles match, the junior team might have come out of the encounter quite chagrined.

WE'RE ON THE AIR

W.R.O.L. is to broadcast tonight's Wesleyan battle. A play by play description will permeate the ether with Scottie accomplishments. The cheering section will have to turn up the volume also, as it advertises Maryville pep and spirit around the countryside.

SCOTTY JUNIOR

Scotty Junior, a little black Scottie, has arrived to bolster the spirit of Maryville. The little mascot has made his home at the President's mansion, and is here to stay. He plans to attend each game and march with the band.

Third Quarter Rally Gives Buffaloes 7-2 Edge Over Maryville

Scot Scoring Punch Bogs Down After First Quarter Safety

The Milligan Buffaloes stampeded in the third quarter to edge the Scotties 7-2, in a conference thriller, last Saturday. The Orange and Garnet covered more yardage than the Buffs during the evening, however, and gave the heavier team all they could handle.

Milligan, winning their first decision at Wilson field in many years, flashed reverses and double reverses that made the breaks.

Maryville caught Milligan back on their heels in the first quarter of the game. On several fumbles, the Scot line rushed the Buffs deep into their own territory. On an attempted punt, the pass from center was bad, and a mass of Orange jerseys smothered the Buff back, as he recovered behind his own goal line. The Highlanders led in the first two minutes of play, by a score of 2-0, on the safety. The rest of the half was all Maryville, although they couldn't develop an offensive scoring punch. Maryville received in the second half and marched down the field on straight power and flat passes. ODaniels, at center for Milligan intercepted a Scot aerial, however, and set up the scoring chance. Cure reeled off 25 yards on a double reverse around end to score standing up. The extra point was perfect.

It was Maryville again in the last quarter, threatening twice to score, but losing the ball each time because of penalties. The highlight of the final quarter was a sixty-five yard run by Lloyd Taylor. Taylor was cut off by the Buff safety man after a spectacular sprint behind superb blocking.

The game was marred by numerous penalties and roughness. Both teams were fighting hard, and injuries resulted, especially in the smaller Maryville line.

Stand-outs in the game were Cure, who scored for Milligan, and Pike, captain of the Buff team. For the Scotties, Etheredge was catching passes at all angles; Scot Honaker was punting at the top of his game; and Hughes and Taylor were gaining most of the yardage on the ground. Lawson, for Milligan, turned in a tip-top job of quarterbacking. Mixing straight football and simple reverses all evening, the third quarter double reverse caught the Scots out of position, and won the game.

Interclass Sports

Seniors Make It Three Straight

The second week of the intra-class football got underway on Tuesday when the juniors edged out a 6-0 win over the freshmen on a pass from Findlay to Akana. The game was evenly fought from the opening whistle until the final play; with the freshmen outplaying their rivals during the first half, but finally weakening to the size and experience of the juniors.

The juniors connected with several passes, from Findlay to Hahn, Lloyd, Akana, and Steakley for good long gains throughout the game. The break came on a partially blocked kick deep in frosh territory; on the next play, Findlay shot a short pass over the center of the line and Akana leaped up and snatched it out of two defensive men's hands for the six points. The try for the extra point was knocked down.

The freshmen, although going down to defeat, showed a decided improvement over their last defeat at the hands of the seniors and several key

Juniors Defeat Frosh, 6-0

Yesterday the juniors lost to the seniors, 6-0, therefore extending the four year men's streak to three straight in the intramurals. The score was tallied on a long pass from Frank Morrow to "T" Etheredge in the third play of the third quarter.

During the first half, the juniors showed the most power, though it was a see-saw battle all the way with both sides intercepting passes with a monotonous regularity. The juniors defense was particularly noticeable as they bottled up their opponents famed passing attack throughout the entire game.

On the first play of the third quarter, the seniors intercepted a pass, and on the next two plays, a pass from Morrow and Stevenson, and one from Morrow to Etheredge, the seniors had scored their lone touchdown. The try for the extra point was incomplete.

Heavy Bulldog Squad Out For Revenge In Tonight's Highlight Against The Scots

Maryville Must Rely On Passing As Numerous Injuries Weaken Line Power And Land Attack

The Wesleyan Bulldogs will be at the Scotties' throats tonight, in one of the highlights of the 1939 season. The Wesleyan squad hails from Athens, Tennessee, and will be one of the toughest to show at Wilson field. This year's team, coached by ex-Vol Eblen, will outweigh the slight Highlanders 20 pounds to the man. The Bulldog line average is about 190 pounds against 175 on the Maryville line, and the "Dog's" backfield average is 175 to the Scot's 165. This will be quite a handicap for the Scotties, who will have to rely on a passing attack, speed, and deception to keep up. Tennessee Wesleyan has shown, in their previous games, power to spare, along with trick reverses, the downfall of Maryville last week.

As the teams square off tonight, they will have similar records; each has won two and lost one. Wesleyan has edged Snead 6-0, and took Hiwassee last week 20-7. They lost to Georgia Military Academy 13-0. In last year's game, the Bulldogs held Maryville to a 7-7 half score, before the Scots broke loose to win the game 28-7. Wesleyan was the Southeastern Junior College Champions last year, despite its defeat at the hands of Maryville.

Heading a squad of 52, stand two of the best ends the Highlanders have played: Capt. Newell Erwin and 195-pounder LeFrance. Ben Garner, former Everett high star, has shown up well in early season games at center. Barber of Young high has sparked the backfield.

Maryville is an injury-weakened team, and minus George Morton at half. The game odds would have been pretty even, with better breaks. The Scots are pointed for the game, however, and may prove too scrappy for Wesleyan.

The game will be the last at Maryville, before the traditional homecoming against Carson-Newman. Coach Honaker takes his team to Madisonville next week, to meet Hiwassee.

Cross-Country Prospects Being Whipped Into Shape For Opening Against Tech

Cross-country track prospects are reported to be looking pretty good in spite of losses from last year. Student-Coach Steakley is working his team around lettermen, "Alfy" Davies, Bill Mooney and Steakley (the coach himself).

The team does not have a definite schedule yet, but it is probable that they will meet Tennessee twice, and Georgia Tech once at Tech. None of the S. M. Conference schools sport a team.

In practice, McDaniels and Nicely are showing up in great style. Watkins, a junior transfer, is shaping up. Kent and Green both on last year's track squad, look good.

There is a question as to whether or not Steakley will run this year. The cross-countrymen will need him, tho, if they keep up their record against the larger schools.

Kramer, Ballenger Debate Third Term at Law Club

At the regular bi-monthly meeting of the Law club held last Wednesday evening in Alpha Sigma hall, John Ballenger and Arnold Kramer debated the subject: "Resolved, that Roosevelt should run for a third term."

Kramer presented the affirmative side of the case while Ballenger handled the negative. The result of the debate seemed rather uncertain, although both Kramer and Ballenger claimed that the other admitted defeat.

Several important matters of business were discussed at the meeting. The annual fall picnic was definitely settled and the date set for this afternoon in the college woods. Plans were also made for the first moot trial, but a definite date has not been set yet.

Rotating Fund

men in various kinds of business, and all seemed to think that this system of lending would be the finest kind of practical training possible for the young people who availed themselves of the privilege. And so, with the experiment successfully worked out, application was made to friends of the college for gifts for a permanent loan fund, not yet completed, which would enable the college to take care of the applications for financial aid.

A rather interesting fact concerning the loans is that since the first gift to the fund in 1935, 1575 loans have been made to students; and of the total amount lent, 89½% has been repaid to the college. This in itself shows that the training gained from responsibility of students has been enough to fulfill the hopes of the originators of the plan.

Not only does this Rotating Loan Fund make the students well qualified to keep very fine expense accounts, but it also gives them the figures showing just how much their college education has cost them. Loans, while they are here in college, are based on their past financial records, and as they go on through school, they build up credit records which they may use in any way they want—to secure a job or as recommendations for any sort of position. It is a very common thing for an employer to call for the credit record of his prospective employee, and this record should be an asset to the individual.

Another outgrowth of this is that it enables a great many students who borrow all through their college course to graduate with little or no debt. Out of last year's class of 112, 79 students graduated without debt and 33 with an average debt of only $120.

In connection with the Rotating Loan Fund, but not exactly an outgrowth of it, are the record folders which are now filed in the Student-Help office. In these record folders is kept a copy of recommendations of the student before he comes to school, his identification picture, all his correspondence with the Student-Help office, record of all loans made and dates due, record of repayments, amount earned each year so long as he is in school, record of his grades, place or department in which he works, amount paid per hour, and any other information that would be of service in helping the Director of Student-Help to understand what each individual student is trying to do and assisting him in any way she can. When all things are being considered, those in charge of this fund and system of lending are looking for those who are doing their work well, not for possible points to be criticized.

Out of the Rotating Loan Fund has grown a fine cooperation of students in regard to the payment of notes; and also a feeling of responsibility toward the obligations entailed by privileges given to such a majority of students by the foresight and work of persons interested in the financial welfare and character-building of the students.

Faculty Members Discuss Possibilities of Peace At Round Table Conference

Before a capacity crowd in the Thaw hall auditorium last Thursday evening, the Maryville college International Relations club sponsored a round table conference composed of four outstanding faculty members on the subject, "Will There Be a Blackout of Peace in These United States?". Those participating in the conference included Dr. Edwin R. Hunter, Dr. H. E. Orr, Prof. Verton M. Queener, and Prof. Paul F. Wendt. Paul Akana led the discussion and during the course of the program, he called for questions from the audience.

Akana conducted the conference in the same style that was used by the University of Chicago a few weeks ago. Various questions were thrown open to comment, and they were discussed collectively by the several professors taking part in the program. In this way, the purpose of the students was achieved in the fact that an excellent cross-section of faculty opinion was attained.

Upon one of the most interesting questions of the evening, that of a third term for Roosevelt, Professor Queener said that it was his belief that the president "did not choose to run". Dr. Hunter added a very significant comment when he said, "If Roosevelt does run, the European war will certainly add to the possibility of his being elected."

Dr. Orr commented on the possible future of American policy by stating that as a result of the fact that during the last few years our international policy has been motivated by the Gallup poll, we would eventually enter the war because of propaganda, and also to uphold the idea of "making the United States safe for prosperity."

A novel idea was brought out by Professor Wendt when he stated that it was his opinion that there is not as much difference between Nazism and Democracy as the propagandists would have us believe. He also said that a United States of Europe had recently been proposed by a noted political scientist.

A return engagement of a popular University of Tennessee professor, Dr. Ruth Stevens, has been scheduled by the organization for the December meeting.

Fisher Speaks on Persia

John Fisher will discuss social and religious life in Persia at the weekly meeting of the Student Volunteers, Sunday evening. Fisher's parents are former misionaries to Persia. There will also be a program of special music.

Thirty-Eight Freshmen Enroll In Debate Class

Thirty-eight pupils are now enrolled in the freshman debate class which this year is under the direction of Mr. Archibald Pieper.

Mr. Pieper, one of the new faculty members, is instructor in the political science department. While attending Maryville college, Mr. Pieper was for three years a member of the varsity debate team as well as a freshman debater.

The question for study is: Resolved, that the Federal Government should own and operate railroads. This is the national high school question for 1939-40 and has been adopted as the debate topic for college freshmen in this area.

At the beginning of the second semester, four men and four women will be selected for the freshman team after competitive tryouts.

Lincoln Play at Bainonian To Feature Mrs. N. E. West

Bainonian will hold it's weekly meeting in the Fine Arts studio on Saturday evening at 6:15. The meeting's entertainment will consist of a reading, "Abraham Lincoln of Illinois", given by Mrs. West, instructor in dramatic art. Louise Marshall will introduce and end the presentation with appropriate background music.

Attendance at this meeting is not restricted to Bainonian members. Invitation is also extended to anyone in the school interested in attending.

Informal Meeting at Theta

Theta Epsilon will hold its regular meeting in Theta hall at 6:15 Saturday evening. An informal meeting in charge of Kitty Bennett has been planned, at which the initiation of new members will take place. It is necessary that all new members be present. Ruth Bigler, treasurer of Theta, will be on hand to collect dues at the close of the meeting.

Campus Workers Complete Stands At Wilson Field

The work on the campus this week has consisted mainly of placing posts along the corduroy and finishing the bleachers at Wilson field. Steps have been installed at the bottom of the bleachers to facilitate the reaching of seats. Considerable work has also been done on the streets and walks.

The next task of the boys will be the dismantling of the old heating plant, which was erected in 1893. The tubes and boilers are being taken out now. Mr. Black, the Director of Maintenance, plans to have the chimney tumbled in the afternoon so that all the students may be able to see this old landmark topple to the earth.

YWCA Hears Mrs. Queener

The regular YWCA service will be conducted at 1:15 Sunday afternoon in the Y rooms of Thaw hall. Mrs. Queener, a member of the faculty, will be the speaker, discussing the topic, "Personality". Music, in the farm of a flute solo, will be provided by Thelma Ritzman. She will play the pastorale, "Pan ", by the composer Donjon.

Firth of Forth Attacked Henderson Makes Report President Gives Warning Turkey Signs Pact

Monday, Oct. 16

Twelve German bombers made a lightening attack on the Firth of Forth, dropping bombs which caused 35 casualties on the Southhampton, the cruiser Edinburgh, and the destroyer Mohawk. The British Admiralty and the Air Ministry announced in an official communique that at least four of the raiders were shot down by pursuit planes and anti-aircraft fire.

German troops also launched a vigorous attack on the French positions along the Western front, driving the Allies out of German territory, and capturing a thin strip of French land.

Sir Nevile Henderson in a 12,000 word white paper made public his final report on his ambassadorship to Berlin. He repeatedly blamed the German Fuhrer for precipitating the present conflict, and declared that he believed the former corporal was anxious to prove what he could do as a conquering generalissamo.

Elmer F. Andrews resigned as wage-hour administrator after serving since the adoption of the act. According to some observers Andrews ideas as to how the wage law should be administered conflicted with those of Secretary of Labor Francis Perkins. Lieut. Col. Philip Fleming, Army district engineer at St. Paul was named by White House sources to take over the administrator's duties.

Turkey, keeper of Europe's "back door" signed a 15-year mutual assistance pact with Britain and France. The treaty was signed following failure of Germany to draw the Turks in on the side of the Nazis.

German sources immediately predicted a general war because the interests of both the Reich and of Russia are directly involved. In addition to its being a diplomatic victory for the Allies, the Turkish pact is thought to be an effort to curb any possible Russian plan to extend military aid to Germany.

YWCA Initiates Induction Service In College Woods Last Thursday Evening

Thursday evening at 7:00 the YWCA held their induction service in the college woods. Nearly two hundred girls attended the service at the amphitheatre.

The impressive program was opened with a flute solo by Thelma Ritzman after which the officers of the organization lighted the three corners of a hugh triangle on the hill at the amphitheatre. Helen Bewley, president of the YW, gave a short talk on the purpose of the YW and each old and new girl lighted her candle from the officers'. All formed a triangle around the fire and sang a hymn.

This is the first year that such an induction service has been held for the YWCA new members and it is hoped that the practice will be continued.

YW To Hear Mrs. Brown

Mrs. George Brown will give a talk on Nature at the YWCA meeting tomorrow afternoon at 1:15 in the YW rooms. Charles Orr will sing and Margaret Halsey will play quiet music the first fifteen minutes of the program.

Choir To Appear On Program With H. V. Kaltenborn at ETEA

Thirty-Seven Members To Make Trip Thursday To Knoxville Meeting

The Maryville college choir will appear at a general session of the East Tennessee Educational association next Thursday evening at 7:30. The thirty-seven choir members and the director, Mr. Ralph Colbert, will make the trip in cars. The Thursday night session is the opening meeting of the association and has been closed to the public until 7:15 in order to allow all the teachers to hear H. V. Kalenborn, radio news analyst and news editor for the Columbia Broadcasting system.

The repetoire of the choir will include, "Were you There", an arrangement by Burleigh; "Deep River", arranged by Dett; "Cheribum Song" by Bartniansky; "Haleluya", arranged by Sergi; "O Thou in Whose Presence", by James-Cain; "Holy Radiant Light" by Gretchaninoff; and "For Ever Worthy is the Lamb" by Tschaikowsky. The first twenty minutes of the program will be given to the college choir which will be followed by the invocation, president's address, and the address by Kaltenborn.

The Honorable H. V. Kaltenborn is news editor for the Columbia Broadcasting system and has held that post since 1930; radio news analyst since 1923; Harvard graduate with a degree of distinction; radio reporter at the Republican and Democratic conven-

Pre-med Aptitude Exams Will Be Given Students Interested In Profession

During the last week of November the annual pre-medical aptitude examinations, prepared by an American Association of medical colleges examination committee, will be given to Maryville students interested in the medical profession, in order to determine their general fitness for the study of medicine. The examinations will probably be given in Anderson hall.

For the past nine or ten years the American association of medical colleges has been using this method to determine whether or not a student has a fundamental knowledge necessary to the study of medicine.

For the most part, the test will consist of questions pertaining to sciences such as physics, chemistry, and biology. However, there will be some questions of no scientific significance whatsoever. These will be inserted merely to test the mental alertness of the student.

Maryville college will have no connection with the examinations other than in giving them. The association examination committee will do the grading of them.

Singing, Games And Big Bonfire Behind Alumni Gym Tonight At 8:15

There will be a singing and games around a huge bonfire behind the Alumni gym tonight at 8:15.

The singing will be led by Ralph Reed. Folk games and group games, led by Mis Geneva Hutchinson, will also be played around the fire. As a climax to the evening of song and fun, refreshments will be served.

At their meeting on Wednesday the social committee elected the leaders for the year. Charles Baldwin was elected chairman; Ralph Reed, vice chairman; Jean Stringham, secretary; and Joe Swift, treasurer. The social committee is composed of representatives from the senior, junior and sophomore classes who meet with faculty advisors to plan diversion and entertainment for the students.

YMCA Members Hike To LeConte

Will Return To Campus By Tomorrow Evening

YMCA fellows left the campus today for a two-day hike to Mt. LeConte. They will go via the Alum Cave Bluff trail, after spending the night at the Chimneys camping grounds. The men left in two busses; one group at 10:20 this morning, and the other after lunch this afternoon. Supper and breakfast will be cooked around the campfires at the camp grounds. After breakfast tomorrow morning, the hikers will climb to the top of Mt. LeConte and have Sunday school at dawn. Vernon Lloyd will conduct the worship services. After descending the mountain and having lunch at the base, they will return on busses. They expect to reach the campus in time for supper tomorrow night.

This trip will be longer than the usual hiking excursions, and is designed to take the place of a larger number of small ones. The trip costs each man 40 cents, the YM paying the remainder. Each person is responsible for his own cooking utensils.

Wick Will Be YM Speaker Sunday In Bartlett Hall

The YMCA services will be held this week, one for the men on the hike at the top of Mt. LeConte tomorrow morning and the other here in Bartlett auditorium at the regular hour of 5 p.m. David Kidder is the speaker on the hike, and Hilton Wick will speak to the campus group. Wick's subject is "The Greatest Cause in the World."

During the past week the Christian association entertained Mr. Wiley Critz, Executive Secretary of the Southeastern YMCA Field Council. Mr. Critz spoke to the organization's cabinet on the work of the national YMCA, at a meeting held Thursday evening.

New Forward Fund Is Announced This Week By Dr. Lloyd

$185,000 Will Be Raised In Two Stages To Meet Some Emergency Needs

A drive to secure $185,000 to meet the emergency needs of the college began this week, President Ralph W. Lloyd announced today. This fund, called the "New Forward Fund", is the third drive of this type to be conducted. Thirty-two years ago a similar plan was used by President Samuel Tyndale Wilson as the first of a series of campaigns which helped to make possible the present Maryville college.

There will be two stages in the Forward Fund campaign. The first will continue through the remaining months of 1939 and throughout 1940. The money secured will be used to build an additional women's residence, to enlarge the student rotating fund, and to complete the new heating plant. A longer campaign, extending from 1940 to the 125th anniversary of the college in 1944, will complete the Forward Fund. The objectives of this second phase of the program have not been announced.

The effort of Maryville college to raise the New Forward Fund is being carried on in connection with the Presbyterian Board of Christian Education and its affiliated institutions. Each college will conduct its own campaign and raise its own funds, but will have the cooperation of the entire church organization.

Thirty Girls Leave Hill For Hike To Look Rock Under Auspices of YWCA

Shortly after breakfast this morning, a group of 30 women left the campus for Look Rock, Montvale, on the annual YWCA mountain hike. They intend to climb the mountain, a three-mile hike each way, where they will eat their nosebag lunches which have been previously prepared. There will then be more climbing and exploration. Possibly, depending upon conditions, they will eat their dinner on the top of the mountain. This meal will consist of Indian or squaw corn, a one-dish meal; buns, coffee, and camoas. The women will return to the campus about eight o'clock.

This hike is being sponsored by the YW cabinet. Jessie Curtis, member of the cabinet in charge of athletic programs, is chairman. Dr. and Mrs. L. L. Williams are chaperones.

Complete List of Cast For "Our Town" Is Announced By Director, Mrs. West

"The first week of play practice finds 'Our Town' progressing smoothly", announced Mrs. Nita Eckles West, director of the College Players' current dramatic production, yesterday afternoon.

"Our Town" is the first of the season's plays and will be presented by College Players under the auspices of Theta Alpha Phi, honorary dramatic fraternity, on the evening of Nov. 17, in Voorhees chapel.

The complete and final list of the cast of characters in the play is:

Stage manager, John Wintermute; Dr. Gibbs, Frank Brink; Mrs. Gibbs, Louise Allen; Mr. Webb, G. H. Phelps; Mrs. Webb, Mary Frances Spurlock; George Gibbs, William D. Gehres; Rebecca Gibbs, Betty Wilde; Emily Webb, Carol Dawn Ward; Joe Crowell, Richard Boyd; Howie Newsome, David Thomas; Stimson, Ralph Reed; Sam Craig, Maurice Rorex; Joe Stoddard, Erwin Ritzman; Mrs. Soames, Troye Moore; Woman in the Balcony, Esther McCollum; Lady in the Box, Ruth West; Man in the Auditorium, Charles Foreman; Constable Warren, Charles Fish; extras: Ruth Cathcart, June Morley, Josephine Farr, Elizabeth Glover, Anita Raeburn, Carlyle Collins, Betty Clevenger, and Marianne Coleman.

Notice, Pre-Medicals

There will be an authorized meeting of pre-medical students in the organic chemistry lecture room Monday evening at 6:30. The purpose of this meeting is to attempt to organize a pre-medical club such as formerly existed on this campus. All pre-medical students are strongly urged to attend this meeting.

Seventh Annual Founders Day Program Will Be On October 28,

Activities of Day Begin With Chapel Services At 9:45 Honoring Lamar

BARBECUE AT 5:30

Dr. Silas Edward Henry Will Speak on "Prof. Lamar as I Remember Him"

Saturday, Oct. 28, the seventh annual Founder's day program will be held on the Maryville college campus. The activities for the day will begin with the special chapel service which will be held at 9:45. The service will honor Professor Thomas Jefferson Lamar, who played a conspicuous part in the institution's history for thirty years before and after the Civil War. President Lloyd will discuss Professor Lamar's service to Maryville college, and Dr. Silas Edward Henry of the class of 1888 will speak of "Professor Lamar as I Remember Him." Dr. Stevenson and the college choir will take part in the service.

Dr. Henry, the speaker at the special service on Saturday morning, is from Indianapolis, Ind. He received an honorary degree from Maryville in 1938.

At 5:30 on the baseball field a barbecue will be held for the alumni and their friends.

A special section of the bleachers will be reserved for the alumni at the Carson-Newman—Maryville football game at 8:00 on Wilson Field.

It is planned to have the merchants in town sponsor special decorations welcoming alumni back to the hill. The executive committee is anxious that this be a bigger and better homecoming. In other years homecoming has been on Friday night. This year a new plan is being tried by having it on Saturday night. It is hoped that this will enable more alumni to attend.

Pep Meeting Friday

There will be a pep meeting this Friday evening on the football field. Former football lettermen of Maryville and Blount County are to be present and take part in the program. Carl Storey and J. D. Davis are in charge of this program.

Alumni Magazine Is Sent To Graduates

Two Thousand Copies Of October Issue Mailed

Over two thousand copies of the October Alumni magazine were mailed recently to Maryville college graduates in forty-five states and twenty-three foreign countries.

Published for the first time last year, the magazine met with so many favorable comments that the Alumni association will continue its publication again this year, and, if possible, will increase its size.

Designed to keep alumni informed about college activities and to keep them in touch with other alumni, the magazine should do much toward building up a united, influential organization.

The sixteen pages of material for this issue were prepared in the offices by various persons. Most of the actual planning and writing are done by President Lloyd and Alumni Association secretary Geneva Hutchinson. Others have done valuable service in typing, proofreading, and mailing. The clear-cut pictures, legible type, and well-organized material make it an attractive addition to Maryville college publications.

Department of Fine Arts Will Give Recital, Oct. 27

On Friday afternoon, Oct. 27, at 4:30 the first in a series of Fine Arts department studio recitals will be held. The program which will consist of violin and piano numbers by members of the Fine Arts department, is as follows: "Vienna Carnival Scene," allegro, Schumann will be given by Gordon Stone; Ann Biggs will sing, "Just for Today" by Seaver; Louise Marshall will play "Fantasie Impromptu in C Sharp Minor" by Chopin; Katherine Cruze will play "Der Sohnder Haide" by Keler-Bela; Ann Abel will play Schumann's "Carnival Preamble."

Attendance at these studio recitals is required of all piano and violin students studying for credit. All those who are interested are invited to come.

Chilhowean Opens Junior Section This Week, Closes Senior Section Officially

The editor of the 1940 Chilhowean announced today that the senior section has been officialy closed, and that the junior section will open Monday and remain open for two weeks. Since the differences in sizes of the senior pictures caused considerable difficulty in assembling the senior pages, it is requested that all pictures to be turned in are of the specified dimensions—3½ inches by 5 inches. The editor also requests that all organizations wishing to have pictures taken, please see Mary Orr to make necessary arrangements with Daddy Webb.

All previous subscription records have been broken by this year's record, which totals around 575 subscriptions. For those who have neglected to order, there is still a chance of subscribing to a Chilhowean.

Rambling Round Before Break of Day, A Light on Those Who Work In The Dark

By JOHN ROSS

Ringgggggg!

That's Harold Copeland's alarm clock telling us that it is four o'clock and time to go down to the power plant. It is hard to get up while it is cold and dark but he must if the hill is to have heat. If that alarm clock stops or he decides to catch three more winks, there will be a lot of cold toes and uncooked breakfasts.

Whew! it's chilly. Harold has the furnace door open now and way back there is a peaceful looking red bank, the smoldering giant that will keep you warm today. Harold thinks its fun to break the banks and build big fires out of little ones, and, I do too. Nearly every thing is automatic, except filling the stoker hoppers, and that means a large number of guages and valves that have to be kept just right at the right time. Up high on the front of the boilers are two huge brass pressure guages that are illuminated by a bright spotlight, rather pretty. Their hands will be way 'round at five o'clock when the steam is turned on. It's fifteen till five now and we will have to run if we catch the milk boys.

Aldon Cunningham, Wilson Garnet, Henry Millison, and Lamar Russell milk the twenty cows night and morning. There goes the truck, hey! We want to go too. This matter of riding in an open truck is rather chilly but we are nearly there. Before you can get out of the truck almost, the fellows have turned on the lights, fed the horses, split kindling and built a fire for hot water, put the filters in the strainers and rinsed the buckets. The cows are fed a tablespoon of salt, and a tablespoon of cow tonic with a half gallon of ground feed, a typical college breakfast for the college cows. The silo will be opened before long and the milk crew will have another member. Now they are ready to massage "Bossy's" four spigots and strain the milk. It will not be long before they have the cows turned out, the buckets and strainers washed, and we'll have the milk at Pearson in about an hour and twenty minutes from the time we left. In the kitchen, preparations for breakfast are going full speed.

The four colored cooks have been here since five o'clock doing little things like baking eight hundred biscuits and making forty gallons of coffee. Since he arrived, John Henry, the head cook, has made the coffee, put eighteen pounds of cereal in the steam cooker, brought the raw dinner from the basement, and now he is putting out the breakfast dishes. Joe Jackson has greased the fourteen big biscuit pans and helped Henry Chestnut roll

Reporter Discovers Maryville College Is Recognized In Late Agriculture Survey

By HILTON WICK

With acknowledgment to Wilbur Daniel Steele, I must issue a warning as Steele did in his "Footfalls" that this is not an easy story. It is not the customary type of feature story. It may seem dry to others than science students; it may be hard reading. It isn't humorous, but to loyal Maryvillians, it should have an appeal. I've warned you now; if you continue, it is at your own risk.

The story concerns agriculture, the United States government, and, above all, Maryville college. To start at the beginning, we must go back to 1933 when Congress passed the Agriculture Adjustment Act. A section of this act authorized and directed the Secretary of Agriculture to establish, equip, and maintain four regional research laboratories, one in each major farm producing area, and, at such laboratories, to conduct researches into and develop scientific, chemical, and technical uses and new and extended markets and outlets for farm commodities and products and by-products thereof. Such research is to be primarily devoted to farm commodities in which there is an annual surplus. Surplus products all over the country are to find new outlets through industrial utilization.

According to a provision in the act a survey committee was appointed to divide the country into four districts and to investigate all research activities in the districts established. The four districts created were the East, with headquarters at Philadelphia, Pa.; the South, with offices at New Orleans, La.; the Northwest, with headquarters at Peoria, Ill.; and the West, with offices at San Francisco, Calif.

This committee interviewed representatives of 1300 research institutions. Of this number 200 were colleges and universities. The institutions visited were experimental stations of the United States government, privately endowed research institutions, commercial laboratories, Federal agencies, and educational institutions. The committee collected data on the utilizing of raw materials and assembled its collected information to be presented to the Department of Agriculture. All material collected was from observations of the commission and recommendations of the visited institutions.

Maryville's part of the story now begins. In the spring of 1938 members of the survey committee came to the school and talked with members of the Science department. Copies of several research publications by members of the department were obtained by the commission. At the time this visit did not seem of much importance. Now, a greater significance is seen. About a month ago the Science de-

Suggestion: A Speaker's Series

Radical or broad adjustments in such a thing as a college program take very naturally a long time to be worked out. Witness the disturbance caused by the presidential move to have Thanksgiving a week earlier, while it did not offend the scruples of any group it yet upset the programs of groups which make their plans far in advance. Accordingly, we respectfully make a suggestion through these editorial columns, with no hope that it will be adopted this year but with the belief that if thought about seriously it may materialize within the next few years.

The suggestion is this. Along with the forward fund in connection with a building program, would it not be a worthwhile thing to plan a lyceum series of speakers who would address Maryville students on vital and important subjects. We have in mind that the present artists series developed from a student-sponsored project into the enviable program now offered. From Swiss bell-ringers to Josef Hoffman is a long and commendable march of progress. The same thing could be begun with a speakers' series, starting perhaps humbly but developing into the kind of thing which would be on a par with our artists series.

Already there is a good foundation. The February meetings bring for a period of a week an outstanding pastor who discusses almost invariably with deep understanding the problems of students in regard to their spiritual welfare. Not diminishing the importance of that aspect of growth at all, it seems highly necessary that we should have speakers to discuss other subjects, to speak on literature, international relation, art. It is not too high a hope, is it, that we might have William Lyons Phelps (or the Phelps of that future day), Robert Frost, Edward Benes, and others of equally high calibre on a Maryville speakers' series.

Perhaps the speakers we have had during the past three years will be cited as examples that we are fulfilling the need mentioned. Dean Mims of Vanderbilt, former Ambassador Dodd, Donald Grant—are not these men of high standing in their respective fields? True, they are, but our platform is for more like them.

This suggestion is not a complaint against any part of the program that is now conducted. There is a definite place for musical artists and for the February meetings, but with the feeling that there is also a place for a well-planned speakers' series we broach this suggestion. We'll be anxiously scanning the pages of the Alumni magazine a few years hence to read that our suggestion has materialized.

To The YWCA:—Congratulations

The YWCA induction service on Thursday evening inaugurated something new to that organization. The large attendance and the impressiveness of the ceremony certainly ascertain that the service should be continued. We congratulate the officers of the YW for planning this program and for making it such a successful one. There ought to be more new ideas introduced on the hill in order to make more varied and interesting activities. We can always improve upon what we have, you know. Let's try it.

International News

The introduction of the International News program in chapel this morning by Dr. Lloyd is a thing which we have hoped would be initiated. The News Review column in the Echo was first started to fill a need which we thought was very vital. College students have so often been criticized for seeming to isolate themselves from the world for four years. This may be true, but we would be accused of that now. Keeping in contact with current events is especially necessary at this time, and for those who do not read the papers, a solution may be found in this International News program.

ECHO-HUMOR

By DON KENT

Here was Life in the Raw! Life with all its hideousness, Life at its lowest forms, Life destroyed, Death rampant! And he hated it! The ugly, staring eyes, the creeping crawling things, the piles of bones and the collected refuse of years. How long must it go on? Six months, eight months? Eight months in this place? Never! Life and Death beat against his brain; Life and Death seeped thru every pore. And he gave up! He gave up! ("Dr. McClelland, I'd like to drop biology.")

There they stood, two alone, silently gazing at a single tiny cloud in the center of the blue sky. Hand in hand they stood, boy and girl, staring with solemn, wondering expression at the soft, white cloud. Did they wonder at its beauty? Did they wonder at its solitude? Or its mystery? What, what did they wonder, these two? ("Is it going to rain?")

• • • •

They were buddies. That was evident. The friendly arm of the larger thrown over the other's shoulder, the tight clasp with which the other held his comrade, the anxious look, the kind mouth firm in its determination to endure for friendship's sake: these showed they were buddies.

They had come a long way together, these two. The road was rough and there was no place to rest. Then this, this had happened. Steady, friend. Not much longer now, and then it will all be over. ("There, I hope I don't get any more stones in my shoe.")

• • • •

Red in the night sky, reflected by the heavens and diffused by the tiny droplets of fog, showed a crimson glow. It could only mean one thing to the adventure seeking young man. Here people would be shouting, screaming, dashing madly about. Here the crash and clatter of breaking glass would be blended into a babel of crackling, smashing, hissing. Now, as he approached the glow, it became a brilliant scarlet, burning a hole into the fog. Adventure at last! (And he drove up beneath the big neon sign that said, "Night Club, dine, BEER, dance.")

About a month ago someone posted on the Carnegie bulletin board a notice that he had found a raincoat with Fred Rhody's name in it. A letter to Fred brought the following reply, and the column is making a desperate effort to find the garment by publishing this touching sentiment from a former Echo columnist who knows how hard it is to fill space every week.

"Dear George:

I wanted to send a card right away about my raincoat. YES! it's mine! I've been fervently hoping that some kind honest soul at Maryville would find it and advertise about it. If you can possibly locate it I'll gladly pay all costs of labor involved in the search, reward asked, mailing charges, etc. And my faith in the moral fiber of M.C. manhood will be strengthened. Please hurry—I'm getting all wet!

out the eight hundred biscuits. Joe is quite a cracker ("borned in Geogie") so he gets to break the three and a half dozen eggs for the football boys. Raymond Wilson toasts about five hundred slices of bread and bakes the biscuits. He says that is about all he has time for when he "stays in second gear". The three assistant cooks live in Alcoa and have to walk to work since they must leave home before the busses run.

A lot of other things happen around break-of-day and you can see them if you will only crawl out.

Pre-Med Exams

After the examinations have been graded, the grades will be sent to all the American association medical colleges. There the records will be kept for reference when a student applies for entrance into medical college.

Important though the examinations may be, it is highly doubtful that a student would be either granted or refused entrance to medical college purely on the basis of his grade made on this examination.

In the past years only five or six Maryville students have taken the examinatiaons each year. These planned to enter medical school the next year.

Of Interest to Frosh

Freshmen at Cumberland University must back in and out of all doors and up all stairs. Here's hoping they have one-floor plan buildings. How'd you like to back up the steps of Anderson, Thaw, Fayerweather, Memorial, Carnegie, and Baldwin? "Cumberland Collegian" gives helpful hints to freshmen, though. Here are some:

Don't try to be a model student; you may have to keep it up.

EXTRA POINTS

By Frank Cross, Sports Editor

HUGHES RIPS

Old "Shoey" tore the Hiwassee line to shreds last night. He accounted for four Maryville first downs single handed. Whenever yardage was needed, Hughes came through. On the first touchdown drive, "High School" took over carrying duties on the 37 yard stripe and carried the ball over in four runs. He then neatly added the extra point. On the other Maryville marches, he led the boys over the goal line with beautiful blocking, after he had passed or plunged the ball down the field. You can stake your board money that J. D. will be the all-conference back of the year.

SUFFERIN' SCOTTIES

Injuries continue to stomp on Maryville hopes this week. Seiber and Tipton were unable to play last night, and several of the other first stringers didn't see much action. Kramer's knee hasn't healed yet, and Baird was unable to do his stuff last night because of his bad hand. Morton won't be back for Carson-Newman at all. It's not a very happy thought, in face of Carson-Newman's reputed powerhouse.

HOMECOMING COMING

A conference leading band of Eagles are invited to come to the hill, next Saturday along with the alumni. The traditional rivalry between the teams will make it a real homecoming battle. Although Carson-Newman is the favorite after their 7-6 victory over Milligan yesterday, we wouldn't be surprised to see the Scot underdogs annex some Eagle feathers to their caps. Remember what the underdogs did to Carson-Newman last year's finale?

The Alumni committee and the pep committee are hard at work on the accessories for Homecoming, and it's the plan to make more noise than is coming out of Knoxville in their homecoming game today.

SPLASHOGRAPH

The sports staff gives it's congratulations to Dave Heydinger, who has added to the campus athletic activities what he calls a swimograph club. At the beginning of the year there was some talk of a girl's swimming team. To offset disappointment, "Heydrogen" won the ladies' hearts with a set of charts of races and dives and other swimming achievements to be made individually. The club is so popular that a men's division has been added. See Mr. Heydinger in Bartlett pool to apply.

BACKS SHINE

The Hiwassee game was featured with brilliant running and backfield play throughout. As well as Hughes, some of the Scot pups are showing up. Taylor, a frosh, made several long gains on his exceptional ability to shift his hips in the broken field. Jackson alternated with Hughes on power plays, and scored the final Maryville tally. Witt, a Madisonville boy, showing the homefolks, played consistently good ball.

On the Tiger squad, Capt. Miller proved to be one of the most all-round players to be seen this year. He obviously was the sparkplug of the fine defensive stands of Hiwassee, and did his bit of ball totin' as well, on their sole touchdown march. When Miller was hurt, Hiwassee became a vastly less coordinated team. Honaker vs. Steele, on passing and punting completed a topnotch array of backs.

Wesleyan Outscores Maryville 26-14 By Spectacular Passing

Highlanders Score Twice In Second Half But Fail To Overtake Bulldogs

Wesleyan's powerful Bulldogs outrushed and outscored the fighting Scotties last Saturday night, running up 26 points to Maryville's 14. The Bulldog team showed definite superiority in their smooth deceptive plays and formidable line defense. The Scots again showed the consistency of their aerial combination; but superior weight made itself evident as several more varsity men were injured. The game was played at Wilson Field in the coldest weather of this season, before an estimated 3000 fans.

The game opened with the Bulldogs charging down the field in a prevue of the action to follow. Beginning on their own 35, the 'Dog backs churned through Maryville for four first downs into scoring position on the 10 yard line. A penalty pushed the ball up to the Maryville 1 yard stripe. The Scot line held for two downs on the 1; then Swann went over to score; the kick was wide.

Wesleyan scored again shortly after the second half began. Maryville fumbled, and Wesleyan dropped on the ball on the Scottie 45. On spinners and reverses, they marked up first down. A pass, Block to Baker was good for six more points; Kirksey converted. Several plays after the kickoff, Wesleyan again scored via the air, Block to Knox, who was downed on the 10 yard line of the Highlanders, to set up Kirksey touchdown line plunge. Kirksey boosted the Wesleyan total to 20 with another good kick.

The Scotties surged back after the kickoff to pick up a couple of first downs. Then Hughes cut loose a long pass which Etheredge took on the dead run and went over with it for Maryville's first counter. Hughes' kick was perfect and the score board read: Wesleyan 20, Maryville 7.

In the last quarter, the Scotties doggedly came back again to score from the Wesleyan 25, on the same combination, Hughes to Etheredge, in the end zone. The game reached a climax as Maryville fought down the field again in the last minutes of play: Wesleyan intercepted a Scot pass, however, on their own thirty and ran it deep into Maryville territory. Swann dived across the line two plays later to cinch the game. Final score: Wesleyan 26, Maryville 14.

The game was well played throughout, probably the best game seen here so far.

Swann crisscrossed the field all evening to the Scots disadvantage, and was the standout backfield man for the Bulldogs. Capt. "Joe" Etheredge and J. D. Hughes turned in splendid games for Maryville.

Scots Show Powerful Running Attack To Tame Hiwassee Tiger 19-7 In Inter-Conference Tilt At Madisonville

Fourth Quarter Scoring Spree Led By Hughes, Taylor and Jackson Puts Maryville Out Ahead

The Orange and Garnet of Maryville rolled over the Hiwassee yellow clad Tigers last night by a score of 19-7. The game was featured by fine offensive play by both teams. Hughes of Maryville led the stellar play of the Scots, who had only been given an even chance to down the strong Tiger team. A last quarter rally, which fairly smothered Coach Youell's heavy team, added two touchdowns to the tied-up ball game, and gave good evidence that the Scotties, in spite of injuries, is an improved team. Outstanding among Maryville's offensive feats of the evening were a new pass combination, Hughes to Taylor which was good for 62 yards, and a fake reverse, Hughes to Honaker to Taylor which accounted for the deciding 6 points.

Hiwassee kicked off to Maryville, Taylor skirted the left wing for a first down; and after several bucks (broken up by Miller) Scot Honaker punted out on the five yard stripe of the Tigers. Being back on their heels on the beautiful kick, the yellow-clads kicked on first down, and the Scots started back, having gained twenty-five yards on the exchange of punts. Hughes and Jackson alternating on line plunges through the center and off guard, picked up three first downs, and a scoring position on the Tiger 10. Taylor picked up a yard on a wide off tackle run, and Jackson went through center five yards to the 4. Honaker on an end sweep ended the threat with no gain, as the ball went over on downs. Hiwassee kicked out to finish the Scottie dominated first quarter.

The teams exchanged punts again as the second quarter got under way, and Honaker got the nod on the two, as he twisted to the Tiger 37 yard line. Here, Hughes took over and made a first down over center on the 27. Taking the pigskin around tackle, Hughes churned 25 yards more to the two yard line of the frantic Bengals.

The Hiwassee line held as Jackson and Hughes alternated at center. Then Scot called the unbalanced line to the right and Hughes went over. Hughes converted for the point. Maryville 7, Hiwassee 0.

Hiwassee received, and Steele returned the kick twenty-five yards. An off tackle slant by Steele, constituted Hiwassee's only threat in the first half. He was almost in the open before the safety man terminated his long jaunt. Witt stopped two passes before a delayed pass turned the trick for another first down on the Maryville five yard line. The Scottie line dug in, and four plays later, all the Tiger-trying had not netted a foot. Hughes ran the ball out of danger through guard, and Honaker punted. Kilbourne fumbled and Capt. Etheredge recovered. A pass, Honaker to Etheredge, clicked, as Joe picked the ball out of the defender's fingers. The half was over as the Scots reached the Bengal 10 yard line.

In the third quarter it was all Hiwassee. They picked up four first downs as they headed goalward. The plays were: Steele and Miller on the ground and Steele to Racine and Kilbourne through the air. The Maryville lads finally stopped them on their own 20 and the ball went over. On the next play, a punt, a penalty and the loss of the ball put Maryville in worse straits than before. A delayed forward pass behind the line of scrimmage, Steele to Racine, was good to the 7 yard line, and Steele went around end to score on the next play. The extra point was added when Steele passed to David. The quarter ended as Hiwassee kicked off, deep into Scot territory. Honaker punted and Hiwassee punted back. Maryville started to drive from her own 26 yard marker. After Hughes had "busted" the line for five yards, Honaker tossed a short pass to Taylor out of a semi-punt formation. Taylor tucked the ball under his arm and sprinted 50 yards to the Hiwassee 18 yard line. Then Honaker called the surprise play of the game. The ball was centered to Honaker, at quarter, who spun, and handed it to Hughes, who faked a reverse end run. Hughes then laterated to Taylor, who skirted end for the tally which decided the game. The try for the point was wide.

In the closing minutes of play, Maryville gained possession on the Hiwassee thirty. On a double reverse Taylor moved up to the 25. Hughes bucked through to another 1st down on the 15, where a penalty set the unfortunate Tigers back to the 2 yard marker. A penalty moved Maryville back again, however, to the 7. From here, Jackson went over center to score standing up. The point failed. A frantic flurry of Hiwassee passes followed the kickoff and finished the game up lamely for the smooth-playing Tiger offense. Final score: Maryville 19, Hiwassee 7.

Van Cise And Pratt Reach Finals In Y Tennis Tournament

In the YMCA tennis tournament, the singles finals, an all-freshman affair, was reached Thursday when Ted Pratt, unheralded freshman, beat the favored Ted Kidder in sets of 6-2, 6-2 and Oliver Van Cise topped Ken Cooper 6-1, 6-0.

A doubles semi-final also played Thursday afternoon was won by Morrow and Copeland, who led Felknor and Kidder by scores of 6-3, 6-1.

Moving up to the finals finds the Y trophy for singles going to the winner between Pratt and Van Cise, to be played off at an undetermined date. In the doubles final to be played next week, Morrow and Copeland will be thrown against Proctor and Webster, winners over Hoelzer and Pratt in the semi-final.

Interclass Sports

On Tuesday, the sophomores inaugurated the third week of intra-class football by turning back the freshmen team 20-7. The sophs had no trouble as Howard was connecting with his passes, and C. Scapellati was breaking up the freshman plays with his hard charging.

The sophomores drew first blood in the first half as Scapellati caught one of Howard's passes, and went over the goal line. The extra point was made by a pass from Howard to Walker. Again in the first half, the sophs scored when Hodges intercepted a pass and raced over the goal. This time the try for extra point was batted down.

The freshmen came back strongly in the last half as Rock interecepted a pass and ran the length of the field for a touchdown. A pass from Sweeney to Slaton accounted for the extra point.

Point System Members Announce Captains And Managers For Soccer

Elections of soccer captains and managers for the point system groups took place early in the week, and the following girls were elected by their respective groups: freshman captain, Virginia Margaret Williams; manager, Jeane Stamp; sophomore captain: Ruth Wynn; manager, Phyllis Heaton; junior-senior captain: Catherine Davidson; manager, Virginia Knighton.

The first interclass game, junior-senior team vs. the freshman team, will be played next Tuesday, Oct. 24, at 4:00 p.m. in the gym; the following Thursday the juniors and seniors will play the sophomores, and on Oct. 31 the freshmen and sophs will play each other, thus concluding the soccer season. Basketball will start in early November, continuing until the Christmas vacation.

Members of the soccer teams and the positions that they play are here announced:

FROSH — forwards, Jeane Stamp, Lois King, June Stewart; halfbacks—Aura Santiago, Virginia Williams, Jac Klauber; fullbacks—Natalie Yelton, Becky Jones; wings—Josephine Gillette, Patricia Kinne; goalguard—Marguerite Taylor. Squad members—Virginia Fuller, Mary Ruth Baker, Cornelia Jones, Betty Clevenger.

SOPHS—forwards: Jean Naberhuis, Marian Jenkins, Helen McKay; halfbacks: Phyllis Heaton, Ruth Wynn, Margaret Bailey; fullbacks: Roberta Hope, Ina Jussely; wings: Ann Cargyle, Claire Conrad; goalguard: Dorothy Barber; squad members: Margaret Fain, Katherine Gardner, Joan von Nordheim.

JR.-SENIORS—forwards: Lyn Tyndall, Jean White, Bernice Tontz; halfbacks: Betty Bryant, Ruth Goodson, Mary Louise Cooper; fullbacks: Lorraine Adkins, Virginia Knighton; wings: Catherine Davidson, and Ruth Green; goalguard: Carmen Archilla; squad members—Eleanor Steinbrink, Vivian Moore, Jean Zimmerman, Dot Quass.

Athenian To Have "Girl I Left Behind" Contest

Athenian society will hold its regular meeting this evening in Athenian hall at 6:30. Athenian's ace commentator will open the meeting with the latest football scores of the day. This will be followed by the singing of all three stanzas of the Alma Mater. Bill Gehres will review the play which they may produce this year.

Next week features a "Girl I left Behind Me" contest. The winners for this are to be judged by letters and pictures of the girl. To be eligible for the contest all pictures must be turned in on or before Friday, Oct. 27, to Arthur Peterson at the YMCA. There will be two winners chosen, one for the best picture and one for the best letter.

Carolina Club To Hold Annual Picnic On Oct. 23

At the meeting of the Carolina club, Monday night, Oct. 23, plans will be made for the annual picnic, which will probably be held October 28. The program will consist of a reading by Ethel Grubbs, a short musical number, and a stunt.

The Carolina club, one of the state clubs on the hill, meets bi-monthly in the philosophy classroom, room 214, of Thaw hall. At the meetings the members, numbering about thirty-five, meet fellow "Tarheels" and "Weasels" and become better acquainted with one another.

Theta To Have Musical

Theta Epsilon will hold its regular meeting in Theta hall at 6:15 Saturday evening. An exceptionally entertaining program has been planned. Mrs. Marion Howell, a popular interpreter of rhythm, will be featured in the entertainment along with Bob Paul who will play a clarinet solo and Katherine Estes, who will give a humorous reading.

Stupka Speaks To Club

Dr. Arthur Stupka, government naturalist for the Smoky Mountains Park, will speak to the members of the Nature club at their regular meeting next Thursday evening at 6:45 in Thaw hall auditorium.

The topic of Dr. Stupka's address will be "Through the Seasons in the Smokies," and the lecture will be illustrated with colored slides of scenes taken in the Smokies.

J. Gamble To Address Law Club On Wednesday Night

Mr. Joe Gamble will address members of the Law club next Wednesday evening at 6:45 in Alpha Sigma hall at the club's regular meeting on the subject, "The Don'ts of Lawyers".

Mr. Gamble, a graduate of Maryville college, is one of the most outstanding attorneys in this community and has addressed the club on several previous occasions.

Besides Mr. Gamble's address, many important matters of business will be considered at the meeting. Definite arrangements for the first moot trial, to be held in Bartlett auditorium on Nov. 18, will be made at this meeting and appointment of the attorneys will be made. Further action will be taken by the club on the question of space in the Chilhowean and the picture of the club for the annual will be taken after the meeting.

For most of the first semester, the freshman debate class, under the direction of Mr. Pieper, will be studying just the fundamental principles of debating. Before the Christmas holidays there will be competitive tryouts for the freshman debate teams. Four men and four women will be chosen at this time. The subject upon which they will debate is: Resolved that the Federal government should own and operate railroads.

In it the institutions and research laboratories visited are listed Among these is Maryville college. Maryvilleis the only small college listed in the cataogue from this part of the country. After carefully checking the complete list of all listed institutions, I find that Maryville college is one of the very few Liberal Arts colleges that was visited by the Department of Agriculture's Survey Committee! Why Maryville, do you ask? The answer seems obvious. Maryville's educational rating and record speaks for itself. The Science department rests on a solid, well founded reputation. Once more Maryville conquers intellecually!

Alexander Kipnis Inaugurates 1939-40 Artists' Series Season Thursday Evening, November 9

Metropolitan Baritone Makes Appearance In Varied Musical Program

OPERA STAR TO SING

Tickets For Concert To Be Placed On Sale For Students On Thursday

Appearing on the Maryville college stage in the first of the 1939-40 Artists' Series on Thursday evening, Nov. 9, will be Alexander Kipnis, bass-baritone of the Metropolitan Opera Company. Mr. Kipnis comes to the campus after making successive appearances in Miami, Boston, and New York.

Born in Ukrania, South Russia, Kipnis has sung ever since he can remember. Like every truly great artist, he began his musical development at an early age. Strangely enough for one who now has the deepest voice in the concert world, Kipnis sang all of the important arias for coloratura sopranos at private concerts when just a youngster.

Despite the efforts of the father to influence his son into a business career, the boy had other ideas and devoted his entire time to music. He entered the Conservatory in Warsaw, and was graduated from there with high honors as a conductor in 1912. After this, Kipnis went to Berlin for further study, where he was living at the outbreak of the World War. Here, for four years in the comparative quiet of

Classes Celebrate Halloween Tuesday

Juniors Present First Sadie Hawkins Party

Next Tuesday evening, Oct. 30, Halloween, the freshmen, sophomore, and junior classes will hold their annual Halloween parties. Because of the fact that the freshmen officers were elected only last Wednesday, they have not yet completed plans for their party; but there will be one, the time and place of which will be announced the first of next week.

The sophomore class will have a gangster-moll party at 8:00 p.m. in the Southern Methodist gym. The committee announces that only receipts for class dues will be necessary for admittance; and that only these receipts will procure admittance to the underworld on Halloween. Members of the committee are Phyllis Heaton, chairman; Roger Graham and Allan Moore, general committee; June Morley, entertainment; and Jeanna Stringham, refreshment committee.

The junior class committee has been working on the plans for the junior class party, a Sadie Hawkins party, which will be conducted as such a party should be. Juniors and any seniors who may wish to attend will meet in front of Pearsons at 7:30 in costume, the boys as farmers, mountaineers, and such and the girls in appropriate costumes. The young ladies and their guests will then proceed to the picnic grounds in the College Woods where a real Sadie Hawkins program will be presented. It is hoped that the young ladies will remember the proper etiquette for such a solemn occasion, and will not forget to see the young men to their respective doorsteps, not leaving them stranded nearby.

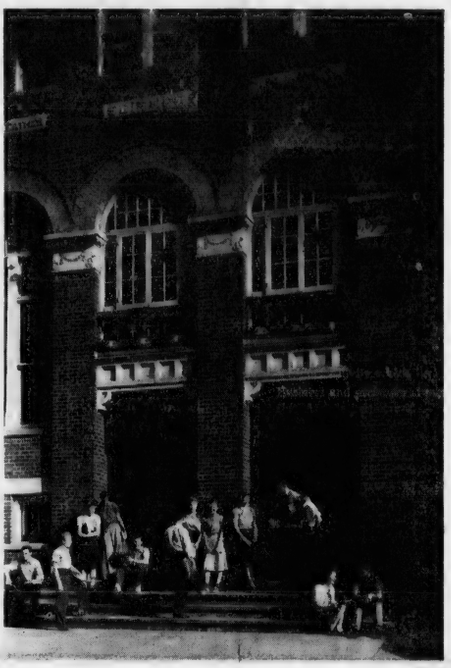
Those serving on the junior committee are Louise Darden, chairman; Phil Evaul, general committee; Rit Anderson and Kitty Bennett, entertainment; Clem Hahn, decorations; Mary Mildred Hatcher, refreshments; Jean White and Vernon Lloyd, publicity.

The seniors, as is the custom, do not have a program of their own, but are free to attend any of the three class parties.

Brick Chimney Will Fall This Afternoon

This afternoon at 1:30 the huge brick chimney of the old power plant will fall. Mrs. John Walker who has been very generous to the college in helping to beautify the campus, will set off an electric fuse which will be connected with the explosive.

The chimney has been so excavated that it will fall toward science hall.



Disc Club To Hear Voice Of Bjoerling Next Thurs.

Next week's Disc club program on Thursday at 4:00, will feature the voice of Jussi Bjoerling, young Swedish tenor who was on last year's Maryville Artists' Series. Leading an all-vocal program, Mr. Bjoerling will be heard singing several of the numbers he used on his program here.

RECOGNITION

The cut used at the top of the front page was made available to the Echo by the Chilhowean staff. Several weeks ago a dozen pictures were made for the Chilhowean as examples of what the pictures for the new annual will be. This cut was made from one of those pictures. We wish to thank the Chilhowean for the use of it.

PRE-CLASS DISCUSSION

Freshmen Select Phelps, Clippenger, Lochhauser And Rees-Jones As Officers

The freshman class held its initial meeting Wednesday morning, for the purpose of electing class officers. At the meeting, presided over by Frank Morrow, president of the Student Council, the class elected the following officers for the 1939-40 term: president, George Phelps, of Canton, Ohio; vice president, Margaret Clippenger, of Atlanta, Ga.; secretary, Trevor Rees-Jones, of Dallas, Tex.; and treasurer, Wesley Lochhausen, of Sanderson, Texas.

A future meeting will be called by the president, at which time the class sponsor and Student Council representatives will be elected.

Devotional Service To Be Led By Mary Orr At Joint YM-YW Meeting

The YMCA and the YWCA are meeting in a combined worship service tomorrow evening at 4:30 p.m. in the auditorium of Bartlett hall. The service is devotional, on the theme "The Name of Jesus," and will be led by Mary Orr, vice president of the YW.

The program will include several musical solos and the use of group hymns to carry out the theme. Erwin Ritzman will play a cello solo, an arrangement of the hymn "Jesus, the Very Thought of Thee"; Frances Seeley will play a violin solo, "Cradle Song," by Hauser; there will be trumpet accompaniment to the hymn "O Worship the King" by Samuel Cornelius.

Old Power Plant Ruins Scheduled To Take Journey to Foreign Land

By CARSON BREWER

Back during the time when some of our grandfathers were absorbing higher education at Maryville, the three buildings of the hill, Baldwin, Memorial, and Anderson, were heated by stoves. Every boy had to get his own wood, or else have someone else get it. I don't know how the girls managed.

In 1893 a revolutionary change in the method counteracting cold was instituted, a heating plant was installed. Not so many years after the heat came electric lights, generated by the same plant.

Since that time, the original boilers have been replaced once. In 1914 a new boiler was purchased to be kept as a spare just in case one of the old ones happened to blow up. For that year, however, the old boilers managed to remain intact. A year later, though, the authorities in charge of steam production decided that the old boilers were due for retirement. As a result of this decision, another new boiler was bought; and, with the other new one, it was installed in place of the old ones.

Now, almost fifty years after the plant was erected, it is being demolished. Another newer, more up-to-date one has taken its place. This afternoon in the affectionate presence of faculty members, old grads, and present-day students the 100-foot brick chimney, for many years a familiar landmark to Maryville students, was torn to the ground.

Perhaps some of you have wondered idly about what will happen to all the old, smoke-blackened steel that is being taken from the old power plant.

Maybe you think that after twenty-five years of such faithful service, they should be retired to some nice, quiet junk-yard, where they could rust in peace (no pun intended) and contentment. Well, maybe they should, but in this age of machines, mad men, and mechanized warfare no such thing can happen.

In the past few years, and especially since Japan started her "crusade" in China, the price of scrap-iron has been climbing steadily. Very recently the British, French, and Germans decided they wanted to have another throwing contest. Since one of their pet throwing materials is scrap-iron, everything from discarded flivvers to your grandfather's old worn-out mowing machine has been made ready for a fall cruise. The same thing will in all probability happen not only to the two big boilers, but to every one of the big bolts that hold the huge supporting crossbars in place, the bars themselves, and, to be

Pres. Lloyd And Dr. Henry Lead Founders' Day Program In Memory of Prof. Lamar

Official Opening Of Drive For Improvement Funds Announced By President

CHOIR TAKES PART

Barbecue On Practice Field Scheduled At 5:30 This Evening For Alumni

The seventh annual Founders' day program was held this morning in Voorhees chapel at 9:45 in honor of the memory of Prof. Thomas Jefferson Lamar who played a conspicuous part in the college's history for thirty years and who was the leader of the second founding of the college after the Civil war.

President R. W. Lloyd, who was the first speaker of the morning, spoke on "The Story of Professor Thomas Jefferson Lamar's Life and Its Relationship to Maryville College." President Lloyd emphasized in his address that it was Prof. Lamar who revived the college after its collapse during the Civil war by firstly, reopening the school at its old location; and secondly, by obtaining funds for the construction of the first buildings on the present campus and the first endowment of $100,000. All of this was accomplished by Professor Lamar almost single handed.

Professor Lamar was born in Jefferson county, Tennessee, and graduated from Maryville college in 1848. From 1857 until his death in 1887, he served on the faculty of the college.

Twenty-Seven Grads Do Advance Study

Fifth Of 1939 Class Teach In High Schools

Twenty-seven of the class of 1939 are taking graduate work at various schools and universities, 22 are teaching and several have accepted other positions. Weldon A. Baird is with the U.S. Naval Air Base Flying school in Detroit, but soon will be transferred to Pensacola. Hazel L. Eddins is with the Public Recreation department in Birmingham, Ala. Marvin D. Minear has accepted a position in the office of the YMCA in Chicago. Catherine E. Pond is the Frontier Nursing Service in Kentucky.

Among those who are taking graduate work, either working on Masters' degrees, or studying in medical, theological, or other schools, include: William F. Alston, North Carolina State college; Warren H. Ashby, Yale Divinity school; Carleen R. Birchfiel, Peabody college; Robert K. Brandriff, Harvard university; Benjamin H. Brown, Duke university school of Law; Arthur D. Byrne, University of Tennessee School of Law; John Knox Coit, University of North Carolina; Ernest G. Crawford, Louisville Presbyterian seminary; Lynn F. Curtis, Vanderbilt university; Howard Davis, Princeton Theological seminary; Miles F. Dills, Temple University of Medicine; Harold E. Dysart, University of North Carolina School of Medicine; Ivan Elder, Vanderbilt University School of Medicine; Ernest C. Enslin, Princeton Theological seminary; George F. Felknor, Tulane University School of Medicine; Edith K. Gillette, Biblical Seminary of New York; Everett D. Gray, Xenia seminary; M. Robert Looloian, University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine; Robert Lucero, Princeton Theological seminary; Suzannah Lupton, Ohio University; John P. Magill, Chicago Presbyterian Theological seminary; J. Palmer Mayo, University of Georgia School of Medicine; Fred B. Morgan, Princeton Theological seminary; Harold Eugene Orr, University of North Carolina; Alice Prime, Knoxville General hospital; Fred L. Rhody, Drew seminary; and Donald Wilmoth, Louisville Presbyterian Theological seminary.

Heads Of Four Religious Organizations And Bible Department Address IRC

The Maryville college International Relations club will feature next Thursday evening, Nov. 2, in Thaw hall auditorium a discussion of the question: "What Effect Do Democracy and Dictatorship Have Upon Religion?". The speakers will consist of the four presidents of the student religious organizations and the head of the Bible department of Maryville college. As a brief introduction to the regular program, George L. Hunt will give a short chronological review of international affairs during the past fortnight, as well as a synopsis of Mr. H. V. Kaltenborn's address at the teacher's meeting in Knoxville last Thursday night.

Russell Stevenson, president of the YMCA, will speak to the organization on the fight between "Hitlerism" and Christianity. Vaughn Lyons, president of the Ministerial association, and Phil Evaul, president of the Student Vols, will point out the effect of dictatorship upon religion in Italy and Russia respectively. To close the student section of the program, Helen Bewley, president of the YWCA, will show the part that democracy plays in religion in these United States.

Dr. Eugene Orr will be the final speaker of the evening and as head of the Bible department, will give his version of the topic "The Future of Religion in the Modern World."

Ground Class Begins For Aviation Course

Ten Students Qualified In Final Examinations

Of the number that were interested in the aviation course offered here at Maryville this year, there are ten who have passed the final physical examination and other requirements and have started attending the ground school classes. Those in charge of this course express their hope that ten more may be eligible, but there is no certainty that this hope will become fact.

The names of those students who have qualified in the final examinations are Frank Morrow, Herschel Pyle, Dudley Moore, James Cunningham, Warren Culver, William Baird, Ruth Mack, Worden Dubois, Robert Jackson, and Robert Schwenk. These ten have temporary pilot's licenses which are good for ninety days, and on the back of each of these pink slips are the proper blanks and spaces for information concerning date and time of the first solo flight of the owner.

The ground class, a very important and necessary preliminary to the actual mechanical flying, has already started. It meets two hours on Monday evenings and one hour each on Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Miss Cora Louise Carson is in charge. At present there are 21 attending class, these being the ten qualified students and eleven others. These others are attending because of their interest and the hope that the final quota will be announced as 20.

There will be 72 hours of ground school, and about the first of March the actual flying should begin. In this course of 72 hours various phases of flying and flying conditions will be studied, among which are the history of aviation; Civil Air Regulatons; Navigation; Meteorology; parachutes; Aircraft and Theory of Flight; Engines; Instruments; and Radio Uses and Forms. In the more technical of these subjects, Miss Carson will be assisted by experts in the various fields. Miss Carson says that she will be glad to have those who are interested in aviation come to the ground school as visitors.

Welcome Alumni!

Welcome alumni! We do mean welcome too and hope that we may extend our greetings to "you-all". There are many things which may have changed since your college days at Maryville, but whatever these changes might be, we're sure that the Maryville spirit still prevails. Certainly these grads would not return to the college just for a barbecue and football game. There is more than that to their visit.

They've returned to renew acquaintances, to see their "profs", to recall escapades of their college days and to feel again that good old college spirit.

It may be hard for us to say welcome alumni when we haven't experienced the feeling of returning to our alma mater as alumni. But even so we still have something in common with these returning grads—they've taken ethics, cut chapel on Wednesday mornings, moonshined, and complained about exams!

And so to you grads we wish a grand Homecoming and hope that you will enjoy your stay!

In Recognition

We ought to be proud of our choir and director after the fine concert they presented last Thursday evening at the ETTA. We, of course, could not help feeling that they had really received an honor when placed on the program with such a speaker as H. V. Kaltenborn. Their singing and the comments of listeners in the audience verify the fact, however, that Maryville college has a fine choir and that their director ought to be duly recognized for the excellent program presented Thursday.

THE COMMENTATOR

Conducted By GEORGE L. HUNT

Sunday, the winds of fall began to blow, and the leaves, caught unawares, went sailing to the ground in great numbers. All the rest of the week more of them fell, and today (Wednesday) you could walk through them, kicking them up, raising a dust, and then having them scatter or land back where they were. At home the corn stalks are being tied together in shocks and yellow pumpkins are getting larger and larger between the rows of corn. It is colder at home than it is here, yet at home we have no college woods to roam through, destination unknown. Autumn is a happy, peaceful time to me. Some poets picture it as the prelude to a cold bleak winter; others compare older middle age to it. I like to think of it as a time restful in its somberness, invigorating in its breeziness, and refreshing in its variableness. It recalls Halloweens and high school football games.

Today I ran across one of Emily Dickinson's little poems on the subject of autumn. Sequestered in her staid New England home she looked out of her window and saw the leaves friskily playing in the gutter. She saw what was new coming out, and she wrote:

The morns are meeker than they were,
The nuts are getting brown;
The berry's cheek is plumper,
The rose is out of town.
The maple wears a gayer scarf,
The field a scarlet gown.
Lest I should be old-fashioned,
I'll put a trinket on.

• • • •

With the approach of autumn comes homecoming, and this year with homecoming comes the final bow of the old power house. All week interested students and faculty members have watched the process of dismantling, paying special attention to the acetylene torches which burn off the plates of the boilers. With the great fall of the smokestack Saturday we will see succumbing to new improvements the pride of 1896. Many a time in Carnegie we have taken to gas masks as the wind brought the smoke in our direction, but that time is no more. As we try to take a picture of the view afforded by our room we will not have the Smoky Mountains through a smokestack, and as visitors to the college park their cars in the place especially designated for them, under the smokestack, they will no longer be running up against a brick wall. A new era has begun; and though we could get sentimental at the passing of our old faithful, we only bid it a welcome farewell.

• • • •

Last Saturday we paid a visit to the new power house and were highly impressed with the difference between that and the old inferno. Bob Martin, on duty at the time, explained very carefully the intricacies of the new boilers. To my non-scientific mind it didn't mean much, but if you are interested it will be worth while to visit the boys who keep the home fires burning throughout the months of school.

HOW TO GET ALONG WITH PEOPLE
Chapter VI—Women

Radio Announcer:

Beloved, your eyes are as sparkling as an Alka-Seltzer program. Your lips are red as Jell-o labels and tasty as its six delicious flavors. For you I'd almost miss the next installment of Stella Dallas. Hook up with me, angel, and we'll build a home with box tops.

• • • •

Theater Manager:

Sweet, your eyes are four star double-features. Your complexion is a triumph in technicolor. You're a prevue of Paradise! I'd rather have your face before me than a million feet of Mickey Mouse. Marry me, love, and I'll give you a free dish seven days a week.

• • • •

Dentist:

Darling, your eyes shine like a gold filling! Your cheeks are as naturally red as the gums on my most expensive plates. To look at you is nearly as heavenly as having one of my guaranteed painless extractions. Marry me, pet, and see your dentist twice a day!

• • • •

College Professor:

Let's see, where were we? Your eyes? Oh, yes, your eyes. Well, your eyes are—are—. Well, your eyes are eyes. Is that clear? Well, your eyes are. Ha, ha! And your cheeks are red as—as—. Your cheeks are red. Your lips are, too. Yes, quite definitely. I think we should be married. What is your opinion on that, Mis—ah, Miss—ah—.

Gridironic Hero:

Hyah, toots. Where ya been all my life? Let's get hitched, shall we, babe?

• • •

The question is: whom would she marry,
Thomas, Richard, John, or Harry?
(Slug, of course, we know she'd save Until her first was in his grave.)
The answer evidently then's
The dentist, who is dandy
At filling teeth, and then again
Because his gas is handy.

Kipnis Sings

a hospital center, he was able to build up his huge opera and song repertoire. His fame spread throughout all central Europe so that at the termination of hostilities, he was engaged in opera and concert in most of the countries of the continent.

After many successes, Kipnis came to the United States in the early 1920's as a star of the famous German Opera Company. He was immediately contracted for the Chicago Civic Opera Company where for nine seasons, he sang principal bass roles. He married an American girl and became an American citizen. Returning annually to Europe, he gave guest performances at Bayreuth and Salzburg festivals of other years. For the past two seasons he has been heard at the International Music festival in Lucerne at the invitation of Toscanini. His favorite roles are Mephisto in "Faust," Leporello in "Don Giovanni" and the New York Times calls him "the greatest living Gurnemanz" in Wagner's quasi-religious opera, "Parsifal." Next to John McCormick, Kipnis has made more gramophone records than any other artist and it has been said that he is one of the small group that has never produced a bad record. Besides his opera work, he has been entrusted with special recordings of Franz Schubert songs as well as special albums for the Hugo Wolf and Brahms Song Societies.

Since 1937 Mr. Kipnis has appeared many times before an American audience, the most publicized of these being that in New York's Town Hall during the 1938-39 season. Concerning one of his most recent concerts the Philadelphia Inquirer says, "his superb singing, excellent musicianship, and winning stage personality made it the most enjoyable song recital of the season."

Tickets for the Kipnis concert will be placed on sale next Thursday at 3:00 in Pearsons lobby. There will also be a sale of tickets for students Friday afternoon and the following Tuesday.

BEAT CARSON-NEWMAN

EXTRA POINTS

By Frank Cross, Sports Editor

SPORTS

GUEST COLUMNIST DIZNEY

In order to keep up with our colleagues across the page, this week the Sports Staff has asked an illustrious personage to give us some opinions on tonight's big game. Chilhowean Sportsman and largest Scottie to face the Eagles tonight, Mr. Dizney is well able to give his views from the bottom of things.

DIZNEY SAYS:—

When Carson-Newman and Maryville take to the field tonight, one of the most heated football rivalries in this section of the country will be renewed. It was in 1920 that they began their present series and since that time, thirteen close games have been played. Nine of these, not counting moral voctories, have seen a triumphal celebration on the hill; but this is no real indication of the type games played. Maryville has amassed an average of 9.15 to Carson-Newman's 7.15 average over the entire series. This small margin is still more unbelievable when we consider that there have been no tie games. If history runs true to form, we can feel assured that tonight we shall see a "game of games."

Once again, however, we are forced to take the underdog's position, but last year, it was the same until some unheard of frosh by the name of Shelfer snagged a payoff pass which gave Maryville the long end of a 7 to 0 score. This year we are not depending on any freshman, although Taylor could brighten our lives with a "Johnny Butler"; but we have our whole squad in starting condition for the first time since the initial game. If our erstwhile cripples turn in the type of game that an ex-cripple, Hughes, did last year, we know that no team will be able to score easily on us. Of course, Carson-Newman has a few things that should not be overlooked. In Biddle, Maryville fans will see the outstanding football player seen on our field since Cartmill, Union's elongated center. He is 190 lbs. of triple threat. He runs both over and around opposing players, passes, and has a dirty little habit of quick-kicking 60 yards, but he is by no means a one man team. He is surrounded by veterans. Shubert, not of serenade fame, and Catlett hang around in the backfield to do a little consistent playing of their own and Captain Monday, at guard, heads an imposing array of beef. If Carson-Newman wasn't overweighing their men, and that doesn't seem to be a habit of football coaches, we will be outweighed fifteen pounds to the man; but our boys have worked on larger projects before.

BEAT CARSON-NEWMAN

Maryville looked like a university town today. The Scottie spirit is running high. The bands on parade; the store windows blossoming, and the town's plastered with "Beat Carson-Newman" signs. WROL will broadcast a play by play description of the game tonight, and the old "grads" will take over at the half. Everbody is out to help the boys BEAT CARSON-NEWMAN.

Van Cise Winner In Annual "Y" Tourney

In the YMCA singles championship last week, Oliver Van Cise was winner in three sets over Ted Pratt by scores of 6-3, 6-4, 6-4. Thus, the gold trophy cup for singles will be engraved with the winner's name, and if won three years in succession, will become his personal possession.

Standings

Smoky Mountain Conference

Carson-Newman	1	0	1
King	1	0	1
Maryville	1	1	0
East Tenn. Teach.	1	1	0
Milligan	1	1	0
Tusculum	0	2	0

The doubles champions were decided yesterday after four hard and furious sets won 3-6, 6-4, 7-5, by Morrow and Copeland. The losers, roommates Proctor and Webster, were subdued only after gallant stands which twice saw deciding sets called off by darkness.

Interclass Sports

Tuesday afternoon the junior class and the sophomore class touch football teams battled to a hard fought tie game ending with the score 6-6.

The sophs' score came in the first quarter when Culver sprinted eight yards to the goal line after a block of a junior punt by Scapellati. A pass far out on the right side of the line early in the second quarter, Nicely to Hahn, resulted in the junior touchdown. The extra point attempts by both teams failed.

Thursday, on the practice field, the seniors emerged with a 24 point lead over the sophomores while holding their unscored on, untied, unbeaten record.

On the first play after a senior interception, T. Etheredge scored for the seniors on a long sleeper pass from Frank Morrow. Although the extra point failed, this proved to be the margin of victory. A touchdown in the second quarter and two in the fourth ended the scoring as these three attempts at extra points also were spoiled.

Tentative Scot Tank Schedule Announced

The Maryville varsity swimming team of twenty-five members is slowly rounding into shape under the direction of Coach Fischbach and Captain Findlay, for it's first meet on Jan. 20. Workouts in practice until Nov. 1, will be confined to track work, cross country running, and special muscle building exercises.

Among the several meets being arranged for the tankers are: Concord State Teachers college of West Virginia, University of Kentucky, Emory; and the other two college teams in the state: Tusculum and the University of Tennessee. With the possibility of Milligan college joining, a Smoky Mountain swimming conference may become possible this year.

Although confessing a scarcity of powerful dash men, Coach Fischbach has at least one potential man for each event and a number of good divers.

On Dec. 9, the team will present a benefit water carnival, featuring a pageant on the history and evolution of swimming.

Homecoming Finds Highlanders Primed For Traditional Tussle With Formidable Eagle Eleven

Maryville Underdogs Face Smooth Power And Passing Attack At Hands Of Heavier Carson-Newman Team

The Orange and Garnet clashes with the Orange and Blue tonight on Wilson Field. Coach "Frosty" Holt brings a favored team from Carson-Newman in this year's Homecoming classic. The Maryville team is primed against their traditional rivals, however, and in the best condition of the season. The kickoff is at 8 o'clock.

The Eagles lead the Smoky Mountain conference as they storm the hill with the alumni. Their attack is concentrated in straight power football, with an excellent supplementary passing attack. In last week's game Carson-Newman beat Milligan 7-6. Milligan beat Maryville three weeks ago by a 7-2 score which by no means showed the Scot strength. The Eagles were tied by King and beaten by Mercer, foes of the Tennessee Vols this afternoon. Maryville sports a victory over Hiwassee from last Saturday. Last year Maryville killed Eagle conference hopes with a 7-0 victory. This year both teams have an identical set up.

The Eagle team is one of the heaviest to meet Maryville this year. They outweigh the slight Scots around 12 pounds per man. Both teams will go onto the grid with all-conference men studding their lineups. For Carson-Newman, Monday, captain and all-conference linesman, stands out. The opposing ends, Wigginton and Etheredge will give an exhibition of topnotch end play. The backfields of both teams are strong. The backfield play should sparkle throughout the game as Catlett and Biddle try to repeat their Milligan performance. Biddle is the 191-lb. fullback who has already made himself outstanding in the conference with his lineplunging. Catlett is a pony back who ran 40 yards for Carson-Newman's sole touchdown against King. Baird will be ready to go again, Tipton is back, and Kramer's knee should hold out. Honaker and Taylor will be primed for Biddle's long kicks and quick-kicks. Tonight's game and next week's battle with King will take more stuff than the team has shown this year, the coaching staff says. The Carson-Newman game is always a game of upsets, however, and should prove to be very close.

Homecoming

President Lloyd also announced that this Founders' day service officially opens the "New Forward Fund" drive which will extend over a period of five years, in an effort to make certain improvements in the college and to increase the endowment. As yet only the first steps of the fund have been announced.

The second address on the program was given by Dr. Silas Edward Henry, who spoke on "Professor Lamar as I Remember Him." Dr. Henry brought out the personality of Professor Lamar as he knew him in the class room and as a professor.

Dr. Henry graduated from Maryville college in the class of '88 and was a junior in the college the year that Professor Lamar died. Dr. Henry's talk on Professor Lamar as a man whom he knew lent a personal touch to the second founder's life and history.

Dr. W. P. Stevenson, the college pastor, gave the prayer of invocation.

The college choir also took part in the exercises of the day, rendering two anthems during the program. The first was "Holy Radiant Light" by Gretchaninoff and the second, "Glory to God in the Highest" by Pergolesi.

Exercises of the Homecoming program will continue through the rest of the day with a barbecue at 5:30 on the practice field and the Homecoming football game between Carson-Newman and Maryville this evening at 8:00.

Junior-Senior Team Wins Intramural Soccer Title

With the winning of both games played this week, the junior-senior soccer team assured itself of the intramural soccer title. On Tuesday the junior-senior girls defeated the freshmen, 8-1; and on Thursday they humbled the sophomores, 7-5. Next Tuesday the sophomores will play the frosh in the final soccer game of the season. Basketball practice will begin the following Thursday.

exact, everything else that the fighters might wish to toss at each other.

Mr. J. L. Scarboro, the man who has bought the materials, told me that he had already had an offer of ten dollars a ton for some of the stuff. He said, however, that he wasn't even going to consider such a proposition. He's waiting for a much better offer. Soon after that offer comes, the pieces of that mammoth, black, soot-covered giant, whose hot breath for many years drove the cold from every hall on the hill, will take a boat ride.

Although we may not be able to accurately predict the details, we can be sure of one thing; most of the remains of the old power house will do more high-geared traveling in the next quarter of a year than it has in the past quarter of a century.

NEWS REVIEW

Fascist Government American Neutrality Neutrality Act Passes

Tuesday, Oct. 31

Premier Benito Mussolini, in a sweeping reorganization of the Fascist government, removed three military officers of the Italian high command who had conducted staff talks with German officers, and two cabinet members who are considered pro-German. The fired Fascist generals had conferred with their Nazi counterparts soon after the signing of the Italo-German alliance in May, and it is believed that they were removed to placate many of the Italian people who object to any policy which might involve Italy in the war on the side of Germany.

Premier-Foreign Commissar Molotov, in a formal report to the Russian Parliament, disclosed Russian sympathy with Germany and her opposition to the war aims of the Allies. She declared that Germany is striving for peace and that Great Britain and France are waging an "ideological" war for which there is no justification.

The Russian Commissar also criticized the United States for giving "moral support" to Finland in the Finnish-Russian negotiations, and for sponsoring the plan to repeal the arms embargo. He expressed the belief that the repeal of the embargo law would intensify and prolong the war.

President Roosevelt has estimated that it will cost the United States government $275,000,000 to safeguard and enforce American neutrality during the first ten months of the European war. Mr. Roosevelt told his press conference that this amount would be asked of Congress in January as a deficiency appropriation, and that it would be used to cover the costs of increases in the armed forces ordered Sept. 8, when he proclaimed a limited emergency.

Wednesday, Nov. 1

By a royal decree martial law was established in 500 key cities of the Netherlands in an effort to bolster defense positions along the German frontier. The decree was said to have been issued as a precautionary measure to curb espionage.

Most of the towns affected were small villages, and none of the country's larger cities were involved.

President Roosevelt replied to the criticism of Russian Premier Molotov concerning the moral support given Finland by the United States by reissuing his statement of six months ago in which he asked that a non-agression guarantee be given for 31 nations.

Mr. Roosevelt's action was believed to be both a reply to Russia and an effort to reiterate American sympathy for Finland.

The President's statement was issued without additional comment either from the chief executive or the State Department.

Thursday, Nov. 2

The United States House of Representatives voted 242 to 181 to repeal the arms embargo section of the American Neutrality Act. The vote, which was taken on the question of sending an uninstructed committee to confer with a senate delegation left the bill

The result of this action will be to open the American munitions market to all nations on the cash and carry terms recommended by the President. The title to all shipments must be transferred to the buyer before the goods leave the country, and shipping facilities other than those of the United States must be used to transport them to belligerent nations.

Friday, Nov. 3

The City of Flint, captured American freighter in the hands of a German prize crew has been reported on its way to the United States. The German crew has been interned by the Norwegian government.

The Nazi story is that the ship was heading for a German Baltic port when a member of the American crew became seriously ill. The Germans put into port in order to give him medical attention, and Norway took the action she had promised to take if the American vessel touched her shores.

45 Year-Old Landmark Falls Saturday

Last Saturday afternoon, a large crowd witnessed the destruction of the old power house chimney. Mrs. John Walker set off the charge that brought the forty-five year old landmark to the ground.

The students, alumni, and townspeople made a huge circle that reached from the tennis courts to Science hall, and around to the front of Anderson where Mrs. Walker's car was parked. A group of students climbed to the top of Anderson tower and others sought vantage points in the windows. A large number of the crowd carried cameras and Dr. Ralph W. Lloyd made a movie of the event.

Mrs. Walker's car was placed on the lawn between Anderson and Carnegie, about a hundred and fifty feet from the base of the chimney. An electric line was run from the president's office to a switch, which Mrs. Walker held, and thence to the charge.

Ten sticks of dynamite were placed on the inside of the chimney and were discharged by an electric cap. Walter Morton set the charge and covered it with bricks and dirt during the lunch

"Our Town" Cast And Staff Study To Aid Production By Attention To Details

The cast and business staff of the play, "Our Town", are working with Mrs. West and members of Theta Alpha Phi to make this play, to be given on November 17, one of the best presentations of the Maryville stage.

In this play serious thought and effort are being given to the improvement of all the details of the play. A new and elaborate make-up kit is now in the possession of the Dramatic Art Department. Charts of the faces of the actors have been made, and the make-up of the actors will be done under the supervision of Mrs. Ed Hamilton and Frank Brink, assisted by Jean Campbell, Jean Hutchinson, and Gordon Bennett, three former students who were prominent on the Maryville stage.

Glenn Young, business manager, has announced that "Our Town" is being produced by Theta Alpha Phi, and more close attention is being given to the business angle of the play. Each ticket is to be numbered in order that a check may be made as to the exact number sold. After the play, Miss Henry's office will audit the books of the business manager and see that everything is in order.

Professors At Historical Meeting In Lexington, Ky.

Professors of the social science department, Prof. Verton M. Queener and Mr. Archibald Pieper, left Thursday afternoon for the fifth annual meeting of the Southern Historical association held at Lexington, Ky.

Headquarters of the meeting was at the Lafayette hotel. President and Mrs. Frank L. McVey held a reception at their home for the members of the association. Among other events was an auto tour of Lexington and vicinity for the visitors. The meeting lasted until noon today, and Mr. Pieper and Prof. Queener will return from Lexington this evening.

Messiah Practice Begins Sunday Afternoon At 3:00

On Sunday, Nov. 5, at 3 p.m., rehearsal will begin for Handel's immortal oratorial, "The Messiah", at Maryville college.

Any students or people of the community who wish to participate will be welcomed at this time.

All soloists will be chosen from those who board at the college or from a select group in town. They will not be chosen, however, for two or three weeks.

The chorus will be accompanied by the organ, piano, and orchestra.

"The Messiah" will be presented on Sunday, December 10, at 3 p.m.

Disappearance Of Benches Threatens Campus Revolt Here

Most people agree that the Maryville college campus is well-benched. Perhaps it is no Italian garden with solid marble seats facing tinkling fountains, but it does ordinarily have a splendid supply of benches, good wholesome, iron benches, rugged, comfortable—and movable.

Ordinarily, therefore, one doesn't have too much trouble locating a parking place for himself and his precious pet. Almost every tree has its bench and every bench is the favorite of some campus-loving couple.

Then picture the perplexed countenances of after-supper sitters who beheld a benchless campus last Saturday night! Imagine their indignation when, seeking their favorite seats, they found them gone! Forced then to choose between squatting like savages on the grass or cruising the campus, most self-respecting couples elected strolling until the seven o'clock bell. But, they muttered, someone would pay.

But, alas, no one paid; perhaps, because the inconvenience only lasted for one evening, and perhaps because the pilfering parties departed before they were recognized. After all, who'd harm a group of old grads for borrowing benches for their barbecue?

Ordinarily, then, we say that the campus is well-benched, probably the best-benched campus for a college of its size in the country. And THAT is something!

Tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock the Student Volunteers will hear Ted Kidder speak on "Religions of China."

Plans for the Student Vols first picnic of the year were discussed by Phil Evaul at the weekly meeting last Sunday evening. The picnic will take place November 18, at the picnic grounds. There will be a charge of 20 cents for each person.

Bruna Castagna To Give Rescheduled Concert On Community Series, Tuesday

Bruna Castagna will appear on November 7, at 8:00 in the University Memorial auditorium.

Miss Castagna was unable to give her concert October 16, because of an attack of laryngitis. Knoxville specialists said that it would be impossible for the Community series and that there would be either a return engagement or another artist.

Miss Davies received a card Thursday announcing the return concert for Tuesday, Nov. 7. Busses will leave the post office at 7:00. The additional fare will not be collected until the last of the series.

Knoxville Secretary At YW

"Vocational Opportunities in the Y WCA", will be discussed by Miss Helen Henderson at the regular meeting of the YWCA on Sunday at 1:15 in the Y rooms. Miss Henderson, a YW secretary at the University of Tennessee, will be introduced by Miriam Waggoner, a former Maryville college student, now attending the university.

As special music, Jeanne Heckman, accompanied by Louise Marshall, will play "Goin' Home" from Anton Dvorak's "New World Symphony."

Choir Appears On DAR Program Wednesday Night

Members of the Maryville college choir under the direction of Mr. Ralph Colbert appeared on the program at the state convention of the Daughters of the American Revolution which was held in Knoxville last Wednesday evening.

Numbers rendered by the choir were "Holy Radiant Light" by Gretchaninoff, "Send Forth Thy Spirit" by Schuetzy, and "Deep River", "Dig My Grave", "Were You There" arranged by Burleigh.

Mrs. Roberts, president-general of the DAR, was the main speaker on the program of the convention.

Kipnis, Metropolitan Opera Star, Presented on Voorhees Stage Next Thursday Night at 8:15

Basso Prepares Russian Songs, Arias and English Airs For Varied Program

OPENS 1939-40 SERIES

Alexander Kipnis, bass-baritone of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will appear on the stage of Voorhees chapel at 8:15 o'clock Thursday evening, November 9, and present one of the most interesting and varied programs we have ever had on our Artist Series.

Mr. Kipnis, a native born Russian, has been, since 1927, an American citizen, having entered the United States for the first time in 1922. It was only a short time after his arrival that he married the daughter of Heniot Levy, the Chicago director of the American Conservatory of Music. Mrs. Kipnis, too, is of a musical family and travels about with her husband during his concert tours. The third member of this musical and much-traveled family is Igor, the Kipnis' seven year old son, who at this early age speaks three languages.

Mr. Kipnis also has a very firm belief that opera should be sung in English. He agrees that music expresses the emotions, but states that words must be there for a right understanding. Another outstanding belief of his is that real music lasts; that an artist today carries a great responsobility. He says, "The artist should give the very best he has, and must try to educate the people into what he knows to be the best. It is a debt he owes to the public and programs with fine music can be much more entertaining too, when carefully planned".

It is with the preceding thoughts in mind, that Mr. Kipnis must have planned the following varied program for our Artist Series concert. The numbers will be Aria from "Don Carlos", Verdi; Gute Nacht, Fischeweise, Der Wanderer, and Der Erlkonig; Schubert: Le Cor, Flegier; Mephisto's Serenade from "Faust", Gounod; Song in the Desert, Katherine Breid; Clorinda, O. Morgan; Into the Night, Calar Edwards; Little Jack Horner (with apologies to Handel), J. Mitchell Disck; Rainbow, The Ring, Night, and The Soldiers' Song, which are Russian folk songs. As can be seen from the program, there are three divisions of songs. arias, Russian folk songs, and English. This certainly carries out Mr. Kipnis' ideas concerning programs with fine music and is also covering a wide variety of types of songs.

Rather interesting is the story of Kipnis' student days. When the World War began, Kipnis was a student in Hamburg, Germany. Because he was a Russian subject, he was put in a concentration camp with English, French, and other Russians. At this time he had no intention of becoming a singer, but he often sang for his own pleasure. One of the Germans, a colonel, heard Kipnis singing and asked him if he was a singer by profession. Kipnis told him no; that he was a student. It so happened that the brother of this German colonel was the general manager of the State Opera House in Wiesbaden; and a short time after this conversation, Kipnis gave an audition for the Wiesbaden Opera. He was immediately engaged for five years, and it was during this war period that Kipnis was able to study day and night and build up his repertoire of opera and songs, and to gain his first important opera and concert experience. So it was that historic events in Germany were beneficial to the musical career of Alexander Kipnis.

Definite Schedule Planned For Clubs

All Meetings Are To Be Concluded By 7:15

In a report made Monday, Oct. 30, by Dr. E. R. Hunter, faculty committee representative on the Scheduling committee, the future program of club meetings was announced. This committee, working under the authority of the Executive Council of the faculty and Student Council, has planned a program of club meetings in which it has tried to avoid bunching of meetings, to preserve some evenings free from such meetings, and to avoid, insofar as possible, conflicts. Several such conflicts were inevitable, but the most serious have been avoided. The program, as planned, designates the first and third Monday in each month as the scheduled meeting of the International Relations club; on the second and fourth Monday will be held the meetings of the Law club, French club, German club, Ministerial association, and Pre-Medical club. The meeting of the Nature club will be held the first and third Thursday in each month; and the state organizations, namely the Triangle club, Carolina club, and the Florida-Georgia club, will meet the second and fourth Thursday of each month.

Cooperation of each club in regard to observing its scheduled meeting time will be appreciated; these meetings, unless granted special permission by the faculty committee on scheduling, are to conclude at 7:15.

If any further arrangements are necessary, club officers may confer with Dr. E. R. Hunter, faculty committee representative, or with John Fisher, Student Council representative.

Mrs. Robert, President Of National DAR Addresses Students, Visitors in Chapel

Last Wednesday morning the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution presented a patriotic chapel service which featured Mrs. Henry M. Robert, Jr., president-general of the society, as the main speaker. Mrs. Robert attended this past week the national convention of the organization which was held in Knoxville.

"Ultimate Values of a College Education" was the general theme of Mrs. Robert's address. She said that one of the most valuable things that we as individuals could learn from our four years of higher education was well expressed in the last line of one of Milton's poems, "They also serve who only stand and wait." Following out this same thought the speaker expressed the idea that association with people of high values should be the goal of a college student rather than popular acclaim. In summarizing, the president-general pointed out that one of the most urgent needs of present day youth was for them to have a faith both in themselves and in the future. In concluding, Mrs. Robert told her audience to remember one thing—"the goodness of God endureth forever."

Driving over with the president-general to attend the chapel service were other national officers of the society: Mrs. B. S. Belt, Mrs. A. B. Rex, and Mrs. C. S. Steele. Also attending the service last Wednesday morning were prominent members of the Maryville chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Mrs. R. R. Kramer and Miss Clemmie J. Henry.

Folklore Collected For "Quaint" and Curious Volume

By MARY ORR

The new 1939 Tennessee Folklore Society Bulletin has just been compiled and has been printed by the Maryville College printing office. These bulletins, copies of which are available in the college library, are printed four times a year, this being the fifth year of publication of the bulletin. Contained in these bulletins are proverbs and superstitions, ballads and songs of the Tennessee mountaineer. Also there are many legends, tall tales, folk beliefs and remedies. Game dance ballads which are called "play party tunes" where the "folks git prancy" are found.

A collection of old English proverbs in use in England before 1500, and which are used commonly by the mountaineers of today is found in one of the bulletins. Sayings such as "There are more fish in the creek than one", and "friends fly with money" are adaptations of lines by Chaucer.

Another bulletin is devoted to superstitions and folk beliefs about ailments and remedies, nature, love and friendship, signs of good and bad luck, and the weather. We find here that one of the very best ways to cure an earache is to put three drops of polecat grease in the ear; and a simple method for stopping hiccoughs is to take nine sips of water counting them backward and not taking a breath between; however, if that doesn't work all you have to do is think of the one who loves you and they will surely stop.

On love and marriage there are numerous superstitions. If you fall up the steps, it is not only a sign that you are awkward but also it is a sure sign that

Division Of Officers

There have been editorials and editorials written in this paper and in papers all over the country about politics and the division of offices. The election of the freshman class officers a little over a week ago has brought this matter of division of offices to our attention.

When we consider that each class has a majority of women and when we consider also the fact that there are four offices to be filled, we usually think that at least two of the offices will be filled by women. The two most usually thought of in this way are vice president and secretary. But our freshman class has done something different by electing three men and one woman to guide them through the year. We wonder how it was that the women let this matter slide by. As we noted before, if representation was a standard by which one selected the officers, we would probably find that the women should hold three offices and the men one.

We do not mean to infer that we are questioning the capability of either group because that is certainly not the purpose of this editorial. But we do think that there are enough women in the freshman class capable of filling a second office.

We have never heard of any consideration being given to the election of a woman for class president. It does seem strange that this matter is usually not even considered. We might put this in the form of a suggestion that when officers for the coming year are being selected, why not consider a woman candidate. We're sure that if in the four classes there is a woman as worthy of filling that office as any man, she should not be eliminated because of her sex.

We aren't trying to rule the policies of the classes, but we are trying to see that each side receives a fair treatment in this matter of division of offices. And we do feel that in this particular instance the women should have more representation.

CAMPUS CRUMBS

With the Homecoming activities over for another year we might start thinking about the days when we'll be Homecoming with the rest of the grads. Can't you just see yourself going to room 248, knocking on the door, and walking in with exclamations about how the room looks "just the way it did when you were there." And then you'd probably wander over to the window and remember the night you threw a pail of water on someone down below. All the while the occupants of 248 would be gazing at you speechless but with thoughts that you were just "another grad"..... Did any of you happen upon the old grad who wanted to know whether the dining hall was still in the same place? We wondered if he thought it was still in Baldwin..... The exploding of the chimney last Saturday caused a good bit of excitement. Maryville became just another mad rush of souvenir hunters after the great downfall. We wonder what will become of the bricks that were carried back to Carnegie, Baldwin, Memorial, and Pearsons. We have often heard tell that what is needed in an emergency is a "brick" but we hope that none misinterprets that statement and uses those fifty-year-old ones..... We became quite amused at Alfie and Mom at the chimney ceremony. They couldn't decide whether it was safer to stand in Science hall where the noise would be great and the windows might break or out in the open where they might be hit..... If any of you are interested in what are called "ghost writers", you might interview any senior whose last name begins with A. to E. Several weeks ago they received offers to have their themes and term papers written—at a price, of course. We've read about this in stories but we hadn't come across it as an actual fact before..... We hope that you have noticed the ringing of the bell in Anderson tower between classes. This was made possible through the action of the student council, and we think they deserve recognition for the fact that they are showing what they were organized for..... If any of you should happen to walk up the steps in front of the Chilhowean office and should find yourself sticking to the steps, dont think that that's the way the Chilhowean is attempting to get subscribers to their annual (it might be one way though), but blame it on John Ballenger, who attempted to remove the barrel of cider from the office while the hole was still unbunged..... We think that the speaker in chapel on Wednesday did very well, and we were pleased to hear her. There was one thing she said, however, that many here at Maryville are already practicing. That is that you don't learn as much from your classes as from your associations and friendly conversations. From the number of friendly conversations we see going on around the campus, we might conclude that certain Maryville students will be well educated when they graduate..... We also have thought that the students might have had several D.A.R. representatives on the stage. They might not have been as good in the speaking line, but they certainly could shine intellectually..... We were glad to see the respect a freshman showed to a certain senior girl the other Monday morning. He'd walked by her once when he suddenly reeled around in front of her and told her he'd come to his Tuesday class. Whoever he is, we might explain to him that freshmen don't have to explain their foolish actions to seniors—in fact, it's often better to keep those things to yourself..... The Halloween parties were great successes from all we hear. Did any of you see Prof. Case in his tails and red tie at the junior party? Marion Northup, we hear, was quite a gangster's moll at the sophomore party. The atmosphere at all the parties seems to have been in keeping with their theme. We were glad to see originality in the planning of these affairs

THE COMMENTATOR

Conducted By GEORGE L. HUNT

Next Thursday night we will have the opportunity to hear this year's initial Artist Series number. Mr. Alexander Kipnis in coming to Maryville is following in a line of enviable artists who have appeared on the Voorhees chapel stage in the last ten years.

Many years ago the present series was nothing more than the ordinary lyceum program. It presented readers, Swiss bell ringers, illustrated lectures and the like. There would be a large number of programs but all catering to the small group at the college. About ten years ago, however, Prof. George D. Howell became chairman of the committee in charge and over a period of years, by limiting the programs, getting outstanding artists, and soliciting patronage o ffthe campus, has been able to develop the present Artist Series. The expense is met by a part of the students' activities fees and by the sale of tickets to music lovers within travelling distance of Maryville. Today the series is known as one of the outstanding concert programs in the nation, and people travel from Georgia, Chattanooga, and North Carolina to hear the artists. We are singularly fortunate to have such a series provided for us.

In the past several years Maryville has been host to such pianists as Jose Iturbi, Josef Hofmann, Moriz Rosenthal, and Walter Gieseking, without exception the highest ranking living pianists. The name of Ignace Paderewski would only be needed to complete the list. Among the concert vocal artists have been Helen Jepson, Anna Kaskas, Julius Huehn, John Charles Thomas, and Jussi Bjoerling. Choral groups have been the Don Cossack Russian Male Chorus, the Vienna Boys Choir, and the Salzburg Trapp Choir; a few years ago the series featured Albert Spaulding, widely-acclaimed violinist. In this long line of the top-ranking artists in their respective fields comes this year Alexander Kipnis, Zinka Milanov and Carin Carlsson in joint recital, and Myra Hess.

Myra Hess is the featured artist this year and will appear during the second semester next year. She is considered the greatest living woman pianist. A few weeks ago the news magazines carried the story that Miss Hess is now in her native England organizing concerts at low admission costs among artists in all fields for the war-racked, unnerved British people. It is from this work that she will come to America and to the Maryville Artist Series.

A few years ago the student participation in the management of the series was reorganized. When the lyceum first began it was under the joint sponsorship of the YM and YWCA, but over the years it came more and more under adult supervision. Today it is managed by a faculty committee headed by Prof Howell; an appointed student representative, Philip Evaul; and especially-appointed members of the YM and YWCA cabinets, Allan Moore and Barbara Swift.

Dear Aunt Katie,

I am a unejukated hill gurl and wood like to no how to win a husbin who is rich and gudlooking. I am purty. I can cook. I can sew. But I caint danse. What shood I do?

Bedelia Ladel

P. S. rememur he has got to be gud-looking and rich.

Dear Bedelia,

Your heart-rending letter reached me this morning and I sat down to answer it right away. Oh, the tragedy of an educated mind! But it is evident, my child, that you have a heart that beats with love of service to your fellowman. You can cook and sew. Ah, what priceless knowledge!

I would advise you then, Bedelia, to register for a course with a good correspondence school. May I suggest Lickem and Sealem, The School With The Stickiest Stamps! After one of their guaranteed college courses you can compete with the best-dressed debutantes.

Their address, knowing you will be interested, is 101 Birdbath Boulevard, Palace Heights, Penn. Tell them Aunt Katie mentioned it and they will give you extra attention.

TALK OF THE WEEK . By Arlene Phelps

Folklore Society

you won't get married that year. Concerning dream we find that if a young girl dreams of sour pickles it is a sign that she is going to be kissed. Just what the connection is the proverb doesn't go on to say. The mountaineers think it is bad luck to sweep after sunset; while some of us think it is bad luck to sweep.

In the bulletin for April, 1939, we find a valuable collection of old tunes and ballads many of which are known all over the country. Songs such as "Old Zip Coon", "The Animal Fair," and "I Wish I Was Single Again" are heard often over the radio today. These tunes have long been used by the mountaineer in his folk dances, and at general get-togethers. Most of these tunes have a melancholy air and have been handed down from generation to generation.

The purpose of the Folklore Society in issuing these bulletins is to preserve the quaint ideas of the Tennessee mountaineer, and to make available to those interested some conception of the mind, character, and life of these people who constitute one of the purest strains from the English and Scotch-Irish who came to America before the Revolution. Away in the mountains by themselves they developed an Americanism untainted by the cosmopolitan spirit which took the rest of the country.

The members of the Folklore Society, to which several members of our faculty belong, seek to search out these valuable bits of pure Americanism and preserve them against the time when the Tennessee mountaineer is lost in the whirl of civilization.

Chimney

period. Bob Toms, Maryville electrician, wired the circuit and prepared the switch which Mrs. Walker held. A metal shield was wired across the side next to the tennis courts and heavy timbers were placed on the Anderson side to prevent flying bricks.

When the "all clear" signal was given, Bob Wilcox played taps from the third story of Anderson. When Mrs. Walker pushed the switch there was a dull roar and the chimney slowly leaned toward Science hall. On its way to the ground it broke near the middle and fell to the ground.

Upon being congratulated and asked how she felt, Mrs. Walker replied without hesitation, "I feel wonderful." Although she is eighty-seven years old, she was very alert and interested in the details of the whole event.

There were many alumni at the chimney falling and a few who saw it built. Among those was Mr. Clay Cunningham, of Laketon, Fla., who said that he did not enjoy seeing it fall half as much as he did seeing it go up.

A number of brick left with the crowd as souvenirs of the occasion. Two of the bricks are labeled and placed in the college museum.

People Making Progress
Know The Value of Saving...

Why Not Let Your Money Make Money?

Knowledge and ambition go hand in hand with saving. People of Maryville, on the way up, are the majority of people who have placed their savings and investment accounts with the Bank of Maryville. They KNOW it's the safest and wisest place in the world to make money!

Plan on accomplishing the things you want to do, and decide to save a certain amount each week or month.

BANK OF MARYVILLE

"THE OLD RELIABLE"

EXTRA POINTS

By Frank Cross, Sports Editor

SCOT SPIRIT

The Orange and Blue—and white clad team went home rather bewildered. They claim Maryville is their jinx game. Last week, the boys held the Eagle beef trust (somehow that doesn't sound right) and managed to do some of that same jinx passing again. The "Frosty" team will have to get hot to crack the Maryville spirit. We've got a notion that the Highlander's morale has a lot to do with the jinx.

EAGLE SCRATCHES

The terrific play of the Carson-Newman game maimed Maryville's first eleven. The team that'll meet King tonight, will look like the halves of two jigsaw puzzles put together, but we guarantee that it still won't make a very favorable picure for the Tornado. Bob Jackson is injured and out for the season probably. The driving little fullback is thought to be suffering from brain concussion. Captain Joe Etheredge has a twisted knee, and won't see any service until next week. Incidentally, Etheredge has scored in every game this year. Kramer may have to give way to his knee often, although he is scheduled to start. Cragan was hurt yesterday; and so it goes with most of the regulars. They are a mighty bruised up bunch.

MUM'S 'DE WOID

Professor A. C. Adams announced last week that King college is withdrawn from the Smoky Mountain Conference. He added that the administration of the conference was taking over faculty duties. Commissioner Lowe explained that he had declared some 14 men ineligible because they refused to be interviewed. This turns the King game into an entirely different category. Coach Honaker says that the game will have no effect on our conference standing, win, lose or draw. In other words we will be in striking distance of the championship when we meet Teachers next week if someone can manage to trip the Eagles. With the Tornadoes, however, the Scotties still have a score to settle.

LAWYER-PREACHER CONFLICT

"I've never had contacts with ministers before, and I don't like it", growled Procter to Akana as they wended their woozy way home from the game. Pres. Webster claims technicality, besides postponing the club's regular meeting until his colleagues recuperate. This came about after the dust cleared on annual Preacher-Lawyer classic (renowned for its gentlemanly rivalry).

The Preachers' 7-0 victory resulted from a very original play. Rev. Stevenson passed to Peterson among a group of objectors. Peterson got the jump and tipped to Fish. Fish after pausing for a chat with the fellows, scuttled across the goal line without a lawyer laying on a hand.

The Preachers of course converted. After President Webster delivered President Lyons to the chapel via the wheelbarrow method, Webster claimed a moral victory.

Scotties Fight To 6-6 Tie With Eagles At Homecoming

Etheredge Scores Lone Scot Score As Maryville's Passing Attack Clicks

Last Saturday night the Maryville college Scotties and the Carson-Newman Eagles battled to a bruising 6-6 stalemate before approximately 3500 shivering, but thrill filled fans at Wilson field.

The heavier Orange and Blue, who entered the game as the favorites, drew first blood in the first quarter, when as the climax of a sustained drive of 47 yards. Shubert crossed the double stripe on a plunge through the line. The Highlanders retaliated in the second quarter, when they moved the ball 75 yards down the field, and as a final touch, Capt. Joe Etheredge cut sharply in back of the Eagles secondary to take a 45 yard aerial from Hughes for the tying six pointer.

Carson-Newman, defending the north goal line, kicked off to Maryville and the fourteenth encounter between these two colleges was underway. Scot Honaker took the ball on his own five yard line, reversed his field and wormed his way in a spectacular display of open field running all the way to the Scotty 35 yard line, where he was finally pulled down by several Orange and Blue clad warriors. On a series of three plays, the Scotties worked the ball to their own 45 where Honaker's attempted punt was blocked by a charging Birdman and was recovered on Maryville's 35 yard line by Carson-Newman. The Eagles advanced the ball as far into the Highlanders territory as the 25 yard line, but the defense tightened and the ball changed hands. Deep in their own territory, Maryville kicked on the first down to their own 47 yard line, from which point Carson-Newman began its touchdown drive. In seven plays, which included three first downs, they had moved the ball 38 yards to Maryville's nine yard line, from which point Shubert then took the ball, and driving forward like a battering ram, crossed the final stripe into touchdown territory. Biddle failed to convert the extra point as the quarter ended.

The Eagles again kicked off to the Scotties as the second quarter got underway. From their own 30 yard line, the Scots shook loose their backfield men in two plays for their initial first down of the evening. On the next play, Hughes faded back and tossed a pass into the waiting arms of Lloyd Taylor. This was the start of Maryville's first real offensive thrust of the game. The sticks were moved another ten yards on the next two plays, and then Honaker faded back and threw another aerial. Again it was Taylor who snatched the pigskin out of the cold crisp air for the Scotties third successive first down. These passes, combined with several running plays brought the ball a total distance of 30 yards to Carson-Newman's 45 yard line. At this point Hughes again faded for a pass, and although hurried in his passing by the charging forward wall of the Eagles, he let fly a 45 yard pass to Etheredge, who, evading his man, dived for the ball and held on to it for Maryville's only score. The try for the extra point failed as more than half the ball was ruled outside of the post.

The fourth quarter began rather auspiciously for Maryville when a Carson-Newman pass was intercepted. Then after a short gain by a running play, Hughes faded back and shot a pass that Fred Shelfer went up into the ozone and pulled it down for a spine tingling completion. After three more running plays which netted no yardage, Hughes again faded to pass, and Shelfer again brought the crowd to its feet as he gathered the pigskin in his outstretched arms and fought his way down to Carson-Newman's nine yard line. After three downs advanced the ball to the one foot line the Eagles' line held and turned back every offensive thrust hurled at them. On receiving the ball, they kicked from behind their own goal line out to their own 35. Catlett tried a placement for a field goal, but the ball went wide of its mark. The Scotties took the ball on the twenty yard line and Hughes again faded for a pass. He let go a 43 yard thrust which was intercepted by an Orange and Blue player. After four more plays the game ended with the ball in Carson-Newman's possession on Maryville's 45 yard line.

Cross Country Team Handed 37-18 Defeat

In a thrilling cross country meet held at 4:00 Friday afternoon over the rain swept three mile loop, the University of Tennessee finished ahead of the Maryville runners on the winning end of an 18-37 score.

First place was taken by "Red" Austin in a time of 10 minutes 25 seconds with second and third places also going to U-T. Don Kent, first for Maryville, took fourth honors closely followed by Mooney, Butler, Lyons, and Nicely in sixth, eight, ninth, and tenth places respectively.

Under the cross country scoring system which the low team wins, each man is credited with the number of points equal to his position at the finish. In this manner U-T won, placing the first three, the fifth, and the seventh for the low score of 18.

The loop in reality is a two and one quarter mile course. Starting out at the edge of Wilson field, it runs through the college woods to the picnic grounds, past the botanical gardens, up the amphitheatre hill, across the woods to the road, down Court Street to the college steps and up across the campus to the starting point.

Next week end, the squad of seven men under student coach Steakley, will leave on a three day trip for a Saturday meet with Georgia Tech in Atlanta. On the following Friday, Nov. 16, the team will engage Tennessee in a return dual at Knoxville in which they will strive to hand the new coach his initial setback.

Freshmen Girls Win Over Sophs In Soccer Tilt, 5-4

Sophomore women lost the final soccer game of the current season to the frosh last Wednesday by one point. The score was 5-4. Tournament winners of the season, the juniors and seniors, had a group picture taken Thursday afternoon for the Chilhowean. Also on Thursday basketball practice was begun. Selections of teams and elections of captains and managers will take place in about two weeks.

Crippled Scots Face King's Redshirts At Bristol Tonight In Grudge Game

Juggled Lineup Makes Highlanders Underdogs As King Makes Debut As Non-Conference Foe

A battle scarred Maryville team invades Bristol tonight to meet the King Tornado. The Redshirted lads led the Conference, until this week, when they withdrew from the SMC entirely.

Their record still looms up in front of the riddled ranks of the home eleven. However, King defeated Concord State Teachers of Virginia, 3-0; they tied the Carson-Newman Eagles at Carson-Newman's homecoming tilt, and they romped over State Teachers last week, 19-7. Unlike the Scots, the King team held the Eagles, in their deadlock, on the defensive, after a long run which tallied for C-N. Their team is big and powerful, using a straight punch on the ground and in the air, rather than some of the fancy football seen against the Highlanders in other games.

Maryville was toppled out of the Smoky Mountain championship hopes by King's breezy 13-7 victory last year; this year, although nothing vital is at stake, the Scots will be out to revenge the big blow for honor's sake.

The Maryville lineup against King sounds like a roll call of the second string. Captain Joe Etheredge will be benched with a twisted knee, suffered against Carson-Newman. Jackson, the powerful fullback, who has been filling Morton's shoes very handily, received the worst injury of the year probably, in what was thought to be concussion of the brain. He may be out the rest of the season. Jimmy Witt has been sick for a couple of weeks, and will not be ready for service either.

King has been handicapped all year by the loss of Clabaugh, the little fullback who dynamited himself into conference prestige last year at the expense of the Scotties. They have a well balanced squad, however, led by Comsea, "Mauler" Hawkins, and Messerole in the secondary, and Wade in the forewall.

The Honakermen journey to Johnson City to vie with the defending SMC champs next week.

Heydinger Starts Swimograph Project

On Friday, Oct. 13, the Swimograph club held its first meeting in the swimming pool building. The club, whose aim is to arouse college interest in swimming, is for both boys and girls. All types of swimming and water feats will be taught, and the club will take part in the water carnival on Dec. 9.

The swimmers will be divided into three groups, advanced girls, elementary girls, and boys. The advanced swimmers, both boys and girls, will be taught difficult feats as well as how to improve their swimming and timing. The elementary groups will be taught the correct ways to swim until they become proficient enough to enter the advanced groups. Later in the year, a mixed group of advanced swimmers will be formed in order to put on special stunts.

About twenty advanced girls were present at the first meeting, and an equally large number has signed up for the other two groups. Dave Heydinger and Coach Fischbach, who are in charge of the swimograph, are well pleased with the prospects as most of the best swimmers in the school have registered for the course. To create interest among the swimmers, a "wheel of chance" is to be used. This is a large wheel with numerous stunts printed on it. Just before practice begins, each swimmer spins the wheel and performs the stunt that is required of him. Perhaps he must swim two hundred and fifty feet backstroke or fifty feet breast stroke.

A definite time has not yet been planned for the meetings, but everyone who is interested in swimming is invited to join the club. Further information can be secured by seeing Dave Heydinger or Coach Fischbach.

Tumblers In Shape

Clem Hahn is rapidly whipping his tumbling team into tip top condition for their first appearance, which will take place at the Barnwarming, Dec. 30.

Members of the team who will participate in this inaugural unveiling are: freshmen, Hopkins, Schwartzwald, and Ballinger; sophomores, Baptist, Cross, and Butler; juniors, Hahn and Tapp.

The squad has been specializing in human pyramids, which we'll no doubt see a lot of at the Barnwarming.

Interclass Sports

Playing their last YMCA tournament game, the seniors beat the juniors in a hard and free scoring battle ending with the score 31-6. A pass in the first quarter from Bennett to Hahn resulted in the junior's only touchdown, the first score across the senior goal line during the season.

The last half started after the seniors had connected for two touchdown passes from Morrow to Woodring and Etheredge. Three other touchdowns were made on a pass, a blocked punt, and a lateral pass, the latter for the only successful extra point of the game.

Although there remains one other game to be played, this victory brings the seniors a victorious margin of six wins and no losses, and automatically allows their entry in the Thanksgiving day game with the all-stars.

Kipnis Sings

Mr. Kipnis has some very decided views as to art. He has noticed, as have many other music-sensitive people, that when a program is announced as containing the works of such famous composers as Brahms or Schubert, it is the older people who comprise the audience, who are appreciative of the music. Perhaps it is because the composers are afraid of being laughed at by youth that they fail to put down what comes from the soul; and in this way we are losing today many great gifts to the world of music.

Mr. Kipnis has three things which he is particularly proud of and prizes very highly. One is the Czarist watch, with which he was presented upon graduation as conductor from the Conservatory in Warsaw 25 years ago. The second is his United States passport which means more to him than just the protection its affords him while in foreign countries. With continuous traveling from one concert engagement to another, the little marroon book has become filled in less than two years with visa stamps and currency checks, and it seems that Mr. Kipnis takes delight in warning various frontier officials, in one of the six languages that he speaks, to have a care and put their stamps and entries close together. The third and most important item of the list, is Kipnis' seven year old son, Igor, who is probably the most-travelled seven-year-old in the world. Asked if he would like to be a famous singer like his father, he replied, "Oh, Daddy says that unless I grow up to be a tenor, it's hardly worthwhile."

According to Mrs. Alexander Kipnis, her husband is not only a great musician, but a connoisseur of clothes. Mrs. Kipnis says that he likes to go shopping with her, that he has perfect taste and helps her choose many of her clothes. Although traces of her native accent are still evident, Mrs. Kipnis speaks four languages fluently; and with the amount of traveling that she does of necessity, it would seem that versatility in language would come to mean a great deal to her. She cannot remember how many times she has made the crossing from New York to Europe, but has been to and from South America six times, and has just returned from a four months' trip through Australia.

This recent highly successful concert tour of Australia and New Zealand ended by the Kipnis family taking the Australians by storm, and the Australians in turn took this family of three into their hearts. At the conclusion of his first concert in Sydney—he gave eight recitals each in Sydney, Melbourne, Adelaide, Brisbane and others in New Zealand—he was presented with a huge toy koala bear. He had never heard of this peculiar animal before and was much amazed and delighted. However, he discovered a tag on the animal's rudimentary tail which said: "For Igor, in appreciation of his daddy's great artistry." Then, with joking reference to the fact that it is the father who pays and pays, he gave several encores for the delighted audience.

Miss Davies Injured By Fall On Thursday Morning

Miss Katherine Davies was unable to meet her pupils Thursday and Friday because of an injury received at her home. Prof. H. E. Ellis has also been away for the past week.

Miss Davies fell at her home on Goddard street last Thursday morning about 6:30. She came to chapel but later thought it best to consult a doctor and was told to stay quiet for awhile. Friday afternoon she was sitting up in bed and planning to be out today.

Prof. and Mrs. Ellis are at their summer home of Burrville, Tenn., on the Cumberland plateau near the Kentuckky state line. Professor Ellis left last Saturday for a week's rest and will return to the library Monday morning.

Bainonian Initiates Tonight

Bainonian will hold its weekly meeting on the third floor of Thaw Saturday evening at 6:15. At this time the old members will initiate the new ones by a ghost party. It is especially important that all members note the place of the meeting: the third floor of Thaw hall.

Alpha Sigma To Meet 6:15

Alpha Sigma will hold its regular weekly meeting at 6:15 tonight in Alpha Sigma hall. A program of interest to all has been planned, and a large attendance is expected.

NEWS REVIEW

Good Offices Offered Hitler Escapes Death Border Incident

Tuesday, Nov. 7

King Leopold of Belgium and Queen Wilhemina of the Netherlands made a dramatic offer of their good offices to mediate a peace between Germany and the Allies, before the war "begins with its full power". The move apparently came as a surprise to both belligerents.

Informed news agencies reported that the offer was prompted by information received at The Hague that the Nazis were about to take a chance on an attack against the Maginot line. Neither side has shown serious inclinations that the offer will be accepted.

Georgi Dimitroff, secretary-general of the Communist Internationale, writing in the official magazine of the organization, severely criticized American neutrality by branding it as "hypocritical". Dimitroff's statement was issued as a part of the great military celebration of the 22nd anniversary of the Communist revolution, held in Red Square in Moscow. He declared that the United States was becoming an arms factory for England and France.

Wednesday, Nov. 8

Chancellor Adolf Hitler barely escaped death in a terrific explosion which wrecked Buergerbrau beer cellar in Munich after he had completed a militant war speech. The blast killed six veteran Nazi leaders and seriously injured 60 others.

The meeting at which Hitler spoke was a celebration held to commemorate the Fuehrer's first public appearance in the name of the Nazi party, which was made in the spacious beer cellar.

The explosion came about ten minutes after Hitler and his party of Nazi officials had entrained for Berlin. The program was scheduled to last over an hour longer, but was suddenly cut short. The crowd which packed the hall had not dispersed when the charge of high explosive was set off. The charge was placed in the room above the cellar, and the ceiling of the room collapsed into a mass of debris.

Thursday, Nov. 9

A border incident in which two persons were killed and several abducted into Germany occurred on The Neatherlands-German frontier. As tension increased in Holland and in Belgium because of the fear that Germany may attempt to penetrate France by invading one of these neutral powers, The Netherlands began flooding her lowland defenses by opening the dykes. Both countries cancelled all army leaves and took precautionary defense measures.

The seriousness of the situation is further indicated by the fact that the American and the British consulates in Holland have asked that all their nationals leave the country as soon as possible.

Thirteen Members Elected For Collegiate Who's Who

Twelve Seniors And Junior Nominated To Honorary Group; Fisher, Hunt, Law, Mack, Morrow, Orr, Pflanze, Walker Are Included

An honorary group of thirteen Maryville college upperclassmen, including Ruth Abercrombie, Ruth Crawford, John Fisher, George Hunt, Jane Law, Dan McGill, Ruth Mack, Frank Morrow, Mary Orr, Otto Pflanze, Russell Stevenson, Arda Walker, and Ruth Woods, have been selected for membership in the 1939-40 edition of Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities, according to letters received from the University of Alabama this week by both the Personnel office and the nominees.

Maryville college is one of 521 colleges and universities which annually elect their outstanding students into "Who's Who". This year the student-faculty committee made the nominations for the official publication of the organ, which is issued annually from the University of Alabama.

The motivating idea behind the project is that extra-curricular activities are the best index to a student's ability, and, as a consequence, the emphasis of selection has been placed on that phase of college life. However, there are several other required qualities for nomination and final listing, among which are character, scholarship, and the possibility of future usefulness to business and society.

Ruth Abercrombie, an English major from Methuen, Mass., is the editor-in-chief of the Highland Echo, and has been on the staff for four years. She is a member of Writer's Workshop, Bainonian, the M club, and was on the '39 Chilhowean staff. She was a cabinet member of YWCA for two years, and has served as a member of the social committee for the past two years.

Ruth Crawford, a town student, is a Latin major and also a member of Bainonian. She is Nu Gamma leader this year, and secretary of the student council, an office which she also held her junior year. Besides this, she was a May day attendant in '38.

Fisher, a member of the governing board of Writer's Workshop, is doing honors work in his major field, English. Also this year he is a member of the student council and the stage crew. In the second year of his college course, he was a reporter for the college paper and was the production manager of the Alpha Sigma midwinter. Fisher makes his home in Hamadan, Iran.

Also doing honors work in English, Hunt, a senior from Springfield, Pa., is a member of Pi Kappa Delta and Athenian. He has been a member of the Highland Echo staff for four years, being managing-editor last year. Also he was a member of the '39 Chilhowean staff and the secretary of the YMCA. Last year Hunt was in the Athenian-Bainonian midwinter and was the secretary of Athenian. He held the position of treasurer in the freshman class of '36-'37.

Freshman Student Council Representatives Elected

At a meeting held in the chapel Wednesday morning, the freshman class elected its two Student Council representatives and the class sponsor. The delegates chosen for the Student Council were Irma Russell of Rockford, Tenn., and Fleming Griffith of Ravenna, Ky.

This meeting of the freshmen was the first one conducted by the class officers. The newly elected president, George Phelps, presided.

The following were nominated for class sponsor; Margie Fields, Mary Jane Person, Mary Virginia Williams; Ruth Johnson, Martha Walker, Martha Badgett, and Cherie Curtis. The result of this election will not be disclosed until the publication of the Chilhowean.

Mrs. Pflanze Addresses YW On Marriage As A Career

Mrs. Otto P. Pflanze, of Maryville, will address the YWCA meeting Sunday afternoon; the meeting will be held in the Y rooms, at 1:15. The subject of Mrs. Pflanze's talk will be "Marriage as a Career for Women". Marie Fawcett will furnish special music in the form of a marimbaphone solo.

American Public Schools Host To Parents During National Education Week

To celebrate this week as National Education Week, American public schools have been host to thousands of parents and other citizens interested in the United States School system. Planned originally to acquaint the public with the work and aims of our schools, the idea has become the foundation for the most important week in American educational endeavor.

Leaflets containing the ideals of education have been distributed; daily programs, open to the public, have been presented showing the various phases of our educational system; and newspapers have carried features and editorials about the week's activities.

Since Maryville college has so many students interested in teaching and education as a career, a study of the following points taken from the official leaflet might be interesting. What is Education for the American Way of Life? It is universal, opening its doors to all the people; it is individual, helping each person to make the most of his talents; it is tolerant, seeking truth through free and open discussion; it is continuous, knowing that learning is a lifelong necessity; it is prophetic, looking always toward a better civilization.

In acknowledgement of National Education Week, Dr. N. T. Preston of the psychology and education departments, reviewed its history and purposes briefly in chapel Tuesday morning.

Law Club Sponsors Moot Trial Next Week In Gym

Members of the Law club will hold a special meeting at 6:45 Wednesday evening in Alpha Sigma hall at which time Mr. Archibald Pieper, graduate of the University of Texas law school, will speak on court room procedure.

Mr. Pieper's talk will be of special interest to those members who are taking part in the moot trial which is to be held the evening of Nov. 18, in the college gym.

Members of the club are asked to take special note of the change in the date of the meeting.

Lloyd Flies To St. Louis

Dr. Ralph W. Lloyd left on Wednesday for St. Louis, where he will attend, on Thursday afternoon, a meeting of the Department of Church Cooperation and Union of the Presbyterian Church of the U.S.A. On Friday morning a joint meeting of this department and a similar department of the Protestant Episcopal Church will be held to discuss the union of the two churches. Dr. Lloyd is expected back Saturday.

Social Committee Plans Athletic Program For Tonight In Gym At 8:15

This evening at 8:15 in the Alumni gym there will be an Interclass Athletic Meet which is being planned by the Social Committee. To the winning class there is to be presented a silver loving cup in keeping with the occasion.

Upon arriving at the gym, the participants will be separated into four different groups according to their respective classes; and each of these groups will have their own cheer leaders, cheering section, and teams for track events, swimming, basketball, and baseball. The contestants for the various sports will be chosen from those members of the four classes who are present; and for this reason all who come must wear rubber-soled shoes.

The judges and announcers of the sports events will be Dean E. R. Hunter, Dean F. D. McClelland and Prof. R. J. Dollenmayer, who will take up their duties with all the gravity that the seriousness of the several events demands.

Reproductions And Paintings On Sale

Contemporary Paintings On Exhibit In Pearsons

Expert reproductions of water color and oil contemporary paintings are now being exhibited at the college book store; these reproductions are from the permanent collection of pictures which the art department owns. Students may purchase similar prints, through the art department, which may be used as Christmas presents. The cost is $1.25 per reproduction, instead of the customary $5.00 charged non-members of the Living American Art, Inc. Orders will be taken at the book store.

This price is possible through the art department who is a member of this incorporation. It is similar to the Book of the Month club, two pictures being distributed a month to art department, in an effort to better understand and appreciate contemporary American artists.

Beginning immediately, there will be two contemporary American pictures exhibited every month in the lobby of Pearsons hall, pictures distributed from Living American Art, Inc., which represent the expression of great energy in the work of human beings and in the forces of nature, through the use of angular lines and forms with rich somber colors contrasted with sudden light accents. Especially to be noted, is the good reproduction of the thick energetic use of oil paint.

The art department has subscribed for the past year to Living American Art, Inc., and now has a collection of prints by contemporary artists which are being circulated in the residence halls. The variety of art expression will be immediately noticed in this collection. It represents the work of many different personalities for the many different environments to be found in the United States.

College Players Will Open Maryville Dramatic Season

JOHN WINTERMUTE

FRANK BRINK

Wilder's "Our Town" To Be Presented In Voorhees Chapel, Friday Evening

WINTERMUTE STARS

Neither Scenery Nor Stage Properties Used In This Unique Drama

Maryville college's dramatic season will open next Friday evening at 8:00 in Voorhees chapel when the College Players, under the direction of Mrs. Nita Eckles West, present Thornton Wilde's unique play, "Our Town," starring John Wintermute as the stage hand; Frank Brink, Louise Allen, and William Gehres as the Gibbs family; and G. H. Phelps, Mary Frances Spurlock, and Carol Dawn Ward, as the Webb family.

Cast in the role of the stage hand, John Wintermute has one of the most difficult roles that he has yet played on the Maryville stage. However, Wintermute has already proved his capability by his performances of the leading roles of Danny in "Night Must Fall" and of Grandfather Vanderhof in "You Can't Take It With You." Both of these plays won the Theta Alpha Phi dramatic award in their respective years. Wintermute will also be remembered for his performance in "Tovarich."

Louise Allen, who plays the part of Mrs. Webb, made a lasting impression by her portrayal of Charlotte Lucas in "Pride and Prejudice." She has also taken part in several other Maryville productions.

Carol Dawn Ward, William Gehres, Mary Frances Spurlock, and Frank Brink also had leads in "You Can't Take It With You" last season which won the Theta Alpha Phi cup for 1938-39.

William Gehres and Frank Brink are both juniors. Gehres made his debut in "You Can't Take It With You" as Ed Carmichael. Brink is a veteran of several seasons, having taken parts in several plays, the most outstanding of which was the part of Gorochenko in "Tovarich."

George Phelps is the only newcomer in the list of leading characters. Phelps will make his first appearance at Maryville tonight in the part of Mr. Webb. Although a freshman, Phelps is by no means a newcomer to the stage and from all indications will give an excellent interpretation of this role.

Other members of the cast include Richard Boyd, David Hall, Betty Lee Wilde, Edward Thomas, Esther McCollum, Ruth West, Maurice Rorex, Erwin Ritzman, Troy Moore, Marianne Coleman, Ruth Cathcart, June Morley, Josephine Farr, Elizabeth Glover, Anita Raeburn, Carlyle Collins, and Betty Clevenger.

Mrs. West stated yesterday morning that the play was moving smoothly, and all indications point to a most excellent production. She also stated that the play is one of the most unique that has ever been written. It is full of humor but requires a great deal of intellectual interpretation.

Some of the most hilarious events take place when Dave Hall, Howie Newsome, drives a horse across the stage and when lovers talk from balcony windows that are not there. Also, during every act a typical country choir sings and adds its atmosphere.

"Our Town" is a play in which neither scenery nor stage properties are used. The unique style and drama of the play and its subtle humor helped to make one of the most successful plays on the legitimate stage in many years.

YW Is Sponsoring Annual Barnwarmin'

Alumni Gym Will House Circus On November 30

This Thanksgiving, Nov. 30, as has been the custom for several years, the YWCA is sponsoring the annual Barnwarming in the Alumni gym. It will be held at 8:00, with the usual admission of fifteen cents.

The theme which has been chosen this year is the Circus. There will be a large number of unusual sideshows and a full program of thrilling, daring, and spectacular feats.

Harriet Miller is the chairman of the committee which is working on this project. She is being assisted by the following: Marianna Allen, program; Isabelle Jay, sideshows; Lois Ann Alexander, decorations; and Aline Campbell, publicity. Representing the YM as the business manager is Erwin Ritzman, vice president of the YM.

Franklin Speaks Wed.

The Rev. C. McCoy Franklin, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Madisonville, will speak in chapel next Wednesday, Nov. 15. Mr. Franklin was formerly connected with the Crossmore School in North Carolina. He has lectured extensively throughout the country, speaking on life in the southern mountains, and is very well known.

Business Staff Elected

At a meeting of the Publications committee on Thursday afternoon three freshmen were elected to the business staff of the Highland Echo. Kenneth Cooper, Roy Crawford, and Donald Hopkins will be freshman assistants. Cooper is from New Jersey; Crawford from Maryville; and Hopkins from Florida.

Pictures For Chilhowean Taken At Concert, Thur.

Work on the 1940 Chilhowean is progressing rapidly. All the senior pictures have been turned in, and editor Steakley reports that he has one hundred and twenty-two pictures for the senior section. During the two weeks that the junior section was open 91 juniors were photographed by Daddy Webb and others. The sophomore section has been open for one week and will be open for two more weeks.

On Thursday evening at the Kipnis concert informal shots of dignitaries were made by Chilhowean staff member Howard Disney. These will be placed in the snapshot section which is being featured in the 1940 Chilwean.

Letters Give Intimate Picture of the Hardships Of A French War Family

By JOHN ROSS

We, here in the United States, seldom get a first-hand account of the everyday life in the war areas. Following are some random statements from letters by an American in France who is married to a French artillery officer, and who has left her home near Paris and gone to the seashore with her two small children. These quotations will give some general attitudes and some definite incidents that happened to this particular family. This is not propaganda and should not arouse any feelings, but should be taken only as first-hand history of things as they are seen in France.

From a letter dated September 4, these excerpts: "During these two anxious weeks I could not see any real solution except war, but until the hostilities actually began, there was always a thread to cling to. Pierre was in Holland and Belgium at the beginning. Last Monday he came back to Paris because they said that the frontier would be closed. I talked with him on the telephone that morning, and that was the last long distance call allowed in France. Mail began coming irregularly and telegrams (in French only) had to be stamped by police before being sent.

"On Friday noon, when general mobilization was announced, we packed all the winter things and the radio and left for La Baule, in the car, because Pierre was not due to report until the second day of mobilization.

"I hope I have a letter from him tomorrow, but I suppose he will not be allowed to tell much that I want to know. We get mail only occasionally and very few newspapers. Fortunately I have the radio. And I have the car, which was not requisitioned by the Army. I do not dare use it much for fear of not being able to get to gas if I should absolutely need the car sometime.

"We are staying here (seashore) for another six weeks, at least until we see how badly Paris is bombarded and how far around Paris the bombs reach.

"I thought that the strain of last September and then last spring was about as much as I could stand, but that was nothing compared to yesterday and today, since Pierre has been

Scenery, Air Travel of Country Impress Russian Guest Artist

By GEORGE L. HUNT

Maryville not only heard a superb artist but also met a magnificent personality at the concert last Thursday night. From the "Don Carlos" aria to the "Don Giovanni" number the audience was captivated by a man who was so anxious that they should understand each piece he sang that he explained all the numbers not fully annotated on the programs and by a dramatic artist who interpreted with every action even the simplest art song. Both of these things were carrying out Alexander Kipnis' firm conviction that music to be rightfully appreciated should be understood.

In the afternoon as he leaned earnestly forward in a chair at the guest house in the college woods you could tell that this was a subject very important to him. The story in this paper last week had carried the remark that Mr. Kipnis believes opera should be sung in English. When asked about this statement, he tried to explain in a quiet, sincere voice what he meant. Appreciation of music would be increased one hundred percent, he believes, if the audience knew the words being sung. He took as an example the beloved "Evening Star" from Tannhauser. The music in a certain place represents the moon rising, and the words likewise express this idea. The American audience that does not understand German will not appreciate this unless they know from the words that the moon is rising, and then they will see the full significance of the music. He went on to give further examples as he tried to prove his point; and explained that on a concert program he can give the meaning of each number before it is sung, a thing impossible in opera. This raised the further question if he believed that English was as beautiful as any other language, and he replied, "Certainly I think so."

Alexander Kipnis is as friendly and gracious in private as he is before an audience. During the ride from Knoxville over the new airport highway he was an interested observer of the

Armistice Day

The signing of the Armistice twenty-one years ago today at the conclusion of what we now term the first World War meant much to the people of our democracy. It meant that they had done what they thought was best to preserve democracy in the world.

Ten years later the situation had changed somewhat and after the economical upheaval in 1929 and 1930, the attitude of the people changed also. Perhaps what they had done for democracy had really not been for the best. At least indications of this idea could be felt as it effected their life and the life of their neighbor. Abroad, too, signs of unrest could be visualized, and the harmony and peace which had been expected to prevail among the people there could not be sensed so easily.

Today, conditions have changed radically, and it is not necessary to tell anyone that there is another World War in progress. What then, we've heard questioned, is the significance of an Armistice day in a world which is filled with war and reports of war? There is a significance, however, although it may not be as great as it might have been a year ago. We are still striving for peace—our country is still striving to preserve democracy. It's method is different—we are attempting to save our own democracy and not that of the world.

College students are supposed by many to be the most ignorant people about anything which does not go on in their college life. We disagree. We believe that they are awake and alive to the fact that we must have peace and that we must seek to maintain that peace. We've read articles and articles about the necessity of youth realizing their responsibility and it is generally agreed that peace is our responsibility.

Movements have been on foot on many college campuses to increase the feeling among students to act in behalf of peace. Perhaps a whole student body's going on record as favoring peace and vowing to further it may not seem a noble gesture but it is sincere in its purpose. We feel that our campus, too, could become more united in its action for peace either through the IRC or through some other group movement.

From the West comes the following football story. It happened in the TCU-UCLA game. A TCU halfback fought hard from the kick-off but couldn't get past the line when he carried the ball. The reason—UCLA had three colored boys in their line-up and one or the other stopped him dead every time. Finally his perseverance was rewarded. A blasting charge carried him past the colored men and he was tackled by a white man. Staring upward, he murmured, "Dr. Livingston, I presume."

CHRIST IN CONCRETE—Pietro Di Donato. Bobbs Merrill Co., 1939, 311 pages.

This book is not outside reading for any Bible course, but is a novel by a young American-Italian bricklayer and a recent selection of the Book of the Month club and is now climbing high on best seller lists. It is a book the reading of which leaves you dazed and undecided yet conscious that you have been in another world depicted by a poet with burning beauty. The strange world is that of the Italian laborer in his work and his home in New York; the beauty is the result of a haunting power of expression and a grasp of graphic descriptive details.

You cannot go very far in the book without becoming immensely impressed with the language. Di Donato knows his countrymen, from his own experience he knows their life and thoughts, being a bricklayer he has command of the technicalities of the work; and by combining this knowledge with a native gift of powerful expression he produces the language of the book "Christ in Concrete." Almost any page contains material illustrative of this point, but let me give one example. It is not the best, but for my purpose it will be sufficient.

Luigi, Italian workman, has had his foot crushed in a construction accident. The author depicts these thoughts running through the mind of the man as he is about to have the leg amputated:

From where come these Christians to dismember me and do they know I am Luigi and will they take from me life? But tell me, you people whole and well, who holds me to this course and why is Luigi here? Might I not fly from you to a distant refuge, to a cave and as animal on hands and knees lick my hurt and eat roots of earth and fish of sea, and to wing to the Saviour from under a sky clean—clean and broad without pain and fear....?

The entire review could be based on the language, but the theme and plot of "Christ in Concrete" must be dealt with to give a rounded impression of the book. Briefly, the plot concerns the struggles of an Italian family after the father of the family is killed in an accident on the job where he is working. The theme is the simple, unselfconscious, natural acceptance of the responsibilities incumbent on the workingman with a family. From the very beginning we see deified in the minds of all the importance of Job, and as the novel progresses the increasing devotion to Job is described moving in the mind of the young bricklayer who is the main character in the book. Young Paul is twelve years old when his father is killed and he takes upon himself the responsibility for the family. He becomes a bricklayer like his father, and we are able to watch closely as he progresses in learning his trade. Immediately upon becoming the head of his household he learns the importance of Job.

Job may be the main theme, and inter-related to it is the theme of the religious devotion of the impressionable, faith-filled family of Annunziata, mother of Paul and widow of Geremio. The accident which takes away the husband and father does not weaken the deep religious devotion of the family but rather strengthens it. The mother's spirit keynotes the spirit of the whole family, the children all accepting and sharing without question her love and devotion. Paul, too, is obedient and faithful; but over the six years which the book encompasses the necessary allegiance to Job, the thwarted development caused by a stolen childhood, doubts raised in his mind by an atheistic neighbor, the hard lot of foreigners mistreated by American employers and unsympathetic city officials, and finally the death of his godfather caused by an accident on Job, cause Paul to deny to his mother the reality of an all-caring God. As Di Donato describes it "where there had been supplication there was intense question; and upon the humbleness had come quiet bitterness." To his mind all workmen are Christs in Concrete, sacrificed on the cross of Job for the sake of unsympathetic, unappreciative employers.

Paul's crushing of the crucifix causes his mother in a frenzy to disown him and sends her to her deathbed. In the last few pages, beautifully moving for their poignant pathos, she forgives him and believes he has re-embraced the faith he denied. But we are not told whether he returns again to Catholicism, and the book ends with that question still in our minds.

It is difficult to express an opinion about "Christ in Concrete." I would rather leave it that an opinion, being but the idea of one mind, is not necessary. I recommend it, however, to anyone willing to understand the environment that produced it, the soil from which it has sprung.

TALK OF THE WEEK . By Arlene Phelps

French War Family

gone. My heart is in my throat most of the time and it seems impossible to go on, but I suppose I will get more courage as time goes on. The hardest part of all is to keep life running along smoothly and as normally as possible for the children with a smile and a part in their play.

"I have had to explain a little to Mary XXX. She told Peter today, when he was saying "papa", that papa had gone to war because of a "villian Monsieur".

"I feel very close to the French these days and I feel as though it were my war too. That monster (Hitler) was becoming a terrible menace to France, eating up one country after another without any one stopping him. I have never seen the French so calm and determined. Even the man on the street realizes that it is not to help Poland that we are at war but to save our own skins. If only it can be over quickly, this is our hope and prayer."

The following quotations are from a second letter written on Sept. 14 at the seashore: "Pierre writes that the spirit of the men is curious—they are all perfectly furious against the Germans but are going about their duties with great calm and determination. Everyone in France and England is determined to settle the account with Hitler XXX and put an end to this "guerre des nerfs", as the French call it, that we have been going through for so long. I did not know that the English could get so worked up over anything as they are over Hitler and Nazi-ism. They are even more furious than the French, if that is possible.

"Germany is apparently going through the same atrocities as in 1914, trying to frighten the people into submission.

"I am very anxious to see what is going to happen to the neutrality law next week. It doesn't seem possible that we don't do something to help the democracies, not by entering the war, but by keeping Hitler from getting materials that he needs for a prolonged war. Everything should be done to make it as short as possible, although they say that England is preparing for three years.

"We have everything that we need and they say there will not be a shortage of any kind this winter.

"The things that have been eliminated are: cakes and pastries, fancy breads and later on there will not be much chocolate or candy, although they say that there will be enough sugar, for home use. Since writing you last week I have had all the milk that we need. There was a shortage for a few days until women could replace men on delivery."

These letters were generously loaned by Miss Katherine C. Davies, who is a cousin of the author.

Campus Crew Plans Road On Site Of Power Plant

Preparations for the building of the new road that will lie between the tennis courts and the site of the old power-plant have been going on all week. The telephone poles that are in the way of the road have been taken up and re-located, and the power lines have all been relined.

One of the hardest jobs of the year, raking the leaves off the campus, was started this week. The leaves will be taken to the farm where they will be used as bedding for the stock this winter.

Student workers have also been building a stone wall along the railroad, parallel to the bank.

Reflections

Once you were my all, but ow you are gone—never to return!
I never thought you meant so much to me until you went away.
Now I can see you were my everything.
Remember when we used to ride in the roadster and you would stick so close to me?
And all those days and nights together?
People used to tell me how pretty you were.
Still I didn't think much about it.
Now that you are gone, I'm doomed to be a bachelor.
Without you—nobody!
Oh, how I miss you—my hair!

Add another year to the anniversaries since Armistice Day. Add another tear for those shed over suffering in war-ridden lands. Add another prayer of gratitude for America at peace, with life and liberty for all. Add another wish, that this democracy in which we live may carry on for all time; in order that our children and those who come after them may enjoy breathing the gloriously free air we still know today.

THE HIGHLAND ECHO NOVEMBER 11, 1939

EXTRA POINTS

By Frank Cross, Sports Editor

NEWBERRY COLLEGE HAS INVITED THE SCOTS TO A POSTSEASON GAME on the New Deal Thanksgiving Day. If the boys go, and the coaches seem pretty certain they will, they'll meet the Indians on Sitzler Field in Newberry, South Carolina. Newberry, carrying scarlet and grey colors, is a member of the SIAA conference. Their record always stands high among the small colleges of the south. This year they beat Citadel (if the Vols get romped on this afternoon, that ought to put Newberry in line for a bowl bid) and Oglethorpe in a very hard schedule.

MESSRS. FLEMING, CLICK AND PIERCE SEEM TO BE DRAWING most of the football gossip this week. Minus any propaganda, these seem to be the facts on the said boys.

Fleming will be the spearhead of the Teachers' running attack. Hs is tall and rangy, speedy and hard to handle. Last year he started against Maryville at quarter, and was the outstanding man on the hill that night. This year, he is even more centered in the running attack at left half. Fleming was hurt two weeks ago in the King fray, but is feeling fine again. He was all-conference last year and co-captain of the Buc eleven.

Click is an outstanding linesman of the conference. At guard he shared honors with Fleming last year in all-conference recognition. He is also one of the reasons the Highland team is gonna have trouble gaining through the line.

"Jabo" Pierce, frosh midget, seems to get his chance this afternoon. With Honaker injured, he should garner some of Hughes' passing and punting burden. Pierce, if anything, is smaller than Scot. He starred for Powell last year. He played his first college football against King last week. Although he was pretty nervous in his aerial antics, he got loose a couple of niee punts.

AN INJURY COLUMN SEEMS TO TAKE UP MOST OF THE SPORTS PAGE EVERY WEEK. We're thinking about making it a regular feature.

The gang is recuperating from last Saturday, but won't have recuperated by Saturday. Among those that are out or about out, Scot Honaker and Joe Etheredge lead the list. More about them later. Jackson, Morton, and Witt are among the recuperating. Jackson and Morton won't be ready. Bad knees number four or five, on the team. Etheredge, Gamble, Kramer, Tipton, and Sieber, are marked up in this list. The team is in the worst shape of the year, but the Bucanneers will see some peppy limping.

THE CARNIVAL TAKES ON NOVEL SHAPE THIS YEAR as Coach Fischbach announces an entirely new theme. The idea that the men's varsity and the girl's swimming club has started practice on has to do with the evolution of swimming. Such characters as Cleopatra (Cleopatra's identity will not be disclosed until the ninth) and Antony lead the list. It seems that some of these oldsters would make a pretty good swimming time. Ben Franklin taught some of Europe's crowned heads to swim. After sketches of History Highlights, the carnival will climax with an aquacade. It will be the best carnival ever to show at Maryville if plans to continue to work along the above lines.

CAPTAIN JOE ETHEREDGE AND SCOT HONAKER HAVE GIVEN THE SCOTS SOME VITAL STITISTICS this year. Among the nine touchdowns that have been scored this year, Etheredge has scored six; all on the end of a pass. Honaker with a little assistance from "High School", has been tossing these haymakers. Scot has a shoulder injury which will prevent any passing whatever. These statistics don't seem to help any this afternoon.

Tornado Hits Scots In Last 3 Minutes To Score 13-0 Win

Over-anxious Highlander Passing Proves King's Delight At Bristol

After holding a much-favored King college eleven scoreless for fifty-seven minutes, the Maryville Scotties were victims of their own over-anxiousness; and therefore lost their game with the Tornado by a 13 to 0 count in Bristol last Saturday night in the last three minutes of play.

Smith, King left halfback, made possible both Tornado touchdowns by intercepting two Maryville passes, flung as last-minute scoring efforts.

After the first pass interception, the Tornado drove to the Maryville 20. There Clabaugh, King back, heaved a pass to the Maryville goal line, where, after being desperately batted back and forth by the opposing players, it was caught by Kursavage, giant King end, who fell over the goal line for the touchdown. Heaslo converted the extra point. With but a minute left to play, the Scotties made a desperate razzle-dazzle attempt to score. Hooker snared a pass and attempted to lateral. Smith charged in to pluck the ball out of the air, and raced to the Maryville 10. From there, Ivan Decker, King flankman, took the ball on a wide reverse around end for the second Tornado touchdown.

Maryville's only big scoring threat came in the first few minutes of the first quarter; it fizzled out, however, on the King 28.

The game was very unorthodox in that the ground-gaining methods used by both teams were the exact opposites of what the two teams usually use. Maryville, ordinarily a dangerous passing aggregation stayed on the ground for most of her gains. The running attack, spear-headed by J. D. Hughes, who came through with his best game of the season, continually gave the Tornado trouble. On the other hand King's usual hard running game was displaced by a surprising passing attack.

Typical of the desperate chances the Scotties continually took was a pass from behind their own goal line. The pass was good for fifteen yards.

One bright spot for the Scotties was the punting of Pierce, freshman back. Other pleasant memories are the vicious play of rugged Nig Wilburn, Hughes' line-plunging, and Hooker's surprisingly good play at the end position usually held down by Captain Joe Etheredge.

Captain Etheredge, Jackson, Witt, and Morton were kept out of the game by injuries.

Fischbach Tells Of Annual Aquacade For December Ninth

Primping primarily for the History and Evolution of Swimming to be given by fifty men and women swimmers, Coach Fischbach's proteges are fast developing for the super water carnival to be held on Dec. 9. Climaxing the show, there will be presented a novel World's Fair aquacade, featuring men and women precision formations, fancy swimming, and diving.

The thirty-one varsity members compose the strongest all-round Maryville squad ever to be assembled on the Hill. Practice is much farther along now than at the same time last season, probably due to the month's dry-land practice on the track and field. At the end of each day's practice since hitting the water, special attention is placed on the individual man followed by five minutes of water polo.

Girls Play Basketball

Good basketball is being played by the point system women in their regular Tuesday and Thursday afternoon practices. A definite schedule for interclass games has not been completed, but the tentative plans are for six games rather than three, as in soccer, thus giving each team two games with each opposing team.

Interclass Sports

For the fifth straight time, the frosh touch-football team was defeated when the sophomores won last Tuesday afternoon's fray in a riotous and scrappy battle, ending 18-0.

The first sophomore score came in the first quarter on a touchdown pass which was thrown and carried for fifty yards by Rowan and Walker. While backing up the line in the last quarter, McGaha snatched a frosh pass and sprinted untouched to the payoff line. As darkness was falling in the closing minutes of the game, Walker scored the third touchdown on a sleeper pass thrown by Rowan after which the extra point, like the others, failed.

Providing most of the excitement in the game, was Cyrus Scapellati against frosh brother, Enrico.

In the last regularly scheduled YM touch game, the juniors romped over the five times beaten freshmen on Friday by a score of 20-0.

Taking the ball from his own 15 yd. line position, Steakley threw the first touchdown pass to Findley over the right side of the line. Switching roles, Findley tossed to Steakley on an over center pass for the extra marker. In the second frame, Peterson hauled down a tricky thirty yard pass for the second six pointer. After the whistle had blown on a freshman offside penalty, the unhearing runner ran unmolested through the whole team for a touchdown legalized by taking the gain instead of taking the penalty.

As a part of the Thanksgiving day program, the undefeated seniors, tournament champions, will play the all-stars, selected from the other classes.

Harriers Slated To Meet Georgia-Tech Today

Led by Don Kent, Maryville's number one cross country man, the Scotties will match strides with a heavily favored Georgia Tech cross country runners at Atlanta this afternoon.

Seven men are making the trip. They are Bill Mooney, Don Kent, Alf Davies, Julius Nicely, Vaughn Lyons, Dave Butler, and Doug Steakley.

The boys left here Friday afternoon. They will probably return late tonight or Sunday morning. If it is at all possible, the boys will see the Kentucky-Georgia Tech football game in Atlanta this afternoon.

Maryville Out For Pirate Booty At Johnson City Today

Injured Scot Gridmen Give Bucs And Fleming Even Odds For Win

The Scotties are Johnson City bound, today, for a good old fashioned afternoon ball game.

The ETTC Bucaneers, defending Conference champs, show a poor record, but a one man ball team in Fleming, the speediest half in the SMC Maryville looks good despite a flurry of injuries this week. The Honaker-Etheredge combination that has won our games, is broken up again, and Maryville will have to depend on her ground strength.

Carson-Newman whipped East Tennessee Teachers early in the season 13-0; Emory and Henry won over them 12-0; King took a 19-7 victory, two weeks ago, over the prone champs. Contrasted with this, Maryville has been holding her own nicely, although King took advantage of the cripples to eke out a similar margin, last week. Coach McMurray, a Maryville product, holds an advantage other Smoky Mountain teams don't. He knows the Honaker system and will have his boys primed for it. Last year Teachers gave the Highlanders the drubbing which paved the way to the Pirate's winning of the title. The final score was 20-13, of which about two touchdowns were Fleming's individual work. Maryville led at the half after an 85-yard gallop by George Morton.

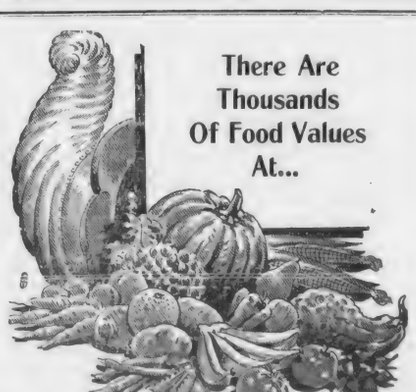
Morton is back at work, getting in shape again, but won't be in the game. Etheredge's game knee will limit his chances of seeing action. For the first time this year Scot Honaker is ailing, but he and Jimmy Witt may still be able to trouble the Bucs.

There is a little confusion as to the time of the game. By Maryville time, the game starts between 1:30 and 2:00. That is an hour earlier than Johnson City time. The band and cheerleaders are making this their annual trip, and together with a large number of Scot rooters will bolster the squad in this game which packs a lot of rivalry.



After the Teachers are hurtled, the Maryville team comes home for Cumberland U.

Who's Who

Bainonian president, Jane Law, from Harrisburg, Pa., is also a member of the YWCA cabinet, Writer's Workshop, and the BG's. In her junior year, she was the secretary of the class of '40 and of Bainonian, besides being Dr. Hunter's assistant, a position which she holds again this year.

McGill, another town student, is doing honors work in the department of economics. In addition to leading the honor roll for the entire school last semester, he was a member of the student council, and an assistant under Dr. Preston.

Ruth Mack, a senior from Orlando, Fla., is another student who has consistently made the honor roll, and has led the school three times. She is the secretary of the class of '40, and was the representative of the student council of the same class two years ago. She is the only girl taking the aviation course sponsored by the Civil Aeronautics Authority, and is doing work in mathematics for her major.

President Morrow of the student council, is an assistant in his major subject, biology, and a member of Hi-Y and Sigma Phi. Besides being on the honor roll, he has played in the first slot on the tennis team for two years, and will do the same this spring. Morrow lives in Anniston, Ala.

The only junior to make "Who's Who", Mary Orr, is the vice president of the YWCA; a member of Writer's Workshop, and also activities-editor of the '40 Chilhowean. In addition, she has been a member of the Echo staff for three years, and the student council for two years. Mary is another Maryville student and has chosen English as her major subject.

The fourth town student to be nominated to "Who's Who", Otto Pflanze Jr., member of Writer's Workshop, is president of the honorary fraternity, Kappa Delta, having been a member of the debating team for three years. Last year he was the editor of the '39 Chilhowean, president of the International Relations club, and a member of the orchestra. Also, he was on the Echo staff for three years and has been on the honor roll for the same period of time. Pflanze is taking history as his major subject.

Stevenson, sociology major from Pittsburgh, Pa., is a member of Athenian, of which he has been vice president, and is president of the YMCA, in which he has been a cabinet member for the last three years. Last year he was president of the class of '40, vice president of the Ministerial association, and a member of both the varsity swimming and tennis teams. Also, he has received several interclass athletic awards.

Zada Walker, assistant to Prof. Queener, is a member of Pi Kappa Delta having been on the varsity squad in debate for the past two years. It is in this field that she has done most of her extra-curricular work, being the winner of first place in oratory in the State, Provincial, and Grand Prairie tournaments in her junior year. She has taken minor roles in several of the dramatic productions staged in the past two years. She is majoring in history and is the fifth Maryville student to be selected for membership in "Who's Who."

Ruth Woods, a music major from Greenback, is the band sponsor and a senior representative to the student council, an organization of which she served as president pro-tem the first part of the year. She is one of the leading sopranos in the Maryville college choir, and has taken several leads in musical productions staged by the music department of the college.

Helen Bewley, Arnold Kramer, Sara Lee Hellums, and Clifford Procter, the four juniors of last year that made "Who's Who", are automatically members this year and as a consequence were not nominated by the committee.

An official war communique from Berlin this morning said that as yet there was no concerted German action on the Western front. Thousands of German troops are massed on the Netherlands frontier, but no effort at invasion has been launched. The Dutch are reported to have 50,000 men under arms. Belgium now has 600,000.

"M" Club Holds Monthly Meeting In YWCA Rooms

The M club held its monthly meeting in the YWCA rooms Tuesday evening at 6:45. Mrs. Verton M. Queener, club sponsor was present. The primary purpose of the meeting was the reorganization of the Point System Rules. A few suggested changes were made concerning the rules of the point system, but the work was not completed.

The girls also set the week end of the 25th as a tentative date for a moonlight hike around the seven mile loop. In addition to the hiking, they are planning a weiner roast for the same evening.

Kipnis Interview

scenery along the way. He told of his visit to Switzerland this summer where he saw the national fair at Zurich and said this was the second fair he had seen this year. He recently returned east from an operatic engagement in San Francisco and while there saw the Golden Gate Exposition. Although a resident of New York he did not see the World's Fair there. He came to Maryville after an engagement in Worcester, Mass., and goes from here to Chicago.

He remarked on the difference in air travel in the United States and in other countries, feeling that our accommodations are far superior. His hobby is photography, and during the trip by air from San Francisco to Chicago he took pictures from the air. While in Switzerland he took many movie photographs, some of them in color, and when he left, a day before the war broke out, he had to leave them in Paris to be developed. Censorship was invoked at that time and the seven hundred feet of film had to be inspected before it could be sent to America. Mr. Kipnis had given up hopes of getting the pictures, but he recently received notice that they had arrived in America.

As the greatest living basso in the world, Kipnis follows his countryman, Chaliapin. Both Chaliapin and Kipnis are from the same section of Russia, and when asked why that section produced great bass singers he replied that the rugged climate and atmosphere has much to do with it. Chaliapin was the person to make the "Song of the Volga Boatman" famous, and Kipnis is carrying on the tradition as his encore rendition of that number proved.

For the first time the facilities of the guest house in the college woods were used by a visiting artist. Thursday afternoon Mr. Kipnis walked through the woods, later expressing his enjoyment of the surroundings because such pleasures are not available in a city like New York.

The accompanist, Herr Schick, has been in this country only a few months. Though a native Czech, he has been for some time playing in England. Although he had to leave Maryville Friday morning, Mr. Kipnis remained here during the day and visited the Smoky Mountains with Prof. George D. Howell, faculty chairman of the Artist Series.

Alpha Sigma Society To Have Tall Story Contest

Alpha Sigma society will feature a tall story contest on its weekly program this evening at 6:15. Two teams have already been chosen, and judges will be selected to decide which has out-prevaricated the other.

Perry Bigham will open the program with an invocation, and Louis Gajus will lead in the singing of the "Alma Mater". At the close of the meeting members will be given an opportunity to place orders for Alpha Sigma jerseys.

Black Speaks On Colorado

Miss Marion Black will address the Student Volunteers tomorrow evening on "My Work In a Spanish Colony in Colorado." Miss Black will discuss the religious and everyday life of the colony.

Before joining the teaching staff of Maryville high school, Miss Black taught in a Spanish colony in Colorado. As special music in the program, Jeanne Heckman will play a violin solo, "Songs My Mother Taught Me" by Anton Dvorak.

Athenian-Bainonian Meet

Bainonian and Athenian will hold a joint meeting at 6:15 tonight in Bartlett auditorium.

The feature of the program will be a debate: "Resolved: it is better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all." In the debate, the affirmative speakers will be Philip Evaul and Mary Darden. Henry Wick and Jean Stringham will debate on the negative. Charles Orr will sing.

Work Of German Musicians To Be Program For Disc Club Meeting On Friday

Music on next week's Disc club program represents the works of two composers who were contemporary in the first half of the nineteenth century in Germany, Robert Schumann and Frederick Chopin. The numbers selected are two piano groups, the "Carnaval" of Schumann, and the "Preludes" of Chopin.

Knoxville Pastor Speaks Sunday At YM Meeting

The guest speaker at the YMCA worship service tomorrow evening will be the Rev. Robert B. Hamilton, pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church in Knoxville. He has chosen as his subject "Salt."

Mr. Hamilton was two years ago the principal speaker at the YMCA-YWCA Retreat at Line Springs, and since that time has been on the program of the YM Christian organization each year. He is a leader at summer conferences. He came to Knoxville two years ago from Cincinnati.

Special music tomorrow will be a vocal solo.

Hitler Rejects Offers
J. Will Taylor Dies
Sea Warfare Renewed

Tuesday, Nov. 14

Adolf Hitler firmly rejected the offer of The Netherlands and Belgium to mediate a European peace. The German Fuehrer's Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop made known the German government's decision to make a negative reply to the offer of good offices made Nov. 7 by Queen Wilhemina and King Leopold.

Herr Hitler is reported to have said that peace was at present impossible since Britain and France had already rejected the mediation offer. The Allies had previously declared that any move toward peace would have to come from Germany.

J. Will Taylor, Tennessee's Second District representative in Congress, died at his home in LaFollette only one day after he had returned from the special session adjourned last week.

Rep. Taylor was a Republican member of the powerful Rules Committee in the House, and was the first member of the opposition party to declare in favor of the repeal of the arms embargo. He delivered the first speech in its advocacy, and took an active part in the heated debate which preceded the act's repeal.

Wednesday, Nov. 15

The Japanese army launched a new offensive on China by landing an "unknown number" of troops on the coast of Kwangtung Province in South China.

The Chinese military headquarters at Chungking reported that the attack occurred 45 miles west of Pakhoi, only 35 miles east of the border of French Indo-China. Chinese shore batteries engaged in a fierce artillery battle with Japanese war ships lying off the coast.

Thursday, Nov. 16

German-British sea warfare was carried into the Indian Ocean when a Nazi raider sank a British merchantman off the African coast. The stricken ship was the 706-ton tanker Africa Shell which was bombarded by an armed cruiser.

This renewed attack on Allied shipping is believed by some observers to be the prelude to an intensified German drive to speed up the pace of the war. An officer in the Nazi cabinet is reported to have issued a statement to the effect that Germany has no intentions of allowing winter weather to stop operations on the Western Front. In reply to questions concerning Hitler's refusal to accept the offer of the Netherlands powers to mediate a settlement, the Nazi spokeman said the Fuehrer had determined that the first step taken toward peace should be made by the Allie, and that Germany had decided to fight until complete victory is won.

Dr. James Monroe Smith, former president of Louisana State University, attempted to commit suicide one day before starting his eight to 24 year sentence for forging school documents.

Skeriff Newman de Bretton reported that the 51-year-old doctor of philosophy suffered from loss of blood resulting from a severed artery in his foot. The self-inflicted wound was made by a razor blade.

Associate Justice Pierce Butler of the United States Supreme Court died in Washington, making another place for a liberal appointee by President Roosevelt. When Justice Butler's position is filled Mr. Roosevelt will have named five of the court's nine members.

Justice Butler was one of the four conservatives on the bench when Mr. Roosevelt took office, and he consistently voted against major New Deal measures.

The Nazi German government executed by firing squad nine Czech students of Prague universities in the old Czech-Slovak capital. The official German news agency DNB announced the execution in a communique which stated that the students were leaders in a riot staged by "intellectuals" last Wednesday.

Barnwarming Is To Be Presented Under Big Top This Year

Wild Animals, Midgets Snake Charmer, Tatooed Man Will Be Featured

The annual Barnwarming, sponsored yearly by the YWCA, will be celebrated this year under the roof of the Circus Tent, at 8:00 p.m., on Thursday, Nov. 30. It will be held in the Alumni gym with the usual admission charge of fifteen cents.

Under the Big Top, there will be presented a varied program featuring many celebrities in their daring, and also thrilling feats, and many thrills will be provided for in the spectacular circus acts. There will be the grand parade, and then the acts begin. Among the circus performers will appear Carmen Archilla as a tight rope walker; Lamar Russell as a knife-thrower; and Virginia Williams, Elizabeth Ann Huddleston, Jacqueline Klauber, and Margaret Clippenger as bareback riders. The tumblers will also appear and present some difficult and spectacular feats.

Dave Hall, as ringmaster, will make all the performers toe the mark, and will be prepared to subdue with one crack of his mighty whip any wild animals that get loose.

Among the side shows, of which there will be nine, are a snake charmer, a tatooed man, a wild animal show, and midgets. In addition, there will be games of chance in which all may participate by testing their strength and accuracy in throwing weights.

The nominees for the places of Barnwarming King and Queen have not yet been made; but they will be nominated and voted on some time within the two weeks preceding the event. The two elected to fill the positions will not be disclosed until the Barnwarming is well under way.

Community Concert Series Presents Richard Bonelli

Richard Bonelli, Metropolitan baritone, will appear on the second Community Concert next Tuesday evening at 8:00 in the University of Tennessee Memorial gymnasium. The two busses will leave the post office at 7:00.

Richard Bonelli is an American, born in Port Byron, New York. He studied privately in New York and Paris and made his debut in Madena, Italy in 1923. After a tour of Germany, he returned to this country and appeared with the Chicago Civic Opera, San Francisco, and Los Angeles companies. Bonelli has been with the Metropolitan Opera company since 1937.

Robert McKee Will Be Tried on Larceny Charges In Voorhees Courtroom At 8

JUDGE PIEPER

In the most publicized moot trial in the history of the Blant county circuit court, Robert McKee (alias "Dopey") will be tried on charges of compound larceny at the county courtroom in Voorhees chapel when the court begins its fourth session at eight o'clock tonight. The Maryville College Law club is sponsoring the trial through special arrangements made with the social committee, and will be the first of two that will be open to the public this year.

The case was first made public last Tuesday when the sheriff of Blant county, Robert Wilcox, handed the following summons to the defendant—"To the Sheriff of Blant County Greeting: We command you, that you summon Robert McKee, so that he be and appear before our Circuit Court of Blant County to be holden at Maryville, in and for said county, on the 18th day of November next, there to answer William Walker and Theron Etheredge of a plea of Compound Larceny, and have you then and there this writ. Witness the Honorable Archibald Pieper, Judge of said Court, the 14th day of November, 1939." The summons was signed by the clerk of the court, Barbara Anderson.

Three of the outstanding lawyers of this part of the country will bring the charges against defendant McKee. Included in this impressive array of legal talent are Howard Lamon, senior councilor for the prosecution, Charles Sullivan and H. Gordon Findlay.

The defendant has secured the services of three of the best known criminal lawyers in the South, John J. Ballenger as senior councilor, William B. Felknor and George Webster. Also, as a special feature of the trial, is Judge Archibald F. Pieper, recent graduate of the University of Texas Law school and a noted defense attorney before his election to the bench.

Sarg's Marionettes To Come Here, 1940

Show Considered Best Of Kind In The World

This week the social committee signed a contract to have Tony Sarg and his marionettes appear on the Maryville stage Feb. 3, 1940. The committee has not definitely decided what show will be presented.

Tony Sarg's marionette show is considered the world's best show of its kind. His productions include "The Rose and the Ring", "Treasure Island", "Robinson Crusoe", Gilbert and Sullivan's "Mikado" and many others as difficult to present.

The skillfully made marionettes and settings seem unreal. Yet, through the manipulation of those funny little wooden-headed actors a drama is produced that is not quickly forgotten. The beautiful miniature stage settings and the clever lines spoken by the humans manipulating the strings make the show seem like a glimpse into another world where miniature people live in a manner very similar to ours.

It is a very fine privilege for Maryville students to have the opportunity to witness a performance of such a noted company of marionettes.

Student Vols Have Fall Picnic Today

Group Spends Afternoon And Evening in Coal Mine

The Student Volunteers' fall picnic was held this afternoon and evening in the college woods. The theme followed was coal mining. The group left the campus for their coal mine at the picnic grounds in the college woods this afternoon at three o'clock. Games were played, and a picnic supper followed.

Reverend Robert H. Duncan, pastor of the Washington Pike Methodist church of Knoxville, was the speaker of the evening. In keeping with the theme of the picnic, Rev. Duncan spoke concerning his work in the coal mining districts of Kentucky.

Mrs. Francis Rich Patterson, former head of the art department of the college, will address the Student Volunteers tomorrow evening. Her subject will be "Religious Paintings on the Life of Christ."

Fischbach Will Speak At YMCA Meeting Tomorrow

"Your Body—The Temple of God" is the subject of the talk George F. Fischbach will give to the men of the college at YMCA tomorrow evening at 5:00. Mr. Fischbach is coach of swimming and tennis here at the college.

He graduated from Maryville and last year was on leave of absence from the college. During this time he attended Peabody college in Nashville where he received his M.A. degree last June. He did his advance study in physical education.

McClelland To Represent M. C. At Inauguration

On Saturday, Nov. 25, Dr. Frank D. McClelland will represent Maryville college at the inauguration of the new president of Berea college, Berea, Ky. The new president is to be Dr. Francis S. Hutchins, son of the former president, Dr. Wiliam J. Hutchins, who has resigned. Another son of the former president is Dr. Robert Maynard Hutchins, who was made president of the University of Chicago when he was only thirty years old. He has filled that position for ten years.

He's forty now, eh kid?

"A Scientific Career For Women", Subject For YW

Miss Louise Carson, instructor in chemistry will speak at the YWCA meeting Sunday afternoon at 1:15 on the subject, "A Scientific Career for Women." Miss Carson is also ground instructor for the civilian pilots training school at the college.

Donnell McArthur will sing "Light", a sacred accompaniment composed by John Prindle Scott.

College Players Open Dramatics With "Our Town"

Leading Roles Excellently Portrayed; Play Most Unique In Several Years

Last evening in Voorhees chapel an almost capacity crowd witnessed one of the most unusual and outstanding plays produced at Maryville college in several years in the presentation of Thornton Wilder's "Our Town" by College Players under the auspices of Theta Alpha Phi.

Much of the credit for the success of the play must be given Mrs. Nita Eckles West, the director, for the expert casting and directing of the play.

John Wintermute as the stage manager, Frank Brink as Dr. Gibbs, Louise Allen as Mrs. Gibbs, Mary Frances Spurlock as Mrs. Webb, William Gehres as George Gibbs, Carol Dawn Ward as Emily Webb, and George Phelps as Mr. Webb in the seven leading roles, all gave such outstanding performances that to name one or two as standing above the rest would be impossible. Each gave an outstanding interpretation of the role he or she was cast in and the combination made the play one that will be remembered for a long time.

John Wintermute presented a natural, easy interpretation of the role of stage manager as was expected. He gave another evidence of his ability on the stage in a role which tested all of his dramatic skill and required an innate ability to remember his many cues and long, numerous speeches.

Frank Brink gave an outstanding interpretation of the role of Dr. Gibbs and equalled his performance of Gorotchinko in "Tovarich" last season.

Mary Frances Spurlock as Mrs. Webb and Louise Allen as Mrs. Gibbs added another star to their increasing list of excellent performances at Maryville. Both Louise and "Miffy" had roles which gave a chance of expression to their dramatic abilities. They made

Dr. William H. Crothers To Speak Here Monday Night

Dr. William H. Crothers will speak to the International Relations club next Monday at 6:45 in the Thaw hall auditorium.

Dr. Crothers will discuss the Far Eastern situation. He left his pastorate in Maryville three years ago to go to the Philippines and India, where his son is a missionary, to teach in a mission school. Dr. and Mrs. Crothers finished a trip around the world before coming back to the United States.

Dr. Ruth Stephens of the University of Tennessee has written that she will speak to the International Relations club on Dec. 7. Dr. Stephens was here last February and at that time predicted the present European situation, especially the Russo-German pact.

New Forward Fund Campaign Started In Citizen Appeal

Ministers, Churches To Help; WROL, WNOX To Present Programs

Gifts and pledges amounting to $20,000 are expected for the New Forward Fund as a result of the Blount county campaign to be conducted during the coming week, according to an announcement from the president's office yesterday.

In the first appeal to local citizens in a quarter of a century, a Committee of One Hundred citizens will present the cause of the college and solicit pledges to the Blount county quota. Through the generous and interested cooperation of the ministers and the churches of the county, tomorrow is to be Maryville college Sunday in Blount county churches. In Maryville, Alcoa, and the other community and country churches of the county there will be addresses of acquainting people with the work of Maryville college.

In connection with the day's activities, Maryville college will be on the air twice tomorrow afternoon; first from 2:00 to 2:30 over WROL and then from 4:30 to 4:45 over WNOX. Both radio stations are providing this time in behalf of the college.

On Sunday morning in the city of Maryville special addresses on Christian education and Maryville college are to be given in their own pulpits by Dr. McAfee, Rev. Mr. Eller, and Dr. Tarwater. Dr. Baldridge will conduct a service in behalf of the college at which Dr. Frank D. McClelland of the college staff will speak. In like manner pastors or visiting speakers will tell the story of the college throughout the county.

On the two o'clock broadcast over WROL there will be music by the college a capella choir and brief addresses by Mr. D. W. Proffitt and Mr. Joe C. Gamble, co-chairmen of the Blount county committee, and by President Ralph W. Lloyd. At the 4:30 broadcast over WNOX there will be music by the college string trio and brief addresses by Mr. A. D. Huddleston, regional manager of the Aluminum Company of America and one of the co-chairmen of the Blount county committee, and by President Lloyd.

The New Forward Fund campaign to secure $185,000 to meet the emergency needs of the college was announced several weeks ago by President Lloyd. It is hoped that the fund will be raised by the 125th anniversary of Maryville college in 1944.

Barnum Reputation Threatened As Barnwarming Goes "Big Top"

"Peanuts! Popcorn! Candy!" "Step right up and see the fattest man in the world!" "Here you have, ladies and gentlemen, the greatest show on this earth!" Have you ever been to a circus? If you have, you probably recognize the atmosphere and the general plan of one.

And, if you haven't noticed, we at Maryville are about to have a circus troupe descend upon us without our being aware of it. Do you know what a hustle and bustle a circus can make? You do. Well, then you can understand why you've seen so many girls lately who are so abstracted they don't even answer any question, or who are continually rushing around with worried expressions on their faces. It's ten to one they are YWCA members working on the annual Barnwarming. Staging a circus sounds like a lot of fun, but it seems to be causing a few headaches too.

Harriet Miller, who is in charge of the project, has the whole burden on her shoulders. She constantly finds it necessary to make memoranda for herself or her assistants. Perhaps the fact that she is concentrating on such important subjects as Vernon Lloyd and clowns or Clem Hahn and his tumblers explains why she completely forgets such minor details as buying herself some notecards instead of using her roommate's all the time.

Elizabeth Moore and Paula Martin are wondering why in the name of common sense the properties for a circus should include six bicycles.

Lois Ann Alexander and Jane Law are having their worries, too, but they can't even have the fun of worrying out loud for they want the decorations to be a surprise.

Marianna Allen has developed the annoying habit of rushing off from her friends in the middle of a sentence, with a hasty, "There's so-an-so; I've got to see him (or her) about Barnwarming!"

Isabelle Jay's sideshows must be going to be good, for she can be heard muttering to herself about a two-faced woman, a dog-faced boy, and assorted wild animals.

When Ruth Raulston, the costume chairman, learned how many bareback riders, clowns, and other performers would have to be outfitted, she asked no less than eleven girls to help her with the worrying—and the sewing. They are Hester Santiago, Mary Ruth Copeland, Virginia Wheeler, Mary Proffitt, Margaret Proffitt, Dorothy Quass, Elizabeth Stone, Lillian Ratliff, Miriam Berst, Mary Elizabeth Felknor, and Margaret Trotter.

Aline Campbell claims that she isn't worrying; she's too busy going around thanking people for things. A good share of the thanks has gone to the girls on her poster committee: Lura Mae Laughmiller, Dorothy Barber, Eleanor Miller, Mary Lou Cooper, and Mae Porter.

Ideal Boy Meets Dream Girl In Survey of Students' Slants

By BETTY UMBACH

The ideal girl, created in innumerable bull-sessions, and the ideal boy, discussed during so many bridge games, seem to exist, like an A in Organic chemistry, only in the mind; but exisits, even though only mentally, quite definitely. No one image presents the ideal for each individual boy, and likewise, girls form their individual ideal according to their various tastes and temperaments.

Despite the expected natural differences, the concensus of feminine opinion is aptly presented in the immortal lines of Dorothy Parker:

"Oh, is it then Utopian
To hope that I may meet a man
Who'll not relate in accents suave
The tales of girls he used to have?"

The ideals of a few students show what masterpieces of perfection may be optimistically molded by the feminine mentality:

"He has to know what's going on," stated Susy Allen, "but not too much. He must understand that when I say 'yes' or 'no', I probably don't mean it. He must be able to drink his coffee without slurping it, and eat grapefruit without squirting it. He must have a brother, or at least a friend. Oh well. 'Man the unknown'."

Jean McCammon rates a good sense of humor above all else. "After that, he must be courteous," she decided. "He should be a doctor; and it would help matters greatly if he stuttered—so I could get in a word edgewise."

Lin Yu Tang expresses Barbara Swift's sentiments exactly when he said that every man should smoke a pipe. Besides that, according to Babs, he must not be too loud, must be able to rise to every occasion, and must wear the right thing at the right time—that means a coat for dinner, boys.

Susan Goyne, better known as Susie, would prefer a 27-year-old blond, who is interested in engineering, and who is not frail like a fly or a flea. Turned-up-pant-legs, in the so-called collegiate fashion, are decidedly taboo; so are cigars, and uniforms. His interests should center around sports, hockey and football in particular, good looks, and Italian spaghetti. He should be an entertainment committee in himself.

Marie Fawcett—Ken Duncan.

"I can give you no definite example of an ideal man," said Charlotte Colby, "because he doesn't exist." She gives us a good picture of one compiled, partly, of Maryville's resources: "He should have a physique like Arnold Kramer's; and a smile, including

Changes For The Better

We're always looking, as we say, "for something new and different". In this day and age originality seems to have become the by-word of every wide-awake American. We advocate a change from this or from that, sometimes because it is just a change, but usually because we feel that it will be a change for the better.

The announcement by the Chilhowean editor and staff for 1939-40 indicates that we'll be seeing a change in the whole set-up and style of the annual. We approve the acceptance of an informal set-up to replace the formal one used for many years past.

The introduction of the informally posed pictures of the buildings and of the campus activities certainly ought to lend a tone to the annual which we have not seen before. Photography is a growing art and we at Maryville can do well to recognize this fact by using it to good advantage in our Chilhowean.

And so we cry "ORIGINALITY" and try to get it! Let's hear your support of this change and your ideas on others!

CAMPUS CRUMBS

It's started again. Yes, we mean the annual chapel cough epidemic. But this year we have a plan to suggest to anyone open to suggestions—that a small cough drop container be installed beside the chapel seat of each student. This might relieve that irritating cough we hear so much of and which we are sure every chapel leader hears too much of. Speaking of chapel we wonder whether we are living in Reversia or whether the person who fixed the hymn numbers in place the other morning thought he was. Anyway we realize that college students are supposed to have keen intellects and wonderful minds, but we think that one of our chapel janitors was taking a little too much for granted when he said, "Guess what number this is." The leaves are falling tra-la, tra-la,—no we aren't going poetic—but we did want to explain a little matter to you. If any of you thought that the initials R. L. carefully made out of raked leaves on Pearson's lawn last week were in honor of our president, you were mistaken. The fellow that raked those leaves meant those for his own initials. And so what we thought was honor was, but honor for "myself". Miss Bassett gave her mythology class a definition of a spring which she has found somewhere and which we pass on. "A spring is a stream of water coming out of the ground without human assistance". We've heard that there are any number of students looking for invitations to a Thanksgiving dinner on Roosevelt's Thanksgiving. It seems like a fine idea to kill the proverbial two birds-turkeys in this case- by providing two holidays in which to do it. We often see couples strolling about the campus or sitting on benches but the most unusual sight is a couple strolling about looking for a bench on which to sit. We recommend for future generations that red lights be placed on benches for couples at the beginning of each year or at each new shift in order to entitle them to one green bench for their use when they so desire in accordance with rules number so and so, of course. We were interested in the unique service of bird's songs that Mr. Franklin gave in chapel last Wednesday morning and also marveled at the way in which he received his education. We think that Dr. Lloyd's speech on procrastination the week before and this talk by a man who didn't procrastinate were well arranged.

The reception of Alexander Kipnis a week ago by the students at the Artist Series concert is something to comment upon. We have heard that Mr. Kipnis stated he had never received such a reception and whether he did say it or not, we feel that it must be somewhat true because he said himself to the whole audience that he had not been prepared to give so many encores. Prof. Colbert calls it the "greatest concert he has heard." He even rates it above that of John Charles Thomas. And we agree. There has never been such general enthusiasm among an audience at an Artist Series before as long as we can remember. Prof. Howell deserves much praise for bringing such a superb artist to our stage. Malcolm Miller in his column last week requested him to bring Kipnis back again. We do think that the stamping of feet is rather out of order at such a concert, however. Applause ought to be able to fill this need well enough. Also we think that the audience ought to remain seated untill all the encores are given.

Prof. Wendt's idea about the log cabins might be another thing for you to think about when you leave your million to the college. We wonder how many of you girls borrow your roommate's clothes. If you had been born thirty years too soon, you would have been receiving demerits for such unladylike acts. And here's another one not from Emily Post's book on etiquette, but from a speech of Miss Molly in the 1906 Chilhowean,—"no lady should carry a crumb from the dining hall." So there you are, girls, watch your step or you may be getting a few demerits or the reputation of not being a lady.

THE COMMENTATOR

Conducted By GEORGE L. HUNT

OUR TOWN—Play by Thornton Wilder. Produced by Theta Alphi Phi. Directed by Mrs. Nita Eckles West.

Last night we saw our lives stretched out in their entirety, from the early morning rush to school to the acceptance of the inevitability of death. Costumes were different and for the most of us the accent was different, but Grocers Corners, New Hampshire, might have been Springfield, Pa.; Sandusky, Ohio, of Mount Pleasant, Iowa so far as the daily routine is concerned. If the purpose of the director and cast was to make us see in retrospect our lives and to see more than that, our future; if the purpose was to make vivid the nostalgic memories of drug stores and village choirs; if, in brief, we went to Voorhees chapel to see our town and the lives in that town, the directod and the cast can feel well satisfied that they have done their job.

The audience was warned in advance that Our Town was different. They were told no sets would used, and one student versed in the theatre was hear to remark that she would not go to see a play without sets. There was fear from those who knew the play that it would be difficult to understand and perhaps the onlookers would not get into the spirit of it, but as the play progressed the audience responded wonderfully. After all, Maryville has had "Beggars on Horseback" and "You Can't Take It With You" and it should be prepared for anything now.

The glory for this of course goes to the director, Mrs. Nita Eckles West. This was probably one of the most difficult plays she has ever had to supervise, but the interest and affection she has had for "Our Town" ever since it was first produced in New York a few seasons ago was seen in the sympathetic and balanced production that was witnessed last night.

The leading role was the leading one in every respect, for the ease with which he commanded the part of the stage manager provided the needed continuity and proved again that John Wintermute is master of the unusual character. Although it began with some slight affectation that let us know it was from a script, the speech of Wintermute progressed until he acquired the ease which through most of the play was his distinguished characteristic. The role was distinctively Wintermute, perhaps not in the mind of Wilder but certainly in the mind of the Maryville audience about 10:30 last night.

Equally as good as Wintermute in proportion to their roles was Frank Brink and Louise Allen. Brink was outstanding, a surprise to this commentator who could only remember the weak role he had in "You Can't Take It With You". He was never Brink, but completely honest as Dr. Gibb. Miss Allen, too, displayed latent talents in a role that gave her excellent opportunities, opportunities which she took with the restraint and reality appropriate to the part.

Likewise a welcome surprise was the acting of William Gehres in a part well suited to his talents as a juvenile. There was some fear that he would not mature with the role, a fear that was almost realized in the first aprt of the second act, but he overcame his handicaps and turned in a satisfying performnce. His partner, Carol Dawn Ward, veteran of a large variety of Voorhees roles, added another success to her list in a part that was suited to her talents as an emotionalist. This conclusion we reached after the third act and not before.

The characters of Editor and Mrs. Webb had to be distinctive from those of Dr. and Mrs. Gibb. They faced the danger of by characterization falling into the same mold, but the acting of Mary Frances Spurlock and George Phelps successfully avoided that danger. That is more compliment than any amount of superlatives.

Another glory of "Our Town" was the fine support of the minor characters. The best were Edward Thomas, who in his acting career at Maryville has consistently turned in rounded performances as distinctive characters; and Erwin Ritzman, who in a brief scene as the undertaker took every advantage of his opportunities. Other good performances were by Troye Moore as the town gossip and David Hall as the milkman, although Hall at times succumbed to the disease known as overacting.

On the whole there were few things in the play to criticize adversely. The above comments have been made not just to have something to criticize but with the belief that they might improve future performances.

ECHO-HUMOR

By DON KENT

In order to keep up with current trends, we print the following answers to the question-of-the-month, "What is Wrong with American Colleges?" Inasmuch as the answers don't make any sense, we heartily recommend your spending your time not reading them because next week, we're going to have a quiz on them. The question, you will recall, was, "What is Wrong with American Colleges?"

The politican:

My friends, of course you know there are two sides to every question. And as often as possible I'm on both sides. There is the side that sees a third of a nation ill-housed, ill-clothed, and ill-fed. There is also the side that rises above these material drawbacks and sees in wide-spread college education the means of overcoming these evils. The question then, is, where do I stand? Where do I want to spend the taxpayer's money? This is indeed a problem, but I am firmly convinced that the taxpayer's money must be wisely spent. That is my answer! Then and only then will we be a government of the people, by the people and for the people; and we, as a nation conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal, shall not perish from this glorious earth.

The housewife: Don't bother me now, I have a cake in the oven, Bill will be in for dinner any minute, and the kids are drowning the cat.

The bookkeeper: American colleges are all right but they don't teach practical subjects. What good is a college education if it doesn't help you earn a living? My son, John, isn't going to go to college. I'm going to have him go into business. That's where the money is! Then whe he's thirty, he'll be thankful he didn't waste four years in college.

The student:

Hm?

The laborer: My son is going to college to make something better out of himself than I did. But I think he studies too hard. Every time he comes home, he is thinner and has dark circles under his eyes. He gets such low marks, too. I don't understand it. Maybe it's the teachers.

The communist:

Comes the revolution, we will all go to school all the time! Capitalism—phooey!

EXTRA POINTS

By Frank Cross, Sports Editor

THE CUMBERLANDERS INVADED the Highlands yesterday from president to water boy. All they got in return however, was a view of a dust storm from flying Scot feet. President Stockton and his family were spectators at the game, and the Lawyer football boys were here for Thursday and Friday. Although their team has been beaten often this year, they still showed some of the kicking and defense that beat the Scots in the season finale last year.

THE ALL-STARS AND SENIORS will be ready to go Thanksgiving eve in about the biggest interclass game to be seen on the hill. There are hopes that the game can be played at night under the Wilson floodlights. "Jeep" Amos, Senior center, is training the Seniors down to a fine point, and the All-stars are working on combining their extra talents with a little cooperative play. There's even talk of charging admission....

CARNIVAL NEWS FROM THE GIRLS seems to be rather sensational. "Rosey" Heydinger had them all going in circles when we visited the pool during their practice session the other day. They will take some time in the carnival for some ndividnal formatons and waltz swims which will top anything seen around here in a long time. As well as the aqucade they will present, Mr. Heydinger has some of the girls working with the varsity swimming team in the main show. The carnival will be presented this year on the ninth of December. Watch for ticket sale announcements.

THE NEWBERRY INDIANS are set to be scalped on this Thursday. The boys will leave Wednesday for South Carolina, and play the SIAA team the next afternoon on Sitzler Field in Newberry. Newberry's formidable record of wins over Citadel, Mercer, and Oglethorpe looms pretty large over the Scotties, but our team will go in the game in fair physical shape. There hasn't been a game this year when Etheredge has been able to catch a pass that Maryville hasn't been able to score. Their corking passing at the end of the game yesterday should cause the Indian coach a little unhappiness for inviting us down.

AS LONG AS IT SEEMS TO BE THE STYLE to write Who's Whos at this time of the year, we thought we might suggest a few names for a Sports Who's Who.

Joe Etheredge, a senior from Town Creek, Ala., is our first choice obviously. He is captain of the football team, with four years of football behind him. He holds a state record in track, and was high scorer often during his three years of track. He has two letters in basketball so far, and wishes he had time to play a little baseball. Etheredge has been president of the Athletic Board of Control, and happens to be president of the Senior class besides.

Although little is said about girls' sports, Lyn Tyndal certainly rates a lot of credit for her sport's record. She has been a student coach in golf, high point girl in the point system, winner of the girls' tennis tournament, and captain of various girls' teams. At present she is chairman of the Pep committee and senior member of the cheerleaders.

Wilburn is another boy who seems to be breaking the college buying him letters. "Nig" has been playing baseball and football since his freshman days long, long ago. He is this year's president of the Athletic Board of Control.

There are a lot more that should be mentioned but I gotta make a deadline.

Buccaneers Win 20-7 Over Injured Scots At Johnson City

Fleming Runs Wild As Maryville Conference Hopes Fade Out

Before a large delegation of homefolks, the Maryville Scotties tasted bitter defeat to the tune of 20-7 at the hands of the Teachers college Buccaneers in Johnson City last Saturday afternoon.

After taking the opening kickoff, Maryville was the victim of a bad break in the form of a weak punt which traveled something less than 20 yards. The Teachers took the ball and, on a sustained drive, consisting of reverses, end-runs, and laterals, quickly carried the leather to the Scotties' two yard marker. There Fleming the Buccaneer big gun power, plunged for the first touchdown. Hatcher followed up with a perfect boot for the extra point.

Maryville, after electing to kick-off, kicked out of bounds on a poor kick. Therefore, Teachers automatically took the ball on their own 35; from where they were, with no waste of time, they quickly started an another scoring drive. This man Fleming again made himself extremely obnoxious to the visiting Maryville fans by tucking the oval under his arm and ambling 17 yards down the field. Not satisfied with this damage, he proceeded to toss a 19-yd. pass to Hatcher. A few plays later Carpenter, Buccaneer quarter, carried the ball over from the 1, for the second Teachers touchdown. Hatcher's boot for extra point was no good.

Fleming was again the spearhead of a Buccaneer touchdown. He intercepted a Scottie pass on the Highlanders' 44 and returned it to the 22. From there he passed to Hatcher for 11 more yards. Fleming picked up six around end. Hatcher went the remaining five for the third and final Buccaneer touchdown. Lovegrove converted.

Enraged at the treatment offrded to them as visitors, the Scotties proceeded to wreak vengeance on their host. Taking the ball on their own 30 on the kickoff, they started a series of spread-formation plays, which placed the ball on the Teachers' 23. At that point J. D. Hughes dropped back and fired a touchdown pass to Taylor, who had scampered down over the goal line. Hughes kicked the extra point. This ended the scoring for both teams.

After the half, Maryville came back and played a much-improved ball game. Teachers' only scoring threat of the second half ran into a stone wall on the Maryville 15.

Capt. Joe Etheredge continued his usual brilliant play by playing a smashing defensive game at his flank position.

Interclass Sports

Borrowing varsity equipment for their post-season Thanksgiving day touch football game, the orange shirted seniors tangle with the garnet jerseyied all-stars under the incandesents of Wilson Field, Nov. 29.

Possessing the finest offensive and best defensive eleven in the class series, the seniors will strive to keep their notable record intact. When and if the all-stars make good their scoring threat, the seniors boast of a terrific comeback capable of crushing the most talented foe. Although only scored on for one touchdown during the tournament, the well balanced upper classmen are sometimes conceded a terrific battle.

The all-star lineup, under captain Pete Peterson, will be featured by those members selected on the first and second all-star teams.

Highlanders Run Cumberland Lawyers Ragged To Win 20-0 Victory In Finale

Baird, Hughes, And Etheredge Shine As Scot Offensive Strikes Through Air And On Land

The Highlanders stormed over superior weight and through a cloud of dust yesterday afternoon, to hand a 20-0 licking to the Cumberland Lawyers. Five seniors turned in topnotch play to finish the season with a victorious home stand. Captain Joe Etheredge, "Chuck" Kindred, "Nig" Wilburn, E. B. Smith, and "One Man Line" Kramer finished the regular season, and their football careers.

The Scotties got started in the second quarter, and marched nearly 50 yards to push over their first tally. From then on it was all their ball game. Maryville sparkled in the backfield department. Boydson Baird got off on some nice jaunts, some of the longest and most spectacular seen on old Wilson turf. Hughes was ripping again. He scored two of the touchdowns and tagged up extra points as well. Honaker got off some of his usual skillful punting, and Kindred played the best ball game that he has played this year. In the line, McCurry pulled the surprise of the afternoon in making himself one of the standout big boys on the field. His tackling was plenty vicious. Wilburn, Kramer and Etheredge made the Cumberland line look like a tulip hedge, and "Joe" snagged some passes to boot.

The Lawyers played good defensive ball, using their weight, but were too slow to hold the Scots long. Two guards Shaughness and Johnson, caused Maryville the most trouble, while Orr, a small ponyback made some nice runs. Cumberland threatened the Maryville goal only once. That was in the third quarter when they advanced to the 32 yard line. Surprisingly, Cumberland made as many first downs as Maryville, but they were all made on their own side of the 50.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE PLAY

FIRST QUARTER: Honaker kicked off to the five of the Lawyers. A punting duel insued all in Cumberland territory. The quarter ended quietly as neither team had been able to show much stuff.

SECOND QUARTER: Hughes intercepted a Lawyer aerial on his own 50 and drove down to the 30 yard line before being brought down. Kindred on two through the line marked up a first down on the Cumberland 16. Shuey Hughes picked up three and four yards on a couple of line bending smashes; then Baird made it first and four to go for a touchdown. Hughes, on his last try dived over for the first score. His try for the point was blocked.

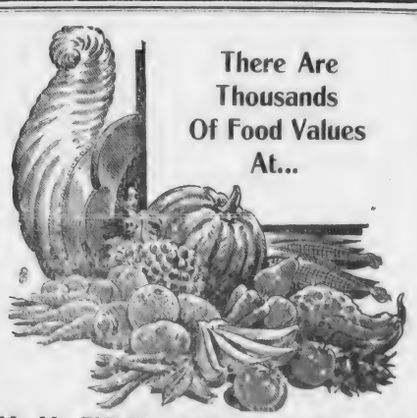
Cumberland started a late drive against the Maryville seconds, which picked up four first downs but no excitement.

THIRD QUARTER: The third quarter was mostly Baird. Boydson received the kickoff on his own five and came back fast to the 36. On a short pass, from Hughes, he covered twenty more yards to the midstripe. Scot Honaker kicked however, and Cumberland put on their sustained drive to the Maryville 32, featuring Orr. There the Scots held, and received the ball on the one yard line after a perfect kick by Christian of Cumberland. Honaker pulled a fast one, and shot a pass to Etheredge to pull out of danger. A pass, Honaker to Baird, garnered nearly fifty yards and the Scots were off again. They were in Cumberland territory again when Scot kicked. On the kick Shelfer went down fast, and dropped on the Cumberland safety's fumble, setting up a touchdown. Hughes went over off tackle on an unbalanced line play. The point was good. Score—Maryville 13, Cumberland 0.

FOURTH QUARTER: The fourth featured one highlight: A flurry of passing which completely dazzled the boys from Lebanon. It all began on the 50 yard line when Hughes cut loose a spot pass to Captain Joe, good for 25 yards. Another, Hughes to Honaker, clicked for nearly twenty more down to the Cumberland six. A third, Hughes to Etheredge scored. The play beautiful to watch.

Hughes added his second point after the touchdown, to make the final score Maryville 20, Cumberland 0.

Scot Cagemen Begin Regular Practice



After three weeks of extensive fundamental practice, the nucleus of the 1939-40 basketball squad is well groomed for Coach Honaker's first hardwood workout.

Bill Baird, one of last year's six lettermen, is doing a remarkable job in whipping this rugged herd into presentable appearance to qualify with the remainder of the athletes who are still in football.

Starting practice in the afternoon, each of the twelve men takes his allotment in free throws, foul shots, and long range shots. After a fast quarter mile sprint, basic principles in pivoting and passing are practiced. Usually the session is rounded out with fast execution in offensive play.

a perfect character change as the years rolled by and seemed to age before the very eyes of the audience.

Carol Dawn Ward, a senio. and a major in the dramatics department, was a credit to the department in which she has been studying for the past three years. As Emily Webb, Carol proved her dramatic ability with a star performance.

William Gehres as George Gibbs gave an excellent performance in this juvenile lead. Gehres' performance in the role was a tribute to both his own ability and the casting ability of Mrs. West, the director.

George Phelps, the only freshman cast in a leading role, proved himself to be on an equal plane with the more experienced upper classmen. Phelps was certainly one of the seven stars and promises many more excellent performances on the Maryville stage. Phelps was cast in the character role of Mr. Webb.

Troye Moore as Mrs. Soames and Edward Thomas as Professor Willard were outstanding among those of the supporting cast.

Dave Hall as Howie Newsome, Betty Lee Wilde as Rebecca Gibbs, Carlyle Collins as Wally Webb, Ralph Reed as Simon Stimpson, Charles Fish as Constable Warren, Richard Boyd as Si Crowell, Maurice Rorex as Sam Craig, Erwin Ritzman as Joe Stoddard, and Esther McCollum, Charles Foreman, Ruth West, Ruth Cathcart, Josephine Clevenger, Barbara Anderson, and June Morley completed the personnel of a well cast play.

The production staff consisted of Mrs. Nita Eckles West, director; John Fisher, production manager; Glenn Young, business manager; Jessie Eilleen Johnson, assistant business manager; Sam Cornelius, stage manager; Ruth West, assistant stage manager; Charlotte Colby, wardrobe mistress; Lloyd Shue, property manager; Harold Austin, advertising manager; Virginia Berg, sound effects; Roland Tapp, electrician; and Thomas Stahl, Worden Dubois, Wendell Whetstone, Robert King, and Fred Snell as the stage crew.

Messiah To Be Presented Seventh Time On Dec. 10

On Sunday afternoon at 3:00 the third rehearsal this year of Handel's "Messiah" will be held. The performance of this great work of Handel's on Dec. 10 in Voorhees chapel will be the seventh time the "Messiah" has been sung at Maryville college.

Mr. Ralph Colbert has reported that the chorus of one hundred and ninety voices is progressing acceptably. One of the new choruses which will be sung this year is "All We Like Sheep." There will also be several new solos this year.

Miss Garnet Manges who has formerly accompanied for the "Messiah" will do so again this year, while Miss Katherine Davies will play the organ, and the Maryville college orchestra, under the direction of Miss Dorothy Horne will play the orchestral accompaniments.

Ideal Girl, Ideal Man

the dimple, like Russ Stevenson's. He should have hair like Ralph Reed's, eyes like Paul Brown's and hands like Erwin Ritzman's. He should have Cliff Procter's wit and intelligence, Dick Woodring's voice; the charm of Frank Brink, and the artistic ability of John Wintermute. He should be as adventure-loving as a red convertible coupe, and as cosmopolitan as Crepe Suzettes; as well groomed as a black limousine, and as masculine as tweeds; yet as unsophisticated as a chocolate soda. He should have a wide range of interests and a broad-minded attitude toward everything. He should possess a great many other intangible things; but, quoting George Gibbs, as he stated last night in "Our Town", 'You can't expect a man to be perfect'."

The masculine attitudes concerning the ideal little woman seem to join in a common distaste for several things: for the clinging vine type, short skirts, and for bright red fingernails, which, according to John Ballenger, "look as if they had been dipped in human blood to catch another male victim". The gentlemen, like the ladies, have their own ideas about ideal girls, and such things:

Nig Wilburn, who is the perfect reply to the feminine 'football hero' request, is looking for a girl with an affectionate disposition; one who can manage a home; and one who is popular with both sexes, but who doesn't flirt. She should be willing to meet him half way; be agreeable, and versatile. She should have a broad cultural background—and being able to play a banjo uke would help.

Robert L. Puncheon, Maryville connoisseur of women, states that his ideal must be intelligent, but not as much as he is. "She must have sophistication, but not pseudo-sophistication. She must be charming, but not bubbling or effervescent. She should be attractive; but", he added, "that is not important."

Common intelligence is placed above book knowledge, in Baby Baird's requirements of his ideal. She should have an upright character; shouldn't drink, smoke, or run around too much. She should have the abilities of a good housekeeper as well as an athlete. She should have a pleasant, neat appearance, and a friendly disposition.

John Ballenger requests a good sense of values, if possible, in his ideal. "One that is simple and sweet, but", he added, "not just one big lump of sugar. She needn't be the life of the party, but should be some life in the party. The hats they wear are O.K." he states, "until they get a fuzzy one that looks like it is all ready to lay an egg. But women are nature's gift to society," he concludes; "and we can't do without the blame things."

"Short, so she won't be domineering," is the type selected by John Wintermute. "She may have vitality, if she doesn't insist on my having vitality. It would be nice for her to be a student of mental telepathy," he said, "because that would save me a lot of time and effort in talking." When it comes to definite types, he isnt particular—"I love anybody that loves me."

Two points could cover the ideal girl of George Webster, president of the International Relations club: she must be smart, and nice looking. Getting a more detailed idea, "She must be sophisticated; must be something you don't mind being seen with hanging on your arm. She should have a nice voice, but not a dramatic one. One who does not agree perfectly on every subject; one who knows how to change her mood to fit yours. One who doesn't want to wear the pants."

From here on it's up to you; just take your pick, start to reform yourself, then convince him, or her, as the case may be. Sounds simple, doesn't it?

Monthly Recital Scheduled For Friday, November 24

Friday afternoon at 4:30, there will be a monthly recital by the voice, violin, and piano students.

Professor Ralph Colbert, Miss Katherine C. Davies, Miss Dorothy Horne, and Miss Ruth K. Thompson will have fifteen students in the recital. These are: Sam Cornelius, Lynn Birchfiel, Jack Gilmore, Ruth Andrews, Mary Elizabeth Gillespie, Louise Felknor, Bernice Cathcart, David Kidder, Ruth Wynn, Eloise McNeely, Janice Graybeal, Margaret Halsey, Florence Barbour, Fred Brewer, and Ann Biggs.

Lieut. Perry Of The Army Air Corps Shows Picture Of Flying Cadet Training

Last Thursday, Lieutenant Norris Perry of the Army Air corps visited Maryville in connection with the procurement of applicants for appointment as flying cadets. A fifteen minute movie outlining the nine months training course was given at "d" and "f" periods. They were attended by a large number of the students and faculty.

Lieut. Perry is advance publicity agent in the fourth corps area for the Flying Cadet examining board and is visiting all the colleges, via an Army attack plane, in Tennessee, South Carolina, North Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisana, Georgia, and Florida. Lieut. Perry came to the municiple airport here from Raleigh, N.C. He is an operations officer and deputy flight commander in the 35th Pursuit Squadron at Langley Field, Va.

Ten Sea Disasters Blockade Tightens Jenkins, Dance to Run

Monday, Nov. 20

Loose German mines in the North Sea caused ten sea disasters over the week end, and these losses were added to by the sinking of the British steamer, Arlington Court, 200 miles off the Irish coast. Five of the sunken ships were reported to have been neutrals.

A lone German plane was driven from the outskirts of London by British anti-aircraft fire and by attacks immediately launched by the Royal Air Force. This was the first time an enemy plane has approached the British metropolis.

★ ★ ★ ★

Tuesday, Nov. 21

The British Admiralty announced that the Allied navies would tighten the blockade on German shipping by sinking all vessels carrying German exports, and that such exports would be considered contraband of war. Many observers believe this to be one of the most significant changes in policy made during the war because of its probable effects upon neutral ships engaged in export trade. It is also believed that it is likely to prove effective against Germany since the industry of the country is largely dependent on sales abroad.

Wednesday, Nov. 22

Sea warfare was intensified as the 1335-ton British destroyer Gipsy struck a mine and was beached, and the German freighter Bertha Frisser was shelled and sunk off the coast of Iceland. The French naval authorities announced the sinking of two German submarines within three days. The increased activity on the sea followed Germany's threat of swift retaliation against Britain's unrestricted blockade of Nazi exports.

Friday, Nov. 23

Ray Jenkins, Knoxville attorney, and Jack Dance, former campaign manager for J. Will Taylor announced their candidacy for the unexpired term of the late Rep. Taylor, following the declaration of Miss Elizabeth Taylor, daughter of the congressman, that she will not be a candidate.

Mr. Jenkins is considered one of the best defense lawyers in East Tennessee. He attended Maryville college, and is a graduate of the University of Tennesse College of Law.

Two Democrats, Hammond Fowler of Rockwood, and John T. O'Conner of Knoxville have been suggested as possible candidates, but have not as yet announced their intention to run. The special election, called by Gov. Cooper, has been set for Dec. 30.

The toll of shipping losses from German magnetic mines and submarine warfare mounted to 30 with the sinking of the British steamship Mangalore and the Netherlands tanker Sliedrecht.

The British Admiralty is reported to be working feverishly to find a way to combat magnetic mines dropped by Nazi planes in the North Sea.

President Emeritus Gives Gift To New Forward Fund

During the past week, the people of Blount County were asked to subscribe the first $25,000 of the New Forward Fund. The results of the drive will be given at a dinner meeting of the Committee of One Hundred in Pearsons hall at 7:00 tonight.

Dr. Samuel T. Wilson, president emeritus of the college and honorary chairman of the Blount County committee, gave the first $1000 of the local quota.

The Blount County program started last Sunday with special addresses in 38 churches, two radio broadcasts, and a union service in Maryville. This week the committees of twenty-five and one hundred have been soliciting the people of the community. On Monday the Committee of One Hundred met at a dinner in the New Providence church. The Committee of Twenty-five met on Tuesday and Thursday at the Cate Cafe. Richard Woodring, Sam Cornelius, Roland Anderson and Dean Stiles sang at the Kiwanis club meeting last Wednesday.

NOTICE—There will be no issue of the Highland Echo next week.

"Messiah" Soloists Are Announced By Colbert This Week

Woods, Reed, Cathcart, Law, And Woodring Are Chosen For Solo Parts

The names of those who have been chosen to sing the solo parts in the seventh annual production of Handel's "Messiah" were announced today by Mr. Ralph Colbert. The soprano solos will be taken by Ruth Woods and Bernice Cathcart of Maryville who are senior majors in the music department. Both will be remembered from former performances of the "Messiah". Miss Cathcart of Maryville sang several solos in the "Messiah" last year. Miss Woods of Greenback, Tenn., has sung in many Maryville productions.

Miss Margaret Law of Maryville, and formerly a student at Maryville college, will sing the contralto solos. Miss Law has twice been a soloist in this great work of Handel's.

The tenor solos will be taken by Richard Woodring, senior voice student from Ardmore, Pa. Mr. Woodring has been a soloist before in the "Messiah" as well as taking part in other musical productions of the college.

Ralph Reed, another senior and voice major, is to sing the bass solos. Reed, who is from Delaware, took the bass solo parts in last year's "Messiah."

Several solos which were not used last year are to be used this year, and one or two new choruses are being added. The program is being planned so that it will last one hour and forty-five minutes.

Senior Class Sponsors Thanksgiving Party With Scavenger Hunt

The senior class will lead the way in pre-Thanksgiving parties with a scavenger hunt this evening at 7:30.

The class will meet in the YW rooms and divide into ten groups. From then on the contest is among the groups. The one finding the most clues and finally the prize will become the winner. Clues have been hidden all over the campus.

Refreshments will be served after the hunt is concluded. Sponge cake and a "new and different punch" is the menu of the evening.

Joy Corrigan is the chairman of the party committee.

Mrs. Pope Dies Saturday

Word has been received from Champaign, Ill., of the death of the mother of Mrs. Grace Pope Snyder, Mrs. Pope, on Saturday. Mrs. Pope had been in declining health for some time, suddenly becoming worse last week. Burial was Tuesday in Centralia, Ill., after a service in Champaign. Mrs. Snyder is expected to return to the campus sometime in the near future.

Rev. G. C. Beanland To Open Fred Hope Drive December 5th

Movie Drama of African Child Bride And Her Life At Mission Will be Shown

The Rev. Gayle C. Beapland will open the annual Fred Hope drive on Dec. 5. The drive has been conducted by the college for the last quarter of a century to raise funds to help the mission work in Elat, West Africa.

Fred Hope is a graduate of Maryville in the class of '06, and the first of some hundred and fifty Maryville graduates who have gone to foreign mission fields. For the last twenty-five years the college has made annual solicitations for the partial support of the Frank James Industrial school which is under the direction of Mr. Hope. Last year $628.90 was sent to French Cameroon for use by the school.

This year the speaker is the Rev. Gayle C. Beanland who is associated with Mr. Hope in West Africa. Mr. Beanland is a graduate of the University of Mississippi and is now on furlough in Oxford, Miss. He will give two addresses in chapel and will explain the film on Tuesday night.

The motion picture is in the form of a drama and has been shown very little in the United States. "Ngono" is the story of life in Africa and is an absorbing, beautifully photographed story of Ngono and her people. Ngono is the child bride of an African chief who ran away to escape mistreatment by a senior wife. She found refuge among the missionaries where she studied in a mission school and became a nurse. So great was her gratitude that when Eman, a government employee and graduate of the mission school, asked her to marry him she refused. She wanted to share her training and faith with her people in the villages.

Dr. Lloyd Speaks At Open House Of Art Gallery Wed.

Open house will be held at the Elizabeth Gowdy Baker Memorial art gallery, located in Anderson Annex, on Wednesday after chapel, with President R. W. Lloyd speaking about the gallery. Everyone is invited.

The pictures in the gallery were given to the college in 1937 by the late Daniel B. Baker, husband of the artist. The majority of these pictures are in water color, a medium which Mrs. Baker was especially proficient in. Her portraits are excellent; and one of her son was, at the time of painting, the largest water-color portrait ever painted in the world.

The materials with which Mrs. Baker worked were of the best grade possible to obtain, and the paper was manufactured especially for her by an English firm. This accounts for the fine preservation of the pictures, some of which are now 40 years old.

Brink, Cornelius, Fish, Gehres, Spurlock Elected To Theta Alpha Phi by Society

New members elected to the local chapter of Theta Alpha Phi this past week are Frank Brink, Mifi Spurlock, Charles Fish, Bill Gehres, and Sam Cornelius. New members are elected twice a year, once in the fall and once in the spring, by the members of the local chapter with the faculty adviser, Mrs. Nita Eckles West, passing on the names after they have been voted in by the members. Usually it has been the custom to limit the membership to one per cent of the entire student body, but this year, because of the number of senior members, the membership was made larger.

Present members of the society are Carol Dawn Ward, Glenn Young, John Wintermute, John Fisher, Ed Thomas, and Louise Allen, all of whom are seniors elected by the local chapter which is affiliated with the national society of Theta Alpha Phi.

The local chapter of Theta Alpha Phi was organized here at Maryville college, May 27, 1927; and the first chapter room was located on the third floor of Anderson but has since been changed, the members now meeting in Mrs. Annarine Hamilton's class room. Sarah Moore, one of the charter members of the local chapter, who is known as Mrs. Traylor and now lives in Maryville, has since written several plays. One of these, entitled "In Her Defense", concerning Andrew Jackson, was produced here at the college last year.

One of the first plays presented by the chapter was Sheridan's "The Rivals", which was given as a senior benefit on April 5, 1928. This year on April 5, Bainonian and Athenian will present their midwinter.

In 1933, Jean Campbell, Robert Toms, and Nathalia Wright were among those chosen to membership. Of these, Nathalia Wright is now a well known American poetess.

Another rather unique notice in the minutes of Theta Alpha Phi was that which told of the postponement of the initiation scheduled for November, 1928. School was closed because of a flu epidemic, and the initiation was not held until January, 1929.

An excerpt from "The Cue", a national magazine, gies the interesting story of the 1929 fall initiation. The seven members were ordered to prepare a program, which they did, giving the first act of "The Taming of the Shrew." When this was finished, the audience settled down to the serious business of criticizing the actors, who were brought before the judges and condemned mercilessly and praised sparingly. The candidates were then led through the ritual and emerged on an equal footing with the other members of Theta Alpha Phi.

The membership of the local chapter of Theta Alpha Phi has been eight

Dr. Ruth Stephens Will Address IRC

Political Scientist To Speak on World War 2

Popular Dr. Ruth Stephens, leading member of the history department of the University of Tennessee, has been secured as the guest speaker for the Dec. 7th meeting of the Maryville college International Relations club, which will be held in the Thaw hall auditorium at 6:45. The general topic for the discussion of the evening will be the relationship of the United States to World War 2.

Dr. Stephens, who is one of the best known political scientists in this section of the state, has been in constant demand as a speaker since the outbreak of war on the European continent, and, as a consequense, arrangements had to be made two months in advance in order to make it possible for her to speak at this meeting of the club. In addition to speaking on international affairs at many prominent East Tennessee organizations, such as the Woman's club, the International Rotary, various civic associations, and the Knoxville Chamber of Commerce, Dr. Stephens has been conducting special night classes for those who found it an impossibility to attend those which were regularly scheduled during the day. These classes have been filled to capacity, and it has been suggested that a new series be inaugurated as soon as possible.

This particular program of the I.R.C. has been planned because of a popular demand by students and faculty for a return engagement of Dr. Stephens, who spoke to the same organization last February. At that time, she predicted several important events which have occurred since her prophecy. Among the most publicized of these were the Russo-German trade pact which was signed last August, and Germany's virtual annexation of Bohemia and Moravia which was completed the middle of March. Added to her wide knowledge of international relations, is a pleasing and interesting speaking personality, which in part, explains the popularity of Dr. Stephens as a public speaker.

YM In Fine Arts Studio

"Worship in Music" is the theme of the YMCA service this Sunday evening at 5:00. The meeting will be held in the Fine Arts studio in Voorhees chapel.

The program will be built around outstanding musical compositions that by their nature will promote worshipful thoughts. Thomas Schafer is arranging the selections and will comment upon them. There will be recordings and the use of group hymns. The meeting is open to all men of the college.

System Initiated For Ordering New Books

Monthly Orders Will Be Placed This Year

Beginning this month a new program of ordering books is being introduced in the library. Heretofore books have been ordered in large numbers three times during the year—in September, October, and January—and individual books as they are needed. Under the new plan a smaller order will be made the middle of each month. This change has been made because of the change in the postal rate, which makes it more economical to order books by mail, than by the older freight method.

The shipment made during the month of November brought several new books to the library. Among the books of a religious nature were: Lewis, "The Faith We Declare"; McKee, "What Use Is Religion"; Smith, "The Complete Bible". Works of fine arts include, among others, Zigrosser, "Six Centuries of Fine Prints"; and Gielgud, "Early Stages."

An English book, "Thoreau", by Canby, holds special interest for Maryville college; in the Acknowledgments, Canby mentions Miss Nathalia Wright, who is a resident of Maryville, and is a graduate of Maryville college. In speaking of Miss Wright, Canby expresses his gratitude for her

Circus Tent Will Hold Main Show In Gym Thursday At 8

Annual Barnwarming To Stage Sideshows, Freaks, Wild Animals, Tumblers

This Thursday evening in the alumni gym at 8:00 the annual Barnwarming of the YWCA will be held. The theme of the Barnwarming this year will be the circus. The Big Top will feature all types of freaks, side shows, and wild animals besides presenting a special three ring performance.

Tuesday morning some of the clowns, tumblers, and other performers will present a program at the Maryville high school. They will give the high school students a representation of what the "big night" at the circus promises to all who attend. Those taking part in this program will be: Hilton Wick, Frank Cross, John Ballenger, Clem Hahn, Robert Hopkins, George Tibbetts, Dave Hall, Lois Thorson, and Aline Campbell. This is the first time that the high school students have been invited to a Barnwarming on the hill.

The nominations for king and queen of the Barnwarming will be voted on by the student body this Wednesday morning in chapel. The identity of the couple will not be disclosed until sometime during the program.

The sideshows will be open to all circus fans at 8:00 and can be visited until the main show begins. Freaks, and wild animals will be seen and games of chance will be available to any who wish to test their strength and accuracy in throwing weights.

The admission for the Barnwarming will be fifteen cents. Harriet Miller is chairman of the committee for the YWCA which sponsors the Barnwarming each year on Thanksgiving evening.

Maryville Boys Enjoy Week Of Encampment, National Guard Guests

"Yes, sir, the National Guard got them."

"What will the football team do?"

"The sheriff came for them Sunday afternoon."

These and other similar comments were heard on the campus the early part of the week. The excitement concerned the fact that several of the men students of the college had been called by the National Guard to a week's encampment at the fair grounds on the outskirts of Maryville.

Now, the whole thing wasn't quite as bad as rumor would have us believe. It all started when several of our fellows joined the National Guard earlier in the fall. The Guards drill one night a week in town, and the boys receive one dollar per drill for their efforts. Just recently the War department decided and informed the National Guard that they should have a week of encampment. This past

Turkey Massacre To Be Celebrated At Pearsons Hall with 550 Pounds of Fowl

By JEAN BARNES

All over Blount County, civil war with the turkey is about to begin again. The army of gobbler troops is proudly parading over the battlefield, as the ancient field of strife, the barnyard, is about to be once more invaded by a horde of murderous farmers. "There's treachery somewhere," the turkey probably thinks. That old farmer who used to come every morning and feed him, who carefully kept him sheltered and protected him, has just killed his brother. The big gobbler struts conceitedly before his retinue. With short, high sentences, and in a secret language spoken to be unintelligible to the enemy, he loudly exhorts his noisy followers to withstand the onslaught of the foe. The scent of battle is in the air. Ah, it's a glorious fight! The brilliant general of the turkey line runs, and claws, and shouts the shrill battle cry. But to no avail—his great-grandfather has fallen before him; his grandfather perished in like manner; his father fell before his eyes last year. He must surrender now. The frosty air is keen; the barnyard reeks with dust and noise as the human's axe finally triumphs over the puny claw.

But the enemy is not wholly barbarous. They do not leave the vanquished foe in gory infamy on the field. Instead, the fallen hero is carried away by a sort of funeral concern, the Blount Produce Company, organized to officiate in such matters. With proper solicitude the body of the great general is deprived of its war feathers, and carefully cleaned and dressed for the last elaborate ritual to honor him for his bravery.

The turkey is at last passed to a wonderful place called Pearsons (I said wonderful; and hush—you're not a turkey.) There a most impressive part of the post-battle ceremony is performed. Four pairs of strong arms, from a background of white caps and aprons, wash him and carefully perform operations and amputations on him. After various resting places, he is finally placed on a large platter with a group of his fellowmen. Around him the enemy in admiration place sumptuous offerings. Can't he see his name placed first on some sort of program card? Can't he observe the hundreds of people waiting to do him honor? His breast, in its fine dressing, swells with pride.

So much for the valiant life and death of the turkey. We shall not low-

Students Express Opinions In Roosevelt's Abolition Of Traditional Turkey Festival

With one Thanksgiving just two days behind us and another less than a week off, it seems that the American people should be the most thankful lot in the world. And we probably are. But, nevertheless, it seems we have different ideas of what day is best to be thankful on. Knowing what to expect when a poll of the question was conducted among the students, the Echo finds a landslide vote for the last Thursday of the month, merchants or no merchants.

In figures, out of more than 300 votes, 74 per cent were definitely opposed to President Roosevelt's change and only 13 per cent were for it; the other 13 per cent just didn't care. Many who voted for it thought the same way as Russ Stevenson, who said, "I like the change for gastronomic reasons; I'm getting turkey here at home."

Other comments on the change tell their own story: Bill Baird: "It's a swell idea as far as business is concerned." Harold Copeland: "Turkey tastes as well a week ahead of time." Anita Rayburn: "It's a very foolish idea. Thanksgiving has always been celebrated on the last Thursday of November. Why change it now?"

Jack Gilmore: "I think it's a good idea. It doesn't hurt anyone by moving it up a week and it sure helps the merchants." John Ballanger: "It's okay, but they should give us two turkey dinners, especially for us hungry guys."

Mary Proffitt: "It's your own idea that matters." Fleming Griffith: "Woman suffrage changed a tradition. The changing of the day of Thanksgiving by Roosevelt has broken a tradition. Both have had disastrous results." (Ed. note: Mr. Griffith does not necessarily express the viewpoint of the Echo.)

Perry Bigham: "The actual date of the event is unimportant. I do think that all states should celebrate the same day." This opinion was shared by several other students. Ralph Reed: "This chance to celebrate twice is very welcome to me."

Dan Magill: "I don't approve even though I do see President Roosevelt's viewpoint. This is causing too much controversy." The hint is well-taken, Dan. Let's leave the worries to the calendar makers.

Let's Share Those Offices!

Several years ago a point system for offices was proposed as one solution to the problem which arose when it was discovered that the major offices on the hill were being monopolized by a few individuals. It wasn't what we might term "politics" that brought about such a proposal, but the realization that on a campus of our size more people ought to be given the opportunity to display their executive and leadership ability.

In some classes we can often observe that there are only a few outstanding members who seem to take over the running of that class and who seem to be given that power by the class. There is no opposition and no suggestion that perhaps someone else who wasn't as prominent might possess qualities which would fit him for the job also. Classes, however, often tend to "get into a rut" and use the same people over and over again as long as those students are willing to accept the responsibilities placed upon them.

We aren't advocating the institution of a point system as a solution to the problem of having a few persons holding all the important offices, but we do mean to suggest that participation by more members of a group will tend to make that group stronger and will help in creating a greater interest in the group. There have been many cases where students have gone through at least three years of college without their talents being recognized or even sought.

We all realize that what we do ourselves makes that thing mean so much more to us and that it increases our interest in the outcome. We believe that some of our class groups could use the initiative and interest of many of its members to make it better and to liven it up some.

The YWCA has a plan of using as many women in its programs and other work as possible in order to introduce them to the other members of the organization and to introduce them to an interest in the Y. We believe that if such a policy were adopted by other groups we would eliminate the feeling that all the offices are held by a few students and that it is impossible for anyone to change this fact. We would in this way know more names and know better the qualities of the various nominees instead of having to rely on the old faithfuls "who I know can do it."

CAMPUS CRUMBS

Thanksgiving is coming and gone—does that sound paradoxical to you? Well, that's just what it is, but we imagine that if you had been one of those lucky people who enjoyed a huge turkey dinner last Thursday and expect one this Thursday, you would think it a mighty fine paradox Lois Ann Alexander does. And speaking of Thanksgiving, we hope that you have it down in your little date book to see the Barnwarming Thursday night. From the sound of it, we believe they'll leave the gym in ashes after the fine warming planned. We've heard that Dave Hall was spending most of his spare time cracking the whip and we aren't sure whether that means exercising his tongue or what it says. But whatever it is, he'll be using both out there Thursday night as ringmaster There's no doubt but what President Roosevelt has accomplished his purpose in creating what we heard termed "Franksgiving" because we're sure that the holiday has never before received such widespread controversy and publicity. You can't open a paper without seeing mention of it This week certainly must be a red letter one for some people. Going to chapel Friday morning we saw a good many former students who have returned to visit their interests here. There's Bill McGill, Zula Vance, Alice Prime, John Magill, Bob Lucero, Ruth Moore, and there was another. We don't believe she's an alumnus, but she is a friend of our YM president, Mr. Russell Stevenson. We were glad to see them all We have also noticed quite a few other strangers on the campus this week. Their faces looked familiar, but from their expressions we couldn't tell whether we knew them or not. We can tell Christmas can't be far off when we see a noticeable absence of smiles from usually happy faces. Dale Carnegie (not that we agree with everything he says) states that the best way to make people like you is to smile. And then speaking to others, if nothing more than a mere hello, will invariably help out. We'd like to see a little more of this on the campus. You may be worn out from those exams, but don't show it so emphatically The Law club had a good setting for their trial last Saturday night and they had a good crowd, but we do think they might have chosen a case which would have been more interesting and which would not have introduced any questionable matters. Dr. Lloyd certainly got himself into trouble on Friday morning trying to explain Prof. Colbert's method of signaling We are glad to hear that the IRC has been able to bring Dr. Ruth Stephens to their next meeting. She is a very popular and intelligent speaker on world events, and everyone should hear her Tuesday morning there were several Thanksgiving dinners walking around the campus. We were surprised some of these mountaineers from them thar Tennessee and Kentucky hills didn't get out an axe and go after them. And more about turkeys—Dr. Griffitts has been raising turkeys. He's mighty proud of them too. We imagine that they were chemically raised and ought to be the best We are glad to hear that the senior class is having a scavenger hunt tonight and will be interested to see the success of this new type of party to the hill We are sure there will be much disappointment among those who saw the faculty perform last year at the Barnwarming when they discover that there is to be no return engagement this year

THE COMMENTATOR

Conducted By GEORGE L. HUNT

A few weeks ago I had a series of questions in this column. They were obviously for filler, for this job of being in business with Eleanor Roosevelt and Frank Cross begins to tell on you after the first couple of years. I could describe my day or I could start a feud with some other good columnist, but out of pity for both my readers I won't resort to that yet. However, this week I am going to give some questions because the first ones were so well received.

1. What is the salary of the president of the United States?
2. Does the Secretary of the Treasury receive a larger salary than the Attorney-General? What is the salary of the Secretary of the Interior?
3. While we're talking about salaries, does the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court receive more salary than Justice Roberts?
4. Only six cabinet members have become presidents of the United States. Do you know the most recent one?
5. What state has the lowest percentage of illiteracy in proportion to its population (1930 census)?
6. Choosing at random the year 1931, do you know what persons or teams were the champions in the following sports that year?:
   Tennis—U.S. Men's Singles?
   Baseball—American League winner?
   National League winner?
   Davis Cup winner? (country)
   American League batter with highest average?
   National League batter with highest average?
7. In the 1934 heavyweight championship bout, Primo Carnera met and was defeated by.....?
8. The highest ranking football team according to Associated Press in 1937? in 1938?
9. The 1935 Rose Bowl contestants were..... and ....., won by the team from the south, 29-13.
10. Can you identify the names of three English philosophers that rime with the words rain, clock, and mobs?

Here is a thought-provoking quotation from Plato, not that I have ever read Plato, but I came across it in something I was reading.

"Some things I have said of which I am not altogether confident. But that we shall be better and braver and less helpless if we think that we ought to inquire, than we should have been if we indulged in the idle fancy that there was no knowing and no use in searching after what we do not know—that is a theme upon which I am ready to fight, in word and in deed, to the utmost of my power."

Last year this column ran the programs of the Ford Sunday Evening Hour for the convenience of those who listened to that excellent program. It seems a good idea to at least try the same thing this year. I would appreciate your comments on this idea.

Wilfred Pelletier, conductor of the Metropolitan Opera, leads the Ford orchestra this week. The soloist is Miss Marian Anderson, famous contralto from Philadelphia. The program follows:

von Weber overture "The Ruler of the Spirits" orch.
Verdi O Don Fatale from "Don Carlos" Miss Anderson and orchestra
Granados Spanish Dance in E Minor orchestra
Donizetti Servant's Chorus from "Don Pasquale" chorus and orchestra
Schubert Death and the Maidens Miss Anderson and orchestra
Schubert The Omnipotence Miss Anderson and orchestra
Mendelssohn Scherzo from Reformation Symphony orchestra
Negro spirituals Everytime I feel the Spirit, Deep River; Honor, Honor Miss Anderson and orchestra

ECHO-HUMOR

By DON KENT

November 24th, 9:08 a.m.

FLASH—Every turkey that's left in America has been arrested for not fulfilling its obligations to the National Bird! Old Squealers are exerting every effort to get them out of the jug in time to go in the pot on the 30th.

Roastmaster Fowley says of the coup, "It was the Head Gobbler's orders and everything he does is O. K. with me. We're going to issue a commemorative on it."

The Head Gobbler himself squawked: "My friends, I see no reason for fear and excitement. Level heads are what we need in this time of national crisis."

And Mrs. Head G. in her syndicated column, "My Hey-Day", scratched, "Today was a lovely day. I got up at seven and washed the children's ears. Then, as usual, I cooked His eggs. There seems to be quite a bit of excitement about the arrest of those shirking turkeys. However, I'm sure that everything will come out all right and the turkeys will get their due in the end."

Son Shimmy squeaked, "A poige! A poige! We need another poige!"

Reports from the other side indicate that a stubborn fight will take place.

Blacksheep Yelliot said, "What's cranberry sauce for the goose is ditto for the gander. If they don't give us turkey, we don't give them gravy."

Thomas A. Hooey howled, "It's only a dressing for a new racket. Keep it out of the papers and let ME work on it."

Nov. 24th, 3:11 p.m.

FLASH—A providential pardon has just been granted all turkeys arrested this morning. Both sides claim it a moral victory.

A group of citizens has purchased a huge turkey out of gratitude to the Head Gobbler. He will get the bird next Thursday.

Pearsons Turkey

er him to the grave. We appreciate his noble fight but rejoice in his nobler downfall. This turkey is only a small part of the 550 pounds of this delicious meat ordered for the college Thanksgiving dinner, Thursday, 12:30. Picture, y'all, a delicious baked turkey, swimming in hot giblet gravy, rich dressing, a towering snowy drift of mashed potatoes, tasty cranberry sauce, crunchy celery, tempting buttered peas, your beloved olives, hot rolls and butter. Top it all with spicy mince pie and fragrant coffee. Well? This is the menu as announced by Miss Margaret Ware, manager of the dining hall.

Feeding 640 people a huge Thanksgiving dinner is no easy job. Preparations are begun on Wednesday, when the turkey is tucked away for a warm siesta. All of 108 pies have to be prepared to feed a hungry mob like this, while 55 dozen rolls, 30 gallons of peas, and two large cases full of celery have to be ordered to answer the requirement. And the crowd is thirsty enough to use up eight pounds of coffee.

A glimpse, or even a smell, of the college kitchen on Thanksgiving morning would be a treat. Four busy men hurry about, absorbed in using their skillful hands to mix up some wonderful concoction. Steaming platters and dishes stand in a lengthy row and sent forth a fascinating conflict of tantalizing smells. The waitresses, for once ready and anxious, invade the room, sniff delightedly, and carry the food off to the dining hall.

And that is where the students come in!

(After-thought: Make your rendezvoux with the turkey a lingering one. After the quantity and quality of the food, and the time it will take to eat it, no supper will be served. The poor stomach needs a Thanksgiving holiday too!)

THE HIGHLAND ECHO NOVEMBER 25, 1939

1939 FOOTBALL AUTOPSY

Maryville 7—Union 0

The gore-seeking Scots started out in fine style here on Wilson Field as spectacular passing and interception forecast the highlights of the season. A third quarter pass from Scott Honaker to "Joe" Etheredge carried to the pay dirt, and the Highlanders were out ahead. Cartmill of Union proved the best center of the year against the Scots and intercepted four misguided passes. Farmer's toe boomed long and loud for Union and Scott Honaker began to kick his coffin corner bullseyes.

Maryville 26—Tusculum 0

Etheredge, Baird and Hughes shone in the first conference win of Maryville at Greeneville. The passes flew thick and Baird and Hughes churned mud into the eyes of the ever-hapless Pioneers. Several famous college yells were inspired by the boys' play. (Not officially accepted by the pep committee as yet, and used only for private cheering). Although the boys played good ball against Tusculum, one mishap marred the rest of the season. Morton was hurt in the first quarter.

Maryville 2—Milligan 7

The Milligan Buffaloes, after having pushed half way to Johnson City in the first half of the game showed their superior running attack and flashy reverses to skin through over the Scotties. The Highlanders struck fast, scoring a safety in the first two minutes. Lloyd Taylor began his stellar hip shaking for the first time as he cut loose for 65 yards. The game was rough and cut down the Maryville drive for Wesleyan. Scottie Junior showed up on the hill about this time.

Maryville 14—Tennessee Wesleyan 26

Wesleyan weight and smooth power proved too much for the Scots in their first defeat of the season. The Bulldogs lost only once this year to the Vol Frosh and have potential National Junior college champions. Hughes to Etheredge proved the offensive passing strength of the Honakermen as it clicked twice in a row and had Wesleyan a bit worried. It was reverses again that took the Scots in, reverses and about twenty pounds extra weight to the man.

Maryville 19—Hiwassee 7

A new passing combination worked against the Tigers who were laying for Captain Joe. Hughes once and Honaker once to Taylor. It ought to pay dividends next year. Taylor did some nice broken field running against Hiwassee, and that was one of the games that Shoey Hughes was ripping. Hughes scored first on a nice drive, the first land march of the season. Taylor followed after a couple of brilliant passes, and Etheredge tagged up a last quarter tally just to show who was the bona fide receiver around this state. Steele did some nice slithering for the Yellow-clads, in fact he sparked them to an overland and aerial touchdown march.

Maryville 6—Carson-Newman 6

The sports headline of the year goes to the Scot fight in the homecoming with Frosty Holt's Eagles. Weight, Biddle, and odds didn't stop the boys and they came so close to winning that the referees arms had started up, on that disputed goal line thrust be Hughes. Approximately 3500 persons saw the classic, one of the largest crowds to gather in Wilson Bowl. Carson-Newman made their march in the first quarter, with Biddle and Catlett doing most of the toting. Shubert put the Blues in the lead as he plugged over. Maryville scored in the second quarter as Hughes released the ball into the hands of the receiver—Captain Etheredge of course.

King 13—Maryville 0

Maryville's first non-conference game in Bristol was a heartbreaker. Injuries had already mounted and the boys tired after fifty-seven minutes. Clabaugh and stray Scot passes took thirteen points toll. Etheredge missed his first game. Nuff said.

East Tenn. Teachers 26—Maryville 7

Coach McMurray's Bucs wreaked havoc with the Scot's second stringers at Johnson City. Honaker and Etheredge were hurt. Honaker was missed as the Scots got behind on a bad kick. The Teachers scored fast. Fleming shone. Hughes to Taylor clicked again through the air for the Scots. Click and Monday stood out in the Teachers' strong forewall.

Maryville 20—Cumberland U. 0

Maryville's final home game and conference stand eased off the pangs of the Teacher catastrophe. Hughes scored twice as the Highlanders got hot, and Baird covered enough Lawyer territory to get a land grant under the Squatter law. Etheredge finished up by dragging down the final touchdown out of the air on a fancy play late in the game. McCurry got mad—Christian and Scott Honaker had a punting duel.

Newberry 40—Maryville 13

The Scot soldier boys got scalped by the Newberry Indians between free Turkey dinners in South Carolina. Newberry, SIIA Conference leaders, outclassed the scrapping Scotties, but the game was a good one. Collangelo was the standout passer, kicker, and runner on the field and turned in a brilliant game. Hughes, Honaker, Etheredge, Baird, and Hooker played good ball for Maryville. Hughes scored once, and passed to Etheredge once for the tallies.

FINAL SCORE: MARYVILLE—114; OPPONENTS 125

Smith, Wilburn, Kramer, Etheredge, Kindred turned in their last season this year, and dandy spirit and good football marked it all the way. They'll be missed plenty next year.

Selections and Standouts as seen from the Sports' typewriter:

All Conference: Maryville—Etheredge, Hughes and Kramer; others—Biddle, Carson-Newman; Fleming, Teachers, for top choices.

Standouts from outside: Kursavage and Clabaugh of King; Cartmill of Union; Steele of Hiwassee; and Newberry first and second teams.

Allstar-Senior Game Winds Up Interclass Football This Week

Seniors Predict Stomping In Store For Luminaries

With favorable weather on Wednesday, Nov. 29, at eight o'clock, the YM CA tournament winning seniors oppose the all-star eleven under the lights of Wilson field in the final touch football game of the season.

Claiming to be holding a jinx over their confident opponents, Captain Peterson's all-stars quietly boast of a coming victory over the once scored upon seniors. In the Nicely-Rock punting, passing combination, the all-stars claim two backs of equal value to the senior, Morrow-Etheredge scoring twins. Although members of the all-star lineup will be selected from the first, second, and honorable mention teams, the squad will include men from any except the senior class team.

As a feature attraction between the halves, President Lyn Tyndall will stage a feminine football game between members of the Women's varsity M club.

Probable starting lineup:

SENIORS		ALL-STARS
Woodring	E	Hodges
Procter	T	Puncheon
Thompson, H.	G	Suter
Amos	C	Peterson (c)
Schreiber	G	Thompson, R.
Heydinger	T	Scapellati

Newberry Indians Scalp Scots By 40-13 Count In Thanksgiving Tilt

Maryville Soldier Boys Make Good Offensive Showing; Hughes And Etheredge Score For Highlanders

Maryville's fighting band of Scotties took a shellacking from Laval's Newberry Indians to the tune of 40-13 in a Thanksgiving Day tilt at Newberry.

Colangello and a band of stellar backs ran the lighter Highlanders ragged when they got hold of the ball. The Scots lost the pigskin often on fumbles and interceptions before the hardhitting weight of the larger SIIA team. When they did take care of the ball they managed to do some mighty good running from a spread formation. Hughes, Honaker, and Baird covered a good deal of ground although the score would have it otherwise. Etheredge turned in a brilliant game at end. After the game Etheredge stated that in four year's of football, that Newberry was the hardest game he had ever played. Newberry showed beautiful blocking in setting up their touchdowns. The play of Hooker at center looked good for next year's Scots.

The Indians scored early in the first quarter when Randall intercepted a pass and ran to the Maryville nine. Several plays later Lucas went over. Lucas kicked the extra point. Newberry scored again on a blocked punt. Middleton of Newberry recovered on the Maryville 30 and Randall went over for the score. Colangello failed to convert.

Maryville's score came in the second quarter, when Hughes and Baird alternated from their own 25 to the Indian 35. A pass from Shoey to Etheredge was good for twenty-five yards and Etheredge dashed on over. Hughes failed to make the point.

Newberry ran over the Scots once more before the half ended. Runs by Collangelo, Lucas, and Randall carried to the Scot two, where Collangelo went over. The point was good.

In the second half of the game, early after the kickoff, Capollo intercepted Hughes' pass deep in Highland territory and raced over the double stripe. One of the best runs of the afternoon came when Newberry punched through the Maryville defense again. Ingram took a pass from Collangelo and cut back and forth through the Scotty secondary for the touchdown. Newberry finished her scoring early in the last quarter when Collangelo cut loose with another pass, this time to Croxton. The Scot safety man caught him on the three, and Collangelo crushed through to score on the next play. Maryville then began to pass again. Passes connected and carried down the field to set up a touchdown try on the one foot line. Hughes went over. Honaker converted. On the last play of the game it looked like another Maryville score. A pass to Etheredge was completed, and as Joe was tackled, he lateraled to Hughes who nearly got away. Maryville's thirteen points is the highest score to be made against Newberry on their own field.

Carnival Postponed

This year's water spectacle has been postponed until March. Coach Fischbach announced the change this week. The carnival, he said, has been interfering with the swimming training each year, and started the team out after the holidays in poor swimming condition. In March plans can be made and carried out in greater style for the entire team's attention can be put on the carnival. It will make for a better swimming record this year also. December the ninth, the date set for the Aquacade, will be turned into a mixed swimming party for the entire school.

Cross Country Team To Meet Vols Today

The Maryville college cross country team will encounter the University of Tennessee's harriers today at 2:30 on the airport road. The course covers a distance of 2.9 miles.

This is the second meet held with U-T this season. The first meet was won by the Vols, 18-37. According to the method used in scoring the runners in these races, Tennessee, who had the lowest score, walked off with the victory.

Don Kent, diminitive ace of the squad, Bill Mooney, one of the two remaining lettermen, Alf Davies, the other letterman, Julius Nicely, Dave Butler, Floyd Green, Harlan Huck, Dick Watkins, and Vaughn Lyons will be the ones to participate in the meet.

Last year the Orange and Garnet clad runners held two victories over the Orange and White, but so far this year, the Scotties have suffered their one defeat at the hands of Tennessee.

Miss Cowdrick Receives Ph.D. Degree In October

Miss Ruth E. Cowdrick, who came to the Maryville college faculty in September as instructor in French, was awarded the degree of Doctor of Philosophy by Columbia university on Oct. 18, 1939. Her major work toward the degree was done in French, and her dissertation entitled "The Early Reading of Pierre Bayles," has been put into book form.

Dr. Cowdrick has received her education at Barnard college, which gave her the B.A. degree; the University of Pennsylvania, which gave her the M. A. degree; the University of Paris, where she studied for a year and a half at one time and half a year at another time and from which she received the certificate which that institution gives; and at Columbia university, which has now awarded her the Ph.D. degree.

week the National Guard has been in camp, and members of the Guard from the college were not excluded. Thus, the boys have been raising flat feet for the past few days.

As nearly as your reporter has been able to discover, (there may be other reasons), the only reason that the sheriff was at the college Sunday was to inform the football team members of the Guard that they might go to camp and play football also, as they would receive a three day's leave of absence. Each "buck private" in camp received a dollar per day for the week's experience. The boys may get rich in camp, but what a time they'll have making up that class work!

Those who weren't with us during the past week included Joe Etheredge, J. D. Hughes, Cecil Tipton, George Morton, Glenn Gamble, John Lance, Fred Speer, Charles Sullivan, and Jimmy Rae.

March on, young men of Maryville!

Here's That Man Again!

None other than the very popular Mr. S. Claus, who in conversation with us recently predicted that 1939 will be a banner Christmas. "There is every indication," said Mr. Claus, "that the 1939 Christmas season will be one of the best you have ever experienced.

In anticipation that there will be an increased demand generally for Holiday Goods, we have filled our shelves to capacity. From many wholesale dealers hundreds of choice items have been selected for novelty and appeal, and will soon be on display in our store.

We have always urged our customers to buy early, because the early customer has a better selection from which to choose. In former years it has been possible for us to reorder on sold out items. This year, late shipment of import items to wholesalers are jeopardized by foreign entanglements. For this reason, we suggest that you take advantage of the supply of gift goods now on hand.

With new gift items arriving daily, we doubt if we will be enabled to get into the full swing of the Christmas season for a few days, but we did want to tell you now that—WE'VE GOT IT!

VOLUME 25 MARYVILLE, TENN. DECEMBER 9, 1939 NUMBER 12

Dr. Ruth Stephens Speaks To IRC On European Situation

International Balance of Power In Hands Of Soviet Socialist Republic

Dr. Ruth E. Stephens of the history department of the University of Tennessee addressed the International Relations Club Thursday evening in Bartlett auditorium. Dr. Stephens sketched the events of the last few months and discussed the current situation.

She first discussed Russia saying that the agreement between Russia and Germany should have been foreseen by the world, for Great Britain and France had been encouraging Germany in Eastern Europe. In keeping Germany at odds with Russia, Great Britain and France could dominate Europe. However, Russia and Germany, realizing the situation, came to terms whereby they might both profit. By various speeches that had been made by leaders of both countries, we should have known the true situation. Nevertheless, the world was astonished by the non-agression pact.

Miss Stephens observed that Russia's position in Asia is one of less activity than has been her policy in the last few years. She is now concentrating on events in Europe as is shown by the late attack on Finland. During the last few years nationalism and imperialism have risen in Russia, contrary to socialist or communist objectives. The Russians again, as did Peter the Great, want control of the Baltic and control of the North Sea. At present Russia practically has a protectorate over the Balkan states. At this point Dr. Stephens raised the question as to whether Russia will be content to stop with the acquisition of Finland (as she certainly will acquire Finland if Finland does not secure aid), or whether she will want to push on to Norway, Sweden, and Denmark.

Miss Stephens stated that Hitler's objectives have been a succession of territorial annexations. He simply would not stop requesting concession after concession, and Chamberlain had no other choice but to reverse his policy. England's only peace time conscription should have been enough warning to the world that she was serious and would fight.

Today the war in Europe is mainly a war on the seas. What of the future? Britain is still mistress of the seas. The German merchant marine has been driven from the seas, but Germany still has a few "pocket battleships" at large, and a majority of her submarines, plus the mines she has laid. However, Great Britains blockade is becoming effective. Germany's success depends on her stored raw materials she can produce, and materials she can obtain from Russia.

Now, what about America? If we should go to war, who would we fight—the Russians, Japs or Germans? To fortify ourselves against war, we must acquaint ourself with the actual situation—a balance of power war—and think the thing through. Regardless of who wins in Europe, they will have their hands so full with their problems, that the United States need have no fear of aggression. Napoleon, who had the most complete domination of Europe the world has known, tried America, but gave up the project as lost. He hoped to dominate the new world, also, but gave up by selling Louisiana. What will the Allies do if they win? Dr. Stephens fears another Versailles, but she warns us that if this does happen once more, the next generation will have the war to fight again. It is simply a balance of power war, which Europe is so noted for. America can best do her part by thinking the situation over and acquainting ourselves with the impossibility of our saving the world by our entrance into another great war.

Pledges Of $450 Secured For The Fred Hope Fund

During the Wednesday chapel, pledges amounting to $450 were made for the Fred Hope Fund, by the student body, announced Miss Clemmie Henry, director of student help. Since then this sum has been increased to $468.30; this, however, is smaller than last year's total was. It is hoped that the fund will be increased by further pledges.

Mrs. William P. Stevenson Dies at Her Home on Monday After A Long Illness

Mrs. William P. Stevenson, wife of the Maryville college pastor, died at her home "The House in the Woods" at 12:30 Monday morning. She was 73 years of age and had lived in Maryville for 23 years.

She has had a long and painful illness which began in the fall of 1937 and developed into arthritis during Dr. and Mrs. Stevenson's trip around the world in the winter and spring of 1938. After their return she spent several weeks at Mayo's in Rochester, Minn., but no cure could be found. For the past year and a half she had been at her home. During recent weeks she had become gradually worse until her death.

The funeral service was held in the chapel on Wednesday afternoon and she was buried in the College Cemetery in the corner toward "The House in the Woods." At the service President Lloyd presided and gave an address from the text "For she herself also hath been a helper of many, and of mine own self" (Romans 16:2). Others taking part were: Dr. McAfee, pastor of New Providence church; Dr. Crothers, former pastor of the same church; the choir under Mr. Colbert; Miss Davies at the organ; six pall bearers of whom two were Dr. Hunter and Dr. Orr of the faculty; sixteen ladies of the community who were in the Bible class taught by Mrs. Stevenson in her home each Monday; twenty students as an escort of honor; some one hundred students as escort at the cemetery; a group of faculty ushers under Dr. McClelland; and other members of the faculty, student body and community.

Mrs. Stevenson was born in Pittsburgh, Pa., and lived there until after her marriage. She accompanied Dr. Stevenson in his ministry as pastor in Pittsburgh, Mauch Chunk, Pa., Titusville, Pa., Syracuse, N.Y., Yonkers, N. Y., and Maryville college.

Dr. and Mrs. Stevenson came to Maryville college twenty-two years ago and built their beautiful home in the College Woods. She was a popular friend of faculty and students alike. Her home was a center of hospitality and culture.

The members of her immediate family who mourn her death are her husband, Dr. William Patton Stevenson; a son, William Cooper Stevenson, who lives in Middleburg, Va.; a granddaughter, Mrs. Jane Stevenson McIlvaine, of Washington, D.C.; a grandson, William Walker Stevenson, of Middleburg, Va.; and a sister, Mrs. John Walker, who lives at her home "Morningside" on the Maryville college campus.

Annual Fireside Readings To Be Given Sunday Night In Pearsons By Dr. Hunter

For the third consecutive year there will be a program of Christmas readings tomorrow evening around the fire place in the Pearsons dining hall. Dr. Edwin R. Hunter will give two groups of readings and the program will include two numbers of special music.

The special music will be given by Louise Allen and the college quartet, composed of Dick Woodring, Sam Corelius, Roland Anderson, and Dean Stiles. There will also be Christmas music played by trumpeters and the singing of the familiar carols by the group.

This program is sponsored and planned by the worship and music committees of the Young Men's and the Young Women's Christian associations.

Christmas Play And Songs At German Club, Dec. 13

The German club will meet in the YW rooms on Wednesday, Dec. 13 at 6:30 for a Christmas program.

There will be an informal singing of German songs at the beginning of the meeting. A Christmas play and German Christmas music will be given. The meeting is open to all and will be over at 7:15.

Refreshments will be served. An admission of five cents will be charged for all non-members. Members who have not paid their dues may apply this as part payment.

Organ Students Present Informal Recital At 4:30 Wednesday, In Voorhees

At 4:30 next Wednesday afternoon in Voorhees chapel six students who are taking organ lessons will give an informal recital of organ music. Those who will take part and the numbers they will play are, Ruth Wynn, who will play "Cradle Song" by Brahms, Patricia Kennedy, who will play "Melody" by Gluck; Stanley Bird, playing "Cantique Noel" by Adams; Janice Graybeal, playing "Songs My Mother Taught Me" by Dvorak; and David Kidder, who will play "None But the Lonely Heart" by Tschaikowsky, and Ruth Mack, who will play "Panis Angelicus" by Franck. This will be the first recital that the students of the organ have given.

Ministerial Association To Have Christmas Meeting

The regular meeting of the Ministerial association will be held Monday evening Dec. 11, in Athenian hall. This meeting will be in the form of a Christmas party and is an annual affair in the calendar of the Ministerial association. Although this meeting will be closed to the general public, the members will be able to invite guests.

Mrs. West has charge of this meeting and she will read Christmas poetry, a Christmas story, and Christmas scriptures. Following this there will be some form of informal activities, and then refreshments will be served.

Sixteen Members Of 1940 Debate Squad Named from Tryouts

Varsity Team Chosen From Class of Thirty In Competition Monday

To represent Maryville in numerous forensic contests to be held in this section of the country during the next few months will be a varsity debate squad composed of sixteen upperclassmen, who were selected on the basis of their performance in competitive tryouts last Monday afternoon. Dr. E. R. Hunter, Dr. E. W. Davis, and Prof R. J. Dollenmayer acted as judges and chose six women and ten men from a class of thirty.

In the women's division this year are three members of Pi Kappa Delta, Arda Walker, Sara Lee Hellums, and Harriet Miller; and three newcomers to the varsity, Elizabeth Moore, Lucille Lynch, and Janet Lindsay.

Forming the men's squad, will be six men from last year's team: Arnold Kramer, Clifford Proctor, Otto Pflanze, Vernon Lloyd, Robert Lamont, and George Webster. The other four members of the '39-'40 varsity squad are the runners-up in the freshman state tournament of last year, Hilton and Henry Wick, and two other juniors, William Felknor and Jack Zerwas.

Prof. Queener stated that this was the best tryout in the past several years, both in the men's and women's sections. Another encouraging factor is that there are an unusual number of old members returning to the squad, in addition to some very promising sophomores.

Probably the most important single event in the activity of the team this season will be the National Pi Kappa Delta convention to be held next spring in Knoxville under the auspices of the Tennessee Alpha chapter of the fraternity. Over seven hundred delegates are expected to attend this convention, representing over one hundred colleges and universities from all parts of the United States. The five largest hotels in Knoxville have been reserved for this event, in addition to various schools and churches in which the debates will be held. The final banquet and dance of the convention is to be at Whittle Springs, a well known resort near Knoxville.

Holidays Start Friday

Last class before the Christmas holidays will end at 11:40, Friday, Dec. 15, and there will be no chapel on Friday morning. College will reopen at chapel time on Wednesday, Jan. 3.

Over Two Hundred Voices To Be Heard In Handel's "Messiah" At Voorhees Chapel Tomorrow

Glee Clubs, Faculty Combine For Seventh Annual Presentation

OVERTURE AT 3:00 P. M.

Program Lengthened By Addition Of Two Solos And Choruses

The seventh annual presentation of George Frederick Handel's great oratorio, "The Messiah," will be given by a group of over two hundred people, including students, faculty, and townspeople, at 3:00 p.m. in Voorhees chapel tomorrow afternoon, Dec. 12. The combined glee clubs and the choir compose the nucleus of the chorus which will be under the direction of Mr. Ralph R. Colbert, and will be accompanied by the Maryville college orchestra under the direction of Miss Dorothy Horne. For the fourth consecutive year Garnet Manges, graduate of Maryville college, will be piano accompanist.

The solo airs and recitatives will be taken by four present and one former student of Maryville college. Ruth Woods of Greenback and Bernice Cathcart of Maryville, both seniors and majors in music, will take the soprano solos. Miss Cathcart sang several solos in "The Messiah" last year and Miss Woods has sung in many musical productions on the Maryville stage. Miss Margaret Law of Maryville, a former student, will sing the contralto solos. Miss Law has twice been a soloist in this great work of Handel's.

Richard Woodring, senior voice student from Ardmore, Pa., who has been a soloist before in "The Messiah" and who has taken many important roles in other musical productions of the college, will take the tenor solos. The bass solo parts will be taken by Ralph Reed, also a voice student. Reed, who is from Delaware, took the bass solos in last year's "Messiah."

There are several solos which were not used last year which are to be used this year, and one or two choruses are being added, making the total length of the program one hour and forty-five minutes. The new bass recitative is "Thus saith the Lord," and the air, "But who may abide the day of His coming?"; the tenor recitative, "He was cut off out of the land of the living", and the air, "But Thou didst not leave His soul in Hell"; and the chorus is "All we like sheep have gone astray."

The annual presentation of Handel's "Messiah" was first introduced here by J. Alvin Keen, a graduate of Westminster choir school, and Mary Frances Henry, former voice instructor of the College, in 1933, thus making the presentation this year the seventh consecutive one. The performance is 15 minutes longer than that of last year.

"The Messiah", Handel's most successful and best-known oratorio, was composed in 1741 in the short time of 23 days when the composer was 56 years of age. Contrary to his usual indifference to the words set to his compositions, Handel very carefully had his text chosen from the literal words of the old and new testaments, and arranged by Charles Jennes. The care with which the text was chosen and arranged is well justified by the beautiful musical settings which are in perfect harmony with the sentiment of the scriptures.

The same year that he composed this most famous of all his oratorios, Handel was invited to Ireland as guest of the Duke of Devonshire, the Lord Lieutenant,an d it was while he was there that "The Messiah" was first performed. The music that Handel had been requested to compose for this festival in aid of the "poor and distressed prisoners for debt" in the Marshalsea of Dublin was presented for the first time on April 23, 1742, and the great hall in Fishamble Street was densely crowded with an enthusiastic audience. Praise of the work coming as it did from critics, reviewers, newspapers and the like, was seemingly unlimited. Not only was appreciation shown by words, but also in the more tangible form of over 400 pounds to be distributed among the prisoners. In fact, so great was the

College Shocked By Death Of John Kerr

Funeral Was Held Tuesday At His Home In Cadiz, Ohio

The Maryville college community was shocked and saddened by the accidental death of John W. Kerr, a sophomore, who was fatally injured when he fell under the wheel of the college truck on the campus about 1:30 p.m., last Saturday.

Kerr had been working with a group of college boys, moving some materials on the truck. As he ran to jump on the running board of the loaded truck, his foot slipped, and he fell beneath the rear wheel. He suffered broken legs and a crushed pelvis. Physicians were called immediately, and he was removed to the Fort Craig hospital, where his condition was pronounced critical. A blood transfusion was furnished by one of his fellow students, but the shock of the accident was too great, and he died about 8:30 p.m.

Kerr was an exemplary student, an earnest and willing worker, and was well liked by students and faculty. This was his first year at Maryville college, previous work having been taken at Ohio State and Ohio Northern Universities. His home was in Cadiz, Ohio, where his mother lives. His father is dead.

The body was sent to Cadiz on Sunday, accompanied by Jeck Zerwas, a fellow student and one of his closest friends. The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon at the Cadiz Presbyterian church. The college faculty was represented at the service by Rev. Edward W. Lodwick of Cumberland, Ohio, graduate of Maryville college in the class of 1909.

At the Sunday vesper service at the college, conducted by President Lloyd, tribute was paid to the memory of the young man.

Rev. Armentrout To Talk In Next Chapel Services

Vacationists Admire Variety But Beds and Iceboxes Are Better

By BETTY UMBACH

"Sleep!" "Eat!" "Sleep!" "Sleep" "Eat!" "Sleep"—that seems to be the unanimous holiday program for 99 per cent of the campus population. "Not that we can't sleep here," they explain, "but we can't sleep at the right time." "Not that we can't eat here," they continue, "but we just dont get the brand of coffee we're used to." So it's going to be a well-rested, well-fed student body joining in the first hymn on Wednesday morning, Jan. 3rd. But we still have the remaining one per cent to hear from; and they'll have to look plenty hard before they find any better way to spend the Christmas holidays.

Jeanne Stringham is planning a surprise for the unsuspecting campus when she returns: she is going to grow a few inches—(not saying which way.)

Dizney, after successfully braving the natural hazards confronting those who attempt to enter Harlan, plans to spend his time perusing the review of all murders committed since his departure. Nevertheless, he will take time off to attend the weekly hoss opree.

Emma Cassada, who is trying to fool half the people again, said, "They all expect me to be lazy; so I want to do anything besides sleep."

Marge Resides, also full of ambitious energy, plans to go deer hunting with her Dad. She also will be glad to see the bright lights of the city again.

Thorson would like to follow the crowd and eat and sleep; but she doesn't dare do either. She plans to take in Chinatown. And, if nobody minds, she would like to get a fur coat.

"I have to keep in practice for Maryville," states Phil Evaul; "so I shall eat beans every day and study Greek every night. I'd like to get in a little immortal moonshining on the side, (of course between the hours of 6 and 7, in the central area of the campus.)"

Bill Baird heaved a sigh of relief and reported that it would be wonderful going to bed every night, knowing he didn't have to worry about German. His waking hours will be spent in company of either a motorcycle or a milk shake.

Ann Ramey wants to eat at a table which is devoid of ketchup bottles and Old Lady pitchers. She also wants to wait up for Santa and see what a man looks like after 7 o'clock.

"Since I can't go skiing," states John Fisher, "I'll just go south and watch the Florida snow fall as I sit with my feet in front of a big fire."—(or was it his big feet in front of a fire?) "I shall pull a toboggan across the sand, and pause to drink a bowl of Dole."

D. J. Taylor wants a quiet vacation; she plans to just sit and look at the trees and people that are all lit up.

"I hope to dig ditches," said Henry Wick; "but if that won't work I'll just relax."

And so you see what the other half will be doing those two momentous weeks. Sounds fun, doesn't it? But they will soon get tired and join the common crowd and sleep, and eat, and sleep, and eat.
